The research that forms the basis of this dissertation was conducted within the ‘Long-Term Care Partnership’. The partnership was established around the inauguration of professor by special appointment Anne-Mei The, and directed by Prof. dr. Robert Pool. It comprised the applied University of Windesheim in Zwolle, care organisations Cordaan in Amsterdam, the KwadrantGroep, and the Friese Woude in the province of Friesland, and anthropologists and sociologists of the University of Amsterdam. The partnership was financed by the Ministerie van Volksgezondheid, Welzijn en Sport (VWS) [Ministry of Health, Welfare and Sport], Gieskes Strijbis Fonds (<https://gieskesstrijbisfonds.nl/projecten/leerstoel-langdurige-zorgen-dementie/>), Cordaan and its academic fieldlab and learning centre Ben Sajat Centrum, and the University of Amsterdam, research priority area Global Health.

The research was developed and written up under the supervision of Prof. dr. Jeannette Pols and Dr. Kristine Krause. Under their supervision, the research became part of the Anthropology of Care research network, at the department of anthropology of the University of Amsterdam.
