GENERAL INTRODUCTION

This final project has the objective of reflecting and analysing the multiple ways in which this post-graduate course, including both the theoretical subjects and the Practicum have contributed to my acquisition of a proper acquaintance with laws in education, foreign language teaching methods and strategies and also, techniques and resources in the second language learning and teaching, as well as the knowledge of educational didactic and system, and issues regarding cognitive and personality aspects that are developed in the stage of adolescence.

The present study is made up of three interrelated parts, as follows:

- The first one represents a theoretical framework about the teaching and learning processes studied during my post-graduate course. It basically consists of a descriptive and personal review in terms of making a general reflection on each one of the subjects I have coursed during that academic year.

- The second one presents a whole year teaching programme for the English subject, designed for students that are studying their 3rd year Secondary Education. It is important to note that this teaching programme is planned for the control group and the next part of the paper, introduces the new method of teaching for the experimental group.

- The last part consists of an educational research and innovation project in which I have deliberated a research in order to investigate the improvement of the effectiveness of the methods and tools used in the teaching of listening comprehension skill through the use of audio-visual materials and resources with the implementation of new innovative and creative activities which include the application of new technologies with the purpose of improving the listening comprehension in 3rd year Secondary Education students.

PART I

THEORETICAL FRAMEWORK

1.1 Introduction

With regard to the first part of my project, I will make a brief description on each one of the disciplines I have studied during this course and I will expose my principal thoughts about the knowledge I have reached regarding the theoretical and practical instructions I have been taught in the different subjects of this Master's degree.

Therefore, the disciplines of this course can be divided into two different modules: the generic module and the specific one.

1.2 Generic module

This generic module includes those subjects which provide us with a general knowledge that involves important pedagogical, sociological and psychological aspects in relation to the learning and teaching processes which should be taken into account when teaching a second language as future foreign language teachers. This module includes the following subjects: Aprendizaje y Desarrollo de la Personalidad, Procesos y Contextos Educativos; and Sociedad, Familia y Educación.

1.2.1 Aprendizaje y Desarrollo de la Personalidad

The subject Aprendizaje y Desarrollo de la Persolalidad has the purpose of providing us with the foundations of Secondary students development and learning, that is, the Psychology of Education. It is focused on the teenager development on the physical, mental as well as the thinking levels; and the adolescents learning capacities. One of the principal lessons deals with the personality development of teenagers that implies the development of certain cognitive abilities (Santillana, 2008) which are essential in the learning and teaching processess. Furthermore, this lesson also encompasses theoretical concepts such as self-esteem, self-concept, identity, metacognition; and executive functions as well as emotional intelligence; and the intrapersonal (self-awareness, self-regulation) and interpersonal (motivation, empathy, attention, memory) factors that have an influence on the learning capacity of adolescents.

Additionally, another important lesson on this subject includes the main models for teaching and learning which entails diverse theories for instance the innatist theory (Chomsky, 1957) in contrast to other learning theories regarding behaviourism such as the classical conditioning discovered by Pavlov (1927), the operant conditioning developed by Skinner (1938) who claimed that human behaviours depended on their consequences, establishing a relationship between behaviour and consequences. Also, Bandura's modelling learning (1977) consists of the behaviour learning by means of observing and imitating other people. In addition to the cognitive or constructivist's models, I also have to mention the Vygotsky's Cognitive Social model (1978) who established a Proximal Zone of Development; the Piaget's model (1952) that consists of a set of stages to develop the critical thinking and lastly, the Ausubel's model (2002) based on the meaningful learning. Moreover, this subject also deals with the special educational needs that some students require and learning disabilities such as attention deficit, autism and high intellectual capacity.

All the aforementioned learning theories are very useful to know the cognitive and learning development of the teenagers that provides important information to the teachers in order to have a broader vision of their learning capacity and therefore, to have the ability of adapting the teaching to their individual necessities.

Personally, I consider this subject one of the most useful and practical in this post-graduate course because it describes the physical, mental and emotional changes that are developed during the adolescent stage; which have a significant influence on the learning and teaching processes that we must consider as future teachers with the objective to improve our ways or techniques of teaching in order that students get a proper and successful learning.

1.2.2 Procesos y Contextos Educativos

The subject Procesos y Contextos Educativos is one of those belonging to the generic module of this course and it has a strong interdisciplinary approach along with the two other subjects of this module. It has a theoretical and practical support in the area of Educational Didactic and School Organization and it is related to Pedagogy.

This subject is divided into four lessons that deals with the following contents:

1. The interaction and communication processes in the centre and classroom, which includes concepts and general approaches of the educational didactic, didactic components for the learning and teaching processes, the relationships in the classroom and basic processes to get an efficient management and pleasant and tolerant atmosphere in the classroom.
2. The educational administration and the Secondary centres that includes the organization and administration of the centres, the historical evolution of the Spanish educational system and legislation; and also its current context.
3. Pedagogical strategies for the teaching and learning in the Secondary centres, which includes theoretical and methodological skills, practices and resources, including those regarding new technologies for the learning and teaching processes of Secondary students.
4. The planning and the evaluation and assessment of Secondary Education students, using the Educational Project (Proyecto Educativo del Centro, PEC) as a guide to follow, that includes aspects such as the teaching programme, management and lesson planning, attention to diversity, evaluation climate of cooperation, guidance and pedagogical orientation and intervention for the resolution of possible conflicts in the classroom and the centre and last but not least, the quality of learning and its evaluation.

Personally, this subject has been one of the most important and practical for me as a future teacher of Secondary students because I have acquired specific knowledge about the Spanish legislation and Educational system, pedagogical strategies, methodological skills and useful resources for the learning and teaching processes, in addition to the management and organization of the Secondary centres and besides, the capacity of developing and making a teaching programme and a lesson planning to become a good teacher.

