Tenders eyed for uplands

By BARRY GERDING

Sidney council should invite tenders from private developers for a conceptual design blueprint for the proposed marina at the foot of Beacon Ave. and adjacent off-shore development — that was the recommendation from the planning committee Monday

The motion calls for separate tenders to be requested for the marina and off-shore development as opposed to one blueprint drawing encompassing both.

Support of the recommendation was not unanimous among committee members with Helen Perodeau voicing her opposition. Perodeau said additional studies are required to provide a market analysis specifically on the off-shore development.

Novacorp's market and economic analysis report focused mainly on the marina, she said.

"We need something similar to the Novacorp study dealing strictly with the off-shore development to give council some direction in approaching private developers and asking for building proposals," Perodeau said.

She added the effect on existing merchants and the economic and social benefits to the community are some of the questions still unanswered about the combined commercialparkland proposal.

Mayor Loyd Burdon disagreed with Perodeau, citing a report from administrative staff suggesting the town make no further financial committments to the marina at this time.

He said council should now ask private developers for their ideas.

"It is beyond council's scope and capability to come up with a specific development proposal on our own. I feel we should let private developers submit proposals for our consideration and from there start looking at specifics," Burdon said.

Council, he said, is not obligated to chose any tenders submitted.

Without any specific guidelines, we will give entrepreneurs the flexibility to present us with a wide range of ideas to consider. We can either select one tender or take parts of two or three proposals and combine them into one."

Ald. John Calder argued specific guidelines must be in place so all private developers can Continued on Page A3

Jazz fest catches fire

Sidney's jazz festival — set for Aug. 2 and 3 — is catching fire. Four major sponsors have committed upwards of $1,000 each in cash and privileges, Bob Ward said Monday.

Peter Dentro of the Travelodge will supply two doubledecker buses, rooms for bands and a sizeable cash contribution; Hotel Sidney's Denis Paquette is also supplying rooms and a large cash

The Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans have come up with money as well as Cal's Family Restaurant.

Now organizers are seeking corporate sponsors, $50 each minimum, and a drive for funds starts this week headed by Bill Robson and his Block Bros. team. Sidney Association of Merchants (SAM) has pledged support and will plan special supporting events, to be announced soon, Ward said.

The jazz festival, with six bands working out of four locations, should attract some 3,000 out-of-town people. Ward predicts. Friday Harbour pulled in 7,000 visitors last year, leaving more than $2 million in the town's coffers, he added.

Ward hopes to persuade Island Jetfoil to re-route the craft to Sidney Saturday, Aug. 2.

Some 100 volunteers will be required to help with the festival for more information contact Joan Hardy, Hotel Sidney; Joan Dear, Bob Teale, Bill Robson, Jennifer Taylor, Ron and Carol Cree or Bob Ward.

Conditions complicate gift of land

North Saanich council wants to give 14.7 acres near Parkland school to Sidney and North Saanich Memorial Park Trust Committee but it also wants a few long strings attached to the gift so it can be yanked back if the trust doesn't do what council

Not withstanding Boas' statement, council approved the gift in principle subject to the trust promising to commit $200,000 to a running track on the property; invest $100,000 with the interest to be used for track and property maintenance; use the property only for park and open field recreation; get public approval of these conditions; and that North Saanich gets the land back if the Trust doesn't comply with these restrictions.

Boas told council it can attach strings to its offer if it likes, but it was likely the Trust's committee looking into possible uses for the property would cut them. Psychic helps police convict killer

By PEGGIE ROWAND

Brenda Elaine Muhlfellner was brutally murdered by her husband in the living room of their home.

After a quarrel he hit her and threw her against the fireplace. In his confession he admits he "went into a rage and kept hitting her head against the fireplace.

Wolfgang Jochim Mulfellner wrapped her body in a plastic sheet and buried it deep in the back yard.

Eleven months later he dug up the body and incinerated it, using garbage he'd saved for six months and adding a pickup truck of twigs, wood and other garbage. He made an indentation in the pile of rubbish and poured oil and gas on it. Shortly after he was observed raking the ashes over in the bnekyard.

But he saw some bones that did

So he rototilled the garden.

Brenda went "missing" Jan. 11, 1981, the day she was killed. But her husband was not arrested until Dec. 8, 1984, nearly four years later.

Police had Muhlfeliner as a prime suspect but had no real evidence. And it was The Review's resident psychic --- Rose Gallacher, who writes a weekly column for the paper -- who helped police convict Muhlfellner.

This exclusive story of the amazing cover-up killing is told by Gallacher and the victim's mother, Hilda Rennie, 2779 Winster Rd., Langford.

Muhlfellner, 35, of 430-7th Sta Nanaimo, was originally charged with second degree murder but confessed and pleaded guilty to manslaughter May 21 this year, a plea which the crown accepted.

He was jailed for five years May 23.

She told police how the woman had died, that she had been buried. The husband had killed her, Gallacher said.

Police Sgt. Ken Dorkin still suspected Muhlfeliner but although he was followed and his home wired and telephone tapped there was still no concrete cyldence.

But Gallacher's information helped. The psychic said crown counsel Jim Taylor admitted in court police had "used" a psychic in their investigations and she'd been 100 per cent accurate. Gallacher went with police to Muhlfeliner's home and pointed to a spot by the fireplace saying, "This is where she was killed."

I can see the blood, she said. No, no, that was red wine I spilt. Muhlfenner cried out.

Rennie takes up the story.

Brenda was 28 when she died. She was married to Muhifeliner in June, 1973, and there were two children, Randi Lee, 10, and Ryan, 7. Although Brenda was in love when she married it wasn't long before the couple were quarrelling.

"It was a poor marriage," Rennie said.

Brookbank optimistic initiative plan

Despite some negative reaction by property owners and merchants in the specified area revitalization co-ordinator Ray Brookbank feels optimistic the initiative plan will pass.

He said Thursday many people he has spoken to are looking on revitalization as a investment in their business and the future of Sidney. "And I've been in touch with some majority property owners who are supporting the plan."

Some people didn't realize they won't start paying for revitalization costs for two years, he add-

Brookbank said last week his first concern was to talk to property owners but admits he "said it badly." If merchants have questions, if I haven't seen them yet - I'm available."

Although it was originally undersstood Brookbanks would be getting property owners and merchants together to discuss costs, the co-ordinator now says "it's their choice. I've told landlords if they wish to have a meeting with their tenants, I'm available."

He said he has also indicated he wishes to talk to tenants, "I'm out now actively knocking on doors, talking to tenants and landlords."

I'm doing everything I can to see that people are well informed,

For clarification Brookbank said although he was away for four weeks in May he was not on council's payroll during that time.

He was responding to a statement made last week by former alderman Don Phillips who criticized Brookbank's absence during part of the 30-day period when the co-ordinator was supposed to be getting together with merchants and tenants.

There was an inference that I was being paid during my absence, Brookbanks said.

Property owners in the specified area have until June 21 to register their protest at Sidney town hall if they are opposed to the project. Failure to respond will be seen as a vote in favor of revitalization.

Property owners in the specified area will pay 75 per cent of the $1.3 million costs, the remaining 25 per cent will be taken out of the town's Capital Works budget.

"There needs to be a lot more water flow under the bridge before this thing can fly," Harrop said, mixing his metaphors.

Boas said after the meeting that he and other Trust members had met with North Saanich council numerous times over the past eight months but some council members still did not seem to understand that they could not, under the Trust's agreement with Sidney and North Saanich citizens, control in any way land under the Trust's control..

Central Saanich council does not plan to comply with Sidney's request for support in its development of the Port of Sidney.

Chamber president seeks seat on council

Rick Roberts, president of Saanich Peninsula chamber of commerce, and with 10 years of community service behind him, believes his professional skills have enabled people to identify him as a worthwhile candidate in Sidney's June 22 byelection.

Roberts, 35, has worked for Employment Canada for 14 years and is currently labor market services consultant, a job in which he brings employers and employees together to "examine human resource related problems" and community development.

His particular skills and the experience he's gathered over the years working with various organizations make it possible, he says, for him to create a positive environment on council "where things can happen."

And that's not the case now, he adds, with people taking potshots at each other.

Roberts says he first began to

He thought it over and discussed it with his family, Roberts says, and decided a seat on council would be a natural extension to the community services he's been involved in over many years. "It seemed to be the next

He sees himself as a catalyst, "not running around doing everything myself but bringing in the proper people to do the job."

Roberts says the next critical step council should take on the waterfront is to make decisions on the general direction the town should go and "bring as many people to the planning process as we can — like senior government members". We should be talking to them in great detail - I think because of my background I can be of great help, he adds.

