NINETEEN TWENTY-NINE
LOYOLAN

Published by the Students of Loyola
University, Chicago

Early in life, while still a student, Ozanam dedicated himself, as a layman, to the service of the Church. His object was to bring the principles and practice of his religion into the everyday life of the student.

DEDICATION

Loyola University honors this year Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy, through whose munificence a stately library structure is to rise on the campus within the near future. The building, described elsewhere in this issue of the LOYOLAN, will be known as the Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cudahy Memorial Library, and is being presented to the University by Mr. Cudahy in honor of his devoted wife, still living. In this generous deed Mr. Cudahy is establishing an enduring monument to the cause of education and to the traditions of his family already secure in the grateful memory of all Loyolans because of an earlier benefaction by Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cudahy. It is fitting, therefore, that this year-book be dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy whose names we are proud to inscribe high on the roll of Loyola's patrons.

During the period of royal supremacy before the coming of the republic the pomp and ceremony of the court added dignity and charm to activities.

FOREWORD

THE LOYOLAN, in its sixth volume, attempts to present the annals of the scholastic year 1928-29 at Loyola University. In fulfilling this task it has endeavored to measure up to the standards of its predecessors and to the achievements which have made THE LOYOLAN, in six years, an indispensable part of the University life.

This year THE LOYOLAN is built around a theme suggested by the life and times of Frédéric Ozanam (1813-1853), an eminent and saintly Catholic layman, through whose work as a student, teacher, writer, and organizer the Church in France was greatly strengthened during a dark and painful transition period, and whose ideals of Catholic Action have become an inspiration throughout the modern world.

Three years ago Loyola University started a revival of the student movement which had its beginning in the work of Ozanam. This activity, which is known as the Catholic Action movement, has now spread throughout the nation. Because it is an influence which dominates the life of every student, the Nineteen Twenty-Nine LOYOLAN has taken for its theme the activities and environment of the man who originated the movement in France a century ago—Frédéric Ozanam.

During the period of distress and transition in France many of the people depended for news and literary diversion upon the town crier. It was a common custom in the outlying towns, especially near Ozanam's house, to gather at a certain time while the crier read his bulletins.

When Ozanam went to Paris to continue his studies he made his home with M. Ampere, the noted French scientist. Ampere was greatly interested in Ozanam and the two spent much time in Ampere's library working on scientific and philosophical treatises.

LOYOLA

Ozanam's ideal of carrying his religion beyond the doors of the church was one of the reasons for the revival of Catholicism among the students of his time. His ideal is the ideal instilled into the students of present-day Loyola.

ADMINISTRATION

One of the first activities of the student movement under Ozanam was the aid of the poor. Ozanam spent much of his time in the poorer districts of Paris administering to those in distress.

THE PRESIDENT'S GREETINGS

Loyola University is celebrating its twentieth birthday as a university in this year of grace nineteen hundred and twenty-nine. In reviewing the contents of this year book I am struck with the evidence of achievement recorded or implied for such a brief span of university life. I am more impressed when I recall what meager and insufficient material resources have gone to the founding and the developing of the University. It seems to me that the patrons of higher education, that the enlightened citizens who see the vital need of such institutions, that the devoted sons and daughters and friends of Loyola University should handle and read this year book with deep gratitude to God and to the men who are chiefly responsible for the establishment and development of this University. They should be elated with a sense of hope that what has been done is a secure promise of what will be accomplished. It is a great satisfaction to me to look into this carefully edited and artistically printed book and reflect on the swift and solid progress which has been made and to look forward to the carrying out of plans contemplating a growth which will be a living development of what has been so wisely planted and so faithfully watered and so lovingly cultivated. May the future Loyolans mirror, as this book does, the ever growing and beneficent influence of Loyola University!

ROBERT M. KELLEY, S.J.
President of Loyola University

THE YEAR'S ACHIEVEMENTS

The past scholastic year has been the second year of the administration of Father Robert M. Kelley, S.J. It is conservative to make the statement that the achievements of the past year surpass those of any previous year at Loyola.

The donation of the Cudahy Memorial Library and the beginning of the construction of the new athletic field and stadium were the outstanding material accomplishments.

The achievements of a university, however, cannot be measured entirely by material progress. The increased scholastic prestige of the institution, the unification of the various schools, as well as the increased advantages given to the students must be considered as a part of the progress of the past year.

The fame of Loyola as a center of learning grows from year to year as its graduates take their places all over the nation. The unification of the schools of the University has become a reality through the efforts of the council of Deans and Regents, founded last year and through the medium of the Loyola Union which is an achievement of this year.

Advantages have been given to the students in the form of increased self government, in an opportunity to engage in a wide variety of extra curricular activities and in increased opportunities to receive a truly Catholic education.

Standing—Steggert, McCormick, Reedy.
Seated—Mahan, Moorehead, Schmidt, Kelley, Reiner, Logan, Siedenburgh.

THE COUNCIL OF DEANS AND REGENTS

The purpose of the council of Deans and Regents, which was inaugurated in the beginning of the administration of President Robert M. Kelley, is to afford a convenient time and place for the deans and regents of the schools and colleges of the university to present their common difficulties and adopt positive policies under the regulation of the president, and thus to form a more perfect unification of the university by greater coordination among its units.

The place of meeting, formerly the University Club, has been changed to the Bismarck Hotel, where meetings are held regularly on the first Tuesday of each month. The procedure of the assembly consists of dinner at six thirty o'clock, after which the meeting proper takes place.

The personnel of the council follows: Rev. Robert M. Kelly, S.J., President; Rev. Joseph S. Reiner, S.J., Dean of the College of Arts and Science; Rev. Frederic Siedenburgh, S.J., Dean of the School of Sociology and Regent of the School of Law; Rev. Austin G. Schmidt, S.J., Dean of the Graduate School; Rev. Patrick J. Mahan, S.J., Regent of the School of Medicine; Dr. William H. G. Logan, Dean of the Chicago College of Dental Surgery; Dr. L. D. Moorehead, Dean of the School of Medicine; Mr. John V. McCormick, Dean of the School of Law; Mr. Thomas J. Reedy, Dean of the School of Commerce, and Mr. Bertram J. Steggert, Registrar of the College of Arts and Sciences.

A brief resume of the topics taken up follows: A definite terminology regarding divisions of the university was established; a university calendar was compiled and sent to those whom it concerned; the commencement of 1929 was planned in detail; a survey of the various schools and colleges of the university was presented by Dean Reiner; the strong and the weak points of the university organization was discussed by the council; committees made reports concerning the rankings of teachers throughout the university, also the securing of endowment for the university, health service for students, course numbers for the purpose of securing uniformity, degrees in general, and the requirements for baccalaureate degrees in particular.

Top Row—Stimming, Madden, Van Pelt.

THE LOYOLA UNION

The University Senate composed of the deans of the various schools was shown to be of such advantage in bringing about a unified spirit in the university that a similar organization made up of students from each department was recommended by the president of the University. Under the direction of Father Schulte, dean of men of the college of Arts and Sciences, steps were made to organize the student bodies of the various schools through representative students.

Shortly after the Christmas recess Father Schulte appointed several representatives from each campus and asked them to come together and discuss the best plan of organization. The initial meeting was held at the City Club and definite plans were made. The group decided that it desired to be known as the Loyola Union, that each school should be represented by three students, that representation for the first year should be by appointment until such time as the students could arrange to hold elections and choose their representatives.

The Loyola Union is purely an advisory board making recommendations to the schools of the University in regard to all university problems. The outstanding work of the Union during the past few months has been the aid given in social affairs. The Junior Prom which was backed by the organization was the most successful social affair in the history of Loyola's all-university functions. The social committee, headed by Ambrose Kelly of the Night Law School, has already made plans for several of the University functions to take place during the coming year. Dates have been arranged and preliminary arrangements have been considered.

The appointments to membership by Father Schulte include: Stimming, Walsh and White of the Arts College; Karr, Lee and Madden of the School of Medicine; Sweeney, O'Dowd and Buckley of the Day Law School; J. Kelly, A. Kelly and Kavanaugh of the Night Law School; Neary, Norkett and Van Pelt of the School of Commerce; Schoen, Topel and Hillenbrand of the Dental School; and Egan, Kain and Summers of the School of Sociology.

The officers of the organization are: President, James A. Neary; Vice-President, Robert E. Lee; Secretary, John D. White; Treasurer, Paul Topel.

THE COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES: LAKE SHORE CAMPUS

I believe that the past year marks another advance by the faculty in capitalizing the intellectual curiosity, the high idealism, the energy and enthusiasm of our students and in developing in them initiative, self-dependence, intellectual and moral power.

Advance in the religious field is apparent, it seems to me, from the increased influence of religion on the character of the individual students and on the activities of the group, from the increased attendance at the meetings of the sodality and a wider acceptance of its ideals, from the greater number of receiving Holy Communion at the Friday Mass, from the development of the Chicago Catholic Student Conference on Religious Activities and from the dominating influence exerted by Loyola students at the Student Leadership Convention, held at St. Louis, last summer. It is very significant that the offer of assistance to Loyola which eventually took the shape of the princely gift of our new library was made on the occasion of one of the student masses.

THE COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCE:
DOWNTOWN COLLEGE; THE SCHOOL OF SOCIOLOGY

Glancing over our year in retrospect, we can especially record developing and strengthening the program for education in social work, due in part to a revision of the curriculum. Work in social research has been added to the opportunities given social service students.

We have initiated at the Downtown College a course in the Theory of Occupational Therapy, meeting the demand for education in that relatively new field. During the year new hospitals have been added to our list where work towards university degrees is given to nurses. Such activities as the Maria Della Strada Sodality, Alpha Kappa Delta, the national honor sociology fraternity, and the Loyola University Alumnae Association, have been fostered and developed as a regular part of the year's work in the school. Always an integral part of the community, this year the schools have had representation on the Illinois Conference of Public Welfare, the Advisory Committee of the Public Schools and the Committee of Fifteen.

THE LAW SCHOOL

During the academic year 1927-28 the Law School increased in numbers. Our present registration is 293, of which number 182 students are attending the Evening Division and 111 the Day Division

A new member was added to the full-time faculty. Mr. John Cushing Fitzgerald of Cambridge, Mass., who has received an A. B. from Boston College and an LL.B. degree from Harvard University.

Professor Sherman Steele during the last year published his Case Book on Equity Jurisprudence which is being used in the Law School. It has had very favorable notices from the Reviewers of various Law Journals.

The Student Council of the Day and Night school has been actively functioning and has demonstrated that the students can and will govern themselves if given the opportunity.

We feel on looking back that the Law School has accomplished a great deal since we have been in our new home, the Downtown College Building, and it is the intention of the Law School to continue to advance the ideals of legal education.

THE SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

The general growth and prosperity of the School of Medicine has been one of the most satisfying features of the University's life. During the eleven years of its existence it has slowly, but surely, and mainly by the constructive scholarship of its students, the splendid careers of its graduates, and the excellent effort of its faculty, risen to a position of honor and respect in the great field of medical education.

In student activities the Medical students have been prominent and are beyond a doubt playing their share in the building up of activities shared by the entire University. The spirit which exists among the students is one of the highest caliber and this is in many ways responsible for the splendid scholarship so frequently displayed.

THE COLLEGE OF DENTAL SURGERY

During the forty-seven years of its existence the College of Dental Surgery has grown to become one of the outstanding institutions of its kind in the United States. The five story building now occupied was built for the school and every provision was made to care for the advancing requirements of dental education. The first and second floors are devoted to the dental clinic with its correlated departments and offices. There are four science and four technical laboratories with three amphitheatres, located on the three upper floors.

The institution has been most fortunate in attracting a type of student whose subsequent career has reacted to the greater renown of the school. Of over five thousand alumni, nine are or have been deans of dental colleges and many are recognized as authorities in the fields of dental education and practice.

THE SCHOOL OF COMMERCE

The School of Commerce is completing its fifth year with the largest enrollment it has ever had. During the past year new courses, some quite advanced, were introduced to serve the needs of the increasing number of students and indicate the rapid development which the School of Commerce is undergoing.

The Commerce Student Council, which evolved from the old Commerce Club, was placed upon a firm and practical basis during the past year and the students are organizing in such a manner and to such a degree that all indications point toward the time not far away when the School will have grown beyond its proportions and will need again to remove into larger quarters.

THE GRADUATE SCHOOL

For the first time in its history, Loyola University conferred the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at the commencement in June, 1928. The recipients were Brother Lewis Richard Steinbrink and Howard Eston Egan. Both of these students had done brilliant work in the Department of Education.

The year just closing has been one of constant and substantial growth. There has been a total enrollment, including the summer session of 1928, of two hundred students. The caliber of the student body is constantly improving and theses submitted are reaching a higher level.

The monthly convocations have been unusually well attended. Some of the outstanding features have been the addresses delivered by Dean Kent of Northwestern University, Dr. Job of the Loyola University School of Medicine, and Professor Otting, of the Department of Psychology. Contributions to the programs have been made by students of the Arts, Dental, Law and Medical Departments.

Reports from the professional schools have been most gratifying. Between thirty and forty students are engaged in research problems in the Dental School and the Medical School.

THE HOME-STUDY DEPARTMENT

The courses thus far have been strictly limited to academic work and no vocational courses have been offered. The work is primarily designed to help people, separated by distance from the University, complete their academic training but its influence extends to many who have no thought of degrees or teaching certificates.

The instructors in a home-study department must have much general knowledge besides academic background. They must be willing to give unselfishly of their time and energy (the remuneration is but slight) to maintain a high standard of education. Each student must be a fresh interest and only by striking a rather personal chord with the unseen student can such a department flourish. The fact that Loyola's courses now serve over a thousand students and stretch beyond the borders of the United States, testifies to the high character of teaching scholarship in this department.

PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS.

The office of Dean of Men in the Professional Schools has virtually been in existence since 1925 when the first retreat for the Professional students was held in the Sodality Hall on the west side. This year, however, the position was placed upon an official basis by the president of the University.

Regular days and office hours were provided in the various departments in order that all students would be given an opportunity to meet and consult the Dean. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of each week were given over the Medical school while Thursday was devoted to the Day Law students. Night Law students were given an opportunity on Thursday evenings and the Commerce men found it most convenient to meet on Fridays.

A close affiliation with the Cosmas and Damian Associates, an organization of Catholic Physicians and with the newly organized Guild of St. Apollonia, an association of Catholic Dentists makes it possible for the Dean of Men to keep in touch with the students not only during their training but also after they have graduated.

LAKE SHORE CAMPUS

The year 1928-1929 had its accomplishments. The Loyola Union was organized, all representatives from the schools of the University chosen for the first year, and the selection approved by the President. This was done to have a congenial group to begin some real activity.

The Social Committee of the Union has arranged the Program for the coming year, outstanding features to be the Loyola News Ball in late October, the Sophomore Cotillion at the end of November, the Junior Prom before Lent, and the Senior Ball after Easter. The Junior Prom of this year, at The Knickerbocker, was pronounced "biggest and best ever." The Senior Ball, June 8th, will most likely even surpass this Prom. An outstanding feature of the early season was "The Jamboree," when a thousand Loyola Students saw the Basketball Team in action and then danced in glee till midnight.

LOYOLA UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Loyola University Library has substantially increased its service during the past year. A number of volumes have been added to the collection, and important sets of Reference books have been purchased, among which are: "The Columbia University Course in Literature" in eighteen volumes; and "The Dictionary of American Biography," which when completed will comprise twenty volumes. The number of bound periodicals has been considerably augmented. Building for the future is constantly in mind in rounding out this part of the Reference collection.

An impetus has been given to the possible scope of the Library work by the gift of Mr. Edward A. Cudahy to the University of a Memorial Library to be erected this year on the Lake Shore Campus. The Library as planned will be an architectural gem; also, from the librarian's viewpoint, a spacious and usable building. Ample space has been allotted to care for the present and future student body. Among the outstanding features are a beautiful Reading Room seating two hundred; a Periodical Room, overlooking Lake Michigan, with seating capacity for over fifty; Study Rooms for the graduate and research students; a Lecture Room where the Librarian will instruct the students in the use of the Library; a Treasure Room, where rare editions will receive special attention; stack capacity for over 200,000 volumes.

M. LILLIAN RYAN,
Librarian

Upon completion of the new Library Building we hope the faculty and students from the various divisions of the University will make use of its facilities.

M. Lillian Ryan

"We have openly professed our own faith, refuted opposing doctrines, sought to do our duty as Christian professors and to serve God by advancing true Science. But we have not sought to introduce into the Faculty of Paris a division which does not exist, to create two camps, to engage in battle. I think, moreover, that it is a matter of great importance to the young men, that that should not be done. Our lectures must not be regarded by our colleagues as provocative steps calling for a retort. If there are many strangers to our faith, they are not to be made enemies."

OZANAM: Letters.

CLASSES

The unstable condition of the French Government and the rise of the bourgeoisie brought an attempt to break down the lines of class distinction in France. Frequently all classes were put on the same footing and were sworn into the new governments as they were formed.

THE STUDENT COUNCIL OF THE ARTS DEPARTMENT

No student council in any department of the University has ever been confronted with problems as great and as serious as has the Arts Student Council during the scholastic year 1928-29. While the difficulties which arose were not of a permanently serious nature, they were the kind which had to be dealt with in the midst of much tense feeling on the part of the student body.

The faith and confidence on the part of the students and the faculty formed the foundation upon which a creative and effective administration were built. The gradual increment of a general knowledge of the purpose and powers of the council on the part of the students has made possible steps which have made this Student Council one of the most outstanding of such groups in all American Colleges.

The Council was represented by its president, Mr. Stimming, at the National Federation of Student Councils which was held at the University of Missouri. It is the firm intention of the student body that it shall be represented in this manner by all succeeding presidents.

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

It is with a sense of pioneering pride that we can look back to our times at Loyola. For we can say that we were the last class of the good old days when there were real hardships to be encountered in going to school, when, for instance, we had to walk five blocks to church (there was no luxurious Chapel to step into then) and when brief cases always to be suspected as carrying some deadly engine of destruction—what with all these gang wars and such had always under pain of some dreadful punishment or other, to be left outside the library door. (In those days we called the basement of the faculty building "library"). Nor were we disturbed from the dull routine of class and sedate bachelor ways by any such distracting elements as high falsetto laughter or flashing dress or idle chatter. (There were no "femmes" to violate the hallowed confines of our walks and lawns, where we once walked secure.)

And so now when we go back to see the old place again, we rather feel the loss and feel it more keenly because it's all so changed now and because those who followed us have not had the advantages that we enjoyed. And we distinctly recall the thought that struck us, the first time we contemplated those airy things flitting about the campus. "What will Father Reiner do now?"

THE SOPHOMORE CLASS

To review the history of the class of 1931 at Loyola is to study an aggregation of students as liberal and yet as radically progressive, as Loyola has ever known. To begin with, it startled the collegiate world in general, and caused its own upperclassmen to shake their heads in disapproval and disappointment, when it announced very decidedly that it would throw off all bonds of tradition and abolish the green cap rule!

No doubt deceased alumni turned in their graves and contemporary grads wondered where the time-worn reputation of sophomore paternalism and discipline in regard to the incoming freshmen had wandered. Fiery orations about "tradition," and "school spirit" by loyal upperclassmen and by several would-be conservative sophomores could not conciliate the men in charge to reconsider their decision.

Consonant with this initial policy of indifference to the history of past classes, the sophomores shut their eyes to the discouraging failure of their immediate predecessors' attempt at staging a social function, and ran, on December 21, the much advertised, but less attended, Sophomore Cotillion. It proved a noble social success, but a rather meagre financial failure. But the optimistic liberals were not of the nature to countenance discouragement. They ran a raffle to make up for the deficit, and looked up again inquiring of each other, "what else can we do to make our class the object of upperclassmen's attention?"

Activity as an organization did by no means lessen participation of individuals in extra-class and curricular activity. Several sophomores could be found in every activity to which they were eligible.

Most conspicuous of these are the numerous staff positions held on the publications: The Loyola News boasts of sophomores in each of these offices: Campus Editor, Assistant Campus Editor, two Assistant Sports Editors, Advertising Manager, Assistant Advertising Manager, and Assistant Business Manager. Besides, there are seven in the ranks of reporters, and four who distinguished themselves weekly with their feature columns, viz., Ciscora Notes, The Observer, The Inquiring Reporter, and a temporary handling of "Ho Hum" during its period of transition from Will to Larry.

The staff of the 1929 Loyolan gleams brightly with the handsome names of seven sophomores. One has taken over the extremely responsible position of Business Manager, while another acted in the capacity of Literary Editor. Other departments, such as Administration, Society, Forensics, Dramatics, and Musical Activities, all fell under the management of sophomores.

No less was the interest taken in dramatics and forensics, each having as its Business Manager a member of this singular class. In debating especially did a sophomore distinguish himself by managing the eastern tour of the club last March.

But probably the greatest achievements the sophomores can boast of is their concentrated activity in athletics. Five of the nine members of this year's glorious basketball team were second year men, while nine others brought fame to Loyola through varsity football.

A sophomore is president of the Loyola University Band and secretary of the Glee Club, while several others are active members of either musical organization.

One man in particular gained renown by taking complete charge of the Jamboree, held in the gym after the Bradley game on February ninth. It was the same man who conceived the idea of a Horseshoe tournament while still a freshman, and who managed to hold major positions on five activities this year.

Thus the class of 1931 has managed to complete the second lap of its prodigious climb to graduation, and stands on the proverbial threshold of junior year at college. Whether or not they will be consistent with their present policy of indifferentism to tradition, and abolish junior jackets, foster bigger and better term papers in philosophy, and advocate a chess and checker tournament, all remains to be seen.

THE FRESHMAN CLASS

Approximately one hundred and ninety-five freshmen entered in September, the largest enrollment ever made at this campus. Unfortunately, about twenty-five per cent fell along the wayside during the year, but the rest heeded timely advice of the Dean when he addressed the group of yearlings at the beginning of the semester. Now, those who have remained staunch, are happy in the realization that they have overcome what is deemed by many to be the hardest year of college.

Much to the disappointment of the upper classmen, the sophomores decided to abolish the ruling that Freshmen wear green hats. The tradition was abandoned due to the law on hazing, and because it was thought that Loyola should be among the first to abolish the custom which many leading universities have already abolished or intend to abolish.