Finally, in order to improve our knowledge we have used different sources regarding the Spanish Educational System which are listed in the references section.

1.2.3 Sociedad, Familia y Educación

The last subject of this generic module is Sociedad, Familia y Educación that is related to Sociology and it has provided us with information, skills and abilities concerning how to participate in the knowledge of the environment, the contact with family members and with the closest institutions that take part in the students learning process. Besides, we have studied contents related to social functions of education, social and educational inequalities, above all as regards the genre, the socio-economic status and the ethnic background; as well as the connection between family and education since the role of families is essential in their children's education and personal development; in addition to the function of teachers and the different institutions in the learning and teaching processes.

The last lesson of this subject is focused on the analysis of teachers as other social category, in which we study the occupational socialization, the teaching career and teaching practice including other important aspect, that is, the feminization within the teaching profession.

In general terms, this subject has provided us with an overview of the sociological role of the social education as well as the main socio functional elements involved. Now, I am able to comprehend the real sense of the word Education and the meaning of Educating someone, since it is not only the teaching of different contents that includes a particular subject but also the transmission of both ethical and moral values and principles, based on respect, tolerance, gender and social equalities, among others, because the most important aim is to educate people who will help the world become a better place where everyone has the same opportunities in both the educational and working environment without any discrimination and exclusion.

To conclude, in the practical lessons, we have also participated in some open debates on education and social issues implicated which have served to exchange different opinions and points of view or perspectives on the topics. Moreover, we have worked in groups during the whole course, so that it has allowed us to learn to work collaboratively and to make group decisions including the distribution of time and tasks, the resolution of conflicts or the capacity to reach an agreement.

I would simply like to add that we have looked over several sources such as documentaries, films, newspapers' articles, reports, blog entries and statistical data from reliable assessment reports such as PISA (Programme for International Student Assessment) and OCDE (The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development).

1.3 Specific module

This module includes three specific subjects which are focused on the English foreign language teaching. Therefore, the knowledge and instruction we have acquired has to do with teaching methods and techniques, implementation of ICT (Information and communication technology) for teaching English as a foreign language, use of diverse resources and web tools, cognitive and neurological processes involved in the learning of a foreign language, development of the Intercultural competence in FL classroom, innovation and research in the ELT classroom and also, the analysis of innovative or research ELT projects among others.

The subjects included in this specific module are: Aprendizaje y Enseñanza de la Lengua Extranjera: Inglés, Complementos para la formación disciplinar: Inglés and Innovación docente e iniciación a la investigación educativa: Inglés.

1.3.1 Aprendizaje y Enseñanza de la Lengua Extranjera: Inglés

Aprendizaje y Enseñanza de la Lengua Extranjera: Inglés is the only annual specific subject in this post-graduate course that has been taught by two lecturers; the first half of the subject was given by Almudena Fernández Fontecha and the second half of the subject was given by Andrés Canga Alonso.

First of all, this subject is the continuation and is interrelated with the other specific subject called Complementos para la formación disciplinar: Inglés since the former is based on the extension of its contents and it provides us with the practical knowledge to apply the theory acquired to the English language teaching practice as foreign language in Secondary Compulsory Education (ESO) and Bachillerato.

The contents can be divided into three groups; the first one deals with those aspects belonging to the English foreign language curriculum in Secondary Education such as objectives, competences, contents, methodology, teaching resources and materials, assessment criteria and language testing, among others. For learning and analysing these contents, we used the information obtained from the Spanish legislation and the theoretical context of Spanish Educational System (f.e. BOE, BOR, LOMCE, Common European Framework). This information is fundamental for teachers because the Spanish law states both the basic curriculum and the foreign language curriculum for Secondary Education and Bachillerato.

The second part corresponds entirely to the practical and theoretical developments of second language learning and teaching processes and it comprises the design, elaboration, evaluation and teaching practice of didactic units which also include the use of ICT resources for the teaching of English as foreign/second language and as well, the application of the Content and Language Integrated Learning (CLIL) in the foreign language classroom. This latter is a methodology similar to but distinct from Language Immersion and Content-Based Instruction (CBI), that has been promoted by the European Commission in order to enhance both the language competences in general and, the teaching of non-linguistic subjects in foreign languages. This teaching approach involves developing interactive and innovative resources as well as the use of online applications and web tools for the second language learning and teaching process, as for instance, SAMR model link, TED-Ed, visualthinking, powtoon, storybird, inklewriter, genial.ly, prezzi, tumblr.com, kahoot, lextutor, wikispaces, dropbox, slideshare, youtube, vimeo, socrative, flipboard and scoop.it among others.

Lastly, the third part comprises concepts as multiculturalism and multilingualism in FL classroom; likewise the distinction of meaning of terms as intercultural, multicultural and cross-cultural awareness, and also, the different meaning of concepts like bilingualism, plurilingualism and multilingualism. Moreover, this part is associated with the development and application of Intercultural Competence in an EFL context and thus, other important issues including the design and elaboration of Intercultural tasks and accordingly, the specific assessment methods required for the evaluation of intercultural competence on this kind of tasks when teaching a foreign language.

Finally, I would like to add that this subject has been one of the most laborious and difficult in this post-graduate course, but at the same time it has been above all, a fulfilling and rewarding experience after having reached the objectives required. I will simply mention that the fact of realising diverse complicated tasks on which we could implement the theoretical knowledge previously acquired, has been the greatest reward for me, as for example the elaboration and presentation of a CLIL project called Mystery Project for teaching English language to Secondary students.

1.3.2 Complementos para la formación disciplinar: Inglés

This subject has provided us with a global vision on the history and evolution of the foreign language teaching, concretely the English language, ranging from the early linguistic approaches and methods to the most current and innovative ones. Furthermore, this course offers a context for reflection on the required experience for Secondary Education English teachers, as well as some basic teaching strategies and pedagogical tools needed to develop the learner's communicative competence.