Married to Florence, the couple have four children and live at 9577 Iroquois Way, Sidney. Roberts majored in history and political science at the University of Victoria; he and his wife are actively involved in church work. and Roberts has been a member and director of various chambers during the past 10 years.

He has also worked with the Tourism Association of Vancouver Island, was director of Victoria and Visitor Convention Bureau; hostel development director of the Canadian Hostelling Association, Vancouver Island district; was chairman of the Diamond Jubilee Committtee, Cranbrook; president of the board of Cranbrook Boys' and Girls' Club and president of the Canadian Hostelling Association, B.C. region.

The byelelction was created by the resignation of former alderman Don Phillips. Balance of the term runs to Dec. 2.

Nothing happened for close to a year. Then Rennie, who knew police had called in a psychic, visited Rose in Central Saanich. The date was Feb 15, 1983. She knew by then police were trying to get Muhlfellner to see Gallacher but he had refused.

But Rose came back with Rennie and visited the house, confronting Muhlfellner and telling him where his wife was killed and pointing to the area where she "saw" bloodstains.

Brenda's husband was arrested Dec.8, 1984, with his conviction on a charge of manslaughter following in May this year.

But Rennie is crying out for justice. "I'm angry and disgusted with the judicial system." she said. Five years was not sufficient punishment for the death of her daughter.

And she sobs when she talks about the two children, both traumatized by the knowledge of the way their mother died.

That sentence must be appealed, she said. She's hopeful crown counsel Jim Taylor will act.

Developers need guidelines

Private enterprise will naturally develop the upland or onshore property but who will call the tune, set the guidelines for the kind of development Sidney needs and wants?

A report from Novacorp indicated the kind of development that would attract tourists and also please and serve residents, but specific ideas must be examined and decisions made.

The success of revitalization is indisputably linked with development of the marina and on-shore property and therefore cannot be taken lightly or left to developers to "come up with ideas" for what has become the most important and outstanding piece of property in Sidney.

It would be foolish, having once acquired this valuable property, for council to pass the responsibility of its development onto the private sector.

But that is exactly what Mayor Loyd Burdon wishes to do and he received some backing Monday night from some members of council's planning committee for a recommendation to invite tenders from private developers.

Hopefully, council will not ratify that recommendation. More serious thought as well as advice from a qualified planner should go into decisions which have to be made. Once a plan is established with guidelines in place, council can then go ahead and call for tenders.

In its report Novacorp pointed out the great potential the marina and upland property have for turning Sidney into a unique and attractive place to visit, capable of attracting tourists and increasing the economic viability of the town's commercial core.

We mustn't throw this great opportunity away.

Contrary to opinions held in some quarters, Canada's social safety net doesn't have to take a back seat to those provided by other enlightened societies.

And if you can take time out for a moment from the political battle in which every British Columbian seems to be engaged 24 hours a day, perhaps you're willing to consider my argument that even here in B.C., social services stand up to the scrutiny of compassion and humanitarianism.

As in every system, thee are inadequacies. Single persons on social assistance find it difficult to get by on welfare payments. Single mothers also need more help. But by and large, the safety net succeeds in alleviating the harsh conditions imposed on the less fortunate by the recession and its resulting unemployment.

But with the evolution of a compassionate social services system, there has come a greater dependency on government for services that cannot be classified as essential. When fiscal restraint became the order of the day, there were a lot of complaints about the effect the government's tight-fisted policies were having on any number of services the public had come to take for granted.

I'd like to single out just one aspect to make my point — the construction and maintenance of sports and recreation facilities at schools and universities.

I'm sure most people today expect the various levels of government to take responsibility for such facilities, because they have become part and parcel of the services offered by schools and universities. That wasn't always the case. The University of British Columbia, for instance, has a proud history of creating student amenities with funds provided by the students themselves.

In 1928, students imposed a levy of $3 on themselves to build a womens' gymnasium at a cost of nearly $40,000.

In 1939, Brock Hall was built with a $3 levy per student. The cost: $80,000.

In 1947, students paid a $5 levy and financed construction of the War Memorial Gymnasium at a cost of $367,000.

An extension to Brock Hall was on the agenda for 1957. The cost was $325,000, financed with a $5 levy. In 1959, students underwrote the $150,000 cost of building a students' residence by way of a $5 levy. The Thunderbird Winter Sports Centre followed in 1962. This time a $10 levy bought a $185,000 facility.

A $3.5 million student union building was financed in 1968. The levy was $15 per student.

In 1969, students expanded the winter sports centre at a cost of $730,000, followed by a $350,000 expansion of the student union building in 1972.

The Aquatic Centre followed in 1973. The $925,000 project was financed with a $5 levy. The last project built by students was the expansion of the student union building's plaza at a cost of $1.5 million, financed with the help of a $15 levy per student.

Total cost of facilities financed by UBC students since 1928 comes to an impressive $8,2 million. The replacement cost in 1984 dollars would be close to $30 million.

not too shabby for a volunteer effort.

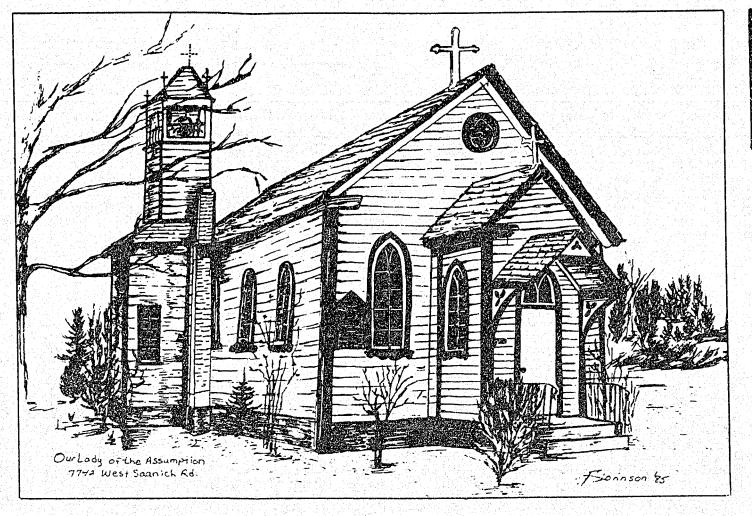

I'm not saying we should run our eduction system on a volunteer basis, but by the same token, we shouldn't expect government to do everything for us. The old adage "physician heal thyself" has more than one application. There are compensations when we take matters into our own hands, rather than letting government look after us from the cradle to the grave. Pride in accomplishment is one of them. Credit for this piece goes, in part, to a colleague of mine. Jim Humes who works here at the press gallery for the Victoria daily, and a Dr. William C. Gibson, chancellor of the University of Victoria.

Let's hear from Rowdies

Once again the gentlemen of North Saanich are tossing down the gauntlet to Sidney Rowdies.

Returning from a successful winter cricket tour of India, Sri Lanka, Australia and New Zealand, our batsmen are poised and eager to devastate the Sidney bowling with cover drives, cuts to fine-leg and many boundaries.

It is also expected our bowlers will wreak havoc in the Sidney batting ranks with yorkers and off-breaks, to say nothing of the blinding speed of Destroyer Doman and Firy Finall.

Also be forewarned of Hurricane Herlinveaux.

If the chappies from Sidney have the intestinal fortitude to do battle for The Review Annual Challenge Trophy, the venue will be Wain Park Oval at 2 p.m. Saturday, June 29.

We look forward to a response on this page, so what about it Derek? Think you can rally the troops?

•The aircraft referred to is on the property of the Sidney Unit 302 of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada, not a "local legion."

•Had you taken the time and interest to visit our unit, you would have learned that the said aircraft would not be left in its present condition. Work on restoration of the fast deteriorating exterior was started last fall and due to extremely inelement weather, which came on suddenly and lasted longer then anticipated, was not completed at that time.

In the interim, our membership decided the job was not satisfactory and began getting estimates on restoring the exterior to its original metalic coloration. (We do not receive government grants so must watch our expenditures.) Restoration has now begun.

•Since its inception in 1947, our members have devoted innumerable hours to collect, catalogue, restore and remount hundreds of artifactss plus photographs from World Wars I and II. Much of this work had to be redone after a devastating fire demolished our former premises a few years ago and since that time we have built - and completely paid for - new club rooms.

•Besides the museum effort, our unit and its ladies auxiliary have raised funds for this community including healthy contributions to air cadets, little league baseball, Saanich Peninsula Hospital, the Steve Fonyo cancer run and, for the past year, to Sidney Food Bank, necessitated by the high unemployment rate in the area.

