My Dear Mother

In my last letter from Savannah I wrote you that I had not received anything from Judge S. neither obtain a statement of his account - affairs still remain in the same posture as the court was then sitting the judge was too much engaged to make out the account he has promised to make it out immediately and hand it to Habersham - I took a violent cold in Savannah which fell upon my bowels and has detained me in this country much longer than I could have wished I shall now proceed on as fast as possible as I am in great haste once more to embrace my Dear Mother whom I fear my silence has made uneasy the however I trust is well convinced that had my indisposition permitted me to have written I should have done so I am now however nearly well as to my complaint entirely so altho not in strength - Shubricks affair will detain me a few days I saw Judge G. yesterday he thinks that it is impossible that Mr S. will recover anything. I am to see that gentleman tomorrow when I shall discover what he thinks of the suit. From what Judge G has told me I think he wishes himself to lose the suit.

I am now pushed for time as the vessel this goes by is about sailing and I have been constantly busy ever since I came to town - so that with the assurances of the greatest regard and affection I must bid you adieu

yours

Peter
