This anniversary issue of Suffolk magazine is about celebration. Beginning with George Frost and Gleason Archer, we celebrate the spirit of opportunity that is the foundation of this University. Frost's part in Suffolk's founding is not well known, but as you will read, he was key to the University's early success. Also in this issue, alumni from many decades will share their memories of Suffolk on this occasion.

The emotion and spirit that filled the air September 19, the night of our anniversary, is something I will not forget. It confirmed my strong belief that the Suffolk University community is an outstanding group of individuals, proud of the education we provide. I was pleased with the great number of alumni and friends of Suffolk who came to celebrate our 90th. Many commented that the event was magnificent. I promise you that it will be the first of many such grand occasions at this institution.

With the official kickoff of the Campaign for Suffolk University, I anticipate great new things on the horizon. I would like to extend a special thank you to our alumni and friends who have responded willingly to move us closer to our goal. In this issue you will find the complete list of donors who made important annual contributions to Suffolk in 1995-96.

Suffolk University is making its mark as a strong, internationally recognized institution. I hope you feel as proud as I do about the first 90 years in Suffolk's history and that you are as excited as I am about our future prospects. As I said at the 90th Anniversary event, the celebration does not stop here. I hope that the spirit generated this year will continue, and in the year 2006, we will mark another impressive milestone—our centenary. Here's to the celebrations to come.

Alvan Brody. . .

I read with sadness of the untimely passing of Professor Alvan Brody. I am sure that I am one of many alumni who carry the spirit and knowledge of the law imparted by Professor Brody's dedication to his calling as an educator.

He was a fine man with a keen intellect who truly loved the law. He certainly lives on in the case law he helped mold as well as the minds of so many students who have carried on in the legal profession as trial lawyers, judges and administrators.

He certainly will be missed.

Sincerely,
Kevin J. Reddington, JD '75

Suffolk Rallies. . .

Kudos to all who played a role in providing such an entertaining and informative Suffolk University Summer 1996 Magazine to our community.

The cover immediately captured one's attention as did your feature articles and class notes—a particular favorite of mine given my three decade tenure at this institution.

I wish to take note of the account relating to John Gilpatrick, our hockey student athlete, and his answer to the challenges now encountered as a result of his on-ice accident. John is currently receiving audio computer training from Professor Jonathan Frank, both at Suffolk and at home. He anticipates returning to campus for the spring semester to enroll in two courses and then in the fall 1997, to register as a full-time student in his quest for his baccalaureate degree in sociology.

Our community has reached out to John with their prayers, good wishes and financial generosity. For those expressions he, his family and I extend our collective gratitude.

Sincerely,
James E. Nelson

A Message from the Editor

The responses to our readership survey are in, and I would like to take this opportunity to report on the results. Knowing how busy our readers are, we were delighted to receive almost 200 responses. We now have a much better sense of what you enjoy about Suffolk magazine and, in some cases, what you do not. The sections people found most interesting were, in order: University News, Class Notes, New Developments, feature articles and the calendar. We fully expected that Class Notes would top the list, but it was edged out at the finish line by University News, letting us know that our alumni and friends are very interested in what is happening on campus today.

The most consistent comment was "keep up the good work." Many people mentioned that they look forward to receiving the magazine. One alumnus said, "I value receiving the magazine and set it aside for slow leisurely reading." Another commented, "I love this magazine. It's very informative—it really brings back a lot of memories."

People offered suggestions for stories. Far and away the single greatest request was for more stories about our successful alumni. Our readers also want more stories on the faculty, today's students, university news and networking. Friendly rivalry was in evidence among the three different schools, each wanting more stories about their classmates, their faculty and their professions. We will continue to try to offer something for everyone.

Several responses mentioned that the summer issue arrived after September 19th. We're sorry that it did not get to you in time, and we will try to be more timely in the future.

Thank you to those who took the time to respond to the survey and to all our readers who care about Suffolk University, our past and our future. We will continue to work hard to produce a magazine that captures your imagination. We ask you to keep in touch. Write to us with class notes (remember to send a photo if you have one) ideas for articles and letters to the editor—keep telling us what you like and what you don't. Remember, you may send us information by mail, fax or e-mail.

George A. Frost (1853-1936)

George A. Frost was a native of West Newton, where he lived with his family: his wife, Louise Osborne Richards, and two daughters, Lois and Eleanor. They were summer residents of Cape Cod. Frost served on the executive board of Newton Hospital and was known as a generous philanthropist.

In 1873, at the age of 20, George Frost began working in Boston for his father's company, Frost Brothers. Founded in 1869, the business specialized in wholesale corsets and garters. In 1875, Frost joined his father and brother-in-law as a top manager of the company. During this time the operation expanded substantially, growing from 25 employees to 100 in one year.

In 1891, by the time he was 35, Frost was named president, and the business was incorporated as the George Frost Company. Under his leadership the company was recognized nationally and internationally as the manufacturer of the "Gentleman's Boston Garter." Sales for this particular item were so rapid that the operation was forced to relocate to larger buildings several times. In 1906 Frost built a five-story addition atop his Tremont Street factory. By this time the number of employees had more than doubled.

Frost was a trustee and major benefactor of Suffolk University from 1906 until his death in 1936. He lived to be 83 years old.

George Frost and Gleason Archer: An Investment in Human Life

One act of human kindness and generosity at the turn of the century became the foundation upon which Suffolk University was built. This is how the story unfolded.

In 1903, after his first year at college, Gleason Archer was working a summer job at a resort on Cape Cod, and struggling to save enough money to return to school in the fall. Late one night, as Archer was carrying an armful of empty vegetable boxes, he fell, shattering his left knee on the concrete floor. The medical care that could prevent permanent disability was available only in Boston. It was this fateful accident that brought about the meeting of Gleason Archer and George Frost.

On borrowed crutches, with a small amount of money given to him by sympathetic fellow workers, Archer boarded a stagecoach in a howling gale. He was in pain, but even greater was the agony brought on by the fear that he would have to abandon his dream of finishing college. The only other passenger to board the coach was George Frost. In his writings, Archer described Frost as a “prosperous-appearing middle-aged man with one of the most genuinely sympathetic countenances of any man I had ever met—a man of distinguished appearance.”

Frost was immediately interested in the young man's story, and by the time the two travelers had reached Barnstable, he was favorably impressed with the struggling young student. As a board member of Newton Hospital, Frost made a kind offer that Archer could not refuse. Archer recalled Frost's words: “I am very much interested in seeing you through this trouble . . . consider going to the Newton Hospital, I am sure that it can be arranged—and it won't cost you anything.” From that point forward, Frost became Archer's patron, mentor and friend.

In the year they first met, Frost assisted Archer regularly. He paid Archer's hospital bills, settled his outstanding college debts, and began sending him $25 a month for living expenses. In 1904, according to Archer, Frost was responsible for saving the life of Archer's brother Hiram by arranging for him to undergo two operations at Newton Hospital.

Archer wrote, “during the remaining years of my college and law school courses he loaned me $2,200.” Upon Archer's graduation from Boston University Law School in 1906, Frost was influential in helping the young lawyer secure a position with a prominent law firm in Boston. Later that year, Archer visited his benefactor to thank him for his kindness and to discuss repayment of the loans. To his surprise, Frost had cut the signatures off the promissory notes, and said, “This is an investment in human life, and I think you will be worthy of it. But if you ever have the chance to pass this favor along to other boys you will be doing it for me.”