Open letter to Saanich school board

It was with some distress and astonishment that I heard in conversation there may be proposals underway to either downgrade or even disband the band program at Parkland school. If this indeed is the case I believe a full discussion should be conducted with parents at both Parkland and North Saanich schools before any such retrograde and short term actions are taken.

It must be pointed out that this program is a highly successful one, bringing great credit to both Parkland and North Saanich schools and, of course, providing a great number of young people with an introduction to the wonderful world of musical instruments.

The program at both schools are highly reliant upon one another. Under the excellent guidance of Bill Brennan at North Saanich school there are accomplished bands moving up the ladder of success and of a standard that will probably ensure Parkland even greater acclaim in this field. I don't think it is putting things.

too strongly to state that tampering with the program at the high school level will not only lose us many budding musical talents at an important age in their development at Parkland, it will also effectively destroy the North Saanich middle school program.

Hopefully the information given to me is incorrect, especially in light of recent conversations with Mrs Parrot on my Close Encounters program where the excellence of music programs in these two schools was discussed. I would certainly have asked for the board's position on this subject had I been aware of these developments at the time. Due to the number of concerns that have been expressed to me by some parents over the last two weeks, could I ask the board to make some form of reply stating its policy on the programs, confirming or alleviating those concerns? Claptrap?

The statements by revitalization coordinator Ray Brookbank in the May 29 Review are so divorced from reality they deserve comment.

Brookbank tells us all we have to do is give Beacon Ave a "facelift" and that will make merchants more competitive and stop us shopping in Victoria. What claptrap. A cosmetic facelift, which is really all that is happening, will not change shopping habits.

I like shopping in Sidney but only if the price is right. Recently I saved $65 on four purchases made in Victoria after pricing the identical items in Sidney. As my property taxes have increased by $81 this year (and I have yet to start paying for facelifts and ports) I am still looking for another $16 saving to balance the books!

The facelift will have only one effect. My taxes will increase, the merchants will increase their prices to cope with their increased taxes and I will be looking elsewhere for more shopping savings to offset my tax increases.

Brookbank says his first concern is "the landlords" then he tells the merchants not to worry about storefront maintainence or awnings. The taxpayer will pick up that tab too, he assures them, via "government grants." The

Hugh's Views

By Hugh Nash

Last week I took a roundhouse swing at those Canadians who consistently stuff smouldering dried leaves and paper into their mouths. I lauded the federal government for hiking the tax on the filthy habit of smoking and encouraged more of the same (taxes, not smoking) until the whole noxious habit has been eradicated.

Since then I have been deluged by letters and telephone calls from smokers telling me clearly and succinctly where I could put my opinions. Very rude stuff it was, too.

Each and every one of these fans also spoke of the enjoyment of burning refuse under their noses but even more eloquently how difficult it was to stop. They said they had many times tried to butt out but each time suffered untold agonies . . . but then I wouldn't know anything about that, of course, so I'd better shut up or stick to a topic about which I have more than just a passing acquaintance.

Well, let me tell you I know quite a darn bit about quitting smoking. As a matter of fact, I'm in the painful process of quitting right now. So there.

For the past few years I have been smoking the equivalent of three to five cigarettes a day. The smoke did not come from cigarettes which I held in my own hands but drifted over from other folks. However, according to the nice people at the Canadian Lung Association, that's what I've been inhaling.

Now that I'm no longer in continuous contact with my regular smoking friends, I'm suffering nicotine withdrawal symptoms just as serious and debilitating as if I'd been paying for the things myself.

Why else would I lack the strength to rise from my bed as early as I once did? Now I don't lie about until the sun is just a whisker away from the yardarm as some of my closer relations imply, but I admit that it is a touch higher above the horizon when I now slip into my slippers than it once was.

I sometimes try to blame the whole thing on daylight saving time, the position of the moon, a touch of hay fever or an incorrect clock but deep down I know the real reason.

As soon as I'm vertical the longing to gulp down a deep breath or two of sidestream smoke will become overpowering and therefore I stay supine as long as possible to delay the pain.

Another thing. I've taken to chewing gum, sucking little candies and walking around with a pencil hanging from my lips — all tactile symptoms subconciously adopted by others suffering from slipping off the weed.

I am eating more and that, too, is a direct result of stopping smoking. Friends taking a sideays glance at my outline speak of pots boiling over, days until due date and other hilarious(to them) little gems calculated to encourage whatever crowd may have gthered to giggle, smirk and join in the silly banter usually associated with such goings on.

In truth it is not the really miniscule number of additional calories I have taken in which is causing the problem, it is my stomach, encouraged by a set of lungs which live just above it, stretching and straining every which way seeking a bellyfull of smoke. It misses the 3,500-plus chemicals it had enjoyed for years and wonders where they all went

Not only has my body deterioriated since I quit smoking, but my social graces have reached a state which would make even the most boorish cringe.

In restaurants, instead of loudly demanding the non-smoking section, I seek a spot nearest the heaviest smoker in hopes of a fix. Those with whom I now dine, if they are non-smokers, try to ignore me as I lean farther and farther toward someone at the next table while breathing loudly and deeply.

At parties I wander from group to group imploring smokers to "blow some in my face, please," This is not a practice which pleases those I pursue.

So, my friends, I do so know the terrible hell one goes through when ridding one's lungs of euphoric gases. As soon as I'm over the worst, I think I'll be good company again.

In the meantime, does anyone mind if I have this last piece of pie?

taxpayer is, of course, paying Brookbank and his "first concern" should be the taxpayer at large not the landlords and merchants.

True Brookbank has a difficult job because, as your editorial points out, he has no market and economic analysis to work with and is reduced to statements based on pious hopes and public relations buzz words. Former alderman Phillips was wrong in complaining about Mr. B. being out of town most of May — the taxpayer would be better off if he were permanantly out of town.

To be fair to Brookbank the real blame for this fiasco must rest with the majority on council and the Sidney Merchants' Association. Clive Tanner recently described council as "incompetent". More claptrap considering it is Tanner and his fellow merchants who are the ones pulling the strings that make council jump.

One can only hope Don Phillips is right, that the project will be defeated and the taxpayers saved from the "incompetence" of council and Mr. Tanner and his merchants.

Fishermen hurting

When an industry employing 60-70 shuts down in Victoria, it is front page news. Questions are asked, and local levels of government involve themselves in the inevitable economic dislocation that will follow.

Currently, there are approximately 170-200 troller fishermen who traditionally would be fishing the Strait of Georgia for spring salmon for a living, who instead are shut out from their workplace without any indication of an opening date, or explanation of what is seen by them to be discrimination against the trolling fleet by federal fisheries.

Last summer the Gulf Trollers' Association took federal fisheries to court. It won a decision against the methods of fish allocation on the basis that it was discriminatory. The judgement is being appealed by the government.

Todate, the trollers have not been told when their 1985 season will be opened.

The trolling fleet is distributed in harbours up and down both sides of the strait; supported by gear and tackle retail outlets and other service industries, which are beginning to feel the impact of the closure.

The trollers do not want to be singled out as means of protecting salmon stocks. They share the earch with the sports fishery, the seiners and the outside trollers when they fish the straits.

They see their means of livelihood being eliminated, their free enterprise way of life being sacrificed, and other fisheries taking their place.

It is time questions were being asked, and local levels of government, and perhaps groups of aware citizens, began to involve themselves as well as families that are hurting. We are all going to be affected.

Zany idea?

The town of Sidney intends to undertake a revitalization program within the specified area on Beacon Ave. This is being done under the initiative method instead of holding a referendum and is usually done to avoid the cost of holding a poll but there is going to be a byelection in Sidney on June 22 so the extra cost of holding a referendum at the same time would be very little more.

It thus appears the initiative process is being used to avoid the democratic process of a secret ballot which is the accepted form of democracy around the world.

In the City of Nanaimo the initiative process was used for building a parkade and it appeared successful, however it was challenged in the courts and despite assurances from municipal affairs, the city solicitor, and city staff that it was legal and could not be upset in the courts the judge had a different opinion and threw the parkade bylaw out.

The Municipal Act is very obscure in some of these regulations and the Sidney revitalization bylaw could well suffer the same fate.

The property owners who are going to be assessed this extra cost of $141,600 a year for 10 years should consider very carefully this extra tax levee before they let this initiative proceed. In the long run this extra cost has to be handed onto the customers and many will be aware of this and shop elsewhere.

