

1-1-2008

Gentle Words Say Something Unbeautiful

Chana Dukes

Nova Southeastern University

Follow this and additional works at: <http://nsuworks.nova.edu/digressions>

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Dukes, Chana (2008) "Gentle Words Say Something Unbeautiful," Digressions Literary Magazine: Vol. 5, Article 38.

Available at: <http://nsuworks.nova.edu/digressions/vol5/iss1/38>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the CAHSS Journals at NSUWorks. It has been accepted for inclusion in Digressions Literary Magazine by an authorized administrator of NSUWorks. For more information, please contact nsuworks@nova.edu.

Gentle Words Say Something Unbeautiful

Chana Dukes

I was gazing at the clearest stars over water when you found me, slipped me to my knees carried me into the singing trees as all your shushing whispers filled my silence.

Your skin is the darkest of midnights your eyes summer skies turned to cloud if you asked me to caress this moment I'd reply that you are fearsome proud.

Smooth, your tightened touch, and strong your catlike prowl, the darkening of desire all I would otherwise admire if your coming was welcome at all.

The drifting night laps around our ankles
as you lay me down on softest moss muffle my cries with a piece of summer tie my surprise with creeping vines in knots.

I would lie and tell you I've a man who has stepped inside to soften up the bed but gentle tears refuse to stop their tread through attempts to speak around the glove.

I beg to God for you to find merciful relief and release me, stumbling, to my darkened night but your melting blade has creased among my grief and you are many things but kind.