A fine percentage of the first year students manifested their school spirit by joining the many and various activities which are vital to the best interests of education. Figures obtained show that sixty-six per cent were engaged or interested in the Sodality, forty-eight per cent in Missions, thirty-nine per cent in the Eucharistic Section, thirty-five per cent in Catholic Literature, twenty-two per cent in Basketball, fourteen per cent in Catholic Social Action, twelve per cent in Football, eight per cent in Track, eight per cent in the Loyola News, seven per cent in Debating, six per cent in the Glee Club, two per cent in the Loyolan, two per cent in Dramatics, and five-tenths per cent in the Orchestra. The freshmen displayed great ability in all these activities and were, in a large measure, responsible for the success of these activities. They were especially commended for their work on the Loyola News, in the Sodality, in the Debating Society, and in the two major sports, football and basketball.

The only social event the freshmen class sponsored was the Frosh Frolic.

The second organized class of the School of Sociology, Downtown College, has made its Senior year at Loyola University one to be remembered in future years.

In the early part of the year the 1929 class held a meeting and elected officers. The selection proved satisfactory as those honored with the positions are well known about the entire school. The office of president was bestowed upon Mary C. Wingfield who had acted as chairman. Florence Locke was elected vice-president while the class money was entrusted to Isabel Summers, one of Loyola's busy coeds. Notices of our monthly meetings have been sent out promptly by the secretary, Marie Tangney.

The Downtown Sociology Class has the distinction of being the first class at Loyola University to have all its officers members of the feminine sex. At least we are distinctive.

Many pleasant social affairs have been enjoyed by the Seniors. To Mae Cunningham, the Social Chairman, we are grateful for a delightful bridge party and a gay St. Patrick's affair. These two occasions enabled most of the graduates to become better acquainted with their fellow students.

As this goes to press before many of our activities have taken place we can only say we are eagerly anticipating our luncheon in May, the Senior Dance and Commencement Week in June. Other interesting features are being planned.

The Seniors take this opportunity to thank the Dean, Father Siedenburg, and his associates for their interest in us. Also our good professors for their help and cooperation. Our work is completed but we leave Loyola University with many pleasant memories.

MARY C. WINGFIELD.

"As I grow in years, that faith has been better realized and has become proportionately dearer to me. I have found its worth in great sorrows and in times of public danger. I pity all the more those who do not know it. In an unseen way, which strikes me with wonder, God made me especially study Religion, Law, and Literature, that is, the three things most necessary to the accomplishment of my plan. I have been able to visit those scenes that could enlighten me. I have had the happiness of knowing great Christians, men distinguished in Science and Religion, as well as those who unwittingly serve the cause of faith by the exactitude and soundness of their knowledge. Life is, however, not standing still and I shall have to seize whatever little youth remains. It is full time to write and to keep my eighteen-year-old promise to God."

THE STUDENT COUNCIL OF THE DAY LAW SCHOOL

The third year of the existence of the Day Law Student Council has been more successful than either of the two preceding it. Problems which were new to the former officers were quickly cleared up by the council of this year because of the ever increasing acquaintance with the conditions and means of settling difficulties.

Members of the Student Council are elected by the various classes. The president is elected by students of the entire Day Law Department. As each class is allowed one representative in addition to the president of the class who is automatically a member of the Council the organization is quite democratic, giving each class an equal opportunity.

The purpose of the council is not to attempt to determine the method in which the school shall be managed and the system which shall be adopted but rather a means by which a student may make a suggestion or declare his rights in a sensible and effective manner. The Student Council represents the students as a body politic and by performing its duties in a fair and conscientious manner since its inauguration has won the support and confidence of the students as well as the faculty.

THE LAW CLASS HISTORY—SENIORS 1929

The class has always been a unified group, each member formed an integral part of the whole and action in all activities was ever supported with combined efforts. Dean McCormick, Mr. Rooney, Mr. Steele, have been among the foremost who have instructed our class and guided our uncertain footsteps in the legal pursuit. Their teachings, advice, and counsel, have been invaluable and we proceed forth into the professional world better men, by reason of having come under their influence.

Attempting a brief resume of the class history, we can render but a superficial retrospect of a mighty group. The freshman year proceeded in regular fashion. However, we accomplished notable things. Joe Witry was furnished for the football team and elected to captain the basket-ball squad. The Student-Faculty Banquet, the "Bud" Gorman Memorial, and the Eucharistic Congress, were high-lights of that period and merited our support. During the second anno, there were the annual banquets, the Junior Prom, and the Senior Ball, which would fail at any university if not supported by the sophisticated Juniors. Witry was again loaned to Sachs that he might captain the squad and he brought his charges thru in great style. Then came the Senior Year, Jim Deegan was sent to Sachs that he might replace Witry, who had left to catch for the New York Giants, and the result was phenomenal. The basket-ball team finished the season without a defeat and in that we glory. Jack Toomey was elected President of the Student Council and Deegan given the honor of the Senior Class Presidency. Of course, we had the Student-Faculty Banquet, the Law Banquet, the Senior Ball, and all the affairs which needed executive ability and which must needs be chosen from senior talent.

"There comes a time in the lives of all when friends must part," but we hope that our parting will not be a complete severance either with friends or our Alma Mater but an "au revoir." Loyola has ever been a real educational mother to us and we leave, with deep regret, but feeling confident the men of 1929 will ever be loyal to the faith she has reposed within us and that our success in the legal profession will result in glory to her name.

THE JUNIOR DAY LAW CLASS

Harmony and redolent friendship identified the Junior Day Law Class during the course of the closing university year. The Freshman and Senior years were lead to a great extent by the initiative of the Junior officers.

James O'Dowd was the happy choice for president. Joseph Santucci, vice-president, Joseph Weidemann, treasurer, Helen Newman, secretary, and Thomas Hart, Student Council Delegate, constituted the remainder on the successful ballot. Through the agility of our president, the first major event of the Day Law calendar was properly staged at a west side Democratic organization headquarters. A concerted appeal was made to the other day classes. The response was quite favorable. The affair was largely in the nature of a gentleman's smoker and geniality glowed before the evening ended. Mr. Colager of the Juniors and a prominent Senior distinguished themselves repeatedly.

Comparatively, the attendance of the class at the annual Law Student-Faculty banquet was commendable. The addresses of Father Walsh and Judge Burke were warmly received.

Representation in the newly formed Loyola Union was fully and consistently maintained by Mr. O'Dowd and Mr. Hart. The former faithfully performed the tasks assigned to him by virtue of his membership on the Junior Prom Committee.

In all the major interdepartmental affairs, such as the Junior Prom, Whopee Night, etc., a sizeable ratio of the class evidenced itself. In view of such a salutary class feature, a well-rounded year in the senior classification is confidently anticipated.

As to the scholastic caliber or report of such, this brief narrative has intentionally avoided. Suffice it to say, we are as competent as the average class in that direction.

THE FRESHMAN DAY LAW CLASS

Under the wise guidance of President Cornelius J. Collins the Freshman Class of the Day Law School became one of the most ambitious groups in the entire school. This year the class is the largest Freshman class that has ever entered the Department. It is not fully represented in the above picture.

Mr. Daniel J. Buckley, who received the high distinction of vice-president, took an active part in the meetings and did more than his share of inspiring the students to do bigger and better things. Much of his time was spent giving instructions to the secretary of the class who, although she was anxious to do her bit toward the advancement of the class, never did what the vice-president wanted her to do. Had it not been for the amiable personality of Mr. Paul A. Early dissension might have arisen. However, all were sincere in their intentions and actions and the class, by cooperating closely with the officers made itself the most interesting group, both from the aspect of the outsider and the members of the group themselves, that the law department has known. In spite of their lightness of heart, the students are there to learn what is put before them. The scholarship of the class is high. It is the belief of those who have considered the matter thoroughly, that this friendly feeling of cheer is necessary in every school and for that reason they have allowed it to prevail here.

THE EVENING LAW STUDENT COUNCIL

In a department of a school such as the Downtown College of Loyola University it is a serious and difficult problem to get the different groups united as one student body. Such a task is one which cannot be left to the faculty alone or to the students alone. There must be some sort of a union filled with the zest and enthusiasm of students and yet controlled by the judgment of a wise and cautious executive.

No organization has been so efficient toward uniting the student body as has the Student council of the Evening Law School. Under the leadership of its president, John J. Kelly, a feeling of cooperation was not only made to exist but the Evening Law School, which had been considered not more than a group of clerks with no idea of College spirit, was put under a new light in the eyes of the student body in every department of the university. Far from being a seeker of personal advancement, Mr. Kelly was constantly on the alert, anxious to offer his assistance to every University function, and quick to arouse the students of the department which he represented to cooperate with the others in making Loyola enterprises the successes which they have been.

Mr. Kelly did not have to work alone. He was enthusiastically aided by every other member of the council and by Dean McCormick and Mr. Rooney, secretary of the School of Law. The two last mentioned have been ready at all times to grant whatever privileges and to offer whatever assistance has been necessary toward the successful functioning of the Student Council. It is due largely to them the thanks for the Student Council as it exists today.

SENIOR NIGHT LAW

The students of a night school are usually employed during the day, and their school work is more or less a matter of business. Ordinarily the members never get to know each other intimately, and they consequently have no spirit or sense of loyalty toward their class as a unit or toward their school.

This important lack of spirit, always prevalent among students at night schools, was recognized by the present senior class in its sophomore year. Accordingly, we have each year had a series of banquets or get-together fests of various kinds. The purpose was to promote good-fellowship with the hope of creating enduring friendships which would be a benefit socially and perhaps in later years in a business way.

Most of these affairs will long be remembered and the result has been gratifying. The class has a splendid spirit and the members really know each other. The spirit is not a selfish one, but on the contrary, it manifests itself just as concretely toward the university as a whole as it does toward a purely class benefit.

I do not think that it is polite to indulge in personalities. I am confident, however, that the generous spirit of the class approves of giving credit to some of our acknowledged leaders. As early as our sophomore year, Tom Crane was discovered to be a natural leader. He has twice been class president and upon his refusal to accept the position this year he was elected representative on the student council. He has his own position in the business world; he has been our most active man in student affairs, giving unstintingly of his time and effort; and in addition he is a leader in scholarship. This brief resumé would not be complete without some acknowledgment on the part of the class for his wise direction and for his unselfish labors.

There are a great many others who have been outstanding, but to name all who have co-operated in every way and who have made our class better by their presence would be to call the roll. Suffice to say, that the senior night law class of 1929 is earnest in application to any problem, is unselfish in its loyalty, and is effervescing with good fellowship.

JUNIOR NIGHT LAW

For some reason not clearly understood, unless it be the force of custom or the desire to indulge in the practical application of legal training, the first recorded act of the class was the election of officers. The tally showed the following clearly entitled to pay one dollar for their pictures on this page: Arthur Burke, President; James O'Leary, vice-President; Edna Devlin, Secretary-Treasurer (the latter when, as, and if); Daniel McCarthy, Student Council Representative. To date the persons not elected to office number only your scribe and a fellow who speaks West Side English. Particular mention is due Mr. Burke, who shed luster upon the fair name of our class by tearing himself away from the Municipal Courts and leading the parade of beauty and fashion at the Junior Prom.

Credit is due also to Mr. John J. Kelly of our class, he of the portly mien, whom an enraptured electorate swept into office as President of the Student Council. As president Mr. Kelly has distinguished himself by his organization of the Corridor Police and by his apt technique in turning out lights.

There are many more about whom much could be said but that the exigencies of space forbid. To know these others look below; for further details, consult your neighborhood physiognomist.

James Curry, president of the second year class of the Night Law School, is a true representative of the class. His activity in the past year has shown him to be worthy of his office. Curry completed his pre-legal work on the Lake Shore Campus of the University. While in the Arts College he was active in several activities including debating. After leaving the north side he immediately entered the Night Law School. He is a member of Delta Phi fraternity.

Under the leadership of Curry the sophomore class has been one of the most active in the Downtown School.

THE SOPHOMORE EVENING LAW CLASS

In keeping with the standard of nearly every other class of every other department of Loyola University, the Sophomore Evening Law Class is larger than any of its predecessors. This group, which is not fully represented in the above picture, has been one of the outstanding supporters of every all-university function that has taken place during the year. They are, by the very nature of the class, not in a position where they can offer the most enthusiastic support and the most beneficial help without, by so doing, greatly inconveniencing themselves. For that reason, it is fitting that this class be given a rising vote of thanks by the other departments of the University for the assistance its members have offered in spite of the means which it was necessary for them to take.

The scholastic standing of the members of this class was beyond reproach. While there were only a few who were outstanding in their class work, at the same time, there were practically none who fell below the average. The work covered was interesting and the entire class maintained constant alert attention. This was the result of the perfect presentation of the matter on the part of the professors and may be considered as the indirect cause of the feeling of fellowship and good will in the class.

FRESHMAN NIGHT LAW

A registration of fifty-nine pupils, out of which number fifteen hold college degrees, together with the more important fact that out of this registration, fourteen members received their preparatory legal training at Loyola Pre-Legal Evening school, constitute the bid of the class of 1932 for recognition.

Late in September forty-three young men and three young women began the four year course which leads to the degree of Bachelor of Law. It is certainly very encouraging to note that our number was increased by some thirteen members at the beginning of the second semester, out of which number fifty-five pupils are in actual attendance.

As to the class itself we have thirteen of our number registered from the School of Arts and Science and two from the School of Sociology. The freshmen class of the Evening Law School, therefore, is composed of fifty-nine members, about twenty-nine of whom are products of some department of Loyola university.

The Freshman Night Law Class bids fair to being a credit to Loyola university and it is our ardent hope that three years from now a goodly number of our class will have survived the test.

LESLIE J. WALSH.

"I do not repudiate any forms of government; I regard them as different instruments to make men better and happier. I believe in authority as a means, in liberty as a means, in charity as an end.

Two kinds of government are based on two diametrically opposite principles. One is the exploitation of all for the advantage of one: that is the monarchy of Nero, which I detest. The other is the sacrifice of one for the benefit of all: that is the monarchy of St. Louis, which I revere and love. One is the exploitation of all for the benefit of a faction: that is the Republic of the Terror, which I utterly condemn. The other is the sacrifice of each for the advantage of all: that is the Christian republic of the primitive Church of Jerusalem. It is also perhaps that of the end of all time, the last and the highest state to which humanity can aspire."

THE COMMERCE STUDENT COUNCIL

One of the most successful of Loyola's four student councils is that of the Commerce Department.

It is made up of an extraordinarily large group in an effort to make the student representation as equal and as fair as possible. All of the members meet regularly in the evening and since the Department is confined to that time for all of the classes there is practically no trouble in getting the Council together.

This fact is an important reason for the success with which the group has met. A unified spirit prevails here as it does in the entire Commerce Department. There is that feeling of oneness that has proved itself a necessary element to the creating and maintaining of college spirit.

The Commerce School, under the leadership of these men who comprise its student council, has grown high in the esteem of the rest of the students of the University. When all-University functions are looking for support they invariably find it here first. The Commerce Student Council has established itself, it has made itself effective. Therefore the students of the entire university unite in wishing it continued success.

LOYOLA UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF COMMERCE

Entering the Commerce School during the first stages of its development, the class of 1929 has contributed much to the growth of this department. It was their duty to continue the work of the class of 1928, which task was taken up with enthusiasm and performed with satisfaction. Student activities, both of the University as a whole and the Commerce School particularly, were given the whole hearted support of each member of the class during his four years of attendance.

Many true and lasting friendships have been formed as a result of our four years of association. As evidence of this fraternities have been organized, and will continue to flourish even after graduation, positively assuring the continuance of our friendship and class associations. The Student-Faculty Banquet held on December 31, at the City Club was a decided success and nearly every member of the class contributed his share, both by assistance in the arrangements and by attendance.

The graduating class of this year provides quite a contrast to the one that started as freshman four years ago. Many have transferred to the law school, some have moved to another city on account of business relations, others have taken only special courses and then there are a few who have of necessity, discontinued the course.

Thus we look back over four years at Loyola and review it with justifiable pride. May the Commerce School thrive and maintain the enviable position of respect it has acquired in the great commercial field, may the class of 1929 remain true sons of Loyola and may they, in all their undertakings keep in mind its motto—"Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam."

THE JUNIOR COMMERCE CLASS

For the past year the Junior Commerce Class has been advancing steadily both in determined effort and in producing results. The class, which is not fully represented in the picture above, is one of the largest Loyola has ever had. The Commerce department is one of the youngest and certainly the fastest growing department Loyola has at the present time. Each year the enrollment leaps out of bounds. It was only a couple of years ago that the introduction of the Commerce School necessitated the removal of the Downtown College to new and larger headquarters. It seems, judging from the rapid growth of this class, that it will soon be necessary to move again into a still larger building.

The group that comprises the Junior Class is made up of men and women who are employed during the day in all sorts of positions. Some are twenty-dollar-a-week clerks. Others are two hundred-dollar-a-week professional men and women. It is certain that no matter what they are they feel that their time at the evening classes is well spent.

The Junior Commerce Class, in spite of the fact that other interests occupy most of its time, abounds in school spirit and is always first to respond to student activities. Its members have helped develop the Commerce Club into an admirable organization and with the grit and determination displayed by the various people in the class it is sincerely believed that someday some of the leaders in the Commercial world will be able to say that they belonged to the class of '30.

THE SOPHOMORE COMMERCE CLASS

During the past year the Sophomore Commerce Class has excelled all former sophomore classes both in size and scholarship. It, like all other classes in the Commerce department, has increased in size each year and no doubt the class next year will surpass this one. The class is not fully represented in the picture above.

Coming as the students do from every walk of life, meeting each other three times a week, and exchanging interesting, if not diverging views and experiences on so many different subjects, the students receive a wealth of broadening information from each other and in many ways this association with ambitious and congenial companions, both men and women, has an educational value which comes close to rivaling that of the classes. Many a warm friendship has grown out of this class already even though it may seem at first sight to be merely a place of extra toil, to be taken as a necessary evil after a hard day at work.

A fine spirit of cooperation has existed between the professors and the students, not to mention that which has made itself apparent among the students themselves. They have been loyal supporters of every activity in the school and, though thanks cannot be received individually, it is the firm belief of every member of the class that the enjoyment gained from offering his support has been thanks enough.

THE CHICAGO COLLEGE OF DENTAL SURGERY

The forty-fifth year of the Chicago College of Dental Surgery has been one of the most successful since the existence of the school. It is one of the newest departments of the University, having united with it in 1924, and, as such, Loyola is more than proud of its fast growth.

Pre-dental work is offered part in the dental building, located on the West Side in Chicago's great health service center and part in the Downtown College at 28 North Franklin Street. In this course the student is placed in immediate contact with medical and advanced dental students, sharing their interests and ambitions.

Two regular courses are offered in the Dental School, one of three years' work and another of four. In addition, post-graduate courses are offered to selected students.

The Dental School, while a strictly collegiate atmosphere prevails, is a center of professional ambitions. Students of this department have selected their goal and work toward it with unflinching and determined interest. The standing which it has reached in the realm of dental education has made it an intellectual center for those of the profession.

"OUR PRESIDENT"

Just as every famous edifice has a foundation on which it rests securely through its existence, so has every class a foundation on which it can depend for the fulfillment of its expectations. This tribute the Class of 1929 appropriately extends to Miss Essie Anglum, its President.

It was a master stroke of a group of probationers back in the September of '26 that swayed the class to make Miss Anglum "Our President." With her and by her we have reached almost unforeseen goals, gained unprecedented achievements.

During the three years that Miss Anglum has been the President of the Class of '29, the force of her character has become more evident to each one of us. By her best efforts she has transfused to us a spirit of loyalty and responsibility. Her intuition, her integrity, her amiable solicitude and her creative faculty have led us through the thick and thin of the battle of the past three years.

With all due respect, the Class of '29 extends to Miss Anglum a rising vote of thanks and as we stand at the parting of our ways, we give her our wishes for continued success.

The New Nurses' Home

ST. BERNARD SCHOOL OF NURSING HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF 1929

On September 15th, 1926, we entered the portals of St. Bernard's School of Nursing with a firm determination to win our way up to the ranks of Graduate Nurses and now, we are about to reach that achievement for which we have so hopefully looked forward to.

During our stay here we have experienced many never-to-be-forgotten pleasures; have participated in the numerous activities that were made possible for us by the whole-hearted co-operation of our dear Directress, Sister Jarrell and witnessed the completion of the Nurses' New Home which was dedicated on Nov. 21st, 1928, by His Eminence, George Cardinal Mundelein.

We are now nearing the goal of our ambition and justly hope that we will continue to carry with us that which we have learned during our stay at St. Bernard's. However, we do not intend to leave our Alma Mater's sheltering arms for long, but plan to continue our further education through her time-honored University—Loyola.

To Reverend Mother Murray and all our dear devoted Sisters we bid adieu. Our life's work is just beginning and while our hearts beat high in loving gratitude to God in allowing us to reach the long desired goal, still there is a tinge of sorrow at the thought of leaving our dear Alma Mater who has been a good kind mother to us and we will always cherish and strive to emulate the wonderful example of Christ-like charity and kindness of the Sisters of St. Bernard's.

And to her, our cherished Directress, Sister Jarrell, she who has been our inspiration, our friend and our counsellor, we shall never forget her kindness and solicitude for us at all times. She won us with her charming and gracious personality on the eve of our entrance here and has endeared herself to us throughout these three years, and we regret leaving her mantle of protection; and greatly appreciate her untiring zeal—she who has instructed so many unto justice may she shine as the stars in the firmament.

The Entrance

ST. ELIZABETH'S HOSPITAL SCHOOL FOR NURSES

During the past year it became possible, with the raising of educational standards, to make the St. Elizabeth Hospital School for Nurses an integral part of the Loyola University School of Medicine. By so doing, the educational rank of the Hospital becomes higher and the expanse of the Medical Department of the University becomes greater.

The nurses in training are given the advantage of the professorship of men of more advanced training in the medical profession. At the same time, the young students of medicine are supplied with a hospital of high caliber in which to observe cases. The union of the Hospital with the University is a distinct step forward for both institutions.

This year a new group of young nurses will go forth into the field of duty carrying with them the knowledge and faith they have received during the past three years. They have been trained in the profession and in the faith. It is their duty to carry forth the ideals of the Hospital and the University. They may work always with the confidence that their Alma Mater is ever ready to support them in their actions.

The Old St. Anne's

ST. ANNE'S HOSPITAL

"Facta non Verba"—deeds not words. Such a simple little sentence, but what a world of meaning. It was deeds not words that made possible, this beautiful new hospital of ours.

Hard work for those sisters who came out into the "prairie," as this vicinity was known a quarter century ago, when ground was first broken for Saint Anne's Hospital—a struggle through the loneliness that must have been theirs during those first years, but a struggle that has been more than worth while, which has brought forth one of the most beautiful hospitals in the northwest.

We, who trained in the "old Saint Anne's," loved it, and love it still, for its beauty, its peace—the dear old park with its lagoon and its grotto. But we, the class of 1929, the first to graduate from the new Saint Anne's, feel that we have as our Alma Mater, not only the old with its dear memories, but also the new, with its splendid promise of better things to come.