In Sidney the property owners that will benefit will pay 75 per cent of the cost. This is more than usual in these projects. In Nanaimo the area concerned is only paying one-third of the cost, the entire city one-third, and the provincal government one-third.

Municipal affairs gave Nanaimo an outright grant of $860,000 and it is my opinion this was too large a carrot on the end of a stick for property owners to turn down and is the only reason the revitalization project went ahead,

This grant was quite amazing when you consider Nanaimo has a NDP MLA, and the Town of Sidney has a Social Credit cabinet minister as its representative, and is not being given any grant; it seems obvious Victoria does not put a very high priority on Sidney revitalization.

Thave no idea of the amount of unpaid taxes in the area benefitting in Sidney. In Nanaimo of the 101 properties in the area benefitting on Oct 31, 1984, 25 had not paid their current taxes and owed $211,194 and 14 had unpaid arrears in taxes of $111,675. These same 101 properties will be facing an extra tax levy of $140,000—and for the next 20 years.

Does it make any economic common sense to increase your taxes when you cannot pay your present taxes?

These revitalized areas look nice, but do they warrant the extra taxes? On the Island the only really successful one is in the town of Chemainus, and that is due to the afterthought of painting the murals.

In many cases the taxes will hit in an increasing amount over the years so the whole impact is not yet realized.

With the exception of Che mainus I believe all revitalized areas are suffering from empty stores. Nanaimo has plenty and has five lots that are the sites of buildings that have burned down and have not been rebuilt.

The town of Sidney has hired

Ray Brookbank to co-ordinate its downtown revitilization program. Brookbank is a well-respected resident of Nanaimo, he served on the regional board and was an alderman for six years and never defeated in running for alderman, however he twice ran for mayor without success.

It should be understood that he was not a member of Nanaimo city council after December, 1980, and this was time the Nanimo revitalization program ws initiated.

I would suggest that Rod Clack is far more of an expert on revtalization than Ray Brookbank.

The Nanaimo revitalization is almost complete, and although it looks very nice there is indication that it is not going to increase the revenue of the area by the amount of $140,000 a year which they will have to pay out in extra taxes.

In the last few months another idea has come to me that would be a surer way to attract people downtown which Sidney people might wish to try out. It would be the same cost as that suggested in the present initiative plan.

The properties in the area involved will pay $141,600 a year, this is 75 per cent of the total annual cost so the annual cost must be $188,800. If we divide this into 52 parts, one for each week we come up with $3,630, take off $130 for the extra costs involved and with 52 portions of $3,500, close off two different blocks of Beacon Ave. each week for 15 minutes, and have the $3,500 in $1 bills tossed out of a helicopter along the closed-off blocks.

A zany idea? Perhaps. But so is revitalization!

Alf Flett, Alderman, City of Nanaimo 1981 to 1984,

We're being shafted

In November, 1983, the electors of Sidney voted in Mayor Loyd Burdon and the current council on its platform of protest to the way the previous mayor and council had forged ahead on the one-way couplet and purchase and expropriation of properties around Sancha, without giving the taxpayers a chance to vote yes or no, and on their promise not to go ahead and spend a lot more money without getting that approval.

Rightly or wrongly they proceeded and we now have half of nothing, there. Then last year council decided the salvation of Sidney was to buy the marina at the foot of Beacon Ave., so again without reference to laxpayers, rushed out and borrowed $1% million dollars to buy it.

Council is still trying to decide what to do with it or make of it, with still no firm commitment of money from the federal govern-

Silver for Parkland track team, bronze for Lara Melville

By MURRAY SHARRATT

It was a fitting ending for some talented Parkland athletes.

The senior girls' team, sparked by Lara Melville, Kate Gower, Nicola Creek and Emma Doman, finished tied for fourth place with Mount Douglas at the B.C. High School Track and Field Championships May 31 and June 1 at Burnaby's Swangard Stadium.

Sentinel won the girls' title with 56 points, followed by Brockelhurst with 36 and J.L. Crowe and North Delta shared third place honors with 31 points apiece. Parkland and Mount Douglas each had 29 points.

All Parkland athletes came up with their best performances of the season.

Melville, named Vancouver Island most outstanding female athlete last week, took bronze medals in both high jump and the 100-metre hurdles. Her jump of 1.70 metres bettered a Vancouver Island record of 1.69 that she had set a week earlier.

The three finalists in the high jump event were tied after all failed attempts at 1.73 metre. A tie-breaking formula, which calculated the number of misses and jumps in previous heights, determined the final outcome.

Melville also improved on her time in 100-metre hurdles which won her top honors in the Island championships. Her time at the B.C. championships was one-tenth of a second faster.

Highlight for Parkland was a silver medal performance in the 4x400-metre relay. Melville, Gowers, Creek and Doman combined for an impressive time of four minutes, 04.3 seconds. The four also took fourth place in the 4x100 relay with a time of 51.14 seconds.

"It was a fantastic effort by the girls," said Parkland coach Jaak Maagi. "It was a great way for them to finish of their high school track careers. And to win a silver medal in the last track event was just tremendous."

It wasn't, however, the last year for Gower. The grade 10 student has already made her mark with the relay team and a fifth place finish in 400-metre and is bound to be heard from during the next two years.

Ian Johnson also came up with his best performance when it counted most with a time of 17.3 seconds in 110-metre hurdles, but just missed the finals.

Hotel Sidney still on top

Hotel Sidney, sparked by a hot pitching staff, won three straight games last week and stretched its first place lead to three games in Sidney Men's Softball League standings.

In one of three games Sunday at Sanscha Park, Gary Styles chucked a two-hitter while striking out nine as Hotel blanked Five Star Paving 7-0.

The win improved Hotel's winloss record to 10-2, three games ahead of second-place Five Star, which slipped to 7-4.

Ed Pfieffle took the loss, but didn't get much help from his teammates as Five Star committed six errors. Jim Derrick hit the game's lone homerun.

Five Star, however, rebounded on Sunday with a 3-1 victory over Graham smacked two solo homers and Faulkner added another as Harvey's jumped into a 6-0 lead after two innings. Don Orr also caused a stir offensively with two RBIs in a game that went just five innings.

Harvey's slugged 14 hits off losing pitcher Ray Bartelman, Al Graham allowed just four Merchants hits.

Despite a 14-strikeout performance, Cordova Bay's Brad Luckhurst was outdueled on the mound by Morphy, who fired a one-hitter for Hotel en route to a 10-1 thrashing Friday at Sanscha Morphy had seven strikeouts and held the opposition scoreless until the bottom of the seventh inning. Shane Griffy was three for four at the plate for Hotel, which led 5-0 after two innings.

The loss was Cordova Bay's ninth in as many outings this season.

On Thursday, Five Star pushed the winning run in during the bottom of th eighth inning to steal a 6-5 decision over Canterbury Inn of the Macdonald Park League in an interlocking game at Sanscha

Dick Michaud picked up the win for Five STar, which rallied for three runs in the bottom of the fifth to tie the game. Peter Lawson was the loser. Glen McLean and Gary Tuninga slugged homers in a losing cause.

On Thursday, Peninsula Merchants showed up at Macdonald Park without any of their three pitchers and were belted 21-6. Fill-in Brian Coward took the loss in his first ever assignment on the mound.

In May 28 interlocking games, Hotel doubled the Saints 6-3 at Sanscha and the Rebels beat Harvey's by the same score at Macdonald Park.

Pirates top dart tourney

The Army Navy and Air Force Pirates will miss Roy Thorpe. The Sidney dart team won the 'D' division in the Capital City Men's Dart Association League, but members say they couldn't have done it without Thorpe.

"He was really the backbone of the team," claims John Cadwell, who co-captains the team with Adam Knaczula.

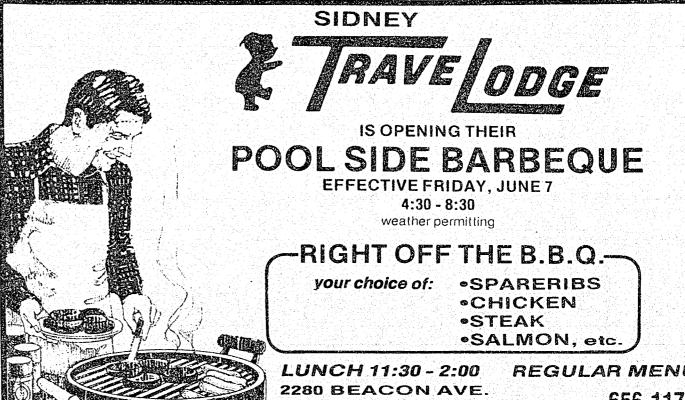

Thorpe, a native of England, moved back home at the conclusion of the dart season at the end of April after a 10-year stay in Canada. And the Pirates will dearly miss his accuracy next year when they are promoted to the 'C' division.