Inspired by his friend's steadfast belief in him, Archer had already formulated a plan for emulating his benefactor. He wrote in his memoir, “Then I told him how I had been tutoring a group of five young business men in the law of Contracts one evening each week . . . and that they had urged me to continue to teach them during the coming years. I told him of my desire to establish an evening law school . . .”

The rest is the history of Suffolk University. George Frost gladly became a principal supporter and lifelong trustee of Suffolk Law School. He counseled Archer on business matters and helped finance the growth and success of the Law School and later, the University. If not for the spirit of one man who believed in the great potential of a young student, the Suffolk we know today would not exist. “Had not I met this man . . . it is safe to say that the Suffolk Law School would never have been founded . . .” Archer said in a 1956 address on the occasion of Suffolk's 50th anniversary.

Frost's legacy, though not widely known, is still with us today. George Frost was the first in a rich history filled with men and women who believed in young students. Ninety years later, Suffolk University is still filled with the spirit expressed by George Frost—the spirit of opportunity.

“I was impressed by the devotion of the lecturers and teachers at Suffolk. They were very interesting, lectured well and answered well when questioned. One of the things I will remember forever is one professor who always started his lectures with this thought: ‘My dear students, iteration and reiteration will force an alien conception on a reluctant mind.’

I enjoyed my four years at the Law School and was thrilled when I graduated and thrilled again when I passed the bar and became a lawyer. Thanks to those four years, I reached success and recognition in my profession.”

"Suffolk University gave me my start—the ability to get a quality education. I had to work hard for everything, and the Suffolk environment gave me the chance to succeed. As soon as I graduated, I went straight to work for an excellent company—Eastman Kodak. I worked there for 20 years and was named national sales manager in 1990. One of six kids from a working family in Jamaica Plain, I never would have had that opportunity if it wasn't for Suffolk.

Every young student needs an entrepreneurial attitude and a sense of independence about their own destiny. Suffolk has always had that attitude."

Ellen Fulham Lopez, BA '69, JD '77

"In the '60s and '70s there was a sense of things going on, of people being involved, and doing things with purpose. We had bomb scares and the anti-war movement, but we also had a real sense of people joining together with a common mission.

My father [Suffolk President Thomas A. Fulham] would have been very excited about the 90th anniversary, he would have thought it was terrific. He was always excited about Suffolk's mission, and he would be really energized about the new Residence Hall and the plans for the new Law School building."

"I began law school a few years after my return from Vietnam. What I liked about my education was the wide range of people in my classes. Suffolk was a school that brought together people from different backgrounds. I was with the Coast Guard at the time, and I studied with people who worked for IBM, for the courts, in politics, and with the police. Most of us came with a practical outlook on the world.

"The University is not so different today than it was 30 years ago. It gave an excellent education in 1978, and now, in 1996, it still gives a great education. Lately it seems people are talking a lot about Suffolk. The general consensus I hear is that Suffolk is really moving forward while other schools are not. Suffolk was always an excellent school. We are more visible lately, and the perceptions are positive."

“For all the educational experiences I’ve had, the experience I had at Suffolk was the best. It’s hard to put into words because it’s more of a feeling. Suffolk has a very caring environment. The people who work there put a lot of effort into their students and the professors create a congenial atmosphere. A Night to Remember

The Suffolk University 90th Anniversary Celebration

Pride was the prevailing sentiment as Suffolk University celebrated its birthday September 19 with a tribute to the past, an appreciation of the present, and great plans for the future of an institution founded to provide opportunity to all. Lights glistened, music played, old friends reunited, and everyone celebrated under the stars until well into the night. Our founder, Gleason L. Archer would have been proud as more than 2,000 alumni, faculty, staff, special guests and friends converged on Pemberton Square, adjacent to One Beacon Street. It was a night to remember.

"Everywhere I go I meet Suffolk University alumni . . . and all of them remark about the pride they feel for having had the privilege of receiving a Suffolk University education. That is what this evening is all about," said Patricia McGovern, BA '62, JD '66, LLD (Honorary) '88, as the former Massachusetts State Senator opened the ceremonies and welcomed the guests.

McGovern was followed by Boston Mayor Thomas Menino who, in bringing official greetings from the city of Boston, said, "Congratulations on your wonderful milestone . . . on this 90th anniversary, let us remember the ways that Suffolk University has created opportunities for so many and how it continues to achieve its mission."

Chairman of the Board of Trustees James F. Linnehan introduced four special guests: Gleason Archer, Jr., son of Suffolk's founder; the well-known Dottie McNamara, "Miss Mac," who served the University for 47 years, most notably as bursar and director of alumni activities; Isidore Libman, JD '31, who at 93, was the oldest Law School alumnus in attendance; and Rosalie Warren, Suffolk's oldest student, 96 years young. She began her undergraduate career at Suffolk at age 75. She received her bachelor of science degree in 1980 and her master's degree in education in 1983 at age 82.

A highlight of the evening was the premiere of the video, "A Gift of Opportunity." Narrated by President David Sargent, the show was projected on a large screen at the far end of the plaza. It included still pictures, video, music and the voices of Suffolk people, telling the story of the University's first nine decades. The spirit generated by the video brought the audience to its feet in a standing ovation.

Capturing the emotion of the audience, President Sargent said, "As we celebrate this 90th anniversary tonight, the celebration does not stop here . . . Suffolk has had many successes over the past 90 years and we have a great deal to be proud of." He then announced the kickoff of the Campaign for Suffolk University (see story next page). President Sargent is taking the birthday celebration to alumni and friends across the country with stops in Washington, DC; New York; Los Angeles; and San Francisco. Vice President Marguerite J. Dennis presented a symbolic check for $12.5 million representing the funds raised before the Campaign officially began. Boston City Councilor Diane Modica presented Suffolk with a City Council citation, lauding the University's commitment to Boston's civic and legal communities.

"As we expected, the gathering evoked a great sense of pride in people. We were delighted to see our community join together for this grand occasion," said Rosemarie Sansone, director of Suffolk's public affairs.

"This extravaganza ranks at the top of all events I have been associated with in my three decades at our University," said Jim Nelson, Suffolk athletic director.

Alumni attending the event spanned the decades and represented all three schools of the University. Some traveled from as far away as Florida and California. Special thanks go to alumni George Taylor, MPA '93 and Amy Dominici, BSJ '83, who volunteered hours of their time and enthusiasm to make this night special. Taylor played a key role in securing the elegant 90th ice sculpture display and numerous donations of food. Dominici served as an invaluable technical consultant, working to coordinate the sound and lighting logistics for the outdoor event.

Much of the credit for making the party such a success goes to all the individuals and corporations who contributed their help and services. Guests enjoyed an impressive spread of delicious food donated by local restaurants like Artu, The Black Goose, China Pearl, Commonwealth Brewing Co., Il Panino, Imperial Seafood, Maison Robert, Omni Parker House, Phoenecia, Piazza, The Red Hat, Road Trip and West Street Grille.

Masquerade and the Ray Cavicchio Orchestra provided entertainment, and the Drifters, the featured performers, got the crowd on its feet. The night came to a close as the sounds of music, dancing and reminiscing filled the air.

One alumnus, Henry Selvittella BS '58, summed up the sentiments of the hundreds of alumni who attended. "This is superb, quite elegant. It's an honor to come back and see Suffolk has done so well. I'm proud of it!" S

Dreams for the Future of Suffolk University

Anniversaries are a time to reflect on the achievements of the past and envisage dreams for the future. This year we have proudly looked back at our history and gathered to celebrate our milestones, and now it is time to look ahead.