OAK PARK HOSPITAL

CLASS MATES—MEMBERS OF THE FACULTY

It is with mingled feelings of joy and of regret that the class of 1929 approaches the day of days that fulfills the hopes of years. We can view the past with satisfaction realizing the difficulties we have conquered, the victories we have won. The favored graduates have known the power of united effort, sensed the joy of lofty purpose, but above all during our course of training at Oak Park Hospital we have understood how blessed we were to receive our training in a Catholic institution under the efficient direction of the Sisters of Misericorde assisted by a staff of doctors eminently qualified to fit us for our work in life.

Often we spurred each other on by the thought, "We are nearing graduation," yet the parting from teachers and from one another seemed always in the dim future. Now as we sight the turn of the road and separate paths reach out before us we feel a "pang in our rejoicing," a reluctance to begin that fuller, freer life for which we have been preparing. On the morrow each alone must press forward.

One of the chief tests by which the merit of an institution is measured is the loyalty of its graduates to the ideals set before them.

To you, Mother Mary of Jesus, to you, Sister St. Vincent, our cherished Superintendent, to the teaching staff, to all at Oak Park Hospital who have labored unremittingly that we might be enriched with better gifts we owe a debt of gratitude that we can never hope to pay.

One thank offering we make "the promise to live as worthy exponents of your teaching, remembering that our loyalty to all you have taught us to be will bring added glory to our beloved Alma Mater.

Our farewell shall not sever the real bond of our union, the bond of trust and love. Let us pledge fidelity to prayer—prayer for one another that we remain true to the principles of Catholic womanhood, prayer for those whose abiding interest and fostering care have made possible this happy day of graduation.

The freshman class of Oak Park Hospital is the largest first year class that ever enrolled at the nurses' training school of that hospital. Every year more and more high school graduates are taking up the nursing vocation in this institution.

Oak Park is represented in the LOYOLAN this year for the first time. The Hospital is fully accredited to the University, as are the other four which are represented in the Nursing section of the book. The work done in the training schools of these hospitals may be applied toward a degree from Loyola University. A large percentage of the Registered Nurses make use of the opportunity and by attending the Downtown College are able to receive an academic degree in a short period.

“We are too young to take an active part in the social struggle. Shall we then remain inert in the midst of a world which is suffering and groaning? No. A preparatory way is open to us. Before doing public good we can try to do good to a few: before regenerating France, we can relieve some of its poor. So I would like all the young people with head and heart to unite for some charitable work and to form throughout the country a vast generous association for the relief of the people.”

ALUMNI
FOREWORD

The Alumni Association of Loyola University has completed another year of successful achievements, most important of which has been the renewed interest as manifested by the steps taken toward reorganizing it.

On September 20, 1928, a meeting of a reorganizing committee appointed by the chairman in accordance with the wishes of an interesting group of Alumni was held at the Brevoort Hotel to consider the plans for the formation of a revived Loyola University Alumni Association.

Through the efforts of a sub-committee appointed at this meeting, a revision of the by-laws of the St. Ignatius Alumni Association in accordance with the principles developed by the evening's discussion was effected. Soon this sub-committee drafted a constitution and the hope is expressed that with the coming years the Alumni Association of the various colleges of Loyola will assume its full importance in the life of the university.

HISTORY

Fifty-nine years ago the Alumni Association of Loyola had its unofficial beginning. It was in that year that the first class was graduated from St. Ignatius College. For several years, because of the small number of members, the organization was relatively inactive. In 1895 the Alumni Association was formally organized and has been a potent factor in the history of the University since that time.

When the University became co-educational an Alumnae Association was formed. Although this group is not large it has been exceptionally active and has been a great aid to the general Alumni Association.

A year ago Reverend James J. Mertz, S.J., was appointed as the Director of the Alumni Association. The appointment was made in order that the organization might become more closely unified and more active. Under his direction and under the management of Robert Morris, the Alumni secretary, the Association has progressed rapidly in the last year.

Among the achievements of the Alumni Association was the erection of the Alumni Gymnasium. The support of the members in every activity of the University has been one of the most outstanding contributions made by any group.

ROBT. MORRIS
Secretary

THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

The Alumni Association of Loyola University has grown to such large numbers in the past several years, that it was found necessary this year to found separate and distinct departments at each of the various colleges. The general association is formed by the representation of five members of each department to form a single body. The first meeting of the year was on September 20, 1928, when it was decided to adopt a constitution and draw a plan for the reorganization of the body. The object of this and the several other meetings held during the year was to unite the Alumni at the various departments into a strong central organization.

The annual homecoming celebration was staged with much success and more enthusiasm. Then on December 20, 1928, the Athletic Banquet was tendered to the football players, while a general meeting and banquet is to be held during commencement week of this year. This has been the activity of the general Alumni group.

The association of the Law school, has made real progress through the various meetings held during the year, and as a climax to the year's activities, staged the Law Alumni Banquet at the Midland Club in April, 1929. The Law graduates have been exceedingly generous in their support of the Alumni activities and promise well for further progress in the way of social functions. The officers of the Law group are as follows: President, Judge Phillip F. Sullivan; Vice-President, William Campbell; Secretary, George A. Lane, Jr.; Treasurer, Walter Butler; Chairman, Women's Committee, Mary V. Kelly.

No less was the activity of the Dental Alumni. Various meetings were held, as was a banquet later in the year. The department is prospering well under the direction of the following list of officers: President, Dr. E. C. Pendleton; Vice-President, Dr. Ida W. Williams; Secretary, Dr. E. P. Bolger; Treasurer, Dr. Harold Penny; Editor, Dr. Robert W. McNulty; Board of Directors, Dr. Joseph Wiedder, Dr. Harold Olffe, Dr. Lester Clow.

The Medical School has a very energetic organization as have the Commerce and the Arts groups. The Arts group, however, has been tardy in its reorganization, probably due to the fact that it is so closely akin to the larger central association that the activity of one group blends itself into that of the other to such an extent that it is usually hard to define whether an activity of the Alumni is that of the central organization or of the Arts Department.

The Alumnae have done several notable things during the current year, most important of which was the Annual Home-Coming Luncheon. Saturday afternoon, April 20th, proved that the enthusiasm and loyalty of Loyola alumnae is no mere ephemeral thing, for if ever there was a day when the weather was at its worst, that day was the day set for the Annual Home-Coming Luncheon. But in spite of drenching rain, the alumnae came in by twos and threes and in crowds to the Lake Shore Athletic Club, literally carrying out the invitation to "come and bring your friends and meet your friends!" After the luncheon the program was begun. On the general theme of "Opportunities for Loyola Alumnae," three-minute talks were given by various alumnae, illustrating the special fields of endeavor into which the university's graduates have gone. Father Schmidt, Dean of the Graduate School, spoke of the growing influence of women in the work of the world and voiced a tribute to Father Siedenbug for his vision and courage in the founding and developing of the School of Sociology.

Under the directorship of Father James J. Mertz, S.J., and the secretarial management of Mr. Robert Morris, the Alumni Association has become a valuable asset to the university and has given financial aid to the numerous projects fostered by the university graduates.

David F. Bremner, Mary Agnes Amberg, Honorable Thomas J. Walsh,
President Robert M. Kelley.

1928 COMMENCEMENT

The fifty-eighth annual commencement of Loyola University was distinctly honored with the presence of Honorable Thomas J. Walsh, United States Senator from Montana, who acted as speaker of the day. Mr. Walsh's topic was "The Outlawry of War Treaty," which proved such a masterpiece of oratory as well as a collection of educational data, that the speech was reproduced in whole in the Autumn issue of the Loyola Quarterly.

The commencement itself included the presentation of some hundred and seventy academic degrees, one hundred twenty professional degrees, nine graduate, and four honorary degrees. The academic degrees were divided between those of Bachelor of Science in Medicine, and those conferred directly by the Arts and Science Department. Seventy-one graduates of the Medical School were made Doctors of Medicine, while an even fifty received either the Bachelor or the Doctor (J.D.) degree in Law. Three scholars of the Graduate department merited the Master of Arts degree, two were made Doctors of Philosophy, while four others distinguished themselves in the scientific professions sufficiently to receive the Master of Science degree either in Medicine or in Dentistry.

The four individuals whom Loyola honored with the conferring of the degree of Doctor of Laws (LL.D.) were Mary Agnes Amberg, David F. Bremner, Honorable Thomas J. Walsh, and Rev. William M. Magee, S.J.

For sixteen years Mary Amberg, as Head Resident of the Guardian Angels Center, has influenced the lives of thousands, and ten times that number have shared her charity and understanding. She has always put the concerns of Christ in the first place and so blended scientific technique with supernatural charity unto the product of a perfect work. Mary Amberg has added to a high heritage the consecration of a life in order to give a fuller life to the unprivileged of every race and creed and to give to Church and State more worthy citizens. Loyola University felt that it honors itself when it honors this Samaritan of the twentieth century.

David F. Bremner is a successful and high principled business man who for a quarter of a century has been identified with many notable endeavors to advance the causes of education, of charity and of community welfare. He has been a beneficiary and a patron of religious education as well as a benefactor and advisor of Loyola University. As an individual, a parent and a citizen, he has exemplified the qualities of leadership which Loyola University has ever sought to inspire.

Honorable Thomas J. Walsh, in youth a successful and a distinguished member of the bar of the State of Wisconsin; elected to the Senate of the United States by the unanimous vote of Democrats and Republicans alike in both houses of the legislature of the State of Montana; as a senator, a champion of right and justice, a relentless enemy of corruption, the defender of the public lands of the nation; named by many as their choice for the Presidency of the United States and considered worthy of that dignity by all; his life, both private and public, above all reproach and consecrated to the service of his fellowman; an honor to his race, to his nation, and to his Church.

Rev. William M. Magee, S.J., is a Jesuit educator and administrator, who has consecrated his life to the cause of Catholic education and who, on account of his abilities and achievements has been entrusted with the destinies of an outstanding university of our country, Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

The 1928 commencement, besides being notable for the large number of degrees conferred and for the distinct honor of featuring Mr. Walsh as the speaker, stands out also for two other factors, worthy at least of passing mention. For one, it was the first time in several years that the program was conducted in the Alumni Gymnasium rather than out on the campus as in previous years. The really significant innovation in the commencement was the formal pledge taken by all the candidates for degrees, which is in consonance with that supreme principle under which all true Loyolans have been trained, "All to the Greater Glory of God": "I solemnly pledge myself: To hold this degree as a sacred trust; to serve God and my fellow man; to keep my honor untarnished; to be loyal to my country and my flag; to be faithful to my Alma Mater until death."

The Cudahy Memorial Library

THE CUDAHY MEMORIAL LIBRARY

The Library building, Loyola University, is a gift of Mr. E. A. Cudahy, to be dedicated to his wife, Elizabeth M. Cudahy.

The main reading room, 101 feet long by 44 feet wide and 40 feet high, will have a seating capacity of 200. The interior walls of this room will be faced with Mankato stone while the clear story windows, affording light from three sides, will be of leaded glass in soft color tones.

A clear span ceiling, formed of monolithic reinforced concrete arch and cantilever construction, will be finished with ornamental concrete surfaces treated in a colorful design. Concealed lighting running around the inner rim of the cantilever portion of the ceiling will be arranged as a part of the general decorative scheme as well as a highly efficient and economical means of illumination.

Stack space, with an ultimate capacity of 250,000 volumes, is provided by the plans, with the intention of housing approximately 150,000 volumes at this time. Each stack room level is arranged with a series of cubicles, with each window opening affording a place for study with access directly to the books. A periodical room faces the Lake at the east end of the building.

Besides the practical working requirements of the building, there will be a treasure room for rare and precious volumes, ten study rooms, and a lecture or class room.

The building will be thoroughly modern fireproof construction throughout. Exterior walls will be of limestone for all sides of the building, thus presenting a monumental appearance which will be a lasting tribute to the donor and a worthy contribution to the science and art of building construction. It was designed by A. N. Rebori, Architect, of the firm of Rebori, Wentworth, Dewey & McCormick, Inc.

THE DONOR OF THE LIBRARY

EDWARD A. CUDAHY

Edward A. Cudahy was born in Milwaukee, Wis., on February 1, 1860. At the age of thirteen he left school and entered the employ of the John Plankinton Company, one of the early Milwaukee packing concerns. Possessed of a physique and mentality beyond his years, young Cudahy quickly won a name for himself in the packing industry. In 1877 with his older brother Michael, he became associated with P. D. Armour in Chicago and ten years later was made a member of the firm of Armour & Cudahy at South Omaha, Nebraska. Anxious to form a business of their own the Cudahys took over the Armour interests in 1890 and established The Cudahy Packing Company. Edward Cudahy became vice-president and general manager of the new firm, which position he filled until the death of his brother Michael in 1910, when he became president of his company. In January, 1926, he retired from the presidency in favor of his son, E. A. Cudahy, Jr., and was elected chairman of the board of directors.

Mr. Cudahy's biography is written in his achievements. By the force of his character and his energy he has advanced from the humble surroundings of his early youth to an honored place as the leader of a great industry. In the business world he is respected for his integrity and his thorough knowledge of the calling to which his life has been devoted, and among the members of his own organization he is held in high esteem for his fair dealing, his kindly nature, his ready sympathy and his loyalty to the men who have worked with him in the building up of the establishment that bears his name.

In 1884 Mr. Cudahy married Miss Elizabeth Murphy of Milwaukee. With their son, Mr. E. A. Cudahy, Jr., and their four daughters, Mrs. F. E. Wilhelm, Mrs. A. H. Niblack, Mrs. Vaughan Spalding, and Mrs. Alice Cudahy McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Cudahy occupy a prominent place in the social and philanthropic life of Chicago, where they have resided for the past eighteen years.

THE MADONNA DELLA STRADA CHAPEL

The above sketch gives an idea how the interior of the Madonna Della Strada Chapel will look after its completion. The chaste simplicity of the decorations, as well as the beautiful harmony of the constituent architectural embellishments are but suggested in this drawing, as the actual beauty of the proposed structure can only be imagined and not illustrated.

The chapel will have seats for about one thousand students. This will obviate the present necessity of seeking neighboring churches on Friday mornings for student devotions, as well as eliminate the obstacle of insufficient room for all the students, a condition that now exists with the use of the present chapel in the Administration building.

The main altar will be of the Baldachino, or canopy type. There will be five shrines on the sides of the chapel. A large one will be consecrated to the North American martyrs, while the four others will be dedicated as follows: one to St. Ignatius, another to St. Francis Xavier, still another to St. Therese, the Little Flower of Jesus, and the last one to the Three Youthful Saints.

Mankato stone will make up the interior decoration of the walls and columns, while the ceiling will be constructed of chestnut wood in the pattern sketched above.

In general, the architectural scheme will be closely akin to that of the proposed library, and in harmony with it will provide another augmentation of the existing beauty of Loyola's Lake Shore Campus.

THE MADONNA DELLA STRADA CHAPEL

Rev. James J. Mertz, S. J., promises that the long awaited, and much anticipated chapel on the Lake Shore Campus will become a reality before two more years have passed. Ever since the Arts and Science department of Loyola University was moved to the Lake Shore Campus, it has been the cherished ambition and hope of the entire student body to have a chapel which they might call distinctly their own. In those years religious activities had been confined to neighboring churches and the chapel in the Administration building. But as the enrollment increased, so the accommodations decreased. Three years ago Father Mertz saw the crying need for the erection of a new, larger chapel and accordingly took steps in making preparations for it. Plans were made, funds were collected, hopes were kindled, until now the dream of the chapel is soon to be realized.

Almost simultaneous with the plans for the chapel came the announcement of the donation of $300,000 for the erection of a library on the Lake Shore Campus. Hopes for a Greater Loyola began to look brighter than ever. Two more buildings added to those already on the Campus will soon make the Loyola Campus one of the most beautiful of any Catholic college in the Middle West.

But the original chapel plans could not remain as they were. There was to be a distinctly novel architecture in the new library, one which, if placed near the chapel built as the original plans provided, would put the two buildings out of balance, and thus create a discord in the present harmony of architecture at Loyola. Something had to be done. At first it was tried to adapt the library to the chapel, but the efforts were futile, and the unproductive of any real architectural compromise.

Accordingly, the original plans for the chapel were changed to conform to the new idea to be applied in the library. In about two years from now one will be able to view from the outer drive the auspicious Administration building, flanked on either side by the chapel and the library.

Father Mertz has been working hard on his coming chapel, yet funds are still inadequate with which to start building. The many generous people who have already contributed to the fund realize that things cannot be done or begun until enough money is in. Perhaps it is interesting to know that work on churches or chapels cannot be started until practically the entire cost of the construction is on hand. This ought to conciliate impatient students who complain that the chapel will be ready only for the fellows who come later.

Particular credit and thanks for the untiring work involved in collecting funds for the erection of this edifice must of necessity go to Father Mertz, the man who is in complete charge of the operation of the new structure. For the past few years he has given his time, energy and effort in this direction. The whole-hearted zeal he displayed in the matter of furthering the progress of the chapel by collecting funds, by making plans, and adapting them to the new library, is certainly deserving of much praise and thanks.

"Let me, however, say that there are but two schools, Philosophy and Religion. Philosophy has its inspirations. It knows, but does not love, God. It has never caused a single one of those loving tears to fall, which come to the eye of a Catholic in Holy Communion, whose incomparable sweetness and consolation is worth the sacrifice of life. If I, poor and weak as I am, have known that sweetness, what will it be with you, whose character is so lofty and whose heart is so good. You would find in it the interior evidence before which all doubts flee. Faith is an act of virtue and therefore an act of the will. We must will to believe, we must surrender our soul, and then God gives light superabundantly."

LOYOLA LIFE

The students of the University of Paris who had grouped themselves around Ozanam gathered frequently. The social pleasures of the group consisted chiefly in conversation and discussions. Ozanam lived for a time on the second floor of an humble rooming house. As he had only one chair his friends were often seen carrying their own chairs when coming to visit him.

ACTIVITIES

Ozanam was interested in the revival of the great French dramatists. He was an admirer of Racine and other noted dramatists. The stage at this time was in a degraded condition and Ozanam was instrumental in an attempt to revive it.

FOREWORD

The present school-year has seen the student publications of Loyola University continuing in the traditions of the past. Those traditions now demand, for their adequate support, a great amount of hard physical labor on the part of the editorial staffs, a strong purpose, and a real idealism. In the complicated processes of writing, editing, composing, printing, and distributing, the services of many willing students are required. These services cannot be fitful and irregular: they must be steady, consistent, and loyal. Each of the three student publications has exacted the fullest quantity of such work: the Quarterly by maintaining its quality and usefulness as an undergraduate literary organ; the News by becoming one of the largest and liveliest college weeklies; the LOYOLAN by living up to the high standards set by its predecessors and by realizing certain advances which, for former editorial boards, remained only unfulfilled dreams. No earnest student will regret the energy he has spent on this work. The practical literary training, the opportunity for independent judgment and constructive thinking, and the necessity of living up to a rigorous editorial program will stand among the best lessons he carries away from college. Work of this kind can never claim to supplant the class-room and lecture, but it supplements them in a way which becomes increasingly beneficial in the light of the practical demands of American life.

HISTORY

With the exception of the Loyola Quarterly, the publications of the University are of recent origin. The LOYOLAN made its first appearance in 1924 as an historical chronicle of the University to that time, and gave a brief resumé of the scholastic year 1923-24. Since that time the book has progressed to the position it now holds of one of the First Class yearbooks of the country. The rating has twice been won in the National Scholastic Press Association contest.

The Loyola Quarterly was first issued in 1888 but that publication is now obscure. In 1901, a regular magazine known as The Collegian made its appearance. The publication was continued and became more and more interesting. In 1922 it was advanced to its present size and the name was changed to The Loyola Quarterly. In quality and quantity of material the book took an unquestionable advance over its predecessors and today is not surpassed by any magazines reaching us from the older and larger universities.

1925 saw the coming of another publication to the University, the Loyola News. For some time there had been a need of a weekly publication and this need was fulfilled with the coming of the News. It made its first appearance as a mimeographed sheet and progressed through various stages until it is now being published as an eight column paper.

THE LOYOLAN

THE NINETEEN TWENTY-NINE LOYOLAN, the sixth volume in the history of the publication, is an attempt to carry on the tradition of preceding volumes and to attain a greater degree of perfection from the literary and artistic viewpoint. While we have not yet reached the goal of the ideal annual the staff feels that the work of this year is another step toward the book which will some time be heralded as the peer of university year books.

In an effort to continue the excellence attained by the NINETEEN TWENTY-EIGHT

LOYOLAN considerable time has been given to perfecting the ideas incorporated in that volume and to improving, wherever possible, the format, the art, and the accounts of activities. Last year's book marked such an advance over preceding volumes that the present staff encountered difficulty in making as great a stride forward as last year's staff made.

The theme of this volume and the art with which it is portrayed is the manner employed by the present staff in surpassing the efforts of predecessors. The theme of the book, Frédéric Ozanam, has a special significance for Loyola. In addition to the fact that it is appropriate it also gives an opportunity for artistic treatment seldom found in a university annual. The etchings used to portray the theme in the opening section and on the division pages are entirely new for annuals and add prestige and dignity to the entire book. The artist, working with the staff, has tried to present a story of the outstanding events of the life of the great Catholic layman who is about to be recognized by the Church as a saint.

A new staff policy was adopted this year in an effort to systematize the routine office work and to speed up the necessary details. While in other years a large staff has been called for work this year's staff was cut down to a minimum. By so doing it is possible to place responsibility for every detail and thus insure more careful work. The efficiency of the present plan has played a large part in the success of the book.

The staff of the 1929 book is small but deserves the commendation of the entire student body. Richard O'Connor, the managing editor, has not only performed the duties of business manager but has taken charge of all photography, of the nursing section, and of the general details of the book. The position of Senior Editor has been admirably filled by John Bryant, a veteran of three years on the staff. In addition to his work with the seniors he has also supervised the Life section and has aided in developing new men on various sections. In the Junior class Bob Thomson and Courtney Ryan proved to be excellent material. Through their efforts the entire Athletic Section was sent to the press in record time. The Juniors also supplied the fraternity editor, Edward Healy, whose work was on a par with the other members of the class. The outstanding sophomore of the staff was Paul O'Connor. He served as general assistant to the editor and had charge of the freshman who were fighting for recognition on the staff. John Bruun and Anthony Tomczak also showed promise of a great future in Loyola's publications. To the other members of the staff and to those of other departments, especially to Jim Bremner of the Medical school and Jim Neary of the Commerce school the editor expresses his sincere thanks for the excellent work they have done and for the success of the book which, in no small measure, is due to their efforts.

