

Editorial

INNOVATION

Static conditions and environments usually result into a motionless state which will ultimately bring about the grave death of any organization, especially those involved in academic affairs. It is deeply believed that any kind of new thinking and observation may promote and enhance new thoughts, new changes, and new developments. Today, with the appalling trend of information explosion era, finding ways to produce new knowledge is a bit worrisome, especially when one is in academic atmosphere and circle with numerous marvelous thoughts; yet chained in the matters of trivial daily life chores. Moreover, bringing the original thoughts together mandates preparation and readiness of all those working in a team. As one prepares to show what achievements s/he has had, s/he has to make the accomplishments known globally, which with today's state of things, it has to be in English.

The JPS English language editorial team is trying to bear that responsibility on its shoulders, specifically when a great number of journals are being published in Persian and incapable of showing their scientific achievements of our nation to the world. This innovative trend has helped us reach the levels we never thought of when we started our task and mission. The type of materials, both qualitatively, and quantitatively, is a proof of our mission. So, join us in our effort to present your accomplishments to the whole world.

Ali Salahi Yekta
JPS Literary Editor