The subject was guided by Lecturer M<sup>a</sup> Pilar Agustín Llach who started the course by introducing and defining some basic theoretical concepts such as second language teaching, language learning, foreign language education, bilingualism, learning vs. acquisition as well as establishing the main differences between these relevant concepts: approach, method and technique.

One of the most significant and useful lessons in this course has been the study and analysis of several foreign language teaching methods and approaches because having some knowledge about them might be very useful for teachers since they are taught different didactic strategies or techniques and also, teaching tools that can be applied effectively in a foreign language class where diversity of students is currently very common; the methods are divided into four different approaches, which are: Linguistic approaches (including the Grammar-Translation method, the Direct method, and the Audio-Lingual method), Humanistic approaches (containing Suggestopedia, the Silent Way, Total Physical Response and Community Language Learning), later on the Communicative approaches (including Communicative Language Approach and Task-Based Method) and lastly, Content approaches (CLIL). Finally, the last lesson is about the teacher training actions, including the language policy.

1.3.3 Innovación docente e iniciación a la investigación educativa: Inglés

This is the last specific subject of this module, it has been taught in the second half of the course and guided by Lecturers M<sup>a</sup> Pilar Agustín Llach and Andrés Canga Alonso.

In general terms, this subject has the objective of reaching the following purposes:

Learning and applying innovative teaching proposals in the field of Education, concretely, in the teaching and learning of English as a foreign language as well as the use of ICT's resources and their application for the process of learning and teaching English as a foreign language within an educational context. In addition to know and apply new methodologies and basic techniques of research and innovation in the teaching and learning of English language, being able to design and develop educational projects for that purpose.

The contents of this course are grouped into three main units, as described below:

Unit 1. Research in ELT, this lesson contains basic terms and concepts concerning the research in ELT classroom, the role of teacher as researcher, research traditions in ELT as well as sources for research and also, methods of both data collection and data analysis in ELT.

Unit 2. Innovation in ELT, this includes the innovative teaching practice, the role of the teacher as an innovator and last but not least, the ELT innovation and research project that introduces steps and guidelines for its elaboration.

Unit 3. Innovation and Research in ELT within our Spanish National and Regional context, themes and topics for innovation and research in ELT classroom and finally, the analysis of examples of innovative/research ELT projects.

All these contents have provided me with specialized knowledge with respect to the use of methodologies and techniques for researching and regarding the design and development of innovative and research projects and their respective assessment.

Ultimately, the learning and study of this subject is fundamental in order to take cognizance of the issues related to innovative teaching practice and to the design and development of research projects in ELT classroom, therefore, it is an appropriate, positive and functional subject for the instruction of future English teachers and even, future researchers.

1.4 Conclusion

As far as I am concerned, this analysis of each of the different subjects that constitute the curriculum of this post-graduate course, have contributed to create a real perspective and a general vision of the Spanish Educational System and its organization of the principal components which comprise both the basic and the foreign language curriculum for Secondary Education and Bachillerato, as well as a deep comprehension of the main aspects with regard to the process of teaching and learning of a foreign or second language. Moreover, the application of new methodologies and diverse techniques that include the incorporation of new ICT's resources and webtools for the development and improvement of the process of English foreign language learning and teaching. In addition to the theoretical aspects, it is necessary to bear in mind the significant role of Practicum in consolidating the knowledge and skills acquired previously on the abovementioned subjects. Hence, I would simply like to add that the whole curriculum, in general, is effective, appropriate and useful for our theoretical and practical learning to become a qualified and efficient English teacher.

PART II

TEACHING PROGRAMME

2.1 Introduction: justification and legal framework

The Spanish Organic Law for the Improvement of Quality in Education (LOMCE 8/2013 on December 9th), the Spanish Royal Decree 1105/2014 on December 26th (BOE, Número 3. Sección 1. Página 176-177) defines the curriculum as the regulation of the fundamental elements that constitute the teaching-learning processes for each of the teaching areas and stages in Education.

Primarily, it is the responsibility of the Spanish Government to design and create the basic curriculum in order to guarantee a common academic training and the official status and validity of those teaching areas referred to under Spanish Law.

Secondly, it is important to mention that the teaching programme proposed here is directed towards the 3rd year Secondary Education students, that is, a group which receives a common and ordinary methodology of instruction and the new methodology proposed in the experiment is included in the third part of this paper.

It is essential to take into account the difference between both the Spanish and British Educational System. In both Systems, the Education is compulsory from five to sixteen years old. On the one hand, The Spanish System is developed into three stages: Primary Education, Secondary Education and Baccalaureate. On the other hand, The British System is divided into five Key Stages, which are as follows: Key Stage One corresponds to the 3rd year of Pre-school and the 1st year of Primary Education, Key Stage Two corresponds to the 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th years of Primary Education, Key Stage Three corresponds to the 6th year of Primary Education and 1st and 2nd years Secondary Education, Key Stage Four corresponds to the 3rd and 4th years of Secondary Education and finally, Key Stage Five corresponds to the two years of Baccalaureate. Therefore, 3rd year Secondary Education corresponds to the British Key Stage Four.

2.2 Context

2.2.1 Characteristics of School

This teaching programme has been designed to be taught at the Catholic State School “Ntra. Sra. de la Piedad”, that is located in the town of Nájera (La Rioja), whose address is 19, Cantarranas Street which is in the area of the old town. The School was founded in the year 1901, on successive years the number of students grew considerably and therefore, the educational offer was also expanded. At the present time, the educational centre provides pre-school, primary school and the first three years of secondary school.

Nowadays, the School has a total of 258 students, of which 74 students belong to pre-school, 145 to primary school and finally, 39 students are in secondary school. This educational centre is known by its education based on respect and tolerance, therefore it is integrated by students from different cultures, races, ethnical groups and religions. Moreover, there are also a 10% of students who need some kind of special education.