Thorpe joined the Pirates late, missing four games, but stilll finished second overall in individual standings and was also

The Pirates finished first in their league, losing just three times in 24 matches. And six players from the pirates were among the top 20 in individual standings. The 'D' division consists of seven teams, mostly from Victoria, with 10 players per Teams from all over B.C., are expected to attend the annual Saanich Peninsula Pro-Am golf tournament at Glen Meadows June 25.

"We try to hold it as close to Sidney Days as possible," says tournament organizer Doug Mahovlic.

Up to 30 teams are expected to compete for the Criddle Cup and a purse of some $4,000.

Last year's winners, Bruce Tapp's team from Cowichan, are expected back this year as well as Mike Parker's Victoria Golf Club team, Bruce Rand's team from Uplands, and many others.

Tri Rainbow's grand sweep puts team in summer games

Scoring at will, Tri Rainbow of the Peninsula Minor Lacrosse Association, swept three games in convincing fashion May 25 and 26 in Sooke to qualify for the B.C. Summer Games scheduled for Aug. 1-4 in Nanaimo. Tri Rainbow earned the right to represent Vancouver Island (zone 6) by outscoring their opponents 53-8 in the round robin tournament.

On Saturday Peninsula got off on the right foot and beat up Sooke 20-0, downed Nanaimo 15-2 in game two and thumped division 3B league rival Victoria-Esquimalt 18-6 on Sunday.

In goal Jack Bartels was solid as a rock in all three games and offensively Peninsula moved the ball around, collecting 60 assists to go along with 53 goals.

In a league game May 27, Tri Rainbow jumped into a 9-0 first period lead and coasted to a 15-1 rout over Saanich's 4B team at Braefoot Box.

Jeff Cooper led the attack with four goals, Greg Wagnor had three and Graham Rice, Colin Graham and Aaron Hook added a pair of markers each. Single tallies werre scored by Todd Wilson and Jerome Norton.

In Tyke division 9 and 10 (6 and 7-year-olds), Central Saanich Firemen split their last two games, losing 7-5 to Esquimalt's A team and clipping the B team

Sharp shooter Ryan Painter hit for five goals in the win and was named outstanding player of the game for the Firemen for his efforts in goal in the other game.

Shawn Odgers rounded out the scoring with three goals.

Scoring in a losing cause for the Firemen were Shawn Verhagen with two goals and Odgers, Mike Walden and David Travis with one apiece.

Benefit of doubt for 'fishy story'

A man charged with being in control of a vehicle without due care and attention while impaired were dismissed in Sidney provincial court last Thursday.

Brian Kelly Graham was sleeping in his car, a 1980 Monza parked in his driveway, on Dec. 26 when approached by Sidney RCMP Const. Matt Logan at 6:25 p.m.

Graham maintained he was sleeping in his car because his house at 9511 Canora Ave., had a poor heating system.

Logan said he initially saw the vehicle with the motor running and the headlights on about 20 minutes earlier but did not notice anyone inside.

Upon passing the vehicle a second time, Logan testified he saw Graham sitting in the driver's seat asleep.

Logan said Graham was unsteady on his feet and his speech was slurred after being awakened and asked to step outside his vehicle.

He was taken to the Sidney detachment and provided breathalizer readings of 1.3.

Under questioning from his defence counsel Nicholas Lott, Graham said he left work at 3:30 p.m. Dec. 26 and then visited a friend's house.

Graham said he returned to his home about 6 p.m. and elected to sit in his car and listen to the radio.

An inadequate heating system combined with cold winter temperatures, said Graham, resulted in him having slept in his car for two or three hours on more than one previous occasion.

While the engine was kept running to maintain the heat, Graham said the headlights were beaming through his glass front door to keep an eye on his indoor kerosene heater.

Graham said he did not trust the heater to be left on unattended because of its potential fire

Graham testified he was not planning to drive elsewhere that evening as he was scheduled start work 5:30 a.m. the following morning. He is employed as a ground attendant for Air B.C. at Victoria airport.

Judge S.H. Wardill gave Graham an "A" for ingenuity in countering the crown's evidence.

"I find the story a bit fishy but it raises the question of reasonable doubt. I will give the benefit of the doubt to Graham and dismiss the charge," Wardill said.

ment and, I believe, not much chance of getting very much, if any, so we are going to probably wind up spending a lot more tax dollars there.

But that is not enough debt for us taxpayers in the opinion of Mayor Burdon and his three easily led aldermen, so they are now going to borrow another $1.3 million and bury it on Beacon, Ave., again without giving us a vote on it. This is being done in a sneaky manner under a local iitiative under which the only, thing you can do is to write and register a letter of protest, otherwise all property owners not voting in the specified area will be counted as voting in approval or as a yes vote.

The residential and nondowntown taxpayers will be assessed for 25 per cent of this $1.3 million and no matter what Mayor Burdon says about no payments for two years, this money plus interest is a further debt that must be paid back by us, the taxpayers, although we have no vote on borrowing the money and incurring this debt.

If the deluded merchants who think this is going to improve their business want to pay the whole cost, that would be fine, but to add this further debt to our already high tax structure is going too far.

The merchants of Sidney could improve their businesses by getting together better with promotions and Sunday and holiday opening hours and a concentrated effort to have more stores stay open Friday nights and by doing a better job of keeping their sidewalks clean and store fronts attractive.

Placing more benches and planters will only lead to the same problems the Yates St. merchants are facing right now. Blisters or bulges on the sidewalks at each corner will make it harder to park and they will lose a couple of parking spaces in each block.

I believe we are being shafted by the mayor and promoters of this scheme and your only recourse as a taxpayers is to write in and register your protest.

Extra day for busy Sidney court

A lack of available court time for trials has resulted in Sidney provincial court sitting for one additional day a month beginning in October.

Judge D.F. Collins, administrative judge for south Vancouver Island, said there is no apparent reason why the extra day is needed.

"Sidney provincial court was in great shape sitting for one day a week this year up until April. For some reason it has been deteriorating since then and trials are having to be set at much greater distances ahead then we would like," Collins said.

He added trials should be scheduled ideally for 90 days following the accused individual's not guilty plea and election for trial.

Trials in Sidney court, however, are being scheduled now for October.

"There are any number of factors ranging from trials involving a lot more witnesses to slower counsels and judges but there is nothing I can put my finger on and say that is the problem,""Collins said.

Sidney court had been sitting for two days a week up until one year ago. However, because of court time not being used, it was reduced to once a week.

"We found that 50 per cent of the time the court was not being used while the other courts in Victoria and Ganges were getting backed up with cases," said Col-

To allot Sidney court one extra sitting a month for family, criminal and small claims matters, Collins said family or criminal court time in Victoria will be cut back.

Collins plans to closely monitor the impact of the extra day in court to see how long it should be continued.

He said summer always presents problems for the courts because of judges and police witnesses taking annual vacation

Asking judges to spend less time sentencing individuals is one area in which he will not in-

"Each judge is entitled to conduct court in their own way and there is no way I will interfere with their independance. I just have to flow with the tide," Collins said.

The Charter of Rights is also expected to place additional burdens on available court time.

Preliminary litigation, he said, will increase as defence lawyers argue for alleged violations of their clients' rights under the charter.

"There is no question more litigation will be caused by the charter but it is something we will have to live with for some time," Collin said...

Humphrey,

Psychic sense

By Rose Gallacher

Since my first column appeared in The Review, I have received a mixture of questions in my mail from our readers. I really do appreciate anyone who takes the time to write to me. However, I think I should explain that question such as - will my house sell? - will we make a move this year and if so, where to and when? - will I get married this year? — are not the kind of questions I can answer with a simply yes or no.

I don't doubt the sincerity of readers who ask these questions and I am sorry I cannot answer them through my column but I don't want to turn the column into a real estate game or give out advice to the lovelorn.

I still want to encourage anyone who has a question to write to me and if I feel that it cannot be answered properly in the column I am willing to give an answer privately if necessary. Letters have come in with a definite need and these letters are being treated with respect and privacy.

The following questions are from readers who wish more information on the psychic field, I feel they are both educational and interesting as these questions make me think and do some research. I hope as I answer them readers get a deeper insight into the psychic field.