Suffolk University was founded on a tradition of opportunity. Through the years, our enduring mission has been to provide opportunity by offering accessible, quality education at a reasonable cost. Always sensitive to the needs of students, Suffolk has grown and adapted as necessary. Our place in the city has been vital to our strength and has given us a strong sense of tradition.

With these essential principles, we not only have dreams for Suffolk University, but also a plan for achieving them. Our vision for the future begins with The Campaign for Suffolk University. With a goal of $25 million, this campaign is the most ambitious fundraising effort undertaken by the University in its 90-year history. Thanks to support from members of the Board of Trustees and key benefactors, the campaign has realized more than half of its goal in gifts and commitments.

This campaign will fund building construction and renovation to benefit the entire University. The new Law School building will place Suffolk University firmly on the map in the midst of the most historic grounds in the country. Improvements made to other buildings on campus will allow for expansion and progress in many programs. More than bricks and mortar, the campaign will provide the resources to build a stronger Suffolk. We hope to establish endowments for student scholarships and professorships and fund academic research centers. The campaign will help ensure that the tradition endures, that opportunity is available for the next generation of students, and that Suffolk University continues to foster academic excellence in Boston and around the world.

We invite you to take part in the future of Suffolk University. We will be hosting special events around the world, around the country and right here in Boston. Join us as we highlight the achievements of Suffolk's past and share with you plans for its continued success. In this anniversary year, we are reminded that it is the people of Suffolk who have made it great, and we hope you are as enthusiastic as we are about the next 90 years in Suffolk's great history.

A TRADITION OF OPPORTUNITY

The Search for Value

Recent articles in Suffolk magazine have discussed the benefits of establishing a charitable remainder trust (CRT). The CRT is most appropriate when the assets to fund the CRT are highly appreciated. In this article, Suffolk alumnus Stephen Bravo, CPA, CBA, focuses on closely held businesses as highly appreciated assets and how they may be valued for income, estate and gift tax purposes.

The CRT and the Closely Held Company

The charitable remainder trust (CRT) is designed to provide an income tax deduction to the donor, avoid capital gain on the sale, generate income for the beneficiary(ies) and remove the asset from the estate of the donor (absent any wealth replacement life insurance policy). The highly appreciated assets may include real estate and common stock invested in publicly traded companies. Another asset that should be considered is the closely held company. If the fair market value of the closely held company significantly exceeds the owner's tax basis, then it may be an appropriate transfer to the CRT.

The Closely Held Company

A closely held company is a business that is in pursuit of an economic activity; namely, to make profits. In many cases, the business creates value in excess of what the tangible assets (cash, inventory and fixed assets) are worth. This excess value results from a return higher than the return expected on the tangible assets. In other words, it represents a company's intangible value from factors, such as having a trained work force, an operational plant and systems and procedures in place. Intangible value can also arise as a result of name, reputation, customer patronage, location, products and similar factors that have not been separately identified, but which generate economic benefits.¹

How to Value a Closely Held Company

There are recognized approaches to business valuation; however, no single formula applies to every valuation analysis or type of business entity. In the case of valuing a closely held company for CRT purposes, tax law requires the standard of value to be "fair market value." Fair market value is defined as "... the price at which property would change hands between a willing buyer and a willing seller when the former is not under any compulsion to buy and the latter is not under any compulsion to sell, both parties having reasonable knowledge of the relevant facts."²

Business valuations, for tax purposes, are guided by IRS Revenue Ruling 59-60, which establishes the general factors that must be considered when valuing a closely held or family business:

1. The nature of the business and the history of the enterprise from its inception.
2. The economic outlook in general and the condition and outlook of the specific industry in particular.
3. The book value of the stock and financial condition of the business.
4. The earning capacity of the company.
5. The dividend-paying capacity of the company.
6. Whether or not the enterprise has goodwill or other intangible value.

7. Sales of the stock and the size of the block of stock to be valued.
8. The market price of stocks of corporations engaged in the same or similar line of business having their stocks actively traded in a free and open market, either on an exchange or over the counter.³

Valuation Methodologies

There are three generally accepted valuation approaches: (i) the Market Approach; (ii) the Income Approach; and (iii) the Asset Based Approach.⁴

The Market Approach

This approach arrives at a value by comparing the market price of stocks of companies engaged in the same or related activities, where such stocks are traded on an exchange or over the counter. The acquisition prices of entire companies, engaged in related activities, where such prices are readily, publicly available are also considered. The market data are then adjusted for any significant differences, to the extent known, between the closely held company and the publicly traded companies. A valuation multiple is then derived and applied to the closely held company's financial data.

The Income Approach

This approach assumes that the income earned will determine the value of the business. Past and present performance are relevant only to the extent they provide a basis for representative net earnings or cash flows. The estimate of value is computed by determining the amount of representative net earnings or cash flows to be generated by the business, and then dividing by an appropriate capitalization rate, or rate of return, which measures the company's financial and business risks. A company's value has a close relation to future expectancy.

The Asset-Based Approach

This approach, sometimes called the Cost Approach, is based on the economic principle of substitution, which states that an informed purchaser would pay no more for an asset than the cost of building a similar asset with the same utility. Each component of a business is valued separately, and then summed up to derive the total value of the company. The appraisal value is determined by estimating the cost of reproducing or replacing each individual asset of the business. Usually, the Asset-Based Approach cannot be used alone, because going concern businesses also have intangible value, which is not considered in this approach.

Information Needed to Value a Business

Significant and relevant information needed to value a business includes: financial statements, financial projections, fixed asset information, real property information, information on the management teams' compensation, marketing information and corporate organizational structure.

Suffolk's First Residence Hall

With boxes, suitcases, computers, stuffed animals and posters, nearly 400 students moved into Suffolk's first residence hall at 150 Tremont Street over Labor Day weekend. The students and their families soon made the brand-new rooms feel just like home. Those touring the renovated building, listed on the National Register of Historic Places, expressed delight at the original green marble bathrooms, cast iron lattice work, the restored clock on the building's rooftop, and the other accouterments.

The 11-story building, housing 85 percent freshmen, holds 35 to 40 people per floor, in single, double and triple rooms, as well as suites of rooms. At the request of the residents, all floors are coed except for the second floor, which is all female. Every room is equipped with new furniture, cable access, computer-ready hook-ups, and air conditioning. Some feature sweeping views of Tremont Street and Boston Common.

"I've seen a lot of dorms at other schools like BU and BC," said Mayte Martel, a freshman from San Juan, Puerto Rico. "Suffolk's is the greatest one I've seen. It's modern, up-to-date, clean and has lots of security." She added, "I think my room is the best because it's in the corner and I have a great view of the Common."

To oversee the building and the students who live in it, Suffolk hired its first director of residence life, Maureen Owen. She also supervises the resident assistants (RAs) assigned to each floor. Formerly assistant director of residence life at Emerson College, Owen hopes to bring life to the building, offering programs that create a sense of community.

Suffolk's residence hall has attracted students from as far away as the Middle East, China, Russia and Spain. To help floormates feel more comfortable with each other and their surroundings, RAs have arranged group activities such as trips to Red Sox games and the Museum of Science, a scavenger hunt in Boston, and educational workshops focusing on topics such as stress management and safety in the city.