The socioeconomic level of the students is diverse although it is mostly of low and middle classes.

Because of the great variety of students, the centre is constantly reconsidering the organization of each course in order to get an effective and appropriate educational adaptation to each of the students.

In relation to the school facilities, the centre consists of two buildings which comprise several classrooms for all school years, a library, a computer lab, a classroom equipped for the technology workshop, a multi-purpose room, a teachers’ room, and the headmistress’s office, in addition to the school canteen, a chapel and three schoolyards.

2.2.2 Characteristics of the group

The teaching programme I have designed is specifically directed to 3rd year Secondary Education students.

The 3rd year Secondary Education group is composed of 18 students, of which eight are men and ten are women. In this group, there is a cultural variety, the students are mostly Spanish but there are also four students of Moroccan origin. Nevertheless, all the students are integrated in class, there is a good relationship between them and with the teachers. Furthermore, there is a friendly and comfortable environment in class and students are good classmates and tolerant and they respect each other and the teachers.

Generally, the intellectual level of the students is high although those immigrant students may find some more difficulties in certain subjects and then, they could need school reinforcement.

For those students who need support on some school subjects, there are special educational support measures in the school, such as small groups' classrooms or flexible groups in which they will receive the necessary personal attention and academic support. These measures are carried out by the same teachers of the academic centre.

In secondary education, the class schedule starts at 08:30 a.m. and finishes at 15:00 p.m. and it includes two break times.

Regarding the teaching of the foreign language, this group has a total of four teaching hours per week in which English is imparted as a second language. More precisely, the English language teaching hours for this group is the following: Monday (from 09:30 to 10:30), Tuesday (from 09:30 to 10:30), Wednesday (from 10:30 to 11:30) and Friday (from 09:30 to 10:30).

Lastly, in the case of the English language learning and teaching, students have not showed yet a clear evidence of the difficulty in the learning of the foreign language, so that it is expected that no student will need extra or reinforcement material for their learning and comprehension of the subject. Consequently, it is expected that the course syllabus will be entirely developed and without any difficulty. Likewise, the syllabus development and the pace of the lessons will be always adapted to all students' needs. Moreover, teacher will be able to deal with the specific needs of each student on a more personal basis.

2.3 Objectives

2.3.1 Stage objectives

According to the Spanish Education Organic Law for the improvement of the quality of education (LOMCE 8/2013 on December 9th), the Spanish Royal Decree 1105/2014 on December 26th (BOE, Número 3. Sección 1. Página 176-177) establishes the objectives of secondary education referred to the achievements that students must accomplish when a period finishes as a result of the learning and teaching experiences previously planned with this purpose.

Next, I itemize the objectives of secondary education that I consider to be the most relevant for the English language teaching and those more important related to the syllabus I have designed. These are the following:

1. Asumir responsablemente sus deberes, conocer y ejercer sus derechos en el respeto a los demás, practicar la tolerancia, la cooperación y la solidaridad entre las personas y grupos, ejercitarse en el diálogo afianzando los derechos humanos y la igualdad de trato y de oportunidades entre mujeres y hombres, como valores comunes de una sociedad plural y prepararse para el ejercicio de la ciudadanía democrática.
2. Desarrollar y consolidar hábitos de disciplina, estudio y trabajo individual y en equipo como condición necesaria para una realización eficaz de las tareas del aprendizaje y como medio de desarrollo personal.
3. *Valorar y respetar la diferencia de sexos y la igualdad de derechos y oportunidades entre ellos. Rechazar la discriminación de las personas por razón de sexo o por cualquier otra condición o circunstancia personal o social. ## 2.6 Methodology

According to the Common European Framework for Languages: Learning, Teaching, Assessment (Council for Cultural Cooperation Education Committee, Strasbourg, 2001. Traducción en español, Ministerio de Educación, Cultura y Deporte, Subdirección General de Cooperación Internacional, Madrid, 2002, página 141),

A fundamental methodological principle from the Council of Europe has been that the methods employed in the learning, teaching and investigation of the language are those considered more efficient to reach the required objectives, taking into account the particular students' necessities as well as the material resources used. For a long time, the Council of Europe has promoted an approach based on the communicative necessities of the students and the use of materials and methodologies that allow them to satisfy those needs and to be appropriate for their traits.

Taking into account the above mentioned points, and following the principles established in the curriculum of Secondary Education, focused on the characteristics and needs of each one of students, the methodology that will be used in this teaching programme will be mainly the Communicative Approach or Communicative Language Teaching, also including a combination of different language-teaching approaches, methods and techniques which promote the motivation and interest of students in the second language learning, and therefore, the fulfilment of the objectives established in the Secondary curriculum.

Following this methodology, it will be an attempt to obtain a comfortable and calm atmosphere in the classroom in order to encourage students' participation and interaction in the activities and projects that will be carried out in class.

Moreover, diverse strategies will be utilized to favour students' autonomy, their creativity and intuition. This method also contributes to the process of socialization, integrating every student in the classroom. The approach used is student-centred, because it is very important to adapt the learning strategies and methods to each student's needs.

Furthermore, the activities will be interdisciplinary, that is, these are related to other subjects, so that students can connect the foreign language learning with other areas such as international culture, sports, music, science, technology, cooking and so on.

In addition to this, the methodology will be also general and specific of the foreign language studied. Therefore, this will include the following elements:

- Linguistic Content: vocabulary and grammar based in the context, making use of digital resources and web tools to foster the gradual acquisition of autonomous mechanisms of learning.
- Integrated skills: making use of an integrated approach of the skills, students are encouraged to develop productive and receptive skills. In each one of the lesson, integrated practice of reading, listening, writing and speaking will be provided in order to improve the communicative skills of students in a real context.