O. — Do children have psychic ability and if they do, why do they lose it?

A. — Yes, I strongly believe children do have psychic experiences. However, as they express what they "see and feel" we as parents are apt to put the child down, telling them they are imagining things, even that they are just making up stories. We are inclined to think the child is only seeking attention, and we therefore should discourage these strange stories.

After enough scoldings and being accused of telling lies, the child stops telling us about their psychic experiences. After all, we all need and seek approval.

They do not lose this ability — what happens is that they stop using it for fear of being ridiculed. As with any other gift or talent, when it is not used it fades into the background and unless trained to redevelop it the psychic gift becomes latent.

Q. — What and where is the third eye?

A. — When peoplle talk of the third eye, they are referring to our psychic eye. It is located slightly above your other two eyes. When doing psychometry, psychics will often hold an object to their third eye. You may have seenthis in movies, slightly dramatized to give the viewer an understanding of where the third eye is located. Not all psychics do this, they can be just as accurate by looking directly at the object.

Q. — Can you give a more indepth answer to what is "psychic" and how does it work.

A. — Psychic ability is something everyone has It is one of our senses along with sight, hearing, touch, smell and taste. The human brain has two halves; the conscious half is the dominant one that deals with logic and our thinking process.

The other is the non-dominant half. This is our subconscious level.

It deals with our emotions and intutition.

Each half is capable of working independently of each other. Most people tend to use the conscious level more, yet we are capable of using them both together.

It is an established fact that we only use 10 per cent of our brain power. It is also a fact that our subconscious mind is far stronger and more powerful than our conscious mind. It is hard to explain just how our psychic power works, I can only use the classic example of the telephone system.

We can't see our voices travel through the telephone wires and be heard by someone thousands of miles away, but we do know that it works and therefore we don't doubt it.

So it is with our psychic powers, we can't see it, but it has been proven that it works, it's there!

Q. — Do you recommend that everyone develop their psychic powers and what should one do with their psychic ability once it has been developed?

A. — Psychic training is not for everyone. It should be only undertaken by stable people, as it can and does frighten people. If once you have developed your psychic power, you may not want to become a professional psychic. It takes a lot of training, dedication and sincerity plus a lot of hard work to be a professional psychic.

I admit that it is not an easy career. However, you can use your gift to help you separate the wood from the trees in your own life and enjoy life more. It can be fun. It can enrich your life in so many ways.

My thought for the week to you is — loneliness is better than bad company!

Please address your letters to me c/0 The Review, 2367 Beacon

Ave., Sidney, V8L 1W9.

It was dark when the matinee got out, and cold the way it is in the eastern fall - bitey, damp fingers of wind poking its way into unprotected crevices.

As she'd been told, the eight-year-old stood outside the theatre in the safety of the lights, watching for the maroon Ford, waiting for her mother to pick her up. As the wait got longer and longer, her uneasiness peaked into worry and fear. Pulling her forehead into a tight frown, she strained to make the car appear by a magic act of childlike will.

Intuitively, by some timeless wisdom that children develop when life treats them capriciously, she knew for sure that she would be left there all alone. Ten cents was not enough to catch a street car, but she didn't know how to get home by streetcar anyway.

Across the road littered by Saturday evening traffic glowed a drug store, still open. Ten cents back then would buy a phone call. As she'd expected, there was no answer at home. Her mother hadn't forgotten, but the Ford was still nowhere in sight.

The drug store was closing. Of course she'd have to leave. The same dime that brought no answer from home reached out again through the dark streets. Mohawk 9173. Nearly 40 years later she would still remember her aunt's telephone number.

Within minutes the long black car pulled up beside the drug store bringing both her aunt and her grandmother — her favorite grandmother who'd taught her how to whistle and crack her chewing gum.

At their house she felt sort of better — warm again, safe, but still very worried and scared. The grownups were upset too. Her aunt was telephoning. Coming back into the living room, she forced a hollow mirthless laugh and said to the child: "Your mother is in jail".

Nearly 40 years later that little girl would still feel the pain and the shame and the terror that those words set loose in her spirit.

"Your mother is in iail."

She'd been on way to pick up the child, but impaired by alcohol, she'd driven into the side of a street car and then tried to assault the police officer who'd arrested her.

In bits and pieces the little girl gathered the story together. Her mother was now very sober and very scared. Her father was worried into a tight knot. Because no one told her anything and she didn't know what to ask, the child lived in terror, wondering what would happen next.

Child abuse is very often a trauma of physical and sexual assault, of violence done to a small person's body that the outsider can see and respond to, but there are also the children who are abused more subtely, less visibly, whose abuse cannot draw the same compassion because the injuries are intangible, untouchable. In this story there are multiple emotional abuses. This child was, in effect, abandoned outside the theatre by a parent who chose to behave capriciously although she was aware that on that day she alone had total responsibility for that younster. Only by her own wits did the little girl manage a compassionate rescue by other family members.

And then there was the aunt who without intention, wounded the child mercilessly, acting out her own outrage by dumping too much information on her — information too painful for an eight-year-old to handle, too assaultive for her already damaged young spirit to com-

To have said that there'd been an accident and that the mother was alright would at that point, for that child, have been sufficient.

Finally, the parents indirectly abused the child by their unwillingess or inability to talk with her after, by their ignorance that this might allay terrors they were unaware she was suffering. Of course they were immersed in their own pain, but that child who desperately needed help was again abandoned to her own resources. That too is a form of abuse.

Millions of us are invisible walking wounded. We cannot rewrite our histories. The abuse belongs to yesterday, to our personal inheritance over which we, as children, had very little control.

Now, as adults, we do have control over our todays. We no longer need to be frightened and helpless and humiliated.

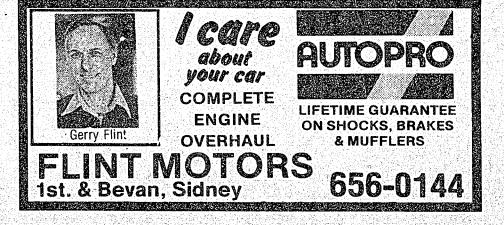

Nevertheless, each of us, in our struggle to grow and to heal, will from time to time rediscover that abused little child who may still live within us. Unexpectedly we may tumble into old corridors of pain and sadness and rage that then consitute today's challenges.

If such a child still lives inside of you, then the adult parts of you are today entrusted with caring for and comforting that child part of yourself. It is now your grown-up privilege to help and empower and cherish that wounded youngster who really does deserve your tenderness and compassion.