"One of the exciting things about this residence hall is that it offers a lot more than just a place to sleep," said Owen. "Students can go downstairs in their slippers at 3am and use the computer lab. If it's snowing or too cold to walk to the library, they can study with friends in the study rooms," she noted.

Students agree that the building offers all the amenities they could want. "Downstairs we have a computer lab, a laundry room, and nice recreation rooms with pool tables, ping-pong and a big-screen TV with cable," said Martel.

Joe Murphy, a freshman from Hudson, MA, particularly likes the location of the building. "You can easily get anywhere in Boston from here by walking or public transportation," Murphy said.

In its first months of operation, the building has run smoothly. Some components, like a fitness room on the lower level that is awaiting finishing touches, will be fine-tuned during the spring semester. Owen feels that the problems have certainly been manageable. "There are bound to be some things that won't be solid in a new place. It will take some getting used to and some patience on the part of everyone," she said.

Tim Michalkowski, a sophomore from Meriden, CT, feels that Suffolk has anticipated and addressed efficiently the needs of resident students. "They've really been helpful. If you have a problem, there's a student advisory line you can call. Yesterday, we had an advisor in our cafeteria helping students with their schedules. Suffolk has gone the extra distance to make us comfortable."

Having almost 400 students living on campus has been a big change for Suffolk, a change that many students feel has been a positive one.

"It has definitely changed the school," said Michalkowski. "It brought Suffolk to a new level. There's more diversity on campus and more people who are around 24 hours-a-day who are more likely to get involved in activities and student organizations. They bring life to the school."

This year has been an exciting, pivotal year in the history of Suffolk University. The opening of the first residence hall is a major step toward a future filled with many more exciting and challenging firsts. S

$75,000 Grant from the Boston Foundation

The Boston Foundation, known for funding community and neighborhood projects, makes few grants to higher education and ordinarily does not support legal services. However, the foundation was attracted to Suffolk's Legal Services Clinic in Chelsea because our law students are helping to stabilize the neighborhoods in Chelsea and Revere.

By providing free legal services, the clinic is helping to prevent homelessness and protect battered women and their children. Located in a storefront on Broadway, the clinic is easily accessible to clients who may seek help without an appointment. Serving a large Hispanic population, it is one of the few legal clinics in the country where clients are greeted by a bilingual receptionist and are counseled in Spanish by law school students and faculty members.

There is a tremendous need for free legal services to the indigent, and Suffolk's legal clinic is making a difference in the lives of children and families in Chelsea and Revere who struggle every day with the burdens of poverty, homelessness and physical abuse.

The clinic receives additional funding from the Massachusetts Bar Association and the Noonan Memorial Fund administered by Fleet Investment Services.

Suffolk Establishes George Frost Society

In celebration of its 90th anniversary, Suffolk is establishing an association named for Gleason Archer's benefactor, George A. Frost. A Boston businessman and philanthropist, Frost made it possible for Archer to study law and eventually establish Suffolk University. He once called this "an investment in human life." (See story on page 5)

The George Frost Society will honor those who reach beyond their own lives to ensure the gift of opportunity for future generations by including the University in their estate plans.

Membership is open to alumni and friends who have confirmed bequest provisions for Suffolk; have designated Suffolk a beneficiary of a life insurance policy, retirement plan, or trust; or have entered into a life income plan for the University's benefit. All members will, with their permission, be listed in an annual publication, be invited to special events, and receive information about Suffolk's progress.

To learn more about the George Frost Society, contact: Nancy Cioto, director of special gifts, Suffolk University, 8 Ashburton Place, Boston, MA 02108-2770, or call (617) 573-8444.

McLaughlin Memorial Golf Tournament and Fellowship

The first annual Paul R. McLaughlin Memorial Golf Tournament was a huge success and a great tribute to the memory of the highly esteemed assistant attorney general and 1981 Suffolk Law School graduate. Organized by alumnus John J. Burke, JD '92, the tournament was held in July 1996. Drawing nearly 300 golfers and 500 guests for dinner at the Ponkapoag Golf Course in Canton, the event netted over $60,000 in proceeds to fund an endowed fellowship in McLaughlin's name.

At the family's request, the Paul R. McLaughlin Fellowship will support a summer internship for a Suffolk Law student. The recipient may choose to work in the Attorney General's Office, the Suffolk County District Attorney's Office, or with another office of the criminal justice system in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The goal of this annual tournament, according to Burke, is to sufficiently fund the fellowship so that, "we can guarantee that Paul's legacy and sacrifice will be forever recognized."

The 1997 Tournament is June 30 at Ponkapoag Golf Course.

For more information about the Fund or the Tournament, contact Karl Kussin, director of development, at (617) 573-8454.

Donation Funds Interactive Classroom

Michael S. Smith, BSBA '61 and his brother Larry E. Smith, BSBA '65 may live in Florida, but their hearts are still in Boston. Born and raised in Chelsea, both are graduates of the Frank Sawyer School of Management. As part of the Campaign for Suffolk University, they have made a special gift to fund a Sawyer School renovation, establishing the Smith Executive Case Discussion Classroom. The refurbished, tiered case discussion room will be used by undergraduate, graduate and executive business students. Fully wired to allow for interactive teaching, the room will be equipped for multimedia presentations, video conferencing and distance learning.

The Smiths have been steadfast benefactors of the University. Several years ago, they created a scholarship fund in memory of a close childhood friend and Suffolk classmate, Sheldon Cohen, who was killed in Vietnam. The brothers are recipients of an award from the General Alumni Association recognizing their continuing service to their alma mater.

Annual Fund and Phonathon 1996-97

This fall you may have received a call from a Suffolk student Phonathon worker. Their dedication and hard work have been key to the success of the University's Annual Fund efforts. The Fall Phonathon was kicked off on September 23 and concluded on December 5. As of November 1996, the effort had generated $262,189 in pledges from 4,100 donors—a total of 7,892 alumni had been contacted. As of December 1996, the Phonathon increased 67 percent in pledges raised and 46 percent in number of donors, over last year. The Phonathon goal for 1996-97 is $300,000.

Executive Director of Development Dina Roberts McCarley is pleased with the results and enthusiastic about meeting the goals for the Phonathon and Annual Fund.

"So far this year, early results during this critical campaign mode are looking very promising," she said. As of January 1997, from all annual fund sources, dollars and pledges equaled $289,112. This amount is $100,000 ahead of the January 1996 total.

The Spring Phonathon is scheduled for January 27-April 10, when student callers will be back at work reminding donors to fulfill their pledges.

The Parent Giving Fund and Senior Challenge '97

Two new fundraising initiatives are bringing added support to the overall development effort at Suffolk University. The Parent Giving Fund was launched with the help of freshman parent co-chairs David Galloway and Barbara Coffey-Galloway. They hope to raise $30,000 in the first year. As of December 1996, contributions from parents totaled almost $5,000.

In October 1996, the Class of 1997 launched Senior Challenge '97, a program that encourages current seniors to help future generations of Suffolk students finance their educations. The Class of 1997 hopes to raise $10,000 for the Trustees' Scholarship Fund which will help students in need.

A Challenge Committee of 30 seniors and a representative from the Office of Development and Enrollment are coordinating the fund-raising effort. Collectively, the students are working toward one goal: to achieve as much participation as possible from their class. As of November 1996, Senior Challenge '97 had generated $2,880 in pledges from 32 students.

The pledge drive for Senior Challenge is taking place October 23-April 11. To participate, students make a three-year pledge totaling $90 to the Trustees' Scholarship Fund. They will not be billed until the fall of 1997 and have until June 30, 1998, to complete their first payment of $30.