THE LOYOLA QUARTERLY

One who attempts a summary of a year of activity on the Quarterly, is, by the nature of the case, somewhat at a loss. The purpose and achievements of a school, while they represent a definite part of the institution's program, are not easily reduced to exact terms. However, in an appraisal of the Quarterly at the end of another year, it may not be wholly beside the point merely to restate its general cause and ideals.

The Quarterly has two aspects: it is a training field for the penman-to-be and it is a record, a depository for the thought of the University. As a complement to the truism that "the only way to learn to write is to write" we may set the psychological fact that "the only real reason to write is for publication." A fascination and a command there is in the printed page that invariably draws the very best out of the amateur, and it is this essential factor in literary training that the magazine addresses itself.

Not less important is the second function of college magazine, that of mirror and chronicle of the intellectual life of the school. A crystallization of ideas and ideals is essential to an intelligent student life, not only to clarify issues for those concerned, but also to provide a background for the constant transition of college life. Such a background must include not only discussion of the particular problems of the period, but a definite measurement of achievements in the established forms of thought and writing as well.

As part of these general purposes Volume Twenty-six must be considered. Of its particular characteristics we feel happiest in the emphasis that it has placed on a definitely Catholic thought and literary standard.

THE LOYOLA NEWS

More complete and workable organization is the outstanding achievement in the development of the Loyola News during the year 1928-29.

Under the three editors, J. Francis Walsh, Frank Conley and Francis Melody, the Loyola News was able to assume with considerable confidence the title of "The World's Greatest Catholic College Newspaper."

The News

The increase in efficiency of the News staff was made possible by the establishment of a class in Journalism. Most of the staff members from the Lake Shore Campus student body were enrolled in the class, and their contributions formed the greater part of the material that made up the paper. Outside the Journalism class only freshman and upper classmen of exceptional ability were counted as staff members and allowed to participate in both the reportorial and business departments of the paper.

During the year the paper changed printing presses, which resulted in an increase in the size from seven columns to the standard eight column daily newspaper size.

In February the staff of the News was changed when an editorial board was formed and a position of managing editor created. The managing editor's duties were the supervision of the activities of the campus editors. Francis Melody was the first Managing Editor. The editorial board, formed of five men, Frank Doheny, Francis J. Walsh, Edward Kelly, Francis Melody and Frank Conley, determined the editorial policy of the News and planned many of the editorials that were widely reprinted in contemporary college newspapers. Francis Melody succeeded Frank Conley as editor in April.

Aside from the routine work of news gathering, members of the staff were able to promote athletic events of intramural character. Perhaps the largest of these events to be staged was the intramural basketball tournament in which teams from nearly all departments of the university were entered. The basketball tourney was directed by John Bruun and Leo Sheehan.

The Annual Tennis Tournament, sponsored by the News and directed by Francis Melody opened the sport year at Loyola while the Horseshoe tourney, also sponsored by the News and directed by Leo Sheehan, completed the athletic calendar.

In the future the News can only continue in its progress. Unification of the departments of the university in its news columns has become a reality; talented men are on its list of feature writers; copy, advertising, and circulation have all increased so that a constant weeding of all three is necessary. The progress of the past points to the future of promise and still higher achievements for the News.

OTHER PUBLICATIONS

Besides the three major publications of the university, there are a number of others of varying types. Of these the most important are Della Strada, the Students' Handbook, the Bur, the Dentos, the Ho Hum Book, the Loyola Educational Digest and the Loyola Educational Index.

Della Strada is a monthly newspaper published by Father Mertz in the interests of the chapel drive. It gives information about the progress of the work, the schedule of future events, and every issue contains a message from Father Mertz in his inimitable style. It is circulated among all friends and patrons of the Madonna Della Strada Chapel.

The Students' Handbook made its first appearance at the Arts and Science department September, 1927. It contains the features of a guidebook with an instruction manual for the new student, giving information about the college, its traditions, etc., and also giving all the necessary information about scholastic and disciplinary regulations. It appeared under the auspices of the Student Association, and was circulated around many different universities of the country. At this time over three hundred and fifty complimentary notices have been received regarding it.

The Ho Hum Book appeared last spring, under the auspices of the Loyola News, edited by William Schoen, "Will" of his famous column "Ho Hum," in the News. It consists of a compendium of the best contributions which appear in his column during the course of the year.

The Dentos is the yearbook of the Dental department. It antedates the Loyolan by many years, though considerably smaller in size, and for a long time has been the medium by which the junior class essays to record the doings of a year at Harrison street. The Bur is the organ of the Dental alumni, published thrice yearly. It reflects the happenings among both alumni and students of the department.

The Loyola Educational Digest and its younger brother, the Loyola Educational Index, are both edited by Dean Schmidt of the Graduate school. They give a resume of the educational periodicals of the current period.

"If it be not given to us to see the solution, we shall at least have pointed out the goal to others who will read it."

FORENSICS

CHARLES S. COSTELLO
Coach of Debate
Coach of Dramatics

FORENSICS

The expected gesture of one in my position is a bow in the direction of the students, to compliment them highly for their forensic achievements, to say that they have yet to meet their peers in debating and dramatics. Then within the pages of this section they in turn are expected to bow back at me, point their words of praise to the coach and answer with laudations of him. But such a gesture has been outdone. I prefer instead to express my belief in the future of debating and dramatics at Loyola. As I see it the future depends as the past depended upon no one individual. It depends not upon Loyola alone; it depends not upon the students alone; it depends not upon the coach alone. Each has his limitation—the school in its financial and moral support; the students in their talents, abilities, intelligence, enthusiasm, and energy; the coach in his ability to train, time to train, and intelligence to understand and direct his charges. None of these limitations have we as yet reached in full. Until such a time arrives when we give the last of our strength, great as the success of the past has been, we cannot say we are done with our best. True, as circumstances have allowed, we have gone as it seems to the limit, but in reality we are stopped where self-imposed obstacles hinder. Each must take to himself the task of giving his all, the University, the Students, and the Coach; each must shoulder his responsibilities to the end of his limitations; then, and only then, will greatness come to our endeavors.

Charles S. Costello

FORENSICS AND DRAMATICS

The Loyola University Debating Club was organized when the school was located on the west side of Chicago and known as St. Ignatius College. The original name of the club was the Chrysostonian Society and it was under this name that it flourished for many years. After a number of years it was changed to the Loyola Oratorical Association and later to the Loyola University Debating Club. Due to a lack of interest in debating the club soon became inefficient and almost passed out of existence. When the College of Arts and Science was transferred to the Lake Shore Campus and the name changed to Loyola University, the debating club was completely remodeled and took a decided step forward. Mr. Charles S. Costello was appointed moderator of the club and coach of debate. From that time on the club became one of the most active organizations in the University. The number of men engaged in the work of the club increased and the trips taken became more numerous and of greater length. From present indications the debating club will continue to prosper for many years to come.

Like the debating club the Sock and Buskin Club was organized at St. Ignatius College, under its present name. It, too, enjoyed prosperity for several seasons but soon fell into a state of decay. Due to the efforts of a certain group of students, headed by Mr. Costello it was revived four years ago. Mr. Costello was appointed director of dramatics. Interest in dramatics flourished and several successful stage attractions were produced that year. It has now become the custom of the club to stage two major three-act plays and several one-act productions each year. They have also endeavored to make their meetings more entertaining by inviting some theatrical character to speak at each gathering. The outlook for the future of the Sock and Buskin Club at Loyola is more than promising.

WILLIAM H. CONLEY

THE NATIONAL INTERCOLLEGIATE ORATORICAL CONTEST

Loyola has long been active in the field of oratory and public speaking. For a number of years all-university oratorical contests have been conducted the winner of which has received a gold medal known as the Carter Harrison Oratorical Contest Medal. Last year it was decided to enter the winner of the university contest in the national contest. Consequently, William H. Conley, winner of the Harrison contest, was entered in the field of national participants.

The Loyola entry was sent to the state finals held at Northwestern university late in April. He was victorious over five other contestants, thereby winning the right to represent the state of Illinois in the contest to determine the best college orator in the North Central states. This regional contest was held at Ohio State university, Columbus, Ohio, late in May. Speaking against eight state finalists before a board of judges including justices of the supreme court of Ohio and professors of public speaking from several of the leading midwestern universities, the Loyola man was ranked first. As winner of this contest Conley had the right to represent the region with six other regional winners in a contest to determine the national championship which was held in Los Angeles, California, on June 23rd.

The national intercollegiate contest is held each year and is sponsored by the Better America Federation of California. This organization is composed of business and professional men of California who subscribe the funds necessary to meet the expenses of the elimination contests and the prizes.

The subject of the orations given in the national contest are confined each year to six or seven topics concerning the Constitution of the United States. Conley's oration was entitled "The Constitution." It traced the history of the constitution, its importance in the progress of the nation and told what the national charter means to present day America. It ended with an emotional appeal which swept every audience who heard it with a thrill of devotion to the fundamental law.

Back Row—Wenig, Lybarger, Conley.
Frew, Albert, Glatfelter.

The Los Angeles engagement ended the contest to determine the national champion. Seven regional representatives met in Bovard Auditorium on June 23. Several noted statesmen were expected to judge the contest including Herbert Hoover, Chief Justice Taft, and Charles Evans Hughes but unfortunately they were unable to arrive in Los Angeles on the day of the contest. As a result, a board of local judges had to award the decision. In the contest the New England states were represented by Paul Keyser of Massachusetts Institute of Technology; the north Atlantic states by Philip Glatfelter of Princeton; the Central Atlantic by Lee Lybarger of Buchnell; the South by Allan Frew of Davidson College; the Central states by William H. Conley of Loyola; the West by Carl Alberts of Oklahoma University; and the far West by Herbert Wenig of Stanford University. The decision of the judges awarded first and second places to the two western men, first place going to Alberts and second place to Wenig.

Following the contest the seven speakers were entertained for nearly two weeks by various organizations and individuals throughout California. Speaking engagements had been made in advance so that each of the contestants spoke at least once a day to some gathering. The entertainment, however, did not consist solely of speaking to Rotarians and University Clubs. Tours were arranged through movie studios, dinner and theater parties were given, and the Californians showed the foreigners what is reputed to be such a marvellous state.

The publicity given to the schools represented in the contest can not be estimated. In the West where people still enjoy such things as oratory, interest is immediately aroused in the minds of the people in the school sending regional champions to the coast. Schools unheard of in that section of the country spring into prominence as soon as their contestant is introduced while well known institutions are raised in the estimation of the people.

While Loyola did not win the national championship it holds the championship of the Central states. The success of last year should be an inspiration to Loyolans to continue in the field of speech, the reputation which the university now holds.

KEATING

THE JOHN NAGHTEN DEBATE

Each year at the end of the debating season a contest is held within the club to determine the champion debater of the club. All members of the Debating Club are eligible to enter the preliminary contest from which four are picked to take part in the final contest. The winner of the final contest is awarded the John Naghten Debate Medal which signifies the championship of Loyola University.

The Naghten debate was a fitting climax to last year's successful season. As it happened the four men who had been the nucleus of the successful squad of last year won their way into the finals of the contest. The question which had been given to the four men to debate was, "Resolved, That Intercollegiate Athletics Should be Abolished." The affirmative was upheld by John E. Keating and James C. O'Connor while George K. Ray and William H. Conley presented the case for the negative. The four men who participated in the finals were widely experienced in the field of debating and oratory. The result was that the contest was a model debate.

The debate was held in St. Ignatius Auditorium and was given before a large crowd. Professor Barolzheimer, Coach of Debate of Northwestern University, gave a critical decision of the debate and of each speaker. According to his decision the affirmative won the debate but Mr. Conley was the outstanding debater and therefore was awarded the Naghten medal and the championship of the University.

Although Conley was only a sophomore he had distinguished himself in every forensic encounter during the year. Coming the week before his winning of the Central States oratorical championship the victory in this contest stamped Conley as the undisputed champion in the field of speech.

GEORGE K. RAY

THE CARTER HARRISON ORATORICAL CONTEST

With the increased interest in oratory and public speaking which has been so marked at Loyola during the past few years it is little wonder that the Carter Harrison oratorical contest this year created considerable interest throughout the entire University. The increased interest in the contest may have been caused also by the fact that representatives from the Law School and the School of Medicine were entered.

A preliminary contest was held early in February to determine the six speakers who would enter the final contest. Twelve speakers entered the preliminary trial which was judged by Mr. Costello, Father Reiner, and Mr. Steggert. The judges decided that George Ray, Joseph Henry, Charles Boyle, John O'Connor, Douglas McCabe and Richard Ford should have the right to enter into competition for the coveted Harrison medal.

The finals of the contest came late in February. Although the contest showed the usual excellent talent the judges were satisfied that George K. Ray, of the College of Arts and Sciences, was easily the outstanding speaker of the group. He was therefore judged the champion of Loyola.

Mr. Ray is a senior in the college and is a veteran debater and orator. Throughout his college career he has distinguished himself as an exceptional speaker and as deserving of the championship. While a freshman he was honored by being judged one of the winners of the freshmen debate. Since that time he has continued to bring honor both to himself and to the University through his forensic endeavors.

RICHARD F. FORD
President

THE LOYOLA UNIVERSITY DEBATING CLUB

As an organization which is never satisfied, no matter how great previous achievements have been, the Loyola university debating club set a record this year which surpassed the anticipation of the most optimistic supporter of the club. The club undertook a program which was the most pretentious in the history of forensics at Loyola and ended the season with a record of victories which challenges those institutions which claim championships. The eastern trip carried the name of Loyola into the forensic world as an outstanding contender for national honors. The semi-public debates before local organizations gave the people of Chicago an opportunity to witness an example of the training given by the university to any student who feels inclined to debate.

Richard Ford was chosen president of the club for this year. His energetic work the preceding year as chairman of the program committee proved his ability to handle the position. His ceaseless activity in administrating the affairs of the club was outstanding and through his efforts interest in the club was advanced to the utmost.

The success of the eastern tour is in no small manner due to the efforts of Paul O'Connor, the energetic manager of debate. He was successful in arranging debates with the foremost colleges and universities of the east. In addition to arranging the schedule he took charge of the team on the trip, taking care of all details of travelling.

The office of vice president was filled by John Keating who has been an active member of the club for the past three years. Charles Boyle was secretary for the first semester but due to inability to attend meetings was replaced by Robert M. Sweitzer, Jr. William H. Conley was the treasurer of the club and financed the eastern trip. He took entire charge of the funds available and by careful planning made it possible to meet the expenses of the home schedule as well as those of the trip, leaving a surplus in the treasury at the end of the season.

The cooperation of the members of the club with the coach and the officers made possible the great success of this year's activities. The material aid given by Knights of Columbus Councils and parish organizations made possible these activities. With the continued cooperation and interest shown in the club by under classmen the future of debating at Loyola seems secure.

THE SEASON AT HOME

One of the fullest years in the history of the Debating Society has come to a close. Coupled with the long eastern trip was a strenuous home campaign against invading universities, most of which were met while the eastern trip was in progress. Add to this, then, the innumerable semi-public debates held before K. C. Councils and other parish organizations, and you will find that the year just closed is marked as one of the busiest in the history of the organization.

While Ford, Keating, Ray O'Connor and Conley were making their victorious tour of foreign fields, the home fort was being held down by Paul Reed, Robert Murphy and John Bruun. The brunt of the attack was shouldered by these three who met the best that half a dozen universities could send. The first college which sent its champions up against the Loyola boys was the University of Lawrence, Kansas. This debate was put on the air for the benefit of countless millions over Radio Station WCFL on March 6th. Robert Murphy and John Bruun, speaking in the first inter-collegiate debate of their careers turned in a remarkable performance for novices.

In a three man debate held at St. Scholastica High School before an audience of girls, Paul Reed, Robert Murphy and John Bruun encountered the championship team from St. Thomas. This was a no-decision debate on the jury question. The applause rendered was ample evidence of how well the debate was liked. It was fortunate that it had been decided to make the debate a no-decision one, because if the vote had been left up to the girls they would probably have voted for the best looking debaters—and the Loyolans never did go in for beauty contests. Besides, having no decision debates, it was easy to keep a clean record.

The next intercollegiate competition was with the University of Florida. This debate was held at the new Nurses' Home of St. Bernards. A large audience of nurses heard the team of Murphy and Reed handle the situation in a convincing manner to outclass the Southerners. Although the debate was another no-decision affair, the consensus of opinion was that Loyola was the victor of the tilt. The nurses were warm in their appreciation of the debate and the dinner provided afterwards made the evening the most enjoyable of the whole debating season. It is hoped that more debates will be held at St. Bernards next year.

St. Xavier was met in a three man debate held at St. Andrew's parish. Here again the competition was stiff, but Loyola was successful in downing them. The only defeat of the season was administered at the hands of St. Viator from Bourbonnais, Illinois, at Rosary College. The three man teams provided an evening of action which held the interest of the Rosary girls from start to finish. The Viator's lads proved more convincing in the opinion of the audience and an overwhelming vote was cast in their favor. The entertainment provided afterwards was the most enjoyable part of the evening from the Loyola standpoint.

At St. Francis Hospital, Western Reserve was met in a two man debate. This was also a no-decision debate which concluded the season at home. The home debate average was about 999 if you take the opinion of the debaters; as there are no other figures available, you might as well. The year was a decided success.

To provide experience for the men who were not able to participate in the inter-collegiate debates, a great number of semi-public debates were held throughout the year. Not only did this benefit the debaters, but the honorariums which the parishes saw fit to give, enabled the debate manager to arrange for the long and expensive eastern trip. There was a debate at St. Maurice Parish on April 2nd. This was followed by a debate on April 8th, at St. Benedict parish hall. The LaFayette Council and St. Peter's Church both heard debates during April. Saint Augustine K. C. heard one and then a week or two later another one was put on in the parish for the benefit of the school students. The final debate of the year was held at Whiting, Indiana, before a K. C. Council. It closed the prolonged season on May 14th away from home.

These debates were featured by the appearance of Freshmen debaters who gave great promise of a successful future. Among these were Robert McCabe, Thomas Downey, Edward Hincs, Frank Arado, John Lenihan, Thomas Poynton, and Joseph Daly. The upperclassmen who took part included Frank Casseretto, Paul O'Connor, Robert Murphy, Paul Reed, George K. Ray, John Keating, Charles Boyle, Richard Ford, John Klest, William H. Conley and John K. Bruun.

THE EASTERN TRIP

On March 2nd five members of the Loyola University Debating club left on a 3000 mile tour of the east. Richard Ford, William Conley, Paul O'Connor, John Keating and George Ray were the men who made the three weeks' trip. They participated in sixteen intercollegiate debates, winning six, losing two, while one was declared a draw. The remaining six were no decision contests. Decisions were gained over Boston College, Fordham, New York University, Hunter College, St. Viator and Western Reserve. The losses were sustained at the hands of St. Xavier and New Rochelle.

The trip, one of the longest ever taken by a forensic team of any college in the country, started on March 4th with a debate against the University of Detroit at Detroit, Mich. Keating and Ford upheld the negative side of the question, "Resolved, that the jury system should be abolished in criminal cases." The vote of the audience showed an exact tie. Then Ford and Ray met two Ohio schools in no decision debates, Ohio Northern of Ada, and Heidelberg University of Tiffin.

On March 7th Keating and Conley, arguing the affirmative side of the question, "Resolved, that the hydro-electric power of the country should be publicly owned and operated," gained a decisive victory over Western Reserve University of Cleveland. The audience vote stood 86-5 in favor of Loyola.

March 11th Boston College was defeated by an affirmative team composed of Conley and Ray. The question was the abolition of the jury, and the decision was rendered by three judges. The next night O'Connor, the manager of debate, speaking for the first time on the trip, and Ray defeated Hunter College of New York, a girls' college, on the affirmative side of the question, "Resolved, that women are less intelligent than men." The decision was rendered by an audience composed almost entirely of women. On the same night Loyola sustained their first loss on the trip. Conley and Ford were defeated by the College of New Rochelle, another girls' college.

Fordham University was defeated the following night by a three judge decision.

*Standing—Ford, Ray, O'Connor, Keating.
Seated—Conley*

Conley, Keating and Ray composed the Loyola team. On March 16th Conley and Ford were given an audience decision over New York University at New York, while Keating and Ray participated in a no decision debate with Catholic University at Washington. On March 17 Conley and Ford met Princeton in a no-decision contest before the International Club of New York City. George Washington University was met in a no-decision contest at Washington, March 18th. Ford and Keating represented Loyola. After making a hurried trip from Washington to Dayton, Conley, Keating and Ray debated the University of Dayton the following night. On March 20th two debates were held. St. Viator lost to Conley and Ray on a critic judge decision at Bourbonnais, while Keating and Ford lost to St. Xavier at Cincinnati. The trip was completed by a no-decision debate with Miami University at Harrison, Ohio.

Besides being one of the longest ever attempted, the trip was by far the most successful ever taken by a Loyola team from the viewpoint of both victories and publicity. The year 1929 marks another great step forward taken by the Loyola University Debating Club, and the credit must go to the five Ramblers who spread the name of Loyola throughout the east.

FRANK DOHENY
President

THE SOCK AND BUSKIN CLUB

"Back in the days when our ancestors lived in trees and threw coconuts——." Well, that's the way all modern fables start, and if we were writing a fable we'd start that way too. But we're not. We're writing about the founders of the Sock and Buskin Club, and, if our authorities can be believed, it would be inaccurate to say that they lived in trees and threw coconuts, though who can tell; perhaps they did.

At any rate, irregardless of the habits of the inhabitants of Loyola back in 1925, legend tells us that there were a number of clever individuals who had brains, ability, industry and salesmanship; and the greatest of these was salesmanship. So they used their brains and decided that a university as large as Loyola should be represented by a dramatic organization. Then they showed their ability by choosing a play and securing a director. Thirdly, they became industrious and drew up great plans for the organization. But the next step was the hardest. To produce any play which would amount to the proverbial row of beans, it was necessary to have actors. And where were they to find them? So all these intelligent men became salesmen. Up and down the corridors of the departments they went, buttonholding everyone from janitors to deans, and they finally sold their idea to a sufficient number of equally intelligent prospective actors. The problem was solved. Practice for the law started, enthusiasm waxed high, the cast and the coach were most capable, and the result was that the Sock and Buskin Club was firmly entrenched in the activities of the university.

