

A New Partnership, William Roe, 1994

Indigenous Water Policy workshop

Wednesday 6th December 2017

12:30 – 1:30pm

Kat Taylor

First Peoples are leading the conversation about Indigenous water rights policy in Australia. Based on a recent review paper, this interactive workshop includes:

- An overview of some recent significant Aboriginal water policy documents, e.g. The Echuca Declaration, Lingiari Booklets, Mary River Statement and the Fitzroy River Declaration
- A screening of the 10minute film, Mardoowarra's Right to Life!
- A discussion of the government 'policy cycle', the changes being considered at the State and Federal level, and possible paths from here.

Please read the paper before attending and join in the conversation!

Taylor, KS, Moggridge, BJ & Poelina, A 2017, 'Australian Indigenous Water Policy and the impacts of the ever-changing political cycle', Australasian Journal of Water Resources, vol. 20, no. 2, pp. 132–147.

Biographies:

Dr. Anne Poelina is a Nyikina Warrwa woman from the Kimberley. She has a Master in Public Health and Tropical Medicine, Master in Education, Master in Arts (Indigenous Social Policy) and a Doctor of Philosophy. She is currently completing a Doctor of Health Science investigating the cultural determinants of Indigenous health and wellbeing.

Ms Kat Taylor is a PhD scholar at the Australian National University. Kat grew up in Perth, Western Australia and moved to Broome in 2010. She has completed a Bachelor of Science in environmental science and Bachelor of Science in conservation biology at Murdoch University.

Venue: The University of Notre Dame Australia

NDB11 (Behind the Screen Building), 88 Guy Street, Broome

For further information 08 9192 0670 nulungu@nd.edu.au