Recipients of the Trustees' Scholarships will be notified that members of Class of 1997 sponsored their award. By participating in Senior Challenge, the Class of 1997 is taking advantage of an exceptional opportunity to leave a legacy for future Suffolk students. They are the first graduating class to institute this program and will set the mark for succeeding senior classes at Suffolk University.

Volunteers help with the annual Phonathon.

Cornel West Delivers Lowell Lecture

Cornel West, author of the best-selling book Race Matters (Beacon Press) and professor of religion and Afro-American Studies at Harvard University, spoke on the topic "Race Matters" on October 2 at the C. Walsh Theatre. As part of Suffolk University's Lowell Lecture Series, West's lecture represents the third discourse on the theme "Stemming the Tide of Violence in the United States and Beyond."

West described the atmosphere of violence that is pervasive in America as "an attitude where dishonesty, or 'getting over' at any cost, has become a way of life." By citing scholarly references from our earliest recorded history and literature, West chronicled how violence has become ingrained in American life.

Other featured speakers at Suffolk to address the theme of "Stemming the Tide of Violence" have been Alvin Poussaint of Harvard University Medical School, and playwright, author and actor Anna Deavere Smith. The Lowell Lectures are funded by a grant from the Lowell Institute.

Nurturing Student Leaders

Student leadership and involvement is thriving on campus. Part of the reason for their growth is Leadership for Life, a program sponsored by the Office of Student Activities. The program assists Suffolk students in developing their leadership talents and abilities, while improving the campus organizations to which they belong, enriching the educational experience for everyone. Created in 1994 by Lou Pellegrino, assistant director of Student Activities, the program is having an increasing impact.

"We are strengthening our campus while strengthening our leaders. Students who get involved tend to do better academically and learn more outside the classroom. This helps students after they graduate, no matter what they choose to do," said Pellegrino.

Leadership for Life components have included a series of workshops, an outdoor weekend retreat, multicultural leadership summit dinners, a resource library and regular brunch meetings. The program has grown in number of activities and in numbers of students involved. Pellegrino estimates that on a regular basis, approximately 50 students attend the brunch meetings held every other Friday.

Pellegrino is particularly pleased with the multicultural summit dinners, which are held approximately seven times during the academic year.

"The diversity on our campus is definitely an asset. Our cultural organizations are some of the strongest organizations on campus. They have some of the best leaders, who are getting things done and making positive contributions," he said. "Bringing these different groups together so they are not isolated can only make them stronger, more ethical leaders."

Lech Walesa Speaks at MBA Association Forum

Lech Walesa, former president of the Republic of Poland and 1983 Nobel Peace Prize laureate, addressed a public forum at Faneuil Hall in Boston October 20. His speech, which was sponsored by the MBA Association of Suffolk University, touched upon several themes—the role of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), the economy of the European Union, the role of the United States in the 21st century, and the need for a universal application of values.

Ladislav Lesanek, president of the MBA Association at Suffolk, offered introductory remarks. Dean of the Frank Sawyer School of Management, John F. Brennan, introduced President Walesa.

"It is appropriate that you are here in this place, the cradle of liberty," Dean Brennan said. "It recalls a time in our history, when we, too, lived under a tyrant and under oppression, which gave rise to our hard-won freedoms."

Students engaging in team building at the annual Leadership for Life retreat.

Walesa urged U.S. intervention to help his country's unstable economy. "We would have low unemployment if your American generals would visit Poland—General Motors and General Electric," said Walesa through an interpreter, exhibiting his characteristic wit and wisdom.

Walesa called for a strengthening of NATO security forces and for the evolution of what he termed "the United States of Europe," a vision for democracy that would inspire "all people and especially young people who have not yet been tarnished by life." Walesa made an impassioned plea for the return of basic humanistic and religious values to daily and political life.

"If it weren't for my faith in God," Walesa said, "I wouldn't be here today."

The MBA Association Leadership Award was conferred upon President Walesa following a brief question-and-answer session with the audience.

Suffolk Students Named to National Organization

Four Suffolk students were selected to leadership positions on the executive board of the Boston Metropolitan Student Chapter of the National Association of Black Accountants (NABA). The students, Anthony Ross, president; Gabriel Barber, vice president; Ann Montlouis, treasurer; and Tatiana Vales, secretary, are accounting majors in the Frank Sawyer School of Management. In October they represented Suffolk at the NABA career conference in Stamford, CT.

The chapter also has chosen Sawyer School Professor Gail K. Sergenian as its faculty advisor for the 1996-97 academic year. NABA, founded in 1969, strives to address common problems faced by African-American professionals in the accounting industry. One of the primary goals of NABA is to unite minority accountants and accounting students maximizing their career potential.

Threads of Hope Portrayed in Chilean Tapestry Exhibition

The New England School of Art & Design at Suffolk University hosted a special exhibition, "Tapestries of Hope, Threads of Love: The Arpillera Movement in Chile 1974-1994," at Gallery 28 in October.

The title of the collection refers to a book written by Chilean-born Professor of Spanish and Latin American Studies at Wellesley College, Marjorie Agosin. The book is a tribute to the Chilean women Agosin interviewed over 20 years who lovingly stitched together patchwork tapestries. With scraps of fabric and burlap, the colorful works, or arpilleras, depict scenes which commemorate relatives and loved ones who "disappeared" during the oppressive regime of General Pinochet from 1973 to 1989. The mothers, sisters and daughters—members of the Association of Families of Detained-Disappeared who made the tapestries—challenged the official history of their country and have kept alive the memory of the missing.

Arpillera means burlap in Spanish, referring to the backing cloth for the tapestries, which was often burlap feed or grain sacks. The trafficking of arpilleras is an underground activity, but continues to grow despite the government's efforts to stop it. Smuggled out of Chile to be sold to assist the poverty-stricken women, the tapestries have become a poignant commentary on social history, thanks to Agosin.

She writes, "It is important to examine how women have managed to survive under drastic dictatorship, how they kept going, how they stayed whole and human."

Agosin's book, which serves as the catalogue for the collection, was translated by Suffolk professor of Latin American Studies and co-curator Celeste Kostopulos-Cooperman. The University took the opportunity to hold special events and educational programs related to Latin American history in conjunction with the exhibit.

Homecoming: A Celebration of Diversity

It was truly a family atmosphere as alumni, former faculty and administrators returned to Suffolk for "Homecoming: A Celebration of Diversity at Suffolk University." The event was part of the University's year-long 90th anniversary celebration.

An opening reception was held in the lobby of the Frank Sawyer Building where guests were welcomed by President David J. Sargent and Sharon Artis Jackson, assistant to the president and director of multicultural affairs. Following the reception, alumni attended meetings of various multicultural campus organizations.

The highlight of the evening was a dinner featuring multi-ethnic cuisine and entertainment by the African dance troupe Dibinga, Chinese storyteller Li Min Mo, and the Latin American music group Inca Son. The master of ceremonies for the program was Durrell Fox, BSBA '88, a former president of Suffolk's Black Student Association.

Awards were presented to Nique Fajors, BSBA '89 and Andrea Spears, BA '88, JD '93. They were honored for outstanding professional achievements and contributions to enhancing cultural diversity at Suffolk.

Nique Fajors, after graduating from Suffolk, earned an MBA from Harvard Business School. He is currently executive vice president of New York-based Digital Telemedia, Inc. (DTI) a World Wide Web service company. He is also creator and executive producer of an educational video titled "The Invisible Men."

