INTRODUCTION

The need for a scheme/system to classify state documents has become increasingly apparent as more and more emphasis has been placed on libraries to acquire and service this important body of material. Because of the diversity in library organizational patterns, documents librarians could probably never agree on one system for classifying state documents. However, those libraries which maintain a separate collection of state documents and also a separate federal documents collection classified by the Superintendent of Documents Classification scheme will be interested in the classification scheme for State of Illinois documents used by the Documents Section, Library, University of Illinois at Chicago Circle. By applying similar principles, this scheme is easily adaptable for publications of other states. Although the scheme is now presented in nearly as complete a form as possible, it is still subject to any changes made necessary by Illinois government organizational changes. A revised edition will be issued when warranted.

BRIEF STATEMENT OF PRINCIPLES

This classification scheme has been adapted from the Superintendent of Documents Classification and follows the basic principles set forth in An Explanation of the Superintendent of Documents Classification System.<sup>1</sup>

The basis of the classification is the grouping together of publications of state government authors--code departments, boards and commissions being considered authors. The organizational structure of the State of Illinois is followed.

Author

Each department and agency, the judiciary, General Assembly, and other major independent unit is assigned a place in the scheme by alpha-numeric designation.

Subordinate offices

To set off subordinate offices, bureaus, divisions, etc., numbers are added to the symbols with figure "1" reserved for the parent organization and secretary's or administrator's office. Beginning with figure "2" numbers are applied in order. Because of lack of standard nomenclature for Illinois units, an alphabetical scheme such as that used in the SuDoc system was used (see p.26). Numbers may be assigned arbitrarily.

Many Illinois Code Departments reorganize or change subdivision names frequently and with little publicity. Unless a subdivision has a history of publishing over a considerable period of time, librarians may prefer to enter most publications under the general agency number rather than creating new subdivision numbers.

Serial designations

As in the SuDoc system, the second breakdown is for various series of publications. A number is assigned to each series:

- 1: Annual reports
- 2: General publications (unnumbered publications of a misc. nature)
- 3: Bulletins
- 4: Circulars
- 5: Laws (administered by the agency and published by it)
- 6: Regulations, rules and instructions
- 7: Releases
- 8: Handbooks, manuals, guides

Any additional series are given the next highest numbers. Specially assigned designations are given within the schedule.

Boards and Commissions with no legislative members are grouped under the symbol Y 3. The classification numbers of the publications of these agencies are pushed to the right. Instead of the series designation following the period, the individual agency designation follows it. The agency designation is the Cutter author number from the Cutter table for key word of the agency name, followed by a colon.

Series designations for publications of these agencies follow the colon instead of preceding it:

- Y 3.L 41: Law Enforcement Commission
- Y 3.L 41:2 (Cutter) A specific publication of the Commission falling in the general publication series 2.

Legislative Committees and Commissions are grouped under Y 4. These include standing committees of the House and Senate, legislative services agencies, and continuing and temporary boards, commissions and councils in which at least one member is from the legislature. They follow the same principles as outlined for Y 3. above:

- Y 4.At 7:1 Annual report of the Atomic Energy
971 Commission, 1971

Independent Regulatory Agencies have been given special treatment as in the Federal system.

VITAE

Mrs. Yuri Nakata holds an M.A. degree from the Graduate Library School, University of Chicago. From 1966-1969, she was Assistant Reference Librarian, University of Illinois at Chicago Circle Library; and since 1969, has been Documents Librarian. Her prior experience includes serving as Administrative Assistant to the Deputy Director of the American Library Association.

Mrs. Michele Strange received her M.A.L.S. degree from the Graduate School of Library Science, Rosary College, River Forest, Illinois in 1968. She is currently Assistant Documents Librarian at the University of Illinois at Chicago Circle Library. From 1968 to 1970 she held the position of Assistant Reference Librarian at the same institution. In applying the preliminary draft of the scheme to the Library's collection of Illinois State publications, Mrs. Strange further refined and modified the system on the basis of use.

This classification scheme and the principles upon which it is based were developed in cooperation with Mary Jane McDonald, former Documents Librarian at Sangamon State University, Springfield, Illinois, who has had long experience with Illinois State publications at the Illinois State Library. Her knowledge of the organizational pattern of various units of state government was invaluable in arriving at certain decisions.

The contribution of Norma Michalski, LTA, should be acknowledged. She has typed numerous drafts of the scheme and has assisted Mrs. Strange in the revisions. Her interest and cooperation are appreciated.

Final paper submitted October 1973