Of course, organizing such a club was not entirely a new idea. In fact, a dramatic organization was one of the earliest of Loyola's outside activities, but like so many of the brain children of our forefathers it had languished and died. So when the club was reorganized in '25, and reorganizers were casting about for a name, there was nothing more logical than to choose the very apt name of the dramatic organization of bygone days, the Sock and Buskin Club. There was a significance in the name and an indication that the fellow who made it up originally knew his history. The name was derived from the costumes of the old Athenian actors; from the dramatist and the clown. It seems that it was the vogue at the time for the comedians to wear high socks in order that the 'oi polloi could tell them from the tragedians who were clad in half shoes, known as buskins. Since the Loyola drama society was to combine the humorous and the tragic, it was thought wise to adopt the names of the things which stood as symbols for them. Hence it became known as the Sock and Buskin Club.

BARKER

SPELMAN

FORD

Well, to get down to the year of our Lord, 1929, semesters one and two. At the beginning of the fall term, the club proved that a great deal of the brains of the founders of the club had been handed down to them when they decided to elect their officers. The president of the preceding year, Raymond Kerwin, had evacuated as seniors have a habit of doing, leaving a very important position to be filled. The members cast their eyes about the club; then all focused upon one individual. They knew who they wanted and they got him. Frank P. Doheny became the leader of the club during two of the most active semesters in its history. Virginia Barker was vice-president and Thomas Spelman secretary.

New members joined the organization at once. Plans were immediately made to produce "The Confession" which was so successfully given at the Goodman on February 17. Speakers were introduced in to the club. In short, the club became a vital being, a model of successful activity for the other university organizations. With Mr. Costello so ably directing its productions, the club gained new laurels and won greater and finer distinctions than ever before. May 5th saw the final play of the year and the last brilliant achievement of the club for the season of '29. A season truly successful in every way.

JOHN K. BRUUN.

JOHN BRUUN
Business Manager

ACTIVITIES OF THE SOCK AND BUSKIN CLUB

"Let's have a party."

No sooner was the Sock and Buskin Club opened for business at the beginning of the year than certain individuals became imbued with a fraternal spirit and suggested a dance, with refreshments. Who ever heard of anyone turning a suggestion like that down? No one did then, either, and so a night was picked out on which all the members of the club would gather and bring their friends and dance and eat. That's exactly what happened. In one of the large rooms of the Downtown College, the Blue Kittens, a famous campus orchestra led by Anthony Tomczak, furnished the music. From nine till midnight the musicians tooted. And from nine till midnight danced the Sock and Buskiners. Between dances they went to the floor below to demonstrate to Mr. Costello their acting ability in an attempt to win a part in "The Confession." It was not until a few days had elapsed that the selections were made so the party was spoiled for no one. The ice cream and cookies were a welcome gift of the management and were thoroughly enjoyed by the dancing actors.

It seems that no organization can get along without a business manager. Richard O'Connor, having successfully piloted the club through a production the year before, found that he would not have time to keep the position. The problem came of choosing a new manager. After some deliberation Mr. Costello chose John K. Bruun, a new member of the club, to succeed O'Connor. And so the job of making the production, "The Confession," a financial success was in the hands of the capable president, Frank Doherty, and the new business manager. Due to their efforts the play was given before the largest crowd that has ever seen a Sock and Buskin play.

Before presenting "The Confession" before the public at the Goodman Theatre, the Girls of Rosary College were treated to a Saturday matinee performance at their school in River Forest. The stage was a little small for the amount of scenery necessary to the successful production of the play and consequently the action was somewhat hampered. Nevertheless the actors were very grateful for the opportunity of presenting the play, and from the reports which simmered back, the Rosarians were equally pleased with the opportunity of seeing the play.

Several speakers were introduced to the club throughout the year. They gave several new and entertaining ideas to the club members which proved helpful when the productions were staged. Mr. Lorren Watte, drama critic from a daily paper, gave a very instructive talk on proper staging of the drama. The countless questions which the club members asked after the talk was indicative of the interest which had been aroused. A talk by one of the actors in a leading drama in the loop was also much enjoyed at one of the regular meetings.

The second play of the year was given three times before varied audiences. The first time that "Thank You" was presented was May 4th, the day before the Goodman performance. A large group of nurses at St. Bernards Hotel Dieu School of Nursing sat for two hours in their own hall at the school listening to the interesting and remarkably well presented play which held them enthralled.

On Sunday evening, May 5th, the main performance was given at the Goodman Theatre where all the productions of the Sock and Buskin Club are presented. Before a large and appreciative audience the play, which was probably the most successful of the club's offerings, was presented. The applause rendered it was strong proof of the pleasure it had given the audience.

The play was also presented the following Sunday evening before St. Augustine Holy Name Society and a parish crowd. This audience also showed a strong liking for the play.

So came the end of the year and an end to the Sock and Buskin activities of the school term. The club had successfully given two major performances under the direction of Mr. Costello, who demonstrated again his ability to direct and guide a dramatic organization as active as the Sock and Buskin Club. His genius and personality were the deciding factors in the success which the plays enjoyed. His leadership was admired and respected.

THE CONFESSION

The first play given by the Sock and Buskin Club this year was "The Confession." It was presented at the Goodman Theatre on a Sunday evening, February 17th, before the largest house that had even seen a Sock and Buskin Club play. The intense drama which marked the sequence of events had the audience spell-bound from start to finish.

The play evolved around a murder which a man committed and then confessed to his parish priest. As things turned out, the brother of this priest was charged with the murder due to a convincing string of circumstantial evidence. With his brother on trial, and then convicted and sentenced to be hung, would the priest break the seal of Confession and tell? When it became evident that he would not, it seemed that there was little chance to save the innocent man's life.

The greatest drama and conflict of emotions came in the third act in the court room scene. Here the battle of wits between the lawyers as witness after witness was examined held the audience enthralled. With one lawyer fighting to save the brother's life and the other lawyer fighting to destroy it, with the old mother of the seemingly doomed man weeping from a broken heart, with his sweetheart hoping and praying but able to do nothing, it is little wonder that the theatre was still and breathless. It was only in the final scene that true justice was achieved when the real murderer, now dying, confessed his crime just in time to save the life of the innocent man.

The part of the priest was admirably played by Frank P. Doheny. It was a terrible battle that waged in his soul whether to tell the truth and save his brother's life, or to keep the seal of the confession intact, and see his brother hanged. So vividly did Doheny feel his part that the audience lived it with him, prayed with him, and for the time looked squarely into his soul, so torn and anguished. The end of the play and its justification of his belief in God seemed a personal triumph for all who were there.

The part of the innocent brother about whom the storm raged was taken by Frank Arado. As the handsome, devil-may-care sweetheart of Rose Creighton (Theresa Finnell) he won the hearts of the audience from the start. Miss Finnell portrayed the part of sweetheart in a charming style. Her love and devotion for the unfortunate man seemed at times to be the only thing which kept him fighting. She was not only the hero's sweetheart, but also the sweetheart of the entire audience.

The most difficult part was that of Joseph Dumont, the real murderer. This part was taken by Richard Ford who became for the evening a wretched, miserable scoundrel, sly, tricky, but scared to death of giving away his secret, and scared, too, that the priest might tell what he knew. Ford undoubtedly gave as great an interpretation of his part as any of the club's actors has ever given.

Agnes Fitzgerald, the old mother of the priest and Tom, excellently played a most difficult role. Heartbroken by the turn of events which led to her son's conviction, torn from him by officers of the law who knew no mercy, her misery and helplessness won her the audiences' tears. Her characterization was a brilliant piece of acting.

Michael, as played by Ted Connelly, had the audience in gales of laughter after every sentence. Jerome Kozlowski, playing the part of Andrew Strong, proved to be an ideal officer. John Lennihan, playing the role of clerk of the court, had the audience roaring as he swore in each witness. Judge Peabody, the part taken by Frank J. Walsh, was well received, also. Walsh in his robes and white wig gave every appearance of being a real judge and his dignity and excellent speaking voice made his characterization most real. The two attorneys were played by J. Francis Walsh and John K. Brunn. The ease with which Walsh handled his case despite the fact that he was hampered on every side, and the cocksureness of his opponent provided an ideal contrast for the vivid court scene. The staging of the play was taken care of by Paul O'Connor, stage manager. The cast as a whole presented the play in an excellent manner which won for it a great deal of praise from everyone who saw the show. Despite the heavy drama and the difficult parts, the action swung through swiftly and convincingly.

"Let us occupy ourselves with the people which has too many needs and not enough rights, which with reason claims a more complete share in public affairs and protection for labor and against destitution, which indeed has bad leaders but only for lack of good ones."

MUSICAL ACTIVITIES

FOREWORD

It has been my greatest pleasure in the past two years to head the two splendid Loyola Organizations, namely, the Loyola University Glee Club, and the Loyola University Choral Society. I say this because it would be hard, very hard indeed, for the head of any organization to have better people with whom to work. Here are two organizations which I do not for a moment hesitate to present as a model, a distinction merited entirely by the wonderful spirit of sacrifice and good fellowship expressed by the members.

Without expectation of any reward whatever in view, but working only for the love of Art—for Art's sake—to attend each and every one of the very numerous rehearsals held, and to do this under the most adverse and trying conditions of weather and distance—this much could be said to the credit of these two organizations. Only such spirit, only such splendid attitude could bring out such musical successes as were accomplished in the past two years.

Therefore, I take this opportunity to extend my sincere thanks and appreciation to the many members of either organization who have so generously given of their time and energy to this most worthy activity. It is my opinion that with a continuance of this fine spirit of cooperation, there is no reason why the Glee Club and the Choral Society should not eventually become the best and foremost organizations of their kind in the country.

MUSICAL ACTIVITIES

Musical activities at Loyola have so progressed and flourished within the last two years, that it is really remarkable to observe the growth of interest in music among the students at Loyola.

Several desultory attempts were made in the past several years to develop musical activities at Loyola. However, the checkmate of insufficient talent prevented any real progress in these lines. A band was formed, but soon became inactive; an attempt at a glee club was even made, but it, too, met its sad fate.

It was not until the opening of the 1927-28 school term that any real success attended the organization of musical activities. On September 29, 1927—a date which will be memorable to the chroniclers of our Greater Loyola—Rev. Joseph S. Reiner, S.J., founded the Loyola University Band, and showered upon it in its infancy that encouragement and support for which it hungered and without which it could not have survived.

Almost simultaneous with the formation of the band, was the organization and active development of the Glee Club. Mr. Bert-ram J. Steggert, registrar at the Lake Shore Campus, was the founder and original director of this group, but due to lack of time, he relinquished his claims of directorship in favor of Mr. Graciano Salvador, who has acted as Director of Music at Loyola ever since.

Later on in the year the assistance of the girls at the Sociology school was secured, and the Choral Society was formed. The numerous, and exceptionally successful presentations of this organization are so well known that the mention of even a few would be passing over other programs no less laudable.

And now music has risen to the honor of being one of the major activities at Loyola. No longer is it an art gloried only in private reception rooms, at recitals, and at concerts; no longer is the band a collection of a few trumpets, clarinets and tubas. The students now take a serious interest in music and its relation to the development of Greater Loyola.

EDWARD KEEVINS

THE LOYOLA UNIVERSITY BAND

The Loyola University Band can now look back upon another year of existence as one of the two major musical activities of the university. It has passed through the trying stages of organization and first year development, has proven its worth as an important factor at most school activities, and has finally come to the culmination of its second year.

Many of the men who received sweaters and letters last year were back for practice last September. Very little of that zeal and spirit of sacrifice, so characteristic of all participants in musical activities, was lacking at the opening of the season just gone by.

Just as last's years progress was the direct result of the encouraging exhortations of Dean Joseph Reiner, S.J., the honorary president of the organization, so this year the band owes its success in large part to the untiring zeal and efforts of the director, Mr. Graciano Salvador, moderator of Musical Activities. His dynamic personality secured the support and cooperation of all the members of the band, and it was with hopeful anticipation for a year of success that the organization looked forward to the coming year.

One of the first matters to be considered by the organization upon its return last fall was the election of officers for the guidance and direction of the group through the ensuing season. As a result Edward Keevins was elected president. He is a trumpet player of no mean ability, having had about five years experience in both classical and popular solo and orchestra work. Besides, he is a singer with a tenor voice such as would rival even the best of professional artists.

Through the untiring efforts of the president and the endless help and encouragement of the director, the band has been having regular weekly rehearsals, and has appeared at several occasions and festivities of the university. The dedication of St. Bernard's Hospital last fall as well as the various football games during the season all provided excellent channels for the dissemination of the musical knowledge acquired by the members during the process of their tutorage.

When spring came, most of the home basketball games were supplied with highly spirited strains of rhythmic melody. The tournament, too, was supplemented by musical accompaniment between games.

Again, as last year, the band is thankful to the Dental college for its contingent of members. And again, it gives warning that it will ferret out the musically inclined students of the Medical, Law, and even Arts, colleges who have thus far appeared either bashful or simply unwilling to join the ranks of the band, and to partake of that ambrosial refreshment which is the boon of the muse of melody.

THE GLEE CLUB

The Glee Club now has two candles in its cake. However they do not represent the achievements which it has attained but merely the milestones of its existence. It was but two short years ago that a determined effort was made to revive musical activities at Loyola and as a result we now have, today, an organization that surpasses our fondest dreams. It has proved itself to be one of Loyola's most valuable assets.

The spirit of cooperation and self sacrifice which flourished in the Club during the first season was no less vigorous or wanting in its second year of existence. The mere cooperation of the members, however, cannot alone spell success. Therefore, let us not forget the unstinting efforts of the man to whom the Glee Club owes its organization—Mr. Steggert. The Club received the cooperation of the faculty through Dean Reiner and Father Schulte who imparted to us much of their dynamic energy.

The man to whom the Glee Club owes its musical success is none other than our director, Mr. Salvador. He, through his undauntless efforts, has moulded from raw material an organization that is worthy of meriting the name of The Loyola University Glee Club. It was not only his spirit that permeated the Club but also his talent as a director and a musician for which he is noted not only in this country but also in Italy and Spain. His son, Mario, reflecting the true genius of his father, is our regular pianist.

THE CHORAL SOCIETY

The Choral Society which is built around the glee club has scored another successful year. On Sunday, December 16, the organization presented Maunder's Cantata "Bethlehem" at St. Ignatius' Auditorium. The society presented an entertainment of an unusual character for a choral society by rendering a dramatized cantata. The cantata is of three acts and recalls simply and reverently the scenes which mark the event of our Savior's birth at Bethlehem. It was especially fitting for a musical club of a Catholic University to stage such a performance the week before Christmas. A special performance was given for the Sisters of the city on the afternoon previous to the public performance.

A second appearance was made during the winter months when another of Maunder's work, "Olivet to Calvary," was given at one of the city's oldest churches, the Church of Notre Dame. The club had given this work the year before at a public appearance with such success that the parishioners of the Notre Dame church asked for the opportunity to again hear the performance. A large number of people were present at the second triumph of the season.

The year was closed with a popular concert given at St. Ignatius' Auditorium on Sunday, May 19.

Top Row—Baumbich, Hackett, Crimmins, Weinrich, Tomaso, Cutrera, J. P. Walsh, J. F. Walsh, Raso, Modica, Keevins, Roccisano, Klest.

Second Row—Hecht, M. Fitzgerald, M. Kent, M. Powers, A. Powers, M. Dugan, C. Powers, L. Behm, A. Uling, E. Barrett, Connelly, O'Donnell, McFarland, Connors, McDonald.

While every member of the organization did all possible to make the year's work a success the officers of the club and the committees are to be especially congratulated on their efforts. The faculty support through Father Schulte, Father Reiner, and Mr. Salvador made the undertakings a success from both the business and musical standpoints.

The Choral Society did not confine itself merely to its activities as a musical organization but throughout the year was recognized as a social society. A number of small socials were held at regular intervals and the season was closed with an informal dinner dance. The affairs were all held in the social room of the Gym.

Although the Choral Society is only two years old it has had two years of success. The past year has found considerable progress both from the standpoint of talent and from the standpoint of organization. The society has for its purpose teaching all who belong to it a knowledge and love of music as well as an appreciation of the better compositions. Its purpose has been fulfilled.

"A selfish regard for ourselves and for our work, which would underrate the virtue and merit of everything outside our own little circle . . . a verbose philanthropy preferring words to deeds; and officialdom, which would hamper our forward march and tie up our machinery with red tape: all that will hinder us."

RELIGIOUS ACTIVITIES IN 1928-1929

Four distinct times did the National Catholic Weekly publish articles or editorials that were stimulated by events that happened on our campus during this past year. Not so bad. Religious activities in a university seldom become national in interest—yet we seem to have demanded some wide-spread notice this year.

The Religious Leadership Conference of last year was surpassed this year by three such conferences, and each was greater than its predecessor. Meetings were held November 1st, February 22nd and May 9th. Practically every Catholic institution of learning beyond the grades was represented by delegates at these meetings.

A new monthly publication was inaugurated by this group of leaders, the first issue being mimeographed, but since then all copies have been printed. It has a quaint name—Ciscora. The word is made up of the initialed letters of the Chicago, Illinois, Student Conference on Religious Activities. The last issue for the current year will appear during the first week in June.

The University rejoices in the formation of the Cosmas and Damian Guild for the Spiritual Development of Professional Students, and is particularly happy over the success in numbers and enthusiasm of the various retreats—the record retreat of the Professional Students under Father J. Donohue, S.J., and the Ladies' Retreats, at the University Library and at The Cenacle. The Downtown Chapel, ably managed by Father James Walsh, S.J., proved an attraction to the medical and dental students, and the Sodality has grown into a real power for those who have availed themselves of the opportunities afforded by Father Walsh. All in all there has been very rapid Catholic progress in the year.

SODALITY HISTORY

The Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary on the Lake Shore campus at Loyola has seen an exceptionally successful year. Being the center of activity in the Catholic Student Conferences on Religious Activities (Ciscora) for the past year or two, it has been the gracious host of several local conventions, and this coming June will welcome the delegates from all over the country to the First National Men's Sodality Convention.

The Sodality is the oldest organization at Loyola, but at no time was the activity as spirited and as enthusiastic as it has been in the last two or three years.

Two years ago last May, Robert Hartnett, then prefect, presided over the first local sodality convention sponsored by Loyola. Since then there have been several conferences, culminating in the national one held in St. Louis last year, and the coming one at Loyola in June.

The Sodality has had a most remarkable history—remarkable not only for the rapid progress it has made itself, but what is more important, for the influence it exerted upon the students, not only from Loyola, but from every Catholic high school and college in the country.

It now looks forward to another year of success and achievement.

It is a rather difficult task to reduce to statements the naturally intangible accomplishments of the Sodality during the year that has just drawn to a close. The objectives of the Sodality have been toward substantial and practical Christian attitudes and practices, and we feel that a catalog of details is important only in so far as it indicates, as we hope it does, an interior growth, personal and social.

The Sodality of the Blessed Virgin at Loyola is made up of three distinct groups, so divided because of the separation of the departments of the University and because of the different time during which the groups meet.

In the School of Sociology it was slow in coming, for until the school had its new home it was hardly practicable. The charter is dated April 27 and since that time the Sodality has been growing slowly but steadily. At the present time it numbers forty-eight members who meet at intervals for the recitation of the office and a spiritual conference.

The meetings are usually held in the community chapel on the campus but by way of variety have also been held in the chapels of Barat College, Lake Forest, and Mercy High School.

From November 23 to 25, 1928, a three-day retreat was given under the direction of Reverend J. Francis Quinn, S.J., Principal of St. Ignatius High School.

The Sodality at St. Bernard's Hospital is made up of the entire student body of nurses. While it is more of a local private organization than the other two, its accomplishments are practically the same and, of course, its purpose is exactly the same.

The Lake Shore Campus Sodality is the most active of the three. Its activities have been numerous and successful. They were not confined to the Campus entirely though the most important were, as the following will indicate.

ST. BERNARD'S SODALITY

The first essential in the spiritual life, devotion to the Person of Christ, particularly in the Holy Eucharist, has been marked by representative members at Holy Communion at the weekly Mass, especially on First Fridays, and by the campaign for "Four Minute Men"—brief visits to the Blessed Sacraments. Devotion to Our Lady reached its high point in the daily May services with talks by the sodalists themselves on the Mysteries of the Rosary. Catholic literature has been supported by the subscription of the entire student body to the Queen's Work and the weekly sales of America and the Commonwealth. Missionary work has been assisted by the Friday collections and the collection of "old clothes." The annual drive at the feast of Christ the King for Holy Name membership, the advocacy of civic and social mindedness, the promotion of total abstinence movement, and lectures on the Sodality and other subjects before other schools and colleges have been included in the Sodality's program for Catholic Action.

Besides these more concrete achievements, the Sodality hopes itself partly responsible for a general growth in the Catholic mind in the student body, a general Catholic background and loyalty, a readiness to divine the spirit of the Church and to respond to her appeal.

Of course we cannot but admit that the full measure of success is far from attainment, but it would be impossible to expect that the difficulties which the Catholic cause must meet outside should not be paralleled in our smaller world. The fact that we do not reach the ideal need not blind us to the real progress made toward it. The important thing, the gratifying thing is that the Sodality is able to pass down through the college from year to year a constantly augmented tradition of practical consecration to Christ and Mary.

Chairman Chicago Delegation

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION

The Student Spiritual Leadership movement which had its beginning three years ago at Loyola University had grown so rapidly that last summer a national convention was held for these leaders at St. Louis University. The convention, which was under the supervision of Reverend Daniel A. Lord, S. J., National Director of Sodalties, continued for three days—three days packed with intelligent discussion of student problems.

Loyola's success in previous attempts along similar lines had made the convention possible. Her efforts in organizing the Chicago delegation to the convention and in contributing to the convention in no small measure added to its success. Ciscora had been functioning along its usual lines when the leaders suddenly decided that it was up to them to bring the outstanding delegation to St. Louis in August. In order to realize their dream a convention was held at St. Xavier's College last Memorial Day and plans were laid for the Chicago delegation. William H. Conley was chosen as the leader of the Chicago Union and the arrangements and details were left to a committee appointed to aid him in making the arrangements.

It was on a sweltering August morning that over a hundred and ten students from Chicago schools met at the Illinois Central station and boarded their special train for a city noted for its torrid summers. It was a sad looking crowd that arrived in St. Louis at six o'clock that evening. After registration at the main convention office, dinner in the convention dining hall which at other times serves as the St. Louis University gym, and a night of trying to sleep in various boarding schools the zealous sodalists gathered in St. Xavier's Church on the campus for the first exercise of the convention. During the Mass one of the worst electrical storms in the history of the city struck St. Louis. Father Lord in his opening address remarked that it seemed providential that the storm should occur. He pointed out that at the last two great Church gatherings the Vatican Council and the Chicago Eucharistic Congress storms of similar intensity had occurred. Truly it seemed that providence was guiding the convention. For three long days and evenings over a thousand students sweltered in an auditorium discussing religion when a block down the street stood the artificially cooled and inviting Missouri theater. The details of the convention have been made known to everyone and are tradition by now.

