ASIS&T's Information Professions Project: An Update

José-Marie Griffiths, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Nancy Roderer, Johns Hopkins University - The Information Organizations
Ann Prentice, University of Maryland - Next Steps for the Task Force on Information Professionals

In 2007, ASIS&T established a Task Force on Information Professionals to look at ways to recognize and promote the information professions broadly defined. Highlights of activity to date have been a commissioned study of master's level programs in the US and Canada educating information professionals, and an initial meeting of information professional organizations to consider possible actions. Three members of the task force will discuss its work and related efforts.