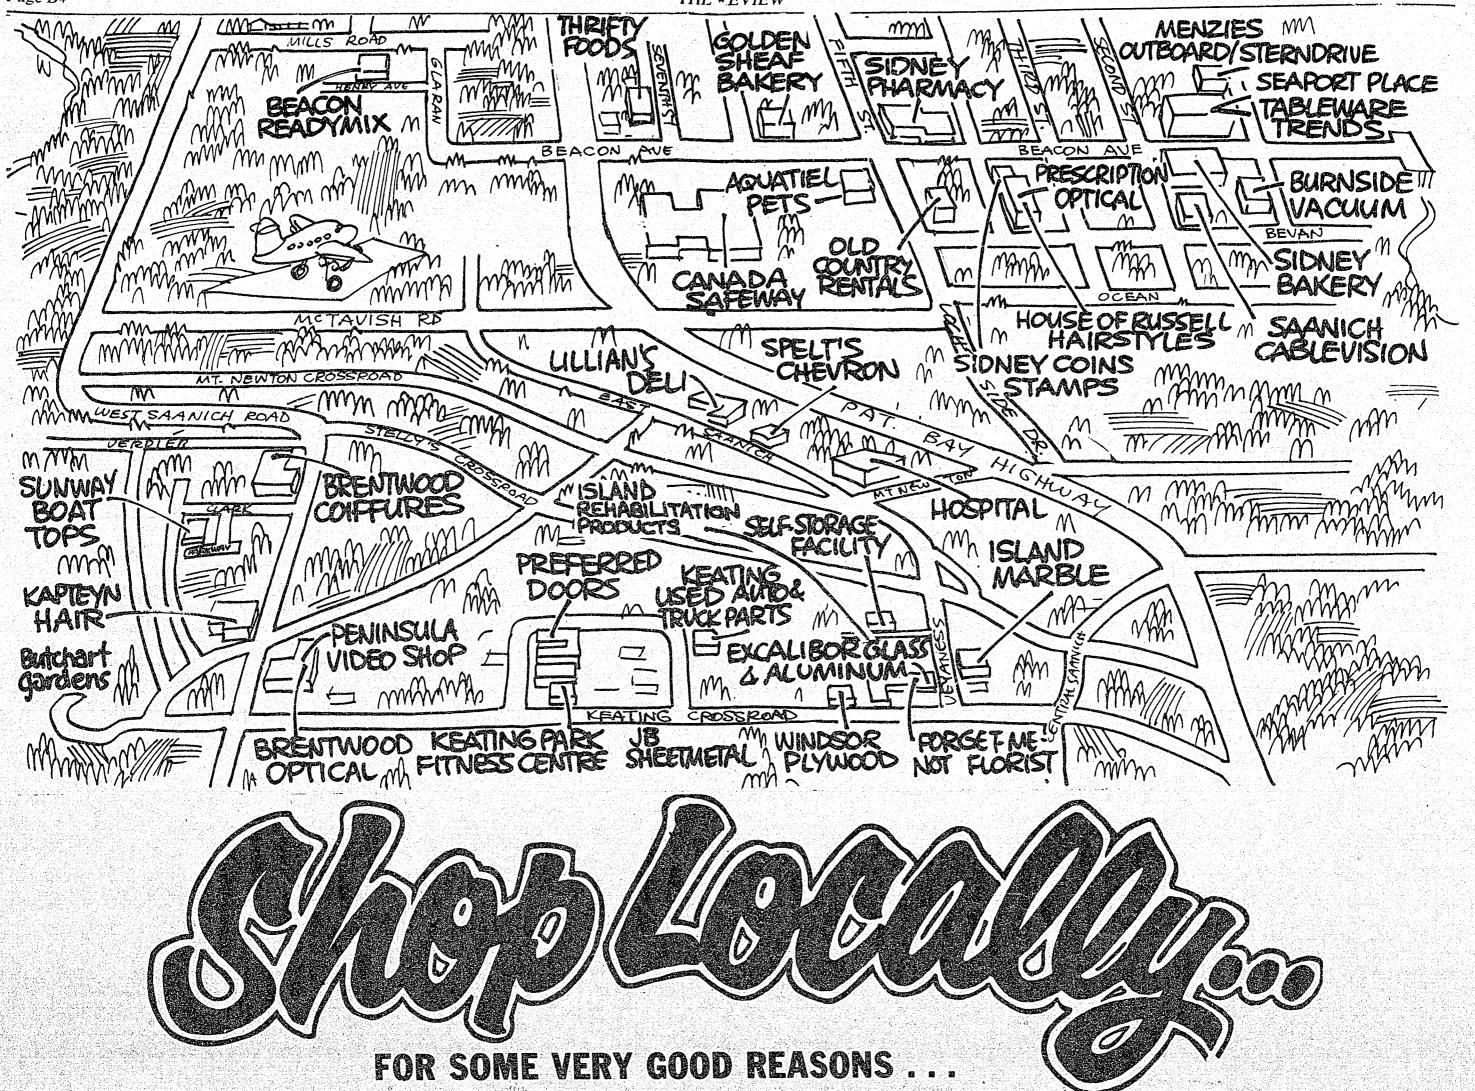

We tend to look outside of ourselves for comfort. If you can find it there too, then you are doubly enriched. But basically, it is our own internal adult resources that we must be able to rely on if we are to embrace and heal the injured child within us.

Red-eyed vireo

The sun was warm on our backs and the air fragrant with the rich aroma of fir resins emanating from the tall trees around us. Mary and I were hiking up the Gail Wickens' trail from Haldon Rd. to the south

"Looking good" too, as they say.

so early!

"viable"

summit of Mt. Newton when she suddenly pulled my sleeve and drew me to a halt.

"Red-eyed vireo!" Mary whispered hoarsely. "Listen!"

The cheerful but halting phrases of the songbird high in the branches above us continued on and on. We knew he could continue in this manner for long periods throughout the day for such is the courtship singing of red-eye vireos.

"Boy, he sounds a lot like a Philadelphia vireo!" I said.

"Yes," Mary replied. "But the notes aren't quite high enough in pitch. Besides, the whole song is stronger and there is more hesitation between the phrases."

"You're right. It cost me $10 to learn that!"

"How so? You never told me about it."

"Well, many years ago, I was out birding with George Pegg, one of the finest field men that I have ever had the privilege of working with. On that occasion, I heard a vireo singing in the distance and imediately exclaimed, "Red-eyed vireo!"

''Sorry, Cy, it's a Philadelphia." George spoke quietly but confidently as though the matter was closed. We stood still and listened intently to several more of the bird's songs.

"I still think it's a red-eye, George.'

"No, Philadelphia."

"Ten bucks, George?" "Oh, sure. But I hate to steal your money." We made our way towards the origin of the song and finally spotted the singer high in the upper branches of an aspen poplar. Pale yellow breast of the Philadelphia. No red iris. I paid George $10 when we got back to Using our field glasses, Mary. and I finally spotted the red-eyed vireo above us. It was about the size of a purple finch with greenish back, white underparts and a bright red eye.

Our photo today was taken by Mary from a blind at close range. She had earlier found the attractive nest suspended from the horizontal fork of a red osier dogwood, about four feet from the ground. The nest itself was beautifully constructed of fine grasses, rootlets, strands of white birch bark, spiders' webs and long fibres of a darker bark.

Arching above the nest was a symmetrical, curving, leafy twig, forming a delightful bower.

"Isn't it interesting that you can so often identify the maker of a nest by the materials used and the actual manner of construction," Mary pondered.

"Yes, the way the red-eye's nest is suspended. And the bits of birch bark."

"And the horse-hair lining of the chipping sparrow's nest, all the woolly fluff in a warbling vireo's nest, the few stems of grey sage added by the eastern kingbird, the white plant material used by the yellow warbler."

"And the woven reeds of the long-billed marsh wren, the long slender bag of the bushtit, the tiny grey lichens covering the outside of the nest of our rufous hummingbird."

"Like people, no?"

"I don't get you."

"Well, the Eskimo and his igloo, the marsh Arabs and their dwellings of rushes and reeds, the plains' Indian and his teepee, the coast Indian and his longhouse, out of several potatoes. We then had the potatoes for dinner. These "eyes" had the beginnings of roots on them, and it will be interesting to see if they will grow. One friend assures me his mother use to just plant potato peelings and they grew! We'll see, anyway.

through the newly-planted bed. I shrieked, "Darling, what on earth are you doing?" He says happily, "Just firming them in." Two hundred pounds of "firming" in fact! Sometimes I think he does these things on purpose, hoping I'll never again ask for help!

Remember the robins nesting on the porch? They are both back, but are a couple of very casual parents, spending most of the day away somewhere, only feeding the chicks very early in the mornings, and

One thing that gave me a lot of plesure was the sight of a very angry robin in hot pursuit of a crow, and that crow was making haste, believe me. It's also interesting that those chicks never make a sound when their parents aren't around, not like the house sparrows who never cease complaining about their parents' supposed neglect which isn't fair, because the only birds that seem to work harder are the bush-tits.

Found a hideous invasion of green worms on the red currant bushes. These things are terribly hard to see, being perfectly colour coordinated with the leaves. What I noticed first were a lot of skeletonized leaves, and others with what looked like soot on them.

garden books call "frass" which is an elegant word for worm poo. Fortunately my years of gardening have left me with a strong stomach, and I simply wiped my hands on my pants and started looking for the source of this dark green excrement.

I picked 10 worms off one leaf, and 50 off others, some of them on the goosberry bushes. Since all the small fruit is in one area, and the honey-bees are in the raspberries by the hundreds, I didn't dare use Methoxychlor which is the recommended treatment (but fatal to bees).

dropped onto the ground (whre I did an Indian rain dance on them) but a lot more just said "thanks for the bath" and kept right on eating, so I am going to have to keep on handpicking them, the grisly

Our gardening term today is "top-dressing". I know this sounds like something you might put on a wound, but to gardeners it means taking off the top couple of inches of soil in, say, a fuchsia basket, and then adding freshsoil mix (perhaps boosted up with some 6-8-6).

dug me a series of about 50 holes, about 18 inches apart in all directions, and into these I carefully set in the sprouted potatoes, the smaller ones whole, and the larger ones cut in half, so there were at least two sprouts on each half.

One row I planted with just a series of "eyes" that I carefully cut

I cheated. My tomatoes were getting so tall, sitting unhappily in their four-inch pots, that although I have been preaching June 1 to June 10 as proper planting dates, I just couldn't wait any longer. With great perserverence I erected a plastic barrier around them for the first couple of days, but since then they have been out there on their own.