2.7 Attention to diversity

In accordance with the Royal Decree 19/2015 on June 12th which establishes the curriculum of secondary education and regulates attention to diversity in the Autonomous Community of La Rioja (BOR Núm. 79 pp. 12377-12379),

As a general principle, educational institutions have the necessary organizational and curricular measures that allow them, in the exercise of their autonomy, a flexible organization of secondary education and a personalized attention to students with special educational needs and high intellectual abilities.

For this purpose, centres must develop a Plan of attention to diversity to be incorporated into the educational project. This plan will be developed through the Plan of orientation and Tutorial action plan and through the teaching programmes as well.

According to the article 18 of the Royal Decree 19/2015, within the framework of the attention to diversity, it is considered that a student requires a different educational attention from the ordinary, anyone who may reveal special educational needs, specific learning difficulties, ADHD, high intellectual capacities, late incorporation to the educational system, or personal conditions, in order that they can achieve maximum progress and development in their personal and linguistic abilities, and in any event, the stage objectives established as a general rule for all the students.

Spanish Educational Institutions should have measures of attention to diversity at their disposal, either organizational and methodological, which provide them with flexible organization and personalized attention to students according to their individual needs.

In this case, in our class group of 3rd year Secondary Education, there are no students with Special Educational Needs with a prescribed psycho-pedagogical assessment or curricular adaptations. Nevertheless, we must consider the fact that along the academic year or in subsequent years, new immigrant students as well as students from other education centres can join the group. Consequently, those students can feel dissimilar to the rest of the group, considering their poor knowledge of the English language, or on the contrary, have a higher level of the language, in comparison to the average level of the rest of the students in the same classroom. Consequently, those students who have difficulties to adapt or conform to the new situation and circumstances at the school level will need special and well-elaborated didactic material which can serve as scholar reinforcement and support, so they achieve better results in their lessons.

Regardless of the reason why students require special education needs, the educational centres must provide them with the specific and appropriate didactic materials as well as personal support in order to enhance students' learning.

2.10.2 Assessment Procedure

The assessment procedure that will be carried out in this 3rd year Secondary Education will consist in a diagnostic, formative and summative assessment.

Firstly, a diagnostic assessment will be performed at the beginning of the course with the only objective of getting useful information about students' previous knowledge of the English foreign language.

Thus, the teacher can know which skills must be reinforced and so, to choose the adequate didactic tasks and strategies with the goal of improving the students' knowledge.

Afterwards, formative and summative assessment will be carried out along the academic year.

Regarding the formative assessment, it will be taken place during lessons by observing their positive attitude and behaviour, their active participation and class work and lastly, by checking their homework.

In relation to the summative assessment, this will be developed through written tests that will take place in each of three terms of the academic year, in addition to some class project or task required.

Assessment Evaluation

The student's final mark is the set of the scores obtained from the different tests realized as well as other factors to be considered. This result is taken as the average value of the sum of the percentages of the different aspects evaluated.

The percentages of each element that will be considered to calculate the final mark are detailed below:

- ✓ Written test: 70%
  - 20% Reading
  - 20% Writing
  - 15% Listening
  - 15% Speaking

2.13 Developed Didactic Unit.

UNIT 12: CRIME SCENE

Introduction and justification.

The present didactic unit has been designed for 3rd year Secondary Education students at the Catholic state school “N<sup>a</sup> Sra. de la Piedad” located in the town of Nájera (Autonomous Community of La Rioja, Spain).

Each unit aims to ensure their students fully develop their language competence, to teach tools and strategies for learning inside and outside the classroom. Each unit also presents new vocabulary and grammar in context, new lexis is introduced gradually and practised thoroughly, including contextual presentations. Moreover, grammar structures are presented in various authentic-style texts that provide the context essential for understanding meaning.

In addition, each unit also features innovative Integrated Skills which present fully-integrated practice of reading, listening, writing and speaking to improve students’ communication skills in a real-world context.

The didactic unit 12 ‘Crime Scene’ will be developed in eight sessions of 60 minutes each. The detailed information about each session is included in the charts below.

Each session of 60 minutes will be divided into three periods of time:

- 5 minutes: Review of the contents studied in the previous lesson and resolve problems or/and explain doubts.
- 50 minutes: Introduction and explanation of new contents. Development of activities and elaboration of tasks.
- 5 minutes: Listening activities of the student’s book that consist of listening audios and complete the required activities; and/or also, listening and interpretation of English songs and complete the gaps with the missing words of the lyrics. These activities have the purpose of developing listening skills by entertaining and pleasant practices.

The interactions can be: Teacher > Student, Student > Teacher and Student > Student.

3. RESEARCH AND INNOVATION PROJECT

THE IMPLEMENTATION OF ALTERNATIVE METHODS TO IMPROVE SECONDARY EDUCATION STUDENTS' LISTENING COMPREHENSION IN THE EFL LEARNING AND TEACHING PROCESS

Abstract

This research paper focuses on investigating the effective use of audio-visual material resources making use of the latest Web 2.0 tools at our disposal nowadays in the Foreign Language (FL) learning and teaching process and the implementation of innovative and creative activities with the purpose of improving the listening comprehension in Secondary Education students. The main hypothesis proposed is if the completed linguistic immersion by using audio-visual materials and implementing interesting and innovative activities is a more useful and effective method to improve students' listening competences. For doing so, there will be an experimental group which will be applied the new method proposed and a control group which will follow the conventional instruction methodology as usual. This only distinction between them will provide us with the necessary data to conclude if the expected results are positive. Moreover, a level test will be applied to both groups at the beginning and at the end of the academic year in order to compare the results obtained.

Key words: listening comprehension, Secondary Education students, audio-visual material, Web 2.0 tools, innovative activities.

