Professor Kawada is a lamb, terribly busy doing two or three men's work...I start teaching this week and by next week I shall be in full swing with a seminar added...I am learning my way around Toyko and feel that I have conquered the elevated electric line, although the subway somewhat frightens me."

NEWS FROM NETHERLANDS

Here are quotes from a letter from Professor Isadore Blumen, on sabbatic at Groningen, The Netherlands:

"Everything is going very well here. I spent yesterday afternoon and evening at my first official function, the ceremonious opening of the 351st academic year...We've begun to meet many people on the faculty and everyone is very friendly. They all speak English very well, but obviously appreciate our attempts at Dutch. All our daily activity is done in Dutch... I'll be delivering a total of between 30 and 50 hour lectures for the year. The rest of the time is my own, and I'm very pleased by the fact that I've already begun to work...We've finally got a car. But I had to go down to Paris to get it. We ended up with a Peugeot sedan - the snappy 404 model."

The first use was made of the new Extension Division training material, ILR Service Training Courses, at Utica on January 4 and 5. A group of 11 Machinists took the first two days of a four-day Instructor Training Course, "Teaching the Administration of the Collective Bargaining Agreement." The group will return February 8 and 9 for their second two days of training. They will then conduct local classes for stewards and committeemen in local unions of the IAM.

A second course, dealing with pension plans, will be offered to a group of Machinists at Utica early in March. This will not be Instructor Training, but part of a series of technical courses for use as background in connection with collective bargaining.

The material is being written by Sara Gamm, and it is being taught by George Brooks and Maggie Blough.

REPORT FROM INDIA

Professor Leonard Adams, the School's Director of Research, is currently in New Delhi, as the first staff member to assist India with the development of a Central Institute for Labor Research. Under a Ford Foundation grant, the School is undertaking this program with the support of the Central Indian Government.

In late November, Adams wrote to Professor McKelvey as follows: "As you see we are still in New Delhi rather than in Bombay...Since the attack by the Chinese on October 20, the center of attention has been national defense. Bob Clark (a Ford Foundation employee) who has close contacts with the Planning Commission, has been feeding them ideas about manpower mobilization and I have put in a couple of suggestions too. One has to do with a unified system for reporting on production, manpower, industrial relations and other problems at the local level..."

For the past two years Professor Adams has been on sabbatic leave and a leave of absence to do research on public employment services.

This Faculty extends to Dean John W. McConnell, on the eve of his departure from the School of Industrial and Labor Relations to assume the Presidency of the University of New Hampshire, its affectionate best wishes that he realize in good time the hopes he cherishes for the institution which has chosen him as its guide. Those of us who have worked with John McConnell from the earliest days of the School's foundation, as well as those who came to know him later, respect his intelligence, learning, and regard for teaching, scholarship, and adult education in all of its aspects. We cherish his vivacity, good humor, and patience. We admire his sense of duty and liberal social convictions. As friends and colleagues, we part from him, Harriet, and his lively family with reluctance, but, as university scholars and teachers, we take pride in the knowledge that he now has the opportunity to give broad scope to the remarkable range of qualities he possesses for leadership in higher education at a time of urgency in the nation's history.

Ernie Newbury, a former IIR employee, asked permission to put in FOI the article on the following page. He works in the composing room of National Cash Register.

As the origin of some of our other holidays has faded into obscurity, so also has the origin of the Fourth of July become merely a holiday almost isolated from the concept our fore-fathers had in founding our independence.

The solution to this seemingly complex problem is neither complicated nor costly. In fact, the beauty of the thought lies in its simplicity. The ultimate plan is this: To have every bell in the country simultaneously ringing for a period of four minutes--beginning at 2 P.M. Eastern Daylight Time and at a corresponding time throughout the country.

In 1776, John Adams wrote from Philadelphia to his wife that he believed bells should ring from one end of the continent to the other, commemorating Independence Day. Two writers--Eric Sloan and Eric Hatch of Connecticut - hope to revive this concept John Adams had in 1776. It has been proposed that a special ceremony be televised from Philadelphia, in front of the Liberty Bell in Independence Hall and that bells ring out at this same moment across the nation. Governor John Dempsey of Connecticut has given his endorsement to this proposal. Where ever Americans might be gathered at this time, this short commemorative period of time would serve as a reminder as to what the Fourth of July truly stands for, a reminder of the many who risked and lost their lives to preserve the independence which we cherish so dear.

In a talk I had with Mayor Ryan of Ithaca this past month, he heartily gave his endorsement to the idea. A letter recently sent to The New York State Conference of Mayors was favorably responded to by two of their officers.

Should you be in accord with this proposal and since there is presently no national committee formed to advance this idea--the propagation of this thought is up to you. Support might be gained from civic officials and interested groups such as historical societies, veterans organizations, civic, labor, church and educational groups. Local newspapers and radio stations might be a suggested way to obtain assistance. If you can gain the interest of only one more individual, then possibly on July 4, 1963- and each year thereafter, our Independence Day celebration could be in a unified celebration, sweeping across the land and it will take only----

Anna Lane, secretary to Professor Konvitz, wears her 40 years at Cornell lightly and says she doesn't think it seems that long. On June 26 she will receive a 40-year service pin at a Cornell recognition dinner at Statler Inn.

Anna was first employed at the Animal Husbandry Department when she quit school before graduation. Then began a span of more than 20 years at the Home Economics College before coming to IIR in 1948. She has worked for Professor Konvitz since 1950. And the hundreds and hundreds of pages she has typed on the School's Liberian project haven't dimmed her enthusiasm for typing. She types student theses on the side and is the School's acknowledged expert on format. On a recent Spring vacation in Florida, Anna spent part of her holiday studying style manuals from different institutions.

Off duty, Anna keeps occupied with her small home on Auburn Street. She makes many of her own clothes and at times has been an enthusiastic gardener.