Andrea Spears is employee relations manager for the City of Cambridge. She had served prior as the pardon coordinator for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Parole Board. While a student at the Law School, she served as vice president of the Black Law Students Association and during her undergraduate years served as secretary, then president, of the Black Student Association.

Family Weekend: A Growing Tradition

A new tradition is building at Suffolk University—Family Weekend. For the second year in a row the University hosted the weekend, coordinated by the Office of Student Activities. The event brought more than 200 guests to campus.

“We had a great turnout for the festivities, and the students and their parents were very enthusiastic,” said Assistant Director of Student Activities Jeannette Hixon. “I anticipate each year the numbers will grow as Family Weekend becomes part of the Suffolk tradition.”

Activities included a jazz performance on Friday night. On Saturday guests attended workshops presented by Suffolk faculty and administrators, a reception with President Sargent and Dean of Students Nancy Stoll, and a New England open house in the Ridgeway Gymnasium. The highlight of Sunday was brunch aboard the Spirit of Boston as it cruised Boston Harbor.

Kuwaiti Experts Commend Suffolk

At an October 30 seminar sponsored by Suffolk University’s Center for International Education, two Kuwaiti experts credited Suffolk University with assisting to restore their Arab nation. The seminar was titled “Kuwait at the Crossroads.”

“The aggressions inflicted by Saddam Hussein against Kuwait during the Persian Gulf War have left deep scars,” said Dr. Basheer Al-Rashidi, chairman of the Social Development Office in Kuwait, speaking before an audience of 150 people at the Massachusetts State House. “We are busily working to heal our people and to rebuild our government and society.”

Dr. Al-Rashidi said that courses taught by visiting Suffolk University faculty in Kuwait since 1993 have helped the nation and its people effectively cope with the devastation, enabling them to look to the future with hope.

“Suffolk University has been a pioneer in helping the Kuwaiti people deal with the problems of the Gulf War,” he said. “With Suffolk’s help we are attempting to fulfill three goals, namely, screening, treatment and rehabilitation for individuals, families and the greater Kuwaiti society,” he said.

Mr. Saad Al-Barrak, managing director and general manager of the International Turnkey Systems in Kuwait, spoke about the business climate in Kuwait.

“The future looks bright. A new economy is taking shape. As we recover from the Gulf War, we intend to prosper, to improve our business potential, and to contribute to the global economy.”

Fidelity CEO Speaks at Ford Hall Forum

The Frank Sawyer School of Management launched its year-long series of “Corporate Statesman Seminars” by co-sponsoring the Ford Hall Forum, which featured renowned financial services innovator Edward C. Johnson, III. His lecture was titled “Fidelity Investments: Managing a Growing Company.”

Johnson is chairman and chief executive officer of Fidelity Investments, the nation’s largest mutual fund company and a leading brokerage firm. Under Johnson’s leadership, Fidelity’s customer assets have grown from $3.9 billion to $400 billion. Fidelity Investments was founded in 1946 by Johnson’s father, Edward C. Johnson, II.

The collaboration with Johnson is another example of Suffolk’s reciprocal relationship with Fidelity Investments. Hundreds of Suffolk alumni are presently employed by the company, while several of Fidelity’s executives serve as adjunct faculty members and advisors to the Sawyer School of Management’s Advisory Councils.

World Trade Center CEO Speaks at Career Week

In conjunction with Career Week, Suffolk University invited John Drew, president of The John Drew Company and president and CEO of the World Trade Center—Boston, to speak to students, faculty and alumni this fall. Drew discussed the international marketplace, its impact on the Massachusetts economy, and ramifications for future career opportunities.

“The concept behind the World Trade Center Association was to get cities to commit to international trade as a means of fostering cultural exchange and diversity by bringing different countries and cultures closer together through an economic vehicle that is beneficial to all businesses and countries involved,” Drew said. As a result of the World Trade Center’s efforts, various trade programs have been developed, with an emphasis on how to generate successful trade missions between member nations.

Other Career Week activities included resume workshops, mock interviews, job search techniques on the internet and a “Dress for Success” fashion show. Other speakers were Massachusetts Senate candidate Michelle Flaherty, BA ’73, who spoke on “Women in Leadership,” and career consultant Ken Lizotte whose presentation was titled “Catching the Next Wave in Your Career.”

Suffolk's Peterson Tops Nation in Division III Softball Stats

Suffolk softball player Erica Peterson of Medford compiled a spectacular set of statistics for the 1996 season, topping the NCAA Division III softball leaders in four different categories. The junior second baseman led the nation in homerun percentages with seven, runs batted in with 47, doubles with 15, and with a total slugging percentage of .1089. In addition, she finished fifth in batting with a mark of .556 and was 18th in triples percentage with five.

Peterson's hitting was the big factor in Suffolk winning 12 of its last 13 games and capturing the Great Northeast Athletic Conference tournament in New London, CT. The Suffolk women defeated Norwich University 4-3 in the tournament's opening round and shut out Coast Guard, the pre-tourney favorite in the championship game 3-0.

Peterson's versatility is evidenced by the fact that she has played third base, shortstop and second base during her Suffolk career. She was selected for the Great Northeast Athletic Conference's all-star team and was a second team ECAC Division III All-Star. Her .556 batting average topped her previous season's mark of .540.

During the past season, Peterson was named GNAC Player of the Week after batting .679 (19 for 28) with five doubles, two homers, and 18 runs batted in, for a 7-0 week for Suffolk. A Criminology major, Peterson will be returning for one more season at Suffolk.

Hockey Under New Leadership

Suffolk will begin its 1996-97 hockey season with a new coach, Mark McHale, a highly successful ice mentor at Don Bosco High School. McHale succeeds Bill Burns, who resigned at the close of last season after six seasons.

McHale is realistic about turning things around in a hurry, despite a disappointing 1995-96 season. "The main thing to instill in the kids is that they be competitive," the new coach said. "I have some kids who can skate well and what I want to see is that they play hard." McHale had been head coach at Don Bosco since 1988. His 1989 team won the State Championship in Division One and his 1992 sextet was a semi-finalist in the elite 8 MIAA Tournament.

Top returnees are Dan Myers of Clio, MI, who scored 20 goals in his sophomore year, Jim Mullaly and Frank St. Peter, both senior wings from West Roxbury, and Mark Hrenko of Brockton, a junior defenseman. McHale has two goalies of promise in sophomore Ron Seville of Whitman-Hanson High School and Mark Melito of East Boston.

McHale added three assistants just before the start of the season. They are Jerry Buckley of Needham, who captained the 1994-95 hockey team at Boston College and is now a first-year student at Suffolk University Law School, Bob Sullivan, an assistant under McHale at Don Bosco, and Clifton McHale, who also played hockey at Boston College and is the all-time leading scorer at Don Bosco.

"I feel very positive about the program and I will put 120 percent into it," McHale promised.

Volleyball is a Smash in Varsity Debut

Varsity volleyball made its debut at Suffolk University this past fall, and after a slow start, the Suffolk women caught fire, winning six of their last eight games to finish the season with a 7-10 record.

"It was an encouraging season particularly when you consider that the team was playing together for the first time," said Coach Christine Carr, a former volleyball and softball standout at Harvard University. "We started clicking and coming together as the season progressed. It will be nice to carry the confidence and enthusiasm to future years."