I have also potted up 10 patio-type tomatoes in two-gallon pots

(anything smaller is simply not large enough to contain all those roots) and they seem to be settling in nicely. I think the patio ones were getting scared that they were going to have to spend their entire career in

As I've told you, plants that think they are going to die make a real effort to reproduce beforehand, poor lambs, and I must admit to feeling mean leaving them so long. Next year I won't plant the seed quite worry! Never mind, there is still lots of time, but just as a bit of insurance I have also put several cucumber seeds in damp paper in a plastic bag, over heat, just to make sure the seed is (that terrible word)

Canada Employment Centre manager, Bob Rockburn, has announced June 3 to June 7 will be declared National Hire A Student Week. The Canada Employment Centre for Students has begun a number of activities to promote this event and the mayors of Sidney. Victoria and Metchosin have proclaimed June 3 to 7 as "National Hire A Student Week!

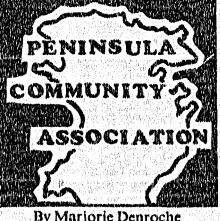

The Canada Employment Centre for Students with three locations (Sidney, Victoria and Langford) serve as focal points for information on local summer jobs. The CEC-S both assists employers in finding qualified students to fill summer job positions and aids students in finding summer employment. The CEC-S staff visit local employers and community groups to assess employer's needs, for full-time, part-time or easual work, and to inform business people and householders of their fast and efficient prescreenign service.

Todate the CFe-S has registered 2,000 students for summer employment and has received some 900 job openings. The CEC-S supervisor, Barbara Grantham, is optimistic they will find upwards of 2,200 summer jobs for students. The three CEC-S offices (Victoria branch 1121 Blanchard 388-3458; Sidney branch #103-9790 2nd St. 656-0851 and the Langford branch 2816 Bryn Maur Rd 478-9525) are open Monday to Friday to serve both employers and students.

Need continues

Bunk, bitth cot, roll-a-way, crib, trundle all mean the same beds. No marter what you call them, St. Vincent de Paul nees them. Beds and bedding are needed by families every day.

Donations can be picked up by calling 382-3213 or 478-0282 or dropped off at St. Vincent de Paul Store, 840 View St. or 778 Goldstream Ave. Financial donations are income tax deductable.

By Marjorie Denroche

Please! There is an urgent need right now for caring families on the peninsula who would be willing to open their hearts and doors to local children who need caring for on a temporary basis. There is remuneration for this service, but even more important, there is a "return of the heart."

... This is not a plea for adoptive homes. It's a plea for a place to stay for a period of weeks to several months for children who are suffering stressful home situations, family breakdown, working single parents who need: ia short respite etc.

These are not bad children -they are children in circumstances beyond their control. Your caring could make a lifetime of difference. Think about it, talk it over as a family, then call the Peninsula Community Association at 656-0134 and make an appointment to discuss it further. Ask for Jackie or Marjorie.

For Indies over 35 who are interested in hiking Thursdays or Fridays, there is a group on the peninsula who like to get out and explore the beautiful country which surrounds us. Call Carol at 656-0662 for more information. Vera at 652-2547 would like to hear from others who enjoy "birding." This is a much quieter form of walking but can be equally exciting — especially if one spots an clusive bird rarely seen in this area!

All one requires is a good pair of walking shoes, binoculars, and a ready reference book

Personally, our humming bird feeder has been busier than ever Mals geal, even though it is only two feet from the dining room window. We now refull it at night after the thorough scolding we received one day when it was down at lunch time for a few minutes. Such a to-do quickly forgotten once it was up again!

Sidney was long way to come to meet Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, Dorothy (Griffiths) Hinde, 2316 Amelia, told famous visitor she met instead in Westminster Abbey, London, England, April 30. Hinde was "tickled pink" to chat with prime minister, whose photographer took this picture which she received last week.

The Tenth Man By Graham Greene

The manuscript of The Tenth Man was lost in the vaults of MGM studios for 40 years, and it was only discovered last year. Besides this interesting and fortuitous event, the novel stands on its own as a marvellous story.

The tale is set in occupied France. Thirty hostages in a German prison must draw losts to choose three among them to be shot. One of the chosen is a lawyer, Chavel, who offers all his possessions to anyone who will take his place. An engine-driver, Janvier, accepts; the deed is drawn, a will made. Janvier dies in possession of Chavel's house, money and, it transpires, his soul.

After the war, Chavel, calling himself, Charlot, returns "home" where Janvier's mother and sister now live and becomes their servant. A collaborator appears, hiding from the Russians, and announces he is Chavel. The story becomes a struggle between the two men for the name of Chavel.

In this novel, a man's identity, we are shown, stands for his soul. The point is made early: when Chavel traded his worldly goods for his life, he became the man with no name, the man no one recognzied anymore. It is underscored by making his evil adversary an actor who

All the Graham Greene trademarks are here, and the publication of this long-lost novel is an exciting occasion for his many admirers and devout readers. One critic has described The Tenth Man as "superb intellectual melodrama, the best since The Human Factor, itself the best spy story of our time." The Tenth Man is available through either the Sidney-North Saanich or Central Saanich branch of the regional library.

Parkland Parade

By Cindy Peralta

Last weekend Parkland rowers, under Victoria Rowing Club colours, entered Shawnigan Lake Regatta and the Pacific Northwest Sculling Championships... The girls met with success, winning the Butcher Plate Trophy for the highest overall points.

The golf team had a successful showing at the BC's and now rank 6th in the province. Scott Dickson placed 6th overall, and Glen Brockleban won a medal and $100 scholarship for his 3rd place finish.

Also in the world of sports. Lara Melvill, Nicola Creek, Kate Gower, Emma Doman, and Jan Soelnar showed off their athletic talents at the BC's for track and field in Vancouver. The innior track team has the Islands this weekend.

Mr. Milliaan and his "Nit Natters" recently returned from their five-day excursion of the West Coast Trail. The overall comment was "fantastic!" Mr. Angus, I hear, had a very ! bareable" experience, thanks to Terry Johal and "Wedgie".

On April 28, Parkland warmly greeted Steve Fonyo, Cordic Wright aclaimed this hero as the newest praduate of 185.

Briefly:

•"Whom" and "Judas Priest" appeared in the air band finals sponsored by Rock Funtasy.

Teachers beat the senior girls' soccer team despite the girls! super-goalie. Katrina McKay. The combination of horshot Melville and the soft touch of Mr. Burgess proved to be successful.

The dynamic Parkland dancers were warmly received at a fashion show May 29 at Sanscha Hall.

The Buzz from Stelly's

By Joy Conway

On May 28 students from Stelly's school celebrated with Steve Fonyo as he dipped his leg into the waters of the Pacific. Thousands cheered Steve on as he completed the tiring journey, and Stelly's student Rebecca Kraatz presented Steve with $1,000 and a Stelly's T-shirt at an official reception for him in Sidney.

The school's fundraising competition was won by Mrs. Adlem's T.A. with $77 donated. Congratulations guys! Second place was captured by Mr. Gunn's 1.A. with $60. First place received free tickets to our final dance of the year, held last Thursday. The dance had a beach theme (what else?) and the turn out was great!

Also on hand to run down the final stretch of Steve Fonyo's Journey for Lives were a select number of Stelly's athletes including: Suzanne Armour, Ian Anderson, Debbie McGuire and Dave Taylor. Some 15 athletes in uniform were also a part of the official honour guard at Mile 0.

As this year rapidly comes to close, Student Council nominees for next year start campaigning June 5 - June 12. It will be a hard task to top the spectacular job Suzanne Armour has done as this year's P.M. but word is out that there is some good talent running. Good luck to all those competing, and remember: All's fair Stelly's annual athletic awards banquet is coming up June 12. Plenty of great "awards" will be presented to all those jocks in question, so beware.

Claremont Clarion

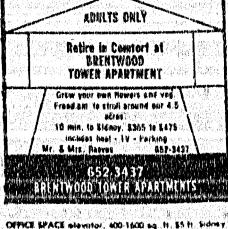

Last Wednesday Claremont's Student Council president Michelle Linekin presented a cheque for just under $700 to the Canadian Cancer Society. The money was donated by Claremont students and teachers to aid in the Steve Fonyo "Journey For Lives", campaign.

Students greeted Steve as he passed Beaver Lake Park on Tuesday where Claremont Band played.

This year's community recreation 12 held a weekend car rally

With final instruction day being June 13 students are hard at work completing assignments and meeting course requirements for this rapidly approaching deadline. We wish all students the best of luck with their final exams. and courses.