The Chicago delegation was the largest single out-of-town delegation present. On every subject introduced some member of the Chicago Union was prepared to speak. Loyola's contributions were made by John Keating, prefect of the Sodality, and William Conley, chairman of the delegation. Mr. Keating's talk on the Eucharist and personal devotion was one of the outstanding speeches of the three days. Mr. Conley had been invited by Father Lord to introduce the subject of Catholic Action. Due to Father Lord's preliminary introduction of the afternoon Mr. Conley was given a tremendous ovation when he went to the platform to open the evening discussion. He spoke of the meaning and significance of Catholic Action and told what was being done at Loyola to promote it. Loyola was also given a singular honor in the convention by receiving the chairmanship of the Resolutions committee. Mr. Conley represented the institution on the committee and after working all night was able to present a set of resolutions which crystalized the entire work of the convention

A CONFERENCE

The activities of the Catholic Student Conference on Religious Activities of the Chicago District have been both widened and intensified during the year now coming to a close.

Three meetings have taken the place of the single one of the first two years of the organization. The first, on All Saints Day, was held in the University Gymnasium with two hundred and forty-nine delegates representing thirty-nine schools. The discussions centered on ways and means of putting into effect the resolutions adopted by the National Convention held in St. Louis last August. In support of the resolution commending total abstinence, Mr. William H. Conley prepared a statement, "Why I Am a Total Abstainer" which was widely circulated and republished in numerous papers. The girls' schools were invited to submit statements in support of the resolution endorsing the Holy Father's campaign for modesty in dress. Father Lord judged those submitted and presented the award, a beautiful Madonna, to the Immaculata High School. A constitution for the Conference was adopted at this meeting.

The second conference was held on February 22 in the Auditorium of St. Ignatius Parish. Five hundred and forty delegates represented thirty-eight schools at it. Miss Evelyn McDonnell opened the first discussion with a paper on "Catholic Literature" and Mr. G. Raymond Sprague of St. Viator's College followed with one on, "The Student and Parish Loyalty." Discussion on Total Abstinence figured in the afternoon session.

Plans for the third meeting are being completed as the Loyolan goes to press. It will be held on Ascension Thursday, May 9, in the auditorium of the new Conservatory at the Academy of Our Lady, Longwood. The morning discussion will concern methods of making Catholic education more widespread, more effective, and more attractive. Miss Catherine Roti of St. Scholastica's Academy will read the opening paper. In the afternoon Mr. Edward O'Donovan of St. Ignatius High School, and a student of St. Xavier College not yet named will read papers respectively on "Student Work for the Missions," and "Catholic Literature." A business meeting will follow. Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament will follow the conference.

One of the signal advances made during the year was the founding of a conference news sheet which is circulated monthly among the members. Acknowledgement for the success of the endeavor is due to Mr. William H. Conley, Mr. Robert McCabe, and Mr. Thomas Downey.

Growing numbers and growing interest forecast an increasingly valuable future for the conference. Progress, however, is not confined to these more material factors. There has been progress as well toward advanced ideals in Catholic thought and practice. Holding to the foundations of Catholic life, we must carry the basic principles out into definite plans to meet actual conditions. Moreover, the Catholic leaders of the future must not be satisfied merely with what is commanded; they must interest themselves as well with what is counseled by a generous apostolate. Finally, the conference emphasizes the union and sodality essential to victorious Catholic Action. Its constant aim has been to stress the fundamental unities between all Catholic Students in meeting the issues of the day.

Such are the ideals that have directed the course of the Conference during the past years; they promise, we hope, even greater and finer things for the future.

MARQUETTE CELEBRATION

Four years ago, under the leadership of Loyola University, the landing of Father Marquette at Chicago was celebrated for the first time. Ever since that time an effort has been made to continue the practice in some manner.

This year Loyola University invited the other Catholic colleges of the city to join in honoring the memory of the Jesuit explorer. Rosary College, St. Xavier's College and Loyola came together on December 8, and celebrated the event by a trip down the Chicago River to the spot where Father Marquette lived for an entire winter. The trip was made on the tug Illinois which was chartered for the occasion. The students participating gathered at the Wrigley building at eleven o'clock in the morning. The florists of the city had donated flowers which were to be thrown into the river. The flowers were given to the girls and as they went down to the boat which was waiting at the foot of the bridge, the Pathe photographers grasped an opportunity to delight the eyes of movie-goers. The party rode down the river and after reaching Robey street, paused at the foot of a cross which marks the spot where Father Marquette camped. Mr. O'Shaughnessy of the Chicago Historical Society, gave a short talk on the significance of the celebration. Father Reiner closed the short ceremony with a prayer and the party returned to the Michigan Avenue bridge.

The undertaking this year was a marked success and every effort will be made to continue the practice. Plans are already under way to stage an elaborate pageant on December 8 of the coming school year.

THE DELLA STRADA CLUB

The Della Strada Lecture Club was organized when Father Mertz made the first announcement that he was collecting funds to build a chapel for students of the University on the Lake Shore campus. The first Della Strada Club was composed of a few of the men of the Lake Shore campus who had skill in public speaking and who had a knowledge of religious subjects which might be of interest to others. This small group went from place to place as engagements were made for them, delivering lectures for which they received honorariums. The funds collected were turned over to Father Mertz for the chapel.

From this small beginning the club has grown rapidly and has gained popularity not only in the city of Chicago but also in surrounding territory. For the past few years the lectures have been made more attractive and interesting by the use of colored slides. The slides used have been imported from Europe and the coloring and art work in general is outstanding.

During the past year the club has had the largest membership in its history. The popularity of the club on the campus is shown by the large number of freshmen who applied for admission. With the large number of underclassmen who were trained during the year it is certain that the future Della Strada Club will thrive. These younger men have been taken one by one with two older men on the various lectures thus giving each the practical experience necessary.

While the amount of money collected each year is not large it is an indication that the students themselves are trying to help in some small part in the building of their chapel. In addition to the material gains the lecture club can also consider on the asset side of its balance sheet the untold spiritual influence on all who have heard it.

DANIEL A. LORD, S.J.

THE LAKE SHORE CAMPUS RETREAT

One of the high marks in the year's spiritual endeavor at the Arts College was the student retreat held in St. Ignatius Church, October second to fifth. Fr. Daniel A. Lord, S.J., was the retreat master, and he brought again to the conferences all the virile and practical spirituality which made the retreat of 1926-27 so successful.

The theme of the retreat was "In Partnership with Christ." Under this figure, Father Lord discussed the various concerns of life in the aspect of a business in which God is the Father and generous senior partner of man.

The retreat was well made by all of the students. The interest which was manifested by the older men inspired the younger ones to take a greater interest in the proceedings from day to day.

A general Communion concluded the three fruitful days. Following the general communion the entire student body went to Murphy's restaurant for breakfast. This was the beginning of a custom which has been popular this year following the general communions on the first Friday of each month. Following the breakfast several informal talks were given by the students as well as by Father Lord, Father Schulte, and Dean Reiner.

In addition to the annual retreat in the fall the seniors for the last three years have made a second retreat in the spring at the Mayslake Retreat House. The entire senior class took advantage of the opportunity this year.

JAMES F. WALSH, S.J.

PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS RETREAT

Under the supervision of the Dean of Men of the Professional Schools, Father James F. Walsh, S.J., a retreat was conducted in the Downtown College for students of the Professional Schools. The retreat was held following the mid-year examinations and was well attended by students of the Downtown School and from the West Campus of the University. Father McDonough, S.J., a missionary, conducted the retreat.

The retreat movement within the University marks a distinct step forward in religious training. The retreats for the students of the Lake Shore campus have become a tradition of the college and the success of the retreat this year for professional students makes certain the continuation of the devotion for the other departments of the University. Small retreats have been held in past years by various groups from the Downtown College but this is the first time a general retreat has been given so that all might attend.

The students who took advantage of the opportunity to make the retreat were enthusiastic over the affair and have expressed their desire to have it continued each year.

The success of the retreat is in no small way due to the efforts of Father Walsh. His constant service as the spiritual director of the Professional Schools has brought the various departments to a realization that they are parts of a Catholic University and that religion plays an important part in the training of the University.

"The St. Vincent de Paul Society is intended not only to help the poor and suffering, but especially to rescue professional and middleclass Catholics from a life of selfish apathy. It is the members themselves, rather than their 'cases,' who are the greatest beneficiaries. As a circular letter of 1844 points out, the Society 'was begun by a few young men and for young men,' especially for university students and aspirants to the professions. At that date M. Bailly, the President, could still declare that the Society consisted 'principally of young men' and he urged that 'the young men must be set forward among us, they must appear in the first rank.' 'We shall ask,' he says, 'if those of our Conferences which are managed by quite young men have always been the least in fervor and wisdom?' Yet seven years later the President (M. Baudon) had to acknowledge the 'general complaint that our Conferences founded on behalf of youth and intended to keep it by charity under the mild influence of religion, reckon few or no young men'."

ARTHUR BURKE

THE JUNIOR PROM

The climax of the social season comes every year with the Junior Prom. Since the foundation of the University there has been an attempt to make the Prom the outstanding all-university dance. This year the dance was truly the get-together occasion for all departments. No small credit for the success of the affair goes to the Loyola Union. The Union through its representatives worked for the co-operation of all departments so that the Prom would be a real Loyola dance dominated by no single department.

Early in January the Junior presidents from each department met with the Loyola Union to make arrangements for the dance. According to the order of succession the Night Law school was entitled to the leadership of the 1929 Prom. Arthur Burke, president of the class, was authorized to assume the duties of Prom chairman.

After consideration of the possible places to hold the dance and the various orchestras of the city it was decided to give the most brilliant of the all-university affairs at the New Knickerbocker Hotel's Oriental Ballroom. Surely no more fitting place could have been found for this particular ball. Its decorations, serving as a background for the contrast between the somber black and white of the men and the varicolored gowns of their fair partners, could not be surpassed.

Late in the evening when Arthur Burke and his partner, Miss Margaret Tierney, started forth across the floor nearly every couple in the large crowd present fell in line. Others, preferring to view the spectacle rather than to appear in it, hurried to the balcony which surrounds the room. From it every couple in the beautiful promenade could be seen. The line consisted of two wings. James O'Dowd, of the Day Law School, led the left wing.

As to the orchestra that presided over the musical end of the program, much can be said. Jimmy Green and his group of merry-makers played their way into the hearts of all present with their marvelous melodies. They mixed the very latest and hottest tunes with those fading waltz melodies that will be popular when our grand children are attending proms.

During the Grand March extraordinary enthusiasm broke forth when the strains of the Loyola Victory March were heard. Only a school such as Loyola and only a dance such as the Junior Prom could occasion the high spirited feeling that was absorbed by those present at this moment.

But this high feeling had its anti-climax. The orchestra subdued itself and sent forth the dreamy numbers that make one think of spring, love, mammy, and all those other things which make life worth living. No one could say that he was disappointed with the evening's entertainment. The music and excitement destroyed every thought of sadness and instilled in every breast that lightness of heart that youth and youth only can have.

About two a. m. the band blew the last saccharine note and bid adieu to several hundred new friends. The gentlemen who had not realized the hour, and there were many, suddenly regained consciousness and made a mad dash for the checkroom only to find themselves at the end of a line a mile long. But no one was tired. The line made a good imitation snake dance. Frequently, some careless lad stepped ahead of the line in an attempt to fox the rest of the boys but just as frequently and certainly with more definiteness was he met with rebuffs and gentle words of unwelcomeness. It was merely another of the many climactic moments of a joyful evening.

When the last hat had been returned to its owner finis was written into this gay and colorful Junior Promenade, and a mark was made which will be the aspiration of all future Classes of Loyola University.

THE SOPHOMORE COTILLION

This year the Sophomores departed from the usual custom of having a dinner dance and held a cotillion. The scene of this new kind of dance was the beautiful Gold Room of the Congress Hotel. The opinion of everybody was that a better place couldn't have been found in the city of Chicago. For this reason the affair can rightly be called brilliant, not to mention thrilling, amusing, entertaining, snappy, hot, etc.

Maurie Sherman and his orchestra played. Only those who have heard this same orchestra over the radio can appreciate the sort of rhythm purveyed. There were fast pieces, slow pieces, dreamy pieces, pieces, and best of all "The Saint Louis Blues." No wonder that the couples did not sit out most of the dances and try to act as if they were enjoying themselves. The floor was delightful to dance on, the music was beyond description, the young ladies present could and would dance. Therefore everybody did the unusual these days and enjoyed dancing at a dance.

Along towards eleven o'clock the orchestra came to a sudden pause. Everybody turned around. There was a blinding flash! It was only the photographer, however, so the excitement died down. The girls regretted that they didn't have time to arrange their hair, powder their noses, etc. Their gallant escorts grumbled because they were not up in front, so that all could see them in the picture. This tension was relieved by Myles Sweeney and Ed Keevins, two musically inclined sophomores, who pepped up the party with three or four vocal numbers that made them the center of a throng composed of everybody at the cotillion. Formality was thrown to the winds, all joined in the choruses. After this the fun ran on till some time after twelve, and the end heralded the start of the longed-for Xmas vacation.

THE FRESHMAN FROLIC

The class of "32" held their Freshman Frolic on February 8th in the ballroom of the Furniture Mart and in so doing made quite a name for themselves as social lions. The president of the class, Marty Stadler, set aside the precedent established last year and brought a date to the dance. So there is complete truth in saying: "a good time was had by all."

Tweet Hogan and his orchestra furnished the impetus that carried the couples around the floor time and time again. Tweet is a freshman himself and his orchestra is well known by Loyolans, and well-liked, as the constant request for encores proved. Those present preferred their music in the good old-fashioned jazz time, not the symphonic arrangements affected by some of the present day orchestras. To the freshmen present the affair was sort of an enlightenment; they didn't know what social lions their fellow classmen were and how they managed to have such gorgeous dates. There must have been magic in the name "Frosh Frolic."

During the intermissions the young men and young ladies wandered through the other rooms which adjoin the ballroom and had been arranged for their convenience. The dining room held some whose dates had that fatal disease: hunger. Others inspected the library. The most popular place of the between-dance itinerary was the moonlight parlor, the silvery beauty of which attracted much attention and caused many to linger and gaze in silent appreciation (?).

A good deal of upper classmen were present and conducted themselves with that well-known sophisticated savoir faire that one is supposed to acquire after having gone to college over a year. However, as time went on and the music waxed hotter they forgot all about their dignity and joined in the whoopie the rest had been making.

Not only was this dance a social success, as every dance is called, but also a fraternal success, that is, it drew together the members of the freshman class and made them feel that they were brothers under the skin, had many things in common, and could rate some nice dates. Here's hoping that future freshman will enjoy a party like this!

HOMECOMING DANCE

The final event on the Homecoming Day program was the Homecoming dance held in the Louis VI Room of the LaSalle Hotel. The ballroom was filled to capacity with students from all the various departments of the University and their escorts celebrating the one day in the year when all the old grads return to their Alma Mater and join in the festivities. Mixed in with the crowd were some of the valiant football warriors and their adoring lady friends, the players being conspicuous by reminders of the battle they had gone through earlier during the day.

"Tweet" Hogan was on hand with his orchestra to supply all the needed rhythmic inspiration, and, needless to say, this was done in a highly commendable manner. When the dance was near half over the orchestra played the school song, and the whole hotel resounded with the chorus as sung by everybody present. "Onward to Victory, Loyola U," was the sole desire and wish of both alumnus and undergraduate; a spirit which is carrying Loyola up the ladder in everything.

Shortly after the magic hour of midnight the crowd thinned out somewhat, but many remained until the last chord had been struck on the head and then regretfully wended their ways towards home, Wagtail's, Sally's, etc.

THE LOYOLA NEWS FALL FROLIC

This year's Loyola News Fall Frolic was under the direction of Frank Walsh and proved to be the most successful of all the previous Frolics. The gay crowd that filled the Gold Room of the Drake, which was bedecked with pennants and banners from the various colleges, gave ample proof of the fact that everybody was having the time of their lives. An innovation this time was the placing of tables in the French Room for those who wished to be served.

The syncopation was furnished by Loyola's own Jack Higgins and his Benson orchestra. During the past six months Jack had augmented his well known band and it proved to be just the kind of music-maker that delights the collegian. Some of the fast numbers that Jack and his men played were the last word in nerve-tingling rhythm. Not till the magic hour of one rolled around did they cease to keep the merry throng gyrating around the floor.

A very amusing feature of the Frolic was the marathon dance. Some very attractive prizes had been offered to the couples that placed first, second, and third. Consequently about twenty couples decided that this was easy. After the eighth dance piece in a row of the contest it was ended and of the five or six surviving couples the winners were selected. The sight of some of the couples trying to hurry and still keep within the regulations was excruciatingly funny to those who watched. This was the first time that an innovation of this sort had been held, and proved that Loyola is among the leaders when it comes to a social affair of this sort.

THE ROSARY DANCE

This year it was the turn of Rosary College to give that long-expected social event: The Intercollegiate Dance. All the arrangements were in charge of the capable students of Rosary. From the way in which the dance went over one would wish that these same capable girls would impart the secret of how to make a dance a success.

After it had been announced in school that the Rosary books were here, there was a mad rush. Those who knew their intended partners were complacent, those knowing more than two were rushed by the rest of the students for information and advice. When the Lancelots from Loyola met the Guineveres from Rosary, there was much surface gallantry and the mental condition of both depended on how they thought they had fared.

Although dancing started about nine o'clock, there was some delay while introductions were made, fates were cast, and evenings made or ruined. Finally the insistent syncopation got into the blood of all, and dancing began in earnest. Here the man with a good date conducted himself like a prince and the others were wondering on whom they could switch their date. As time went on everybody settled down to have a good time. They began to notice that the orchestra was hot, the floor was large and easy to navigate, that after all things were O. K. The spirits of all rose by leaps and bounds. The party had started.

As the hour of midnight drew close, several tag dances were held. These proved a blessing to the stags, the loss of a few final minutes of bliss for those with soul-mates, and just what those with the other kind of partners wished. A good idea for future dances here would be to make every other dance a tag dance and enforce it.

Promptly at twelve the orchestra ceased syncopating, and the couples reluctantly left the ballroom and clustered in the hall. Here is where the Beau Brummels bade a sad adieu to their fair sharers in the evening's whoopee who looked wistful as they ascended the stairs into oblivion. At least until next year.

Place—Alumni Gymnasium

Date—February 9th, 1929

THE JAMBOREE

The first annual Whoopee night that Loyola has inaugurated took place on Saturday, February ninth, in the gymnasium. There was an impressive card of events for the evening. First of all was the final game of the intramural basketball league between the Soph Medics and the Iggies. The Soph Medics came out on top by the score of sixteen to five, thus winning the championship of the league.

Promptly at eight o'clock the Loyola-Bradley game started. This game was sweet revenge for the varsity, as Bradley defeated them last year by the score of thirty-two to nine. The score this year was Loyola, forty-two, Bradley, twenty-one. This was the best way possible to start the whoopee night on its boisterous way.

During the varsity game the stands had been gradually filling to capacity with students from all departments of the university and their fair damsels. After the game was over the floor was sprinkled with wax and dancing begun. The Blue-kitten Syncopators, co-directed by Anthony Tomczak and Dan Demetry, were the purveyors of ultra-modern dance music. In no time at all the floor was crowded and the bashful young lads in the stands took heart and asked the bashful young girls in the stands to dance. After the first few whirls around the gym all signs of shyness and hesitation disappeared, and whoopee started to be manufactured in wholesale lots. This delightful condition prevailed until midnight, when the band ceased their soothing melody. Some said a hasty farewell to their fair acquaintances; most took them in charge and set forth ostensibly to find a place to eat, really to continue the friendship engendered by the all-powerful whoopee spirit.

ART STUDENT-FACULTY BANQUET

One of the high spots of this year's progress was the Arts Student-Faculty Banquet held on December 6. Almost half the student body was present, and the faculty members were there en masse, looking and acting very much like their neighbors. The way in which different groups of professors and students rivalled each other in singing various songs and cheering was amusing. New ties of friendship and respect were formed between the faculty and the students; and the better understanding between them pointed to a successful year ahead.

After the coffee was served Mr. Charles Stumming, the Toastmaster, arose and commented on the way in which the banquet was fulfilling the hopes of those who had planned it. After introducing the President of the Loyola Union, Mr. James Neary, who spoke briefly on the plans of the Union, the guest of honor, Mr. T. A. O'Shaughnessy, was called on by the Toastmaster. Being a prominent artist and historian and a member of the Chicago Historical Society, he was well qualified to speak on his subject, which was a review of the noble work of Father Marquette and his companions. His speech held the audience spellbound from beginning to end, and was a fitting reminder of the anniversary of Father Marquette that had just been celebrated.

The Glee Club and the Band alternated for a time in supplying musical entertainment. Besides this there were several vocal numbers by Edward Keevins and the latest in syncopated songs by Myles Sweeney.

Father Reiner, Dean of the Arts School, was then called upon. He dwelt at length upon the fine spirit the students had been showing both in their activities and their studies. In conclusion he introduced the leaders of the various activities to the students.

COMMERCE STUDENT—FACULTY BANQUET

The third annual Commerce Student Faculty Banquet was held this year at the City Club on December thirteenth. It was well attended, about one hundred and twenty students and faculty members being present. Mr. William Norkett, President of the Commerce Student Council was the toastmaster. After everyone's appetite had been satisfied and the usual flashlights had been taken, he reminded the students that although some students were from the pre-legal department and others were from the department of finance, all were from the same school and asked that they always bear that in mind.

In opening the speeches of the faculty members, Dean Reedy said: "If spirit, attendance, and especially noise mean anything, this is the most successful banquet at which I have ever been present." He then went on to congratulate the students for their zeal in attending night classes. The next thing he commented on was the work of the Student Council and assured everybody that it had his appreciation and support. After this Father Schulte, speaking for the entire University, explained the newly formed Loyola Union and urged the students to get behind it. Father James Walsh, who is Dean of Men of the professional schools of Loyola, asked the students not to be misled by money or glory. "It is not the things that a man does that counts, it is the thoughts he thinks," he said.

After the dinner and between and after the speeches those present were beguiled by the music of Johnny Martino and his Bluebird Syncopators. This was all that was needed to complete the musical hilarity of the occasion, and the band drove away all the cares and tribulations of everyone for the evening. Some of their novelty numbers were very entertaining, and after everything was over student and professor both felt a better bond between them.