Suffolk was paced by Tugba Vural, an international student from Turkey. She led the team with 80 kills. The middle hitter sophomore proved to be an excellent offensive player, as did Ashley Begin, who had seven kills and five digs in a 3-0 win over Emerson College. Coach Carr felt the biggest win for the Lady Rams was a 3-0 triumph over Lasell College in October. "That sent us on a three game-winning streak," she related.

The Suffolk coach was greatly impressed by the team's performance at Plymouth State. Suffolk lost 3-0 but turned in a solid performance against a team with a 22-1 record. "That showed we could play with anyone on our schedule," Carr observed.

As for the future of volleyball at Suffolk, Carr is optimistic. "We were encouraged by the turnout of spectators at games in the Ridgeway Gym, which included a number of students now living in Suffolk's new residence hall."

Professor of History David L. Robbins is the author of a new book about Suffolk University, The History of Suffolk University 1906-1996. Unveiled at Suffolk's 90th anniversary, the book summarizes research begun in 1979 as part of the Heritage Committee Project, lead by Robbins. The 258-page hardcover book discusses the location of Suffolk, its founder, Gleason Archer, the establishment of the three schools, the social history of the University, and sketches of notable people in Suffolk's ninety-year history. To obtain a copy of Suffolk's history book, call the Suffolk University Bookstore at (617) 573-8218 or (617) 227-4085.

"A first-floor apartment in Roxbury was quickly located, and there, at 6 Alpine Street, the first classes of 'Archer's Evening Law School' took place on September 19, 1906. That warm night as the lecture closed, all nine auditors were glued to their seats—by the new varnish on Archer's second-hand chairs. Once they tore themselves away, however, word spread that there was something more than varnish holding men to their places in the young educator's front room. Gleason Archer had found his life's work."

Frank Sawyer School of Management Professor Michael B. Arthur and Denise M. Rousseau of Carnegie Mellon University have edited a new book, The Boundaryless Career: A New Employment Principle for a New Organizational Era. The book, published by Oxford University Press, is endorsed by Economics Nobel Laureate Herbert Simon as "a stimulating and valuable basis for our own contemplation of the future world of work."

The Era of the Boundaryless Career

We used to think that single companies could offer lifelong careers. The logic of vertical coordination—and of job grades, promotions, demotions, and so on to service that logic—was everywhere. So too was a logic of orderly levels—the worker, the firm, the industry, the nation—where each level was only thought to matter within the next. For better or worse, the thinking behind what John Kenneth Galbraith labeled the "industrial state" contributed to a shared assumption of permanent employment among people and the firms that provided work. The assumption was reinforced by an array of political and social commentators who cared, one way or another, about career effects.

Today's reality is very different. The median employment tenure for all US workers is just four and a half years, and just six years for managers and professionals. In Japan, the supposed bastion of lifetime employment, the median for male workers is only eight years. Firms of fewer than 500 employees—the antithesis of the old ideal of large, secure corporations—account for 56 percent of US private sector employment, predicted to rise to 70 percent by the year 2000. Patterns of new job creation confirm a trend of small firms adding to, and large firms subtracting from, the pool of career opportunities. Large firm decentralization into autonomous departments—frequently expected to compete directly with outside suppliers—adds a hidden small firms effect. The logic of the industrial state is no longer defensible.

The Boundaryless World

The new logic is a boundaryless logic, where neither firms nor their employees defer to the rigidities of the old assumptions. Consider, for example, California's Silicon Valley. Over the past 20 years, the Valley has far outstripped its Massachusetts Route 128 counterpart in both economic performance and new job generation. It has done so by encouraging both people and firms to experiment and learn through continual recombination of local knowledge, skills, and techniques. The Valley's social and institutional fabric encourages persistent movement of people and information, lending support to both companies and careers that know no boundaries.

Or consider independent film-making, demonstrably superior in both productivity and innovation to the old studio film-making approach. Its success stems from work being organized around projects and informal personal networks, rather than around traditional hierarchies and human resource departments. This project-based organizing obliges individuals to cultivate reputation and informal contacts, and to take personal responsibility for seeking experiences that maintain and extend their skills. Like the Silicon Valley, the independent film-making example reflects a shift to what my colleagues and I call "boundaryless careers." Both examples are harbingers of what's to come, and what's to be celebrated, in the new economy.

A Global Phenomenon

What we are witnessing is a global phenomenon. Communities of small European firms outcompete vertically integrated large firm rivals. Industrial state interpretations of Japanese success (remember "Theory Z"?) founder against reports of small firm communities underlying that country's innovation. More broadly, what the World Bank describes as the East Asian "economic miracle" has evolved largely through dynamic small firm employment and lively inter-firm relations. Harvard's Michael Porter now sees the "Competitive Advantage of Nations" stemming from industry clusters of firms, and from employment mobility within them.

Back home, another leading management writer sees "Intelligent Enterprise" as involving wholesale disaggregation of established firms and the "voluntary" association of capable people "who don't have to work for a particular company." Both authors of In Search of Excellence, an early 1980s celebration of once dominant large manufacturing firms, have come out firmly in favor of habitual career mobility instead of any pretense to job security. The argument states that the best jobs, those with the highest learning component, are those with the least job security of all. Guru management consultant Peter Drucker has reversed his 50-year-old position that firms should take responsibility for their employees' social welfare.

Pendulum or Paradigm Shift?

There are some who say that what we have experienced is a temporary phenomenon. They argue that the data, for example on the collapse of large firms and the growth in the number of small firms, have been exaggerated. Economies need a healthy base of core firms, and of traditional employment systems within those firms. A related argument sees a bifurcation in learning and income opportunity between privileged and underprivileged workers, and a social obligation to support the latter group. Both arguments can suggest a renewed focus on employment security, and in turn on employer firms as custodians of workers' careers. Such arguments underlay recent reports, such as The New York Times' "The Downsizing of America," even though that report was largely discredited by the President's Council of Economic Advisors.

In contrast to those seeking to turn back the clock are those who see technological and global forces continuing to dismantle corporate or government empires, and the careers they once hosted. A related theme is one of paradox, whereby people will have greater freedom to act on their own but fewer external rules by which to act. Multiple new crafts, for example among medical technicians, are already responding to the new employment realities, as are emerging new forms of employment contracting, and recent congressional initiatives on health care—but not yet on pension funds—transferability.

Ring in the Knowledge Society!

The recent changes are symptoms of a broader shift from an "industrial society" to a "knowledge society." The knowledge society invites us to celebrate what most of us have been conditioned to criticize. That is, to celebrate horizontal communication and intercompany mobility that were, and still too often are, frowned on under traditional assumptions. In the knowledge society it is simple economic sense that the faster the pace of learning, and the more deeply into the work force that learning is pursued, the more prosperous will a country emerge. It is also simple economic sense that the pace of change discredits old hierarchical approaches. New, adaptive systems rest upon the adaptive behaviors of the people around whom those systems unfold.

Finally, the knowledge society invites us to think anew not only about the effectiveness of employment arrangements but also about their morality. How can we, as participants in the knowledge society, defend keeping people in jobs where they are no longer learning? Or how can we deny people access to others from whom they can gain new learning? Both practices, common under the industrial state model, explicitly leave a person less employable than before. The old debate about the "right to work" becomes a new debate about the right to learn. We can, and must, do a better job for people's careers—boundaryless careers—than we have in the past. S

Louis B. Connelly, Jr., BSJ '57, MEd '74, retired from his position as director of public relations at Suffolk University after 29 years of service. He was honored by friends, family and former alumni at a retirement party at The Hampshire House. Connelly began his tenure at Suffolk in November 1967 as its first full-time public relations director. Before joining the University, Connelly worked for a decade in the newspaper field as a reporter with the New Bedford Standard Times and the Boston Herald Traveler. It was at the Herald that he began covering sports, serving as a beat writer for the Patriots and traveling with the Red Sox during the 1967 "Impossible Dream World Series."