Resumen

Este trabajo de investigación se centra en investigar el uso efectivo de recursos materiales audiovisuales, haciendo uso de las últimas herramientas web a nuestra disposición, hoy en día, en el proceso de enseñanza y aprendizaje de la lengua extranjera; y la implementación de actividades creativas e innovadoras con el propósito de mejorar la comprensión auditiva en los estudiantes de Educación Secundaria. La hipótesis principal propuesta es si la inmersión lingüística complete usando materiales audiovisuales e implementando actividades innovadoras e interesantes, es un método más efectivo y útil para mejorar las competencias auditivas de los estudiantes. Para ello, habrá un grupo experimental, al cual se le aplicará el nuevo método propuesto y un grupo control que seguirá la metodología de enseñanza convencional. Esta única distinción entre ellos, nos proporcionará la información necesaria para concluir si los resultados esperados son positivos. Además, un test de nivel se aplicará a ambos grupos al comienzo y al final del año académico para comparar los resultados obtenidos.

Palabras clave: comprensión auditiva, estudiantes de Educación Secundaria, material audiovisual, herramientas web, actividades innovadoras.

3.1 Introduction

The present research paper is framed within the Spanish Educational System Law (LOMCE 8/2013 on December 9th), concretely regarding the English Foreign Language Teaching (EFLT) in a Secondary Education context.

As far as the English Language Teaching is concerned, the proposed research and innovation project focuses on investigating the effective use of audio-visual material resources making use of the latest information technologies (IT), also known as Web 2.0 tools at our disposal nowadays in the Foreign Language (FL) learning and teaching process and the implementation of innovative and creative activities with the purpose of improving the listening comprehension in Secondary Education students.

From my own experience in the FL learning and teaching context, an existing problem within our Spanish Educational System, is the limited application of effective audio-visual resources in the target language as teaching tools in a EFL classroom, since teachers generally pay more attention to grammatical structures and lexical acquisition. Moreover, the use of these resources is mostly basic and elemental, in such a way that these audio-visual materials and resources are not in most cases utilized to obtain the best possible results.

Furthermore, in general terms, it is a current reality that FL students have difficulty in obtaining successful outcomes regarding the listening comprehension and they do not know which appropriate and successful tools and resources are available in order to enhance their listening skills and consequently, to achieve the objectives required.

For this reason, the objective of this project is to foster the application of appropriate audio-visual resources and materials as well as to ensure coherent and effective use of these instruments by making a different use of audio-visual materials as we are accustomed to, with the purpose of fostering interactive and unusual activities to enhance listening skills in English foreign language, in addition to increase the students' motivation and the interest in learning a second language.

First of all, I want to consider the Educational context in which I carry this research project out, this is a Catholic state school that offers pre-school, primary and secondary education. I focus my research in 3rd year Secondary Education students who are randomly divided into two classes with an equitable distribution. Both groups are similar concerning cultural, social and economic backgrounds as well as linguistic competences. Besides, it is important to keep in mind that there are no students with special educational needs; therefore, the project can be applied to both groups without any distinction.

The idea is to apply the new methodology with respect to listening skill to one of both groups whereas the other one will follow the conventional method of instruction. So, we can compare the different results both at the beginning and at the end of the academic year and then, checking if the results obtained are significant and relevant to take into consideration and, if these ones are as expected.

To make this possible, it must be clear to us the methodology to follow which entails important aspects such as the hypothesis, the objective, the existing variables, the participants involved, the instruments to collect data, the materials and tools utilized and the procedure to be applied.

Furthermore, there will be a section which will include a brief explanation about the use of the new Information and Communication Technologies for Development (ICT4D) and Web 2.0 tools in the field of education as well as the implementation of innovative and creative activities or tasks. All this is aimed at improving and developing new competences, not only the listening skills but also personal, cultural and social ones. By using this kind of methodology in which new web tools are combined with innovative activities, it is intended to obtain better results regarding students' listening comprehension competence and moreover, a higher motivation and interest in the learning of a foreign or second language.

Then, a reflection about the expected results will be included and lastly, a conclusion about the whole research project will be provided.

3.2 Literature review

Firstly, it is important to mention the significant role of the research in foreign languages. It is one of the essential cornerstones within the teaching process because it implies the formulation of questions about the world, the real situation of students and the teachers who participate in the learning and teaching process. In addition to ask about the processes carried out and the results obtained. The data collection and the information gathered from a research project is fundamental and necessary for researchers to be able to establish and design new approaches or methods with the purpose of improving the learning and teaching process of a foreign/second language.

Over the years, researchers and educators have led the foreign and second language research to the study of all aspects of language use, the areas of investigation include, among others, communication in the professions, language policy and planning, communication disorders, language and the media, language and technology and so on (Kramch, 2000). Besides the interest of studying the diverse methodologies and strategies used in the language and teaching process, other relevant issues to foreign language study are the motivation to learn and attitude toward the FL and its speakers, also including the cross-cultural misunderstandings experienced in a foreign context. Below, is the description of the main concepts involved in the elaboration of this research paper in order to avoid misunderstandings.

According to Jack C. Richards and Richard Schmidt (2013), the following terms are defined below:

- Listening comprehension: the process of understanding speech in a first or second language. The study of listening comprehension processes in second language learning focuses on the role of individual linguistic units (e.g. phonemes, words, grammatical structures) as well as the role of the listener's expectations, the situation and context, background knowledge and the topic.

- Audio visual: an audio or visual device used by a teacher to help learning. For example, pictures, charts, and flashcards are visual aids; radio, records, and tape-recorders are auditory aids. Film, television, and video are audio-visual aids.

- Foreign Language: a language which is not the native language of large numbers of people in a country or region, is not used as a medium of instruction in schools, and is not widely used as a medium of communication in government, media, etc. Foreign languages are typically taught as school subjects with the purpose of communicating with foreigners or for reading printed materials in the language.

