

5-13-2020

When class is colorblind: A race-conscious model for cultural capital research in education

Bedelia N. Richards

Sociology and Anthropology, brichar2@richmond.edu

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarship.richmond.edu/socanth-faculty-publications>

Part of the Race and Ethnicity Commons

Recommended Citation

Richards, Bedelia Nicola. "When Class Is Colorblind: A Race-Conscious Model for Cultural Capital Research in Education." Sociology Compass 14, no. 7 (July 2020): e12789. <https://doi.org/10.1111/soc4.12786>.

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Sociology and Anthropology at UR Scholarship Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in Sociology and Anthropology Faculty Publications by an authorized administrator of UR Scholarship Repository. For more information, please contact scholarshiprepository@richmond.edu.

Received: 15 April 2019 | Revised: 19 December 2019 | Accepted: 23 December 2019

DOI: 10.1111/soc4.12786

WILEY

ARTICLE

When class is colorblind: A race-conscious model for cultural capital research in education

Bedelia Nicola Richards

Sociology and Athropology Department,
University of Richmond, Richmond, Virginia

Correspondence

Bedelia Nicola Richards, University of Richmond, 302 Weinstein Hall, 231 Richmond

Abstract

Sociologists of education frequently draw on the cultural capital framework to explore the ways in which educational institutions perpetuate inequality in schools and the larger