BOILING SPRINGS

Boiling Springs is a beehive of activity with major construction underway.

On the Gardner-Webb College campus a new four story, $162,500, 20,000 square foot dormitory to house 116 men now has the roof on and inside finish work has begun with hopes of putting the building to use when late August arrives.

Walls on the new Charles I.

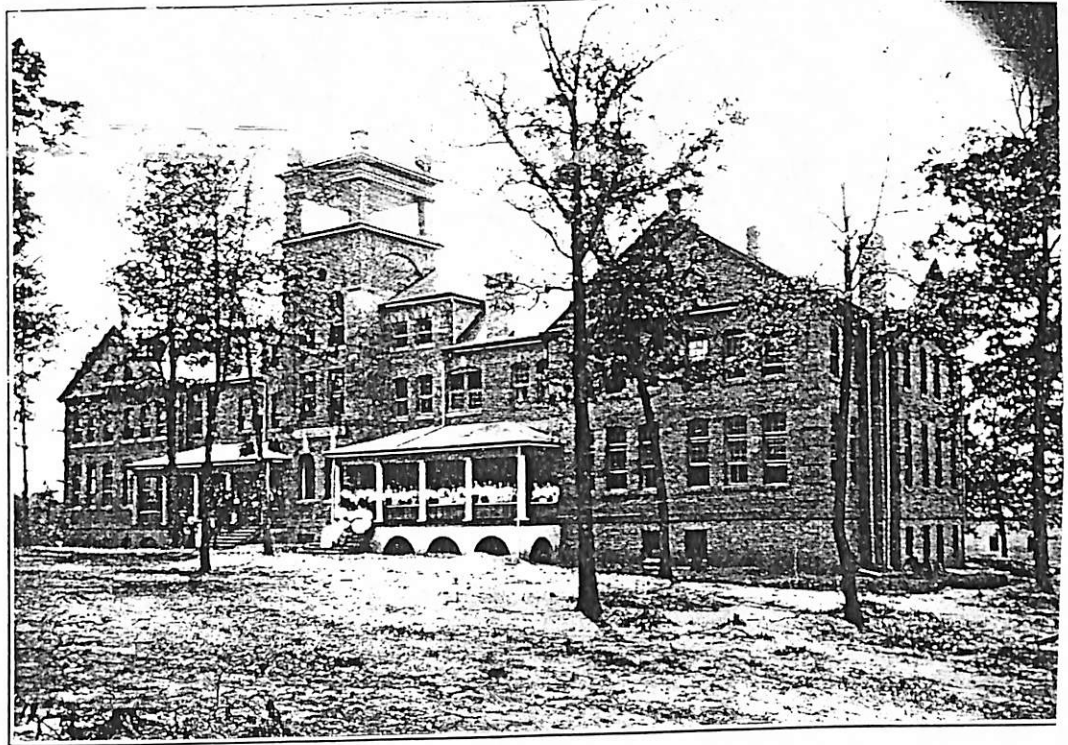

Dover Campus Center are up to first floor level, with the total cost including furnishings of the building to be more than $500,000. Late spring of 1966 has been set as target date for its use by college students.

Work is ready to begin enclosing the swimming pool which is a part of the Best Physical Education plant. When completed the pool will be completely enclosed with thermal glass.

Right next door to all of Gardner-Webb's building activity is the large new educational plant under construction for Boiling Springs Baptist Church. With the finished structure to cost $246,000, walls are beginning to go up as the building takes shape.

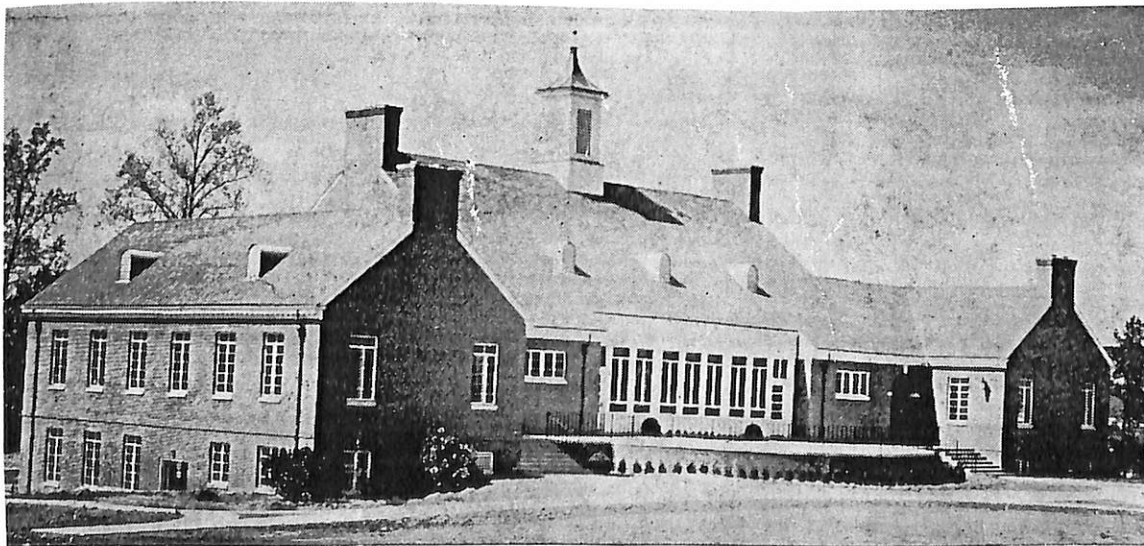

And work on the new Boiling Springs Post Office has reached the stage where the roof is being added to the new edifice.