- International English Language Testing System (IELTS): a test of English for academic purposes, used widely to measure the English language proficiency of international students whose native languages are not English and who intend to enter universities in Australia, Canada, New Zealand, the United Kingdom and elsewhere.

- Language acquisition and/or language learning: the learning and development of a person's language. The learning of a native first language is called first language acquisition, and of a second or foreign language, second language acquisition. Some theorists use "learning" and "acquisition" synonymously. Others maintain a contrast between the two terms, using "learning" to mean a conscious process involving the study of explicit rules of language and monitoring one's performance, as is often typical of classroom learning in a foreign language context, and using "acquisition" to refer to a nonconscious process of rule internalization resulting from exposure to comprehensible input when the learner's attention is on meaning rather than form, as is more common in a second language context.

The European Union, together with the support of International institutions, has accepted a change of paradigm and has lead the research in a different perspective. Now, the objective is focused on the learners or users of languages instead of language itself.

Listening comprehension is a complex process in which the strategies must be used simultaneously and teachers should provide the students with the suitable listening strategies and the activities proposed should be arranged from basic to more complex when at the same time learners advance in English language (Pourhosein, A.& Banou, Narjes, 2016). In accordance with this assumption, Meskill (1996) also states that recognition of listening is a complex activity in the language acquisition process that has highly influenced contemporary language teaching practice, this is the reason why listening is considered at present as an active and interactive process, on the contrary that the previous ones, that designated the learner as the passive receiver of aural input. Furthermore, she also claimed (Meskill, 1996) that multimedia could improve listening skill focused on some aspects, as for example, visual and texts roles as tool to organize language, video motivation aspect as a profit for language teaching and a comfortable environment to describe chart and discourse strategy for students (Arono, 2014). Abbas and Narjes (2016), also present a list with the main problems or difficulties that learners may encounter in the listening comprehension processes (for example, cultural differences, accent, unfamiliar vocabulary or length and speed of listening), and alternatively, there are some suggestions that are beneficial to students to overcome some of their listening comprehension problems.

Besides, Meskill (1996) explains the increase of audio-visual technologies in the process of learning and teaching, which is considered a challenge for teaching professionals as she stated. Moreover, some controversial opinions arose with respect to the immersion of multi modal processes which imply not only aural but also visual and even, textual modalities. Nevertheless, it is finally considered that the cognitive requirements of multi-modal processing may also imply increased understanding and, therefore, increased task persistence.

3.3 Methodology

This innovative project represents an experimental research designed to enhance Secondary students' listening skills by fostering the application of appropriate audio-visual material resources and making use of the current web tools to ameliorate the effectiveness of these instruments and hence, the results obtained.

Firstly, some research questions are raised in the present work:

- “Is the use of audio-visual materials a more useful and effective method to improve students' listening comprehension competences in English foreign language classes?
- The fact that teachers promote and perfect the use of audio-visual resources, could it be an effective and adequate teaching tool to improve listening skills in the foreign language teaching?
- Is there a significant difference in the students' learning outcomes depending on the way the audio-visual materials are utilized in the foreign language learning and teaching?

The hypothesis proposed is if the completed linguistic immersion by using audio-visual materials and implementing interesting and innovative activities is a more useful and effective method to improve students' listening competences.

Therefore, the aim of this project is to research the effectiveness of using audio-visual materials in the target language and introduce more collaborative and innovative activities or tasks as teaching tools in the English foreign language lesson.

The following step is to identify the variables implied in the present research, in this case, two variables are distinguished; on the one hand, it is the independent variable that refers to the method applied. On the other hand, it is the dependent variable that refers to the results obtained from the test realized. Of course, the independent variable will be manipulated to determine its effect on the dependent variable, in other words, two different methods will be applied to each group to determine which of them is more effective regarding the performance enhancement. Clearly, the method used is the only different feature existing in both groups.

3.3.1 Participants

As I have mentioned previously, in this research there will be involved two similar groups consisted of students in the 3rd year Secondary Education.

The comparative study between the two groups makes use of an Experimental Research Methodology that is based on three principal criteria:

1. Random assignment: the subjects of each group will be randomly and equally assigned to treatment groups.
2. Experimental control: all features of the treatments are identical except for the independent variable. That is, there is no any other distinction between the groups, these are similar, there are no significant differences regarding learning abilities, language proficiency, ethical and cultural origins, special educational needs, and so on.
3. Appropriate measures: the dependent measures are appropriate for testing the research hypothesis.

Therefore, on the one hand, there will be an experimental group which will be applied the new method proposed and on the other hand, the control group which will follow the conventional instruction methodology as usual. This distinction between them will provide us with the necessary data to conclude if the expected results are positive.

3.3.2 Instruments

The tools used to gather the data will consist of taking a listening test to both groups, both at the beginning and at the end of the academic year which could measure the level of listening comprehension competence. Firstly, the listening level test is taken from IELTS (International English Language Testing System) and it will consist of four different audios with seven listening exercises each one. The elaboration of these tests will provide the data required to measure the English level of students in listening skill. (See Appendix 2)

The Rubric used for this Listening Level Test is composed of nine levels, from 1 (lower level) to 9 (higher level). (See an example in Appendix 3)

The material resources and tools will be used for the ELT process, concretely, in the Listening skill development, will include technological devices such as laptop, screen projector, video and audio player, DVD player, among others. In addition to the implementation of new Educational Web 2.0 Tools and Educational web sites to use in the FL/SL teaching and learning process. Additionally, Web 2.0 tools provide innovative ways to communicate, present content, and collaborate with others in creative ways. Web 2.0 tools are easy to learn, use, and implement, and many are free. This course will not only introduce you to popular Web 2.0 tools like Edmodo, Twitter, Voice thread, and Skype in K-16 instruction, but teachers will also learn how to effectively integrate these technologies into the classroom practices and create engaging student activities. In addition to web sites that constitute Educational support and comprise a wide variety of diverse sections organized according to skill competences and kind of activities.

