No publication is possible without the mostly hidden labor of editors and selection committees who spend hours reading and preparing final selections for digital distribution and publication. In this inaugural issue, the work was particularly important as collaborative publication strategies and style guide decisions needed to be made by publication editors. Thank you to everyone in the Writing Program who helped make this project possible, particularly to those listed below.

Additionally, the input of Sarah Hutton and Erin Jerome in their various capacities as part of the UMass Amherst Library system was crucial to the success of this publication project and process. This inaugural edition of the Best Text Collection was also made possible by funding through the UMass Libraries Open Education Initiative, we are deeply grateful that these funds are made available to make projects like this possible.
