Lead Presenter Bio

Marilyn J. Amey, Interim Associate Provost for Faculty and Academic Staff Development at Michigan State University. She was chair of the Department of Educational Administration at MSU for 14 years, and coordinator of the Higher, Adult, and Lifelong Education for 6 years before that. Her research has focused on academic leadership, including mid-level leaders and different ways of leading.

Because this is intended to be a Spotlight Session, led by two board members, we are not providing any additional material related to the session at this time. We will be using a set of agreed upon prompts to lead discussion, including:

work-life balance;

mentoring;

the role of gender, race, ethnicity, and sexual orientation;

advocacy

leading in crises

personal renewal
