And in Closing . . . .

During the past two years it has been my privilege to serve the Michigan Reading Association as editor of the Michigan Reading Journal. Far from being an arduous responsibility, the position has brought me into professional and personal contact with many of the leaders in the field of reading from all over the state. These acquaintanceships have been a more-than-adequate recompense for the effort involved in editing and publishing the magazine.

Thus it is with considerable regret that I leave both the Journal and Michigan. But old roads sometimes come to an end, and new avenues beckon.

The Journal will continue under co-editors Dr. Clarice Stafford and Sister M. Yvonne, of Marygrove College, who have been members of the editorial board from its beginning. In their most capable hands the Journal will develop into a publication which is truly worthy of the organization which it represents.