3.3.3 Procedure

The procedure of the research will be carried out in the following way:

The Listening Comprehension Level tests will be realised to each group of students in 3rd year Secondary Education, first, at the beginning of the academic year, this is a pre-test, and lastly, at the end of the same academic year, that is called the post-text.

During the experimental process, both class groups will be provided with a different teaching method and strategies to enhance the development of the Listening Comprehension Competence. This will be the only distinction between both students' groups.

The time schedule devoted to EFLT lesson will be the same and more concretely, the specific time dedicated to the Listening Skill Competence in both groups will be the same. Mainly, the experimental group will be introduced to new webs in which they can reproduce a great variety of videos such as English Language films, interviews, documentaries, journalist reports, Quiz shows and so on, and after that, completing online activities related to videos, commenting and debating different aspects, asking questions, and so on. In addition to this, students will be required to carry out diverse creative tasks by using web tools as powtoon, kahoot, storybird, Genially, among others, in order to foster the listening skill in English Foreign language. Nevertheless, the difference is not the fact of using these audio-visual materials but how teachers can make use of that material by choosing the appropriate and effective activities to put into practice, as in the case of the experimental group.

Whereas the control group will follow realizing the usual and typical comprehension and oral exercises by filling the gaps, answering the questions, or choosing true/false statements that appear in the textbook regarding the audio or video previously reproduced.

The type of tasks that the experimental group will realize are the following ones:

Firstly, students will watch different interesting videos related to culture, music, sport, travels, festivals and so on, then they will have to answer questions that will be made through the web application Kahoot. Meanwhile, the control group will study the units from the first term (Units 1,2,3,4,5 and 6).

Secondly, the experimental group class will be divided into small groups and each one will use a specific web tool dedicated to learn English, as for example ABA English. With this task the objective is to foster the teamwork, the responsibility, the decision making, and the use and knowledge of different webtools to learn English since they will have to make an essay explaining the pros and cons and possible suggestions about the use of these applications. At the same time, the control group will make the units from the second term (Units 7,8,9, 10 and 11).

The last task will consist of watching some video scenes about Sherlock Holmes and students will have to deduce what has happened, who is the murder, what is the murder weapon and so on. Then, students will represent what they think have happened through the web tool Powtoon.

Meanwhile, the control group will study the units from the third term (Units 12,13, 14 and 15).

At the end of the school year, the same listening level tests will be done again to both 3rd year Secondary Education students groups, with the purpose of analysing and compare the results and check if students have increased their listening skill competences. Finally, all the results will be compared and contrasted to verify the expected results or on in contrast, start a reflection on them. At the end, a conclusion will be established.

3.4 Innovative aspects

The introduction of the new information technologies in the Educational context have contributed to extend and improve the teaching strategies and methods used in the learning and teaching processes, and moreover, the application of web 2.0 tools and websites have influenced in the enhancement of students learning process because of the elaboration of new creative and innovative tasks have developed new capacities in students as the autonomy, the creativity, the collaborative work, the interaction in class and so on. Here below, some of these above-mentioned web tools and online websites are presented:

- Powtoon: PowToon lets you create awesome presentations and animated videos.
- ESL Web site is specifically designed to help English learners improve their listening comprehension skills. One of the best ways to improve communication skills.
- Tech4learning is an innovative educational technology company that develops and markets original professional development programs and creativity products for K-12 education. Since the company was founded in 1999, we have focused on developing tools educators need to be successful with technology in their classrooms.

3.5 Expected results and discussion

Hence, the expected results obtained from the experimental group are positive not only because of the introduction of the new information technologies (IT) and use of new webtools and online resources but also the way in which these ones are used. In addition to the immersion of creative and innovative activities in which students can participate more actively and develop other competences like personal, cultural, and so on. Because it must be clear that a new methodology is proposed in this research project through the use of the previously mentioned webtools and online resources. For all these reasons, it is expected that results are positive. However, there is some possibility that results obtained are similar in both groups, that is, the results are not enough significant and relevant, in that case, the hypothesis would be null. Nevertheless, perhaps the findings obtained are not conclusive because the research is applied to a small group and probably, it would be necessary to carry out more studies applied to more groups.

3.6 Conclusion

As I have already mentioned, it is an existing fact that foreign language students have more complexity in obtaining positive results regarding the listening comprehension and they do not know appropriate and successful tools and resources and also, how to use them in order to enhance their listening skills and consequently, to achieve the objectives required.

For this reason, the objective of this project is to foster the application of appropriate audio-visual resources and materials as well as to ensure coherent and effective use of these instruments by making a different use of audio-visual materials as we are accustomed to, with the purpose of fostering interactive and unusual activities to enhance listening skills in English foreign language, in addition to increase the students' motivation and the interest in learning a second language.

We will be able to prove if the linguistic immersion completed through audio-visual materials and choosing creative and effective activities to put into practice is a useful and effective method to improve students' linguistic competences.

The pedagogical implications will consist of some changes in the lesson planning, the study and research of oral and audio-visual tasks for teaching a foreign language, the introduction of new activities and their development and implementation in the foreign language class.

If the results indicated this method works effectively, foreign language teachers could consider using more audio-lingual and visual materials and resources by applying communicative and interactive tasks which foster the students' participation and the collaborative class projects, and at the same time increase the students' motivation and their interest in acquiring a foreign language. Last but not least, I will conclude by saying that foreign language teachers should invest more time to create and apply new and effective activities to enhance the students' listening and speaking skills in the English foreign language.

Finally, we could take into consideration to change the current English classes and introduce new practical and functional activities and tasks that promote equally both the spoken and written language learning.