DELTA THETA PHI FORMAL SUPPER-DANCE

The annual formal supper-dance of the McKenna Senate of Delta Theta Phi was held at the Dutch Room of the Bismarck Hotel on Saturday evening, February second. This was one of the most entertaining formals of the year, and the credit for its success lies in the committee composed of Gerald Haley, Jim Klees, John Buckley, Jim Curry, and, last but not least, Al Brown.

One of the features of the arrangements was the way in which the tables were placed. They formed a crescent which completely enclosed the dance floor and enabled everybody to see each other. One was reminded of a New Year's Eve celebration by the way in which confetti was flying around and the dunce caps that were worn at all angles.

The Collegians supplied the music for the dance part of the supper dance. This orchestra is extremely popular with Delta Thets, as it played at the informal which was held in November. As the evening progressed, the band waxed hotter and hotter until it seemed as if the celluloid collars of the waiters would melt. However, they managed to withstand the heat, and so everybody was contented.

The only lull in the festivities came with the well-known blinding flash of the photographer's flashlight, this being a feature of the better social affairs that season. Unlike many happenings of this sort most of those in the picture were wearing the expressions they wished to wear, not those various ones of surprise, mirth, closed eyes, open mouths, and the like which wreck even the best of cameras. As the last note of the orchestra died out a huge sigh of regret arose from all, that nearly wrecked the windmills on the walls of the Dutch Room. There were no casualties, so the end arrived peacefully, as ends have a habit of doing.

THE PI ALPHA LAMBDA FOUNDER'S DAY FORMAL

The appropriate words and tune to remember this event of events by are: "What a girl! What a night!" The alumni members of Pi Alpha Lambda held this dinner-dance to celebrate the fourth birthday of the fraternity. And what a birthday party it was!

The scene of the dance was the ballroom of the St. Clair Hotel, one of those modernistic, Spanish motif, places. The dancers were in harmony with the color scheme, and the note of contrast was the blue and white of the streamers hanging from the lights. To an observer this presented a most pleasing and beguiling sight. The bevy of beauties that glided around the floor in the arms of the black-armored knights were all that were needed to inspire even the dullest of artists to depict a picture of beauty.

There was real jazz music at this dance. The Society Syncopators, a colorful band of music-makers, knew hot pieces only, which were the only ones in demand. No dreamy pieces for a celebration like this!

About eleven o'clock, half the company tramped downstairs to the dining room to partake of the dinner. While in the act of eating there was a blinding flash, and those in the range of the camera congratulated themselves on being fortunate enough to get their pictures in the Loyolan. The rest of the members had been dancing upstairs and were blissfully ignorant of what had taken place. They ate about twelve-thirty, and then repaired to the ballroom, where the dancing and merriment continued till the wee sma' hours. The next stop was three o'clock Mass; then, breakfast; and finally, home.

"If God gives me life and courage, and if He assigns the legal profession as my vocation, I should, in my own opinion, do well to bring my personal work and my public duties into harmony. A Philosophy of Law and a History of Law, treated from the Christian standpoint, would fill a vast void in science and would occupy the rest of my life."

ATHLETICS

One of the favorite sports of the period was hiking. Ozanam and a group of fellow students often spent an entire day walking through the country and visiting the towns near Paris.

B. J. QUINN, S.J.

FAREWELL TO FATHER QUINN

There comes a time in the life of every institution when it must lose some of its dearest and most valuable parts, an event which weakens the heart of those who must remain, and yet, which calls upon those downhearted people to wish a successful future to the one leaving.

Loyola University lost such a man when Father Bartholemew J. Quinn, S.J., left to assume newer and higher duties as President of Campion College. Father Quinn, during his office of Athletic Director of Loyola University, won the friendship and cooperation of every faculty member and student with whom he came in contact. His services to Loyola were as efficient as they were sincere.

Evidently others felt the worth of Father Quinn's services for he has become the youngest Jesuit College president in the United States and in his new capacity the faculty and students of Loyola University wish him the happiness of a successful future.

DANIEL LAMONT,
Director of Athletics

THE DIRECTOR

The outstanding figure in athletics at Loyola is Daniel Lamont, athletic director and head coach of football. In addition to his regular duties he has assumed burdens which few directors would take upon themselves. Through his efforts the University will open its football season next year in a new stadium. This is but one of the things he has done for Loyola, his Alma Mater.

Daniel Lamont has brought much to Loyola. He has given it a new view of athletics from an executive standpoint; he has made himself free to give his entire attention to the department, and this is decidedly a distinct advantage. He has secured the cooperation and friendship of the officials and players alike and has united them into a strong organization for the promotion of athletics. His many abilities and qualities are sure to bring the work that he has started so brilliantly to a definite and successful conclusion. He has given much to Loyola University and Loyola owes much to him.

THE NEW ADMINISTRATION

A new regime in athletics began at Loyola University when Daniel Lamont assumed charge of the department of athletics last September. He brought with him a good technical knowledge of the major sports, an insight into the executive affairs of an athletic department, and a well established ability to make friends. All of these qualities were immediately apparent when active work was started.

The schedule for the football and basketball teams was in great danger of languishing, but with the new director the schedules were soon in a formative state and then completed in competent fashion. Not satisfied with having the football and basketball cards for the 1929 season, he began negotiations for games on future schedules. This feature has not been given much attention in the past years, and its recognition by Daniel Lamont is a distinct step forward to better crowds, better games, and better athletic events in general.

Through the entire football and basketball seasons Daniel Lamont sought a definite objective which was to put the athletic department on a sound basis in the matter of policy. Various movements were developed, others banished and a few new policies initiated, and all blended into new and energetic efforts to establish the sports in a definite manner.

The Tournament, too, received the attention of the new director. The seating capacity of the Gymnasium was increased and the dispatch with which the crowds and other matters were handled was the cause of much favorable comment from many people.

BERNARD J. MURRAY, S.J.,
Chairman, Athletic Board

THE ATHLETIC ADMINISTRATION

In order to promote further the proper balance of athletics at Loyola, to assist the athletic board in its administration of all sports, inter-collegiate or intramural, and to assist in the arranging of schedules there was established last year a faculty advisory committee on athletics. The need of such an organization was apparent here at Loyola University; this need was shortly remedied through the untiring efforts of Father D'Haene, S.J. As a result of his wonderful work he was appointed chairman, and in this capacity he managed to set the committee on a firm foundation. The chairman this year is Father Murray, S.J.

The influence of this committee had made itself felt particularly during the football and basketball seasons. Since the faculty is primarily concerned with the scholastic aspect of the athletic situation, the schedules of both the football and basketball teams, while as complete and as far reaching as in other years, conflicted in the smallest possible manner with the scholastic duties of the members of the teams; this was in no little degree the work of the faculty advisory committee.

In addition to the faculty committee and the coaching staff, a number of the students themselves are actively engaged in promoting athletics. With this end in view there is chosen from the student body each year two or more representative men to serve in the capacity of managers. From the junior class one man was chosen this year to act as senior manager. The man to win that distinction was James C. Ryan. From the sophomore class Robert Dooley and W. J. Linklater were chosen to act as assistant managers. It is the duty of these men to aid the athletic department not only in managing the teams but also in promoting interest in the teams by the student body. Difficulties coming up between the team and the students are taken care of by the student managers.

Whether or not the university is behind its teams is largely in the hands of the publicity manager. Unless students see their team written up in the daily papers and hear comments on it among their friends they are liable to underrate it and fail to show that backing which is so necessary to the success of athletic endeavors. For this reason the athletic department employs an athletic publicity manager whose duty it is to keep Loyola athletics before the attention of the public. The position during the past two years has been ably filled by Harold Hillenbrand from the Dental School of Loyola. His position is especially important in the success of such undertakings as the National Catholic Basketball Tournament, which owes much of its success this year to the efforts of Mr. Hillenbrand. In addition to the services in the tournament the publicity received this year by other athletic activities is in no small measure due to Mr. Hillenbrand.

A hard-working person whom we very little or hear of seldom is Robert Morris, the alumni athletic manager. Bob has aided the junior and senior managers a great deal during the football and basketball seasons, and his efforts are deserving of notice. He will also be remembered for his work on the Tournament, which he so successfully helped to conduct. It will be remembered that while in school he held the manager-ship as a junior and senior, and is now the first man to be retained as alumni manager.

There was an innovation in the athletic administration this past year. As Father Quinn, the athletic director, had been called away to become president of Campion College, Dan Lamont, captain of the 1926 varsity football team, assistant football coach and freshman basketball coach, was chosen to fill this position. Director Lamont had shown his devotion to his Alma Mater both as a player and as a coach, and now has shown his ability as director of athletics.

Much credit for the ease and smoothness with which gymnasium activities are run off is due to Earl Kearns, the director of the gymnasium. Both the Tournament and the basketball games of the season were played under the best possible conditions on account of his efficient management.

THE MONOGRAM CLUB

The Monogram Club is an organization composed exclusively of Letter men in the various sports. The membership is thus made an exclusive right to those men who have played varsity sports and have proven their mettle in their respective lines of athletic endeavor.

This last year has seen a visible broadening of the organization, both in scope and in activities. The Club has embraced most of the departments by this time and hence is typically an all-university organization. Its members include the football varsity men, the basketball varsity team, and the track team.

Followers of the Maroon and Gold will recognize in the picture above men who last year piled up an enviable record for our Alma Mater on the field of football. The Monogram Club boasts many of the members of this successful grid contingent.

Just now the greatest problem facing the Club is the acquiring of new quarters for the athletes of the university. During the past year they have been housed in a large home adjacent to the campus but since it was decided to raze it to make room for a new girls' school they have been using the social rooms of the gym for headquarters.

"I shall sacrifice nothing, neither my duty to the State through imprudence, nor my duty as a Christian through cowardice."

FOOTBALL

DANIEL LAMONT
Head Football Coach

THE COACH

Dan Lamont took over the head coaching position this year after the second game of the season. He succeeded Roger Kiley, who resigned after his team had administered a 13 to 6 beating to the Northwestern Reserves.

Lamont worked hard with the squad from the time he took the reins, and was successful in developing one of the best teams that Loyola has put on the field. Perhaps in games won and lost the Ramblers look like only a fair aggregation, but those who followed the games closely know that there was a great deal of real power in the line-up, and at least three of the games lost this year were due to "breaks."

Dan Lamont is a Loyola varsity player himself. In '20 '21 and '22 he performed at end and was generally recognized as one of the greatest ends in the Middle West. He assumed the role of assistant coach when his playing days were over, and last year he was Kiley's chief adviser.

As athletic director he will continue his activities throughout the year. He was Freshman basketball coach last, but Witry took over those duties this past season, leaving Lamont free to devote his time to all phases of athletic activities.

BABE GREEN
Assistant Coach

In one of the hardest schedules ever played, Loyola University completed its nineteen twenty-eight season on the gridiron with a .500 average. In the "won" column we find Northwestern "B", Lombard, St. Louis, and our traditional rival, De Paul. Milliken, Haskel, Dayton and Quanticco took close victories from the Ramblers.

In a game that was not decided until the closing matches of play Milliken University took the opening game of the season from the Ramblers by a score of 3-0. It was in the last two minutes that Burdett Corbett, flashy Milliken back, placed kicked the ball from the twenty yard line for the winning score.

Playing as the second feature of a double header at Dyche stadium, Loyola made it only an even break for Northwestern on October 6 by beating the "B" team 13-6. Although at first it looked like a romp for Northwestern, Loyola tightened up and held the opposition scoreless for the remainder of the game.

In the final period Collins returned a punt to the 44 yard stripe. This was followed by two successive first downs. On the next play Malloy broke loose for twenty yards and the winning touchdown. The try for the point failed and darkness found Loyola ahead at the final gun, 13-6.

In their game with the powerful Haskel Indians, the Ramblers played even ball throughout the first half, the score being 0-0. However, late in the third quarter with Haskel within scoring distance, a surprise center rush was good for the winning marker. With the ball on Loyola's 26 yard line Haskel tried two line plunges which failed to bring any gain. Then, with the team feinting a wide end run, Joe Cross, an Indian half, grabbed the ball from the quarter and ran through center and across the goal line for the only score of the game.

In the one game played on the north side campus Loyola showed her greatest strength by beating Lombard College overwhelmingly, 27-0.

Loyola's lack of reserve material proved to be the deciding factor in the game with "Ducky" Swan and his Dayton Flyers. Although leading for three quarters by a score of 7-0 the Ramblers were overcome in the final period and lost a hard fought game, 12-7. Loyola's only touchdown, and for a while what seemed to be sufficient, was the result of a brilliant sixty yard run by Less Malloy, the sophomore half-back. However, with Scott and Poppelreiter out of the last quarter because of injuries, the Ramblers seemed to weaken and the Flyers were able to put over a final rally that netted them two touchdowns and the game. In the fourth quarter with Loyola leading 7-0 and with the ball on their thirty-eight yard line, Swan proved that Dayton really deserved the name Flyers and ran thirty-eight yards for Dayton's first touchdown. The try for the extra point was missed and Loyola was still ahead, 7-6.

CAPTAIN-ELECT COLLINS

Aided by a twenty-two yard pass to Swan the Flyers brought the ball to Loyola's four-yard line. Loyola held for three downs; on the last down Swan hit the line for the winning score, thus ending one of the most interesting games of the schedule.

After winning but two out of the last five games with St. Louis University, Loyola decided that it was time that things should be squared with the Billikens. So Coach Dan Lamont took his warriors down to St. Louis and accomplished what everybody hoped he would. It was in the second quarter that the Ramblers scored the one touchdown of the game. After Burke and Lawless had advanced the ball to the fifteen-yard line, it was lost on downs. But when St. Louis fumbled Nolan quickly recovered for Loyola. Two plays made five yards and then Molloy hurled a pass to Phil Brennan, who scampered over for six points. Lawless added the extra point.

In the annual Homecoming game the Quantico Marines were quite at home in the sea at Soldier field. It was not until the final quarter, though, that they sank the good ship Loyola.

After two weeks without a game the Loyola University Ramblers became restless and went about wrecking everything in sight: stellar halfbacks, tradition, Freshman proms and the Blue Demons.

In the second period Malloy passed to Bob Burke, who ran over the goal for the winning points. Although Byers almost brought victory to De Paul by his exceptional running, Burke's touchdown was sufficient for Loyola to win.

A successful season, indeed, for Coach Dan Lamont and his Ramblers.

CORNELIUS COLLINS
Quarterback

Captain-elect Collins is the grittiest quarterback that has ever worn the maroon and gold. "Corny" is a clever field general and an accurate passer.

LESLIE MOLLOY
Halfback

Les took part in every game. He is a sophomore and a flashy back. His ground gaining was consistent all through the year. The sensation of the year was his run for a touchdown against Dayton on the first play.

THE LOMBARD GAME

JEROME KOSLOWSKI
Center

Jerry has been well known for his offense and defense work. He played consistently throughout the year and was in a majority of the games.

FRED SEXTRO
End

Fred is one of Loyola's outstanding men and one whose ability to snare passes was the reason for a good number of victories.

PAUL NOLAND
End

Paul was kept out of a number of games by a serious injury early in the season but when the opportunity to play presented itself, he showed up brilliantly.

THE HASKELL GAME

JOHN DOWNS
Halfback

In losing Jack, by graduation, Loyola loses one of its most outstanding halfbacks. His work in the Lombard game was notable. An injury kept him out of the line-up the rest of the year.

ANTHONY LAWLESS
Halfback

Tony leaves us this year after three years of great football. His ability to kick kept the enemy from Loyola's goal on any number of occasions. He was a master in every department of the game.

CHRISTOPHER
POPPELREITER
Guard

This was "Pop's" first year on the squad. His work was of the best. An injury kept him from several of the games.

PHILIP BRENNAN
End

Captain Brennan has finished three years of brilliant work. He was a star in every game throughout his career. His ability and personality were recognized and honored by all.

JOHN WAESCO
Center

"Mike" is another sophomore who made a name for himself in the games he played. He gives promise of even greater things next year.

ROBERT BURKE
Halfback

Bob was a dependable groundgainer and good all-around back, especially clever at receiving passes. It is expected that next year will see him at the top of his form.

EMMETT ETU
Halfback

Emmet leaves us this year with a fine record of fine playing. He was a clever runner and in his day tore off many yards around end.

THE MARINE GAME

CYRIL POWERS
Tackle

An abundance of exceptionally clever tackles kept Powers somewhat in the background because of lack of experience. With a year of football under his wing, he ought to take a few falls out of the opposition next year.

EDWARD MORAN
Tackle

"Red's" work as a tackle was outstanding. He was one of the greatest defensive men on the team and played brilliantly in every game.

EDWARD WEBER
Center

Weber was shifted from the backfield to the line early in the season and due to the number of centers out did not get a chance to display his ability.

THE NORTHWESTERN
GAME

JEROME HUPPERT

Quarterback

"Rome" did not get an opportunity to display the stuff we know he has in him due to the presence of men with slightly more experience on the squad. We are sure that given a chance he will show up as one of the best men on the team.

WALTER SCOTT

Guard

"Wally" got his big chance this year. His line play fulfilled the greatest expectations. Injuries prevented even greater work.

WILLIAM McNEIL

End

"Bill," being the understudy of Captain Brennan, did not get in many games. He has two more years on the squad and great things are expected of him within that time.

FRANK LUTZENKIRCHEN

Tackle

"Lutz" is another sophomore who did clever work in several of the games. It is expected that he will be a regular next year.

FRANK WALSH

Tackle

Frank is one of the five men who played their last game for the Ramblers this year. He was one of the mainstays of the line and his ability to block and tackle was commendable.

TIMOTHY CONNELLY

Quarterback

"Ted" was this year an understudy to Collins and one worthy of the position when the Captain-elect leaves next year.

JOHN SMITH

Fullback

"Smitty" gives promise of being as good at football as he is at basketball. In the next two years it is hoped that he will make a name for himself as a regular back.

THE NORTHWESTERN GAME

JOHN BAUMBICH

End

Like Durburg, Baumbich has been kept from the lineup on account of the presence of seasoned veterans on the team.

PAUL BARRY

Guard

While Paul has never been a brilliant performer, he has always been a good consistent guard.

LOYOLA VS. DE PAUL

RAYMOND NOLAN
Guard

Nolan played in a good percentage of the games this last year and showed himself to be a brilliant guard in all of them.

RICHARD SHANAHAN
Halfback

Dick did not get into any games this year due to an abundance of more seasoned material. He showed up well in scrimmage, however, and good work is expected of him next year.

AMERICO FERLITA
Tackle

Ferlita was injured quite often in games this year and consequently was not able to give the best that was in him at all times. He is a consistently good tackle.

JOHN DURBURG
End

John is another man who was kept on the bench because regular positions were held by older men. He is only a Sophomore.

Back Row—Noland, Brennan, Lawless, Sextro, O'Malley, Kozlowski, Etu, Nolan, Hogan, F., Poppelreiter, McNeil.

Second Row—Coach Lamont, Ferhta, Huppert, Burke, Molloy, Powers, Lutzenkirchen, Smith, Waesco.

The 1928 season proved a very successful one as far as the Freshman football squad was concerned. Under the able tutelage of "Eddie" Norton the squad proved to be a real football team.

At the opening of the season the coach expected to have a "good team by the end of the season." With this aim in view he began practicing the freshmen, who had come to Loyola from various cities throughout the middle west, as well as from all parts of Chicago. There was much to be done in making Loyola squad from the extensive material which reflected such a variety of home town styles; however, as the practice nights added up it became evident that we had a real freshman squad.

The first game furnished them with their only setback of the season, when on the 20th of October, the squad journeyed to Lake Forest to contest with the championship veterans of the suburban academy. The final score was Lake Forest, 7; Loyola, 6.

The fighting frosh were not to be disheartened by this defeat, however. They came back strong the rest of the season and won all of the remaining three games. In all of them, too, they held their opponents scoreless. This coming year will, without a doubt, find some of them in regular varsity positions.

BASKETBALL

LEONARD D. SACHS,
Head Basketball Coach

THE COACH

Leonard D. Sachs has by now proved himself unquestionably one of the greatest basketball mentors in the country—probably the greatest. His work in former years alone, when he turned his apparently hopeless squads into teams which made Loyola comparable with the greatest in the middle west, would stamp him as this, but when we consider that he brought his squad to unheard-of heights this year, including clear-cut victories over some of the best basketball teams in this part of the country, that he does the same thing year after year with his high school teams, which include every sport, we begin to have some idea of the greatness of Sachs. As an athlete there is no better all-around performer in local circles, perhaps there are others as great in mere feats, but there is no one who combines athletic skill with the ability and personality to impart it to others as does Sachs. Loyola is proud of him and his teams, and looks forward to the future with supreme confidence.

JAMES BREMNER
Forward

Co-captain Bremner is without a doubt the best floor-man that ever set foot on the floor of Alumni Gym. In his four years on the team he showed himself to be a consistent point-getter and a main cog in Loyola's great machines.

"Smitty," in his first year on the squad showed his mettle in the pinches. His basket in the last ten seconds pulled the Western State Normal game from the fire.

JOHN BAUMBICH
Guard

John is a sophomore who, with a little more experience, should be able to fill a regular position on the Ramblers. He showed he had the stuff in the games he played.

FRED SEXTRO
Guard

Fred was responsible, to a great extent, for the low scores of opposing teams. Few were the men who got past him for an effective shot.

ANTHONY LAWLESS

Forward

Co-Captain Lawless was Loyola's Iron-man. He is a steadying influence to the whole team and one of high point men of the squad. It is needless to say more than that he was the last man to be taken from a game.

CHARLES MURPHY

Center

It is the common opinion of sport writers in the middle west that Charlie is at least as good as his All-American name sake at a near-by Big Ten School. He'll be the main cog of another Rambler five next year.

JOHN DURBURG

Guard

Durburg played a fine guarding game during his first year on the squad. Next year will find him a good running mate for Sextro.

JOHN WAESCO

Forward

"Mike," another first year man, gave promise of becoming a typical Rambler star. His shooting in the St. Louis game added another victory to the credit of the home team.

ASSISTANT COACH JOE WITREY

THE SEASON

The ambition of every athlete is to become perfect in his particular branch of sport. The bowler aims for that perfect three hundred game; the baseball pitcher works for a no-hit, no-run game; the track man strives to break the record in his event; and the basketball team struggles for a season without defeat. The Loyola team has completed just such a year. An ambition cherished by every coach has become a reality through the efforts of the great Rambler Team of 1928 and 1929.