Summing up his career at Suffolk, Connelly remarked, "It seems like a few years ago when I was a student, a few months ago when we were having a family and a few days ago I took the Suffolk job. I've learned to appreciate every day and every hour." Connelly and his wife Maureen (Devine) raised five daughters, all Suffolk alumnae.

Spotlight

Three years ago, Ben Tafoya, Joseph Gelly, Jr., Brian Chiango and Paul Fraser met at the Sawyer School of Management's Executive MBA program. At the time, they probably never dreamed that the class project they would work on together would end up turning a profit. It was in a class about strategic management and new venture creation that they developed the business plan for their company, Universal Asset Technologies, Inc. (UAT), which they launched after graduation in 1993. Based in Billerica, Mass., UAT sells software that helps companies keep track of their assets and inventory. In its first year of business, UAT logged sales of $125,000. Revenue climbed to $350,000 in the second year and $600,000 in the third. This year, sales at the company, which has grown to employ three full-time programmers and a part-time secretary, are estimated to top $800,000.

"They finished the project plan in class and almost immediately had a contract," said Assistant Professor of Management Ruth Clarke. Tafoya is pleased and amazed at UAT's success. "It's all happened pretty quickly," he said. "We went from class project to a money maker in very short order." Warren Briggs, SSOM professor, is proud of their success; "These guys have actually turned their fantasy into reality."

94: Laiching Sun, MST, was promoted to manager in the Boston office of KPMG Peat Marwick LLP, the international professional services firm.

In Memoriam

Marjorie C. Kelleher, MEd '79

The University was deeply saddened to learn of the death of Marjorie C. Kelleher, a highly respected alumna and administrator of Suffolk, who served this institution with unselfish distinction for 26 years. A resident of Merrimack, NH, Kelleher died January 7, at the home of her father in Ashland, NH, after a prolonged illness. She was 50.

Marge Kelleher began her affiliation with Suffolk in 1970 as an executive secretary to President Thomas A. Fulham. She served in that position for a decade before being appointed grants officer and later director of leadership gifts for the development office. Since 1992 she was an administrator for the Office of Undergraduate Admission. A 1968 graduate of Mount Saint Mary College in Hooksett, NH, she earned a master's in higher education administration from Suffolk in 1979.

Kelleher is survived by her husband, John J. Kelleher; her father, Roger W. Calley; and two sisters, Patricia E. Tucker and Suzanne Calley.

Suffolk University expresses sympathy to the families and friends of these alumni. The following names are listed alphabetically.

Annual Gifts in 1995-96 Made a Difference at Suffolk University

The generous support Suffolk University has experienced this past fiscal year is evidence of the loyalty and confidence our alumni and friends have in our ability to grow as an institution. From the Annual Fund, to the planning stages of the capital campaign, to the 90th Anniversary celebration, whenever we asked for help, people eagerly stepped forward.

Many areas of fundraising saw increases in 1995-96. The Annual Fund had raised almost $540,000 at year's end, June 30, 1996—participation increased by 2 percent. Phonathon totals increased by 40 percent over 1994-95, and corporate and foundation giving increased by 53 percent. The numbers of donors, including alumni, employees, corporations and foundations also increased. Summa membership reached a record high of 276 individuals, an increase of 13 percent. More people than ever are showing their support for Suffolk University.

As a result of this spirit of generosity, Suffolk made great strides last year. Among our accomplishments in fall 1996 were the enrollment of a record number of freshman students and the opening of our first-ever residence hall. In addition, we launched the Campaign for Suffolk University. Since the campaign began, we have raised more than $15 million in pledges and contributions. No campaign could succeed without a loyal community of donors and dedicated volunteers. Thanks to our supporters, we are more than halfway to reaching the $25 million goal.

Much of our success was made possible by the many donors listed on the following pages. Their commitment to Suffolk University makes a difference, and their support is greatly appreciated. To them Suffolk says, thank you.

Educational & General Expenditures: 1995-96

Report from the Vice President/Treasurer

I am happy to report that the year ending June 30, 1996, was yet another year in which we balanced the budget of each of the three schools, namely the Law School, the Frank Sawyer School of Management, and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

We continue to meet budget on Revenues, however we are tuition driven, with 95 percent of our total Revenues of $70,870,000 coming from Tuition & Fees. Fourteen percent of our Expense line goes to Unrestricted Scholarship Funds so that we can remain competitive in the financial aid area.

I am pleased to state we have completed renovations for our first-ever residence hall which opened in September 1996. We are receiving pre-qualifications in our efforts to begin obtaining bids for the construction of our new Law School building on Tremont Street. The total investment in the physical plant now stands at more than $70 million with an annual operations and maintenance budget of $5.2 million.

The computer upgrade for which we spent more than $2 million is complete, but with the changing technology, we must continually upgrade software.

"A great deal of my success . . . is directly attributable to the educational opportunity and 'no-nonsense' style of discipline that I received as an undergraduate of Suffolk."

Edward F. McDonnell

BSBA '59, DCS '84

Ed McDonnell's management style, insights and discipline have catapulted him to the top of the international business world. But no matter how far he rises, McDonnell continues to appreciate the down-to-earth principles and education that got him where he is today. For this reason, he committed to expanding educational opportunities for future generations of Suffolk students with the Edward F. McDonnell International Business Institute.

McDonnell began to develop his leadership abilities as a management student at Suffolk. He was senior class president and co-editor of the yearbook. Since graduating in 1959, McDonnell has remained connected to the University as a guest lecturer and keynote speaker. He was awarded an honorary degree from Suffolk in 1984, and currently serves as a trustee.

His career has taken him into the realm of global business. While living in South America and Europe for 12 years, McDonnell held positions with several major corporations. Most notably, he was head of international operations for the Pillsbury Company before joining The Seagram Company, Ltd., in 1981, as president of the former Seagram International Division. In 1991 McDonnell was named president of The Seagram Spirit and Wine Group, with responsibility for the company's worldwide spirits and wine operations. He was elected to the company's board of directors in 1993.

Seagram's leadership in establishing operations in new and emerging markets was in part due to McDonnell's shrewd management. When McDonnell joined Seagram's board, President and Chief Executive Officer Edgar Bronfman, Jr., said, "Our international spirits business is today a cornerstone of our operations and it is a testament to his efforts. We all look forward to Ed's continued advice and counsel."

Suffolk is also privileged to have McDonnell's advice and counsel, and his commitment. Through a generous pledge, McDonnell hopes to provide new opportunities to the students and graduates of the Frank Sawyer School of Management by establishing the Edward F. McDonnell International Business Institute. The institute will take a practical approach to solving the problems that international business managers face every day. It will also provide vital new resources, internships and job placements for Suffolk management students.

"I got an early start in the international business arena, long before it was considered a career-building avenue to success. Today I, and most top industry leaders, believe it is an essential stepping stone to greatness in the business world."

McDonnell wants to make sure that Suffolk students have access to these stepping stones, and through the McDonnell Institute they will. Suffolk is proud to have such an outstanding global business leader as one of its own, especially one who has the success of our students at heart.