Due to a lengthy football season, the basketball candidates were not called out until a late date. A strenuous basketball schedule had been arranged; the first opponent was to be met within two weeks of the time when practice started. Then followed four games on the road against Milliken, St. Louis, Bradley and Lombard. St. Louis had beaten Oklahoma, the Big Six Champion and Washington, which in turn beat Purdue and Indiana. Lombard won the little nineteen championship. With a schedule including schools with teams of this caliber it looked bad for Loyola.

With the first call for candidates, four members of the 1927-28 team and the freshman team of the previous year reported. Two of the most important cogs of the 1927-28 team had been lost through graduation, and it seemed next to impossible to fill their places. Men had to be developed who would be equal to the task of coming up to the standing they had set.

Too, the members of the team were scattered throughout the various departments and as a consequence, no satisfactory periods could be arranged for practice. However, the boys made many personal sacrifices to produce the great machine of last season, practicing at night. Another handicap that had to be overcome, was the fact that some members of the team were forced to work in their spare hours in order to continue in school. Yet despite these various handicaps Loyola was represented by a team that I am certain could and would make an impressive showing against the best in the country. It was led by two of the greatest athletes and captains that Loyola has ever had and represented by players who were gentlemen first, last, and all the time.

The first four games were played within a single week and the Loyola defense was almost perfect in all of them. The opponents were kept on the small end of the score throughout the contests. The games were marked by fast playing and frequent scoring by the Ramblers in the first half, and a concentration on defense during the second half. It was said that the night the Ramblers defeated Millikin the best game in the history of Decatur team was played. At St. Louis an extra period testified to the closeness of the game, which was finally won in the closing seconds on Jim Bremner's field goal.

The downstate trip was successfully completed when Lombard was defeated by the close score of fourteen to twelve. Due to the strenuousness of the long trip the players were rather tired and did not put up as fast a game as they usually do. However, after winning four in a row, there is no wonder that they were not up to their usual game.

In the most hectic battle ever waged on the North Shore floor the Loyola University five beat the Western State Normal quintet in three overtime period, 33-31.

Playing an almost perfect defense game, the Ramblers beat the St. Xavier Musketeers by the overwhelming score of 20-5. The only Ohio man to break through the strong Loyola defense was Cain, who sank a short shot early in the first half. That was the only field goal registered by St. Xavier.

Loyola played one of their best offensive games of the year and beat the hitherto unbeaten Valparaiso quint by the amazing score of 40-21 for their eighth victory in a row.

A determined scoring streak by Jim Bremner sent the Ramblers to their tenth straight win when they met Bradley Tech and avenged themselves for their defeat at Peoria last year. The game was played before a capacity crowd.

On their second trip of the year the Ramblers took games from Kalamazoo, Detroit and St. Xavier, with increasing facility. Kalamazoo gave them the most difficulty but after they had been put out of the way Loyola had no trouble in disposing of the others.

As usual the Detroit Titans were unable to cope with the reaching power of Charlie Murphy and so the Ramblers won again. This time the final score was 24-6.

Murphy and Lawless led the Loyolan attack on the team from Iowa and beat them by the merry score of 28-11. The St. Ambrose quintet played a close guarding game but once their defense had been penetrated the score mounted until it reached the one mentioned above.

The season was finished in a blaze of glory when Dayton bowed before the Ramblers' irresistible attack and lost by a score of 30-12.

Although the schedule of last year did not include all the teams we would have liked to meet, we did play schools of national reputation, such as the University of Detroit, National collegiate football champions, whom we met and defeated twice. The schedule makers sought games with every important team but to no avail.

Next year, after our last season, we should not be denied; we feel certain that the next season's schedule will be one worthy of Loyola and we hope that the team play, cooperation, and sacrifices of this year's team will again be manifest and produce another outfit like the Loyola Team of 1928 and 1929.

The Basketball Floor

THE FRESHMAN SQUAD

Although the varsity basketball team will suffer a great loss when Bremner and Lawless leave this year, Coach Sachs will not find it impossible to replace them. There are at least three members of the freshman squad who will stand a good chance of filling the guard and forward positions being vacated by Loyola's co-captains.

Captain Bob Schuhmann of the freshman team should fit into one forward position. Bob is a shifty floor man, a clever passer, and a very good shot. He has been the outstanding player of one of the greatest freshman squads which ever represented Loyola University.

Dick Butzen, forward on the yearlings, must also be considered seriously. Dick learned his basketball at Loyola Academy so he should have little trouble in mastering Coach Sach's type of play. "Butz" is the most accurate shot on the green-clad team.

Tom Flynn, who played guard, will also be fighting for a position. He is husky enough to stand the knocks of a season's competition yet he is fast and shifty. Tom has been the main cog in the freshman's defense.

Dick Finn, Frank Hogan, Joe Norton, Charlie Mann and Gordon McNaughten should also be of value to the varsity squad. While these men are not as flashy as some of their teammates, they are consistent players who deserve praise and consideration.

During the past season the Frosh beat such teams as the Chicago College of Dental Surgery; Lake Forest Academy, national academic champions last year; Stewart Warner, strong local five, and numerous Knights of Columbus squads. They lost to the MacNamara Boosters and tied Jasper High School.

THE SIXTH ANNUAL NATIONAL CATHOLIC INTERSCHOLASTIC BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

The sixth annual National Catholic Basketball Tournament was again held at the University Gymnasium on March 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 1929. After the five days of competition De La Salle High School, of Chicago, was declared winner of the National Catholic title. St. Stanislaus Academy, Bay Saint Louis, Mississippi, took second place honors. Spalding Institute, Peoria, Ill., was third with Decatur Indiana, taking the fourth place.

A team from a city of three million inhabitants and a team from a town of three thousand met in the finals of the sixth annual National Catholic Tournament. And it was not only a game between two teams, one from a large city and the other from a small town, it was a game between a fast, startling attack and a slower, surer offense. The team from the big city won, defeating the huskies with all their speed and stamina through a slow-footed attack that never seemed to get started.

That is the history of the final game of the National Catholic championships in which De La Salle, Chicago, Ill., won the title from St. Stanislaus, Bay St. Louis, Miss., by a 25-16 score.

The prizes were awarded immediately after the game by President Kelley and several other notables who were present. De La Salle received the George Cardinal Mundelein Trophy for first prize. John Cretzmeyer, Columbia Academy, Dubuque, Iowa, received the Daniel Lamont award and cup for having the best coached team. The Mayor's Cup for the Illinois team making the best showing in the tournament was won by the national champs. The William H. Powell trophy for the team scoring the highest number of points in the first round was awarded to St. Xavier of Cincy. Immaculate Conception, of Rapid City, S. D., took the Catholic League Placque for the team coming the farthest distance to compete. Holy Redeemer of Portsmouth, O., won the Thos. D. Nash trophy for the team making the least number of fouls. The sportsmanship cup of the Chicago Evening American was won by St. Theresa High of Detroit, Mich., The Daniel A. Laughran trophy for the player of most value to his team was won by Thomas Godfrey of Union City, N. J. The Peter J. Angsten medals for the members of the all tournament team were won by: Furlong, forward, Joliet; Voegelé, forward, Peoria; Corbett, center, Cincinnati; Lacner, guard, Bay St. Louis; E. Krause, guard, De La Salle, Chicago.

The Blue Key Fraternity of Loyola University was again in charge of the Reception work, Charles Stimming being chairman of the transportation committee, J. Francis Walsh headed the ushers. The Loyola University band furnished the music (on occasion).

Daniel J. Lamont, head football coach and director of athletics was director of the tournament succeeding Rev. B. J. Quinn, S.J., who was made president of Campion Academy. Rev. B. J. Murray, S.J., was the faculty advisor. Harold A. Hillenbrand was executive Secretary succeeding Edward C. Krupka. Robert E. Morris, graduate manager was secretary of the board of directors. John E. Dempsey, Jr., former Loyola Academy basketball coach, again headed the Hotel Reception Committee. All contestants and coaches were housed at the Edgewater Beach Hotel. Joseph E. Gauer, Loyola U. Alumnus also acted on the reception committee. Others who aided were Peter J. Angsten, Daniel A. Laughlin, Dr. Schriedwind, Lee Daniels, Howard Brundage, William Wheeler, Rev. P. J. Molloy, B. J. Fallon, Dr. James Ford, Dr. Edwin Norton, Leonard D. Sachs, Brother Austin, Brother Sylvester, Rev. N. Liston, S.J., and others.

Tournament will be held next year despite rumors to contrary. State associations will interfere but will not disrupt meet.

“ . . . let us prove that we are not so cowardly as to believe in such an allocation of duties, as would be an accusation against the God who would have made it, and a shame for us who would have accepted it. Let us be prepared to prove that, we too, have our fields of battle on which we know how to die. . . .”

MINOR SPORTS

Dean Reiner Pitches the First Shoe.

THE HORSESHOE TOURNAMENT

In the past the game of horse-shoe pitching was known to be played only by the boys "down on the farm" or behind the stables. No one could ever dream of seeing the day when this game would become popular among college men. Strange as it may seem this day has come, for Loyola University has just about completed its second successful horseshoe tournament.

Few people can realize the amount of enthusiasm which was shown by the students over this game. A glance at the number who entered the tournament will give a slight idea of how the students' enthusiasm was aroused. Last year the number that entered the first tournament was so great that the semi-finals and finals could not be played before the close of school. This year this difficulty was overcome by placing a limit to the number which entered the tournament. In the beginning it was decided by Leo Sheehan, the tournament manager, that only thirty-two entrants would be allowed in the tournament. Within a short time after the announcement of the opening of the tournament the quota was reached.

On Wednesday, May 8, Father Reiner, the dean of the Arts and Science department, started the play by pitching a game against James W. Collins, the sporting editor of the Loyola News. The dean was not up to his usual form that day and as a result dropped the game to his opponent. The entire student body watched this first game for the assembly was called off in order to give them a chance to see a real game of horse-shoes. Many of the spectators claimed this to be the most interesting game ever witnessed by them.

After the opening of the tournament, students who never pitched a horse-shoe in their lives, became enthusiasts of the game. Through the generosity of the managers the shoes were loaned to anyone who wanted to pitch whether or not he was enrolled in the tournament. Because of this latter fact many students asked to have the number of entrants increased to sixty-four. This was done, but still all who desired were not entered in the tournament, much to the regret of the managers. As a limit had to be placed somewhere it was decided that this number would be the most convenient in running off the games.

A bracket comprising this number was placed in the Loyola News bulletin board in Cudahy Hall and from this the entrants could see whom they would have to play next. Each school day from May 6 to 31 four games were played at the noon period and the scores of these games were placed in the bracket in order that all might see how the tournament was progressing. As we go to press the quarter finals are being played and as a result nothing definite can be stated concerning who the winner might be.

The horse-shoe tournament was introduced at Loyola in 1928 by Frank Conley and John Bruun of the Loyola News staff. This year's tournament was sponsored by the Loyola News under the direction of Leo B. Sheehan.

JOSEPH B. TIGERMAN
Coach

TRACK

A year ago last witnessed the successful start of cross-country running at Loyola under the inspiration and encouragement of Joseph B. Tigerman, star performer of the Illinois Athletic Club. Sporadic attempts had been made to develop track athletics on a sound basis, but the cross-country team was the first really successful and solid accomplishment.

The call for candidates brought out about a dozen runners, many of them greatly inexperienced, and all of them underclassmen. Working under great handicaps, they displayed splendid spirit and developed swiftly under the tutelage of their coach. He laid out a difficult course around the Lake Shore grounds, about three and three-eighths miles in length, which proved very satisfactory for the home meets and for workouts.

This year when the candidates were called out for practice it was found that three or four of the best of last year's squad were lost to the team. There were, however, seven good men to carry on the work: Captain Ed. Smith, Kearney, Horne, J. Bartlett, R. Bartlett, Kuehnle and Schollian.

Out of the several meets they had this year, however, they did not come out victorious in any. It is to be said for them, though, that they went down fighting in all of them, as is fitting for wearers of the maroon and gold.

INTRAMURAL MEET

Realizing that the time had come when intramural athletics should be developed at Loyola, Leo Sheehan and John Bruun this year made plans to further the interest of students in this activity.

The first line of their endeavors was the establishment of an intramural basketball tournament comprising teams from all the departments of the University. This, indeed, was no easy job to perform. In other universities this would be a comparatively easy task; but in a school such as Loyola, which is scattered, the work of organizing the different departments was no easy matter. However, just about the time that Leo Sheehan first introduced this new activity, Father Schulte was organizing the new Student Union. With the assistance of this body the support of every department was given and the tournament was brought to a successful close.

While the tournament was going on the varsity and the academy teams were in the midst of their hardest season. As a result the gym could be had only during the lunch period. At this time the sixteen teams which were entered from the Lake Shore Campus played their games. The winner from this department was a team made up of a group of boys who played together at St. Ignatius Academy who called themselves the Iggies.

From the other departments ten teams were entered. This group played their games as curtain raisers to the regular varsity games. These games were played before the crowd of spectators who came to witness the varsity in action. Through a series of eliminations a team made up of sophomores from the medical school was the winner. This team was called the Medics.

On February 9th a "Jamboree" was held in the gymnasium. The evening opened up with a game between the Iggies and the Medics for the title of Intramural Basketball Champion of Loyola University. The game was won by the latter team, which had the advantage over its opponents both in weight and in size. However, the losers fought to the very finish. Every basket which the winners made was done so only after a series of difficult passes. The guarding of the Iggies was very good despite the disadvantages with which they had to contend. The final score was 18 to 5.

The Champions

The success of the intramural meet this year should assure the continuation of such contests. Many of the leading universities in the nation are considering the advisability of placing emphasis on intramural contests rather than on intercollegiate contests. Should such a movement become a reality Loyola will have had some experience in the field.

Probably nothing will serve to unify the schools of the University more than interdepartmental activities. Next year should see many interclass and interdepartmental meets.

CAPTAIN LIETZ AND COACH HODAPP

TENNIS

The Loyola University Tennis Team started the 1929 season with a fair representation of last year's men, and several promising newcomers. At the beginning of the season the men were ranked on the basis of their showing in the Loyola News Tournament, and then a challenge system of ranking allowed those who had the ability to move forward.

In most of the matches Lietz, the winner of the tournament, played first man, while Paul O'Connor, Zwikstra, Prendergast, Diggles and Melody played in the order named. In the doubles Lietz and Zwikstra, O'Connor and Walsh, and Reidy and Melody, were the usual combinations. Bob Murphy arranged the schedule, handed out the balls, and endeavored to have them returned.

The Tennis Team was fortunate this year in securing the services of Professor Hodapp of the Arts department as Coach. Mr. Hodapp came to us from St. Paul, where he had assisted the men from St. Thomas College in the same capacity. His constructive criticism, helpful supervision, and genuine interest were big factors in welding together a representative team. The members of the team are grateful to him.

The following schedule was arranged:

- April 20—Chicago Normal College—here.
- April 23—Northwestern—there.
- April 27—Y. M. C. A. College—here.
- May 4—Wheaton College—there.
- May 13—Crane College—here.
- May 14—Lake Forest College—here.
- May 16, 17, 18—Western Inter-Collegiate Tournament.
- May 20—Wheaton College—here.
- May 23—Crane College—there.
- May 25—Lake Forest College—there.
- May 28—Western State Normal—there.

At this writing three matches have been played, of which one was won. One was rained out. Northwestern was played so early in the season that the match took on the nature of a practice encounter. Loyola evidently was more in need of practice than our opponents, for they swept through every match for a decisive victory. Ten days later, however, a much-improved Loyola team easily defeated Y. M. C. A. College 6-1. The following Saturday we journeyed to Wheaton in search of another victory, but were upset by a 4-2 score. As the Loyolan goes to press, Paul Lietz and Paul O'Connor are putting the finishing touches on their games in preparation for the Western Inter-Collegiate Tournament. They are expected to go a long way in that meet.

As a whole, tennis has prospered at Loyola this season. A Big Ten school has been met for the first time. We have competed in a tournament in which leading Universities of the Middle West were represented. A longer trip has been taken than at any time in the past. The prospects for next year are also bright. Although Lietz and Prendergast will certainly be missed, there is a wealth of new material which is very promising. A longer and more varied schedule seems assured, and a greater number of victories is anticipated. In tennis, as in all her other endeavors, Loyola is looking ahead.

ROBERT J. MURPHY.

THE LOYOLA NEWS TOURNAMENT

The third annual Loyola News Tennis Tournament, featuring a record entry of fifty contestants, was started on Oct. 9, 1928. After two weeks of intensive play and many upsets the veteran Paul Lietz opposed the comparatively untried sophomore Paul O'Connor, who had furnished most of the upsets, in the final game for the championship. Lietz's steadiness, however, proved to be too great a stumbling block for his opponent and after four hectic sets he triumphed, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1, 6-3. It was a fitting finish for such a closely contested tournament.

The tournament was originated by the founders of the Loyola News three years ago. Both the originators of the meet and the sponsors of this year's tourney must be given recognition and gratitude, for they gave to the school competitive intramural athletics in which anyone who ever saw a tennis racquet might compete. This form of athletics was lacking at Loyola and the sponsors of the tournament supplied that need, thereby meriting the sincere appreciation of the entire student body.

The director of this year's tournament was Frank Melody, who, besides completing the arduous task of arranging the meet, competed as one of the seeded players and managed to advance to the quarter finals before being eliminated. The courts were in perfect condition for the matches and the brackets were drawn up to the satisfaction of all. The seeded players were Paul Lietz, Richard Shanahan, Frank Melody and J. F. Walsh.

The only upset that occurred in the first round was the defeat of Walsh by O'Connor, 8-6, 4-6, 6-2. Up to that time O'Connor had not been regarded as a major contender but his steady and finished net game finally overcame Walsh's driving game. The other seeded men won their matches by forfeits.

O'CONNOR, RIGHT, CONGRATULATES LIETZ

In the second round Lietz was forced to three strenuous sets in order to gain his victory. Zwikstra, a promising freshman, won the first set from the coming champion, 6-3, and was leading in the second within two points of victory, 5-3, when Lietz finally rose to supreme heights, took that set, 7-5, and ran through the final set, 6-3. In the same round Keuhnle upset Shanahan, while Melody beat Reed, and O'Connor downed Sheriff, 6-3, 8-6.

In the quarter final round another upset occurred. Paul Diggles, a sophomore, defeated Melody decisively, 6-0, 6-4, and established himself as a major contender for the title. In the same round Keuhnle, another sophomore, defeated Mann, Lietz beat Reidy, and O'Connor downed Lannon, putting three sophomores in the semifinal round.

The longest and closest match of the tournament was fought out in the semi-final round between O'Connor and Diggles. The match required two days to be completed, O'Connor being returned the victor, 6-4, 17-15, 4-6, 6-4. Lietz entered the finals by running through Keuhnle, 6-2, 6-0, 6-2.

The final match, witnessed by a capacity crowd, saw the triumph of a steady, driving, back-court game against a sensational net game. Lietz eked out his win by placement shots and slow lobs. O'Connor's point gatherer proved to be his kill shots from the net, but lost most of his points in the back court. The winner received an expensive racquet and the runner-up a fine sweater.

“ . . . But each one had done his duty. God, for Whom alone men of faith and courage devote themselves to the hard business of writing, of fighting, of being misunderstood, and of being misrepresented, asks nothing more. . . .”

THE INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL OF THE LAKE SHORE CAMPUS

Established 1928

OFFICERS

Paul M. Plunkett.....President
Linton Moustakis*Vice-President*
Edward Kelly*Secretary*

History and Purpose: The interfraternity council of the Lake Shore Campus was established at the beginning of the scholastic year of 1928. The purpose of the organization was to bring about a unified spirit among the social fraternities of the campus so that the three fraternities might work together for the betterment of the University. Among the activities which were aided by the council were the athletic rallies and the class dances. In addition to the aid given to various organizations the council settled all disputes among the fraternities and determined the policy of pledging and rushing.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

The presentation of the NINETEEN TWENTY-NINE LOYOLAN marks the end of the work of a large group of students, faculty members, and business men. The staff realizes that without the hearty cooperation which was received from them the book would have suffered seriously. We extend our gratitude to all those who in any way aided in the production of this book.

Special thanks are due to Father Kelley, Father Reiner, and Mr. Stegert of the Lake Shore Campus for their cooperation, interest and suggestions. Mr. McCormick and Mr. Rooney of the Law School, Mr. Reedy of the Commerce School, Miss Van Driel and Father Siedenborg of the Downtown College, and Miss Dooley and Miss Durkin of the Medical School cooperated in every way with the staff and were always ready to assist us. We also express our appreciation to Sister Mary Lidwina of Mercy Hospital, Sister Helen Jarrell of St. Bernard's hospital, Sister St. Vincent of Oak Park Hospital, Miss Welderbach of St. Anne's Hospital, and Sister Victoria of St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

The staff feels that it has been most fortunate in having the pleasure of dealing with the most efficient and friendly group of business men ever connected with the LOYOLAN. Mr. Harry Lamberg of Clair Marcelle Studio was always ready to help the staff under any and all circumstances. We are especially grateful to Mr. L. M. Gooder, Mr. Howard Keller and Mr. S. W. Curtiss of D. F. Keller & Co., for their efficiency, helpfulness and personal interest in the book. No editor who ever knew and worked with the representative of Standard Photo Engraving Company, Mr. C. A. Mathisson, can express his appreciation in mere words to that peer of engravers whose resourcefulness has saved many annuals from ruin.

If we might single out any one man whose constructive advice and friendly suggestions have aided the staff more than anything else, it would be our able moderator, Mr. Morton D. Zabel. To him the staff and the editor express their sincere thanks.

W. H. C.

MOSER

"The Business College with a University Atmosphere"

Prepare for a business career at the only Business College in the West which requires every student to be at least a four-year High School graduate.

Beginning on the first of April, July, October, and January, we conduct a special, complete, intensive, three-months course in stenography which is open to

COLLEGE GRADUATES AND UNDERGRADUATES ONLY

Enrollments for this course must be made before the opening day—preferably some time in advance, to be sure of a place in the class. Stenography opens the way to independence, and is a very great help in any position in life. The ability to take shorthand notes of lectures, sermons, conversation, and in many other situations is a great asset.

World's Greatest Travel System

BATHROOM beauty does not necessarily mean large expenditures. In proof, this room is offered. The hangings are inexpensive, the walls painted plaster, the floor oak. Not a square of costly tiling is used. Yet it would be hard to find a room more colorfully charming. Or possessing more modern plumbing comfort and quality than this one, with its Nile green lavatory, dressing table, and bath, from the newest Crane Cornith group. Suggested for remodeled houses, where it will add value far past the cost, this room will be inspiring also in planning new houses . . . Many other Crane ideas for beautiful bathrooms are collected in the book, New Ideas for Bathrooms. Ask for a copy. See your architect and a responsible plumbing contractor about plans and estimates.
