BANNED PENGUINS

Assistant Professor Gil Seinfeld reads from the children's book And Tango Makes Three (Simon and Schuster Children's Books, 2005) during the Michigan Law ACLU student chapter's Banned Books Week Read Out earlier this fall. The American Library Association, which named And Tango Makes Three a Notable Children's Book in 2006, also lists it as "the most challenged book of 2006." Written by Justin Richardson and Peter Parnell and illustrated by Henry Cole, the 46-page book tells the true story of two male chinstrap penguins at New York City's Central Park Zoo that brood and hatch a penguin egg given to them by zookeepers who took it from a mixed-sex pair of penguins that had two eggs but previously only had been able to hatch one. The annual Read Out presents faculty members reading from books that have been challenged by parents, organizations, or others and/or banned by libraries or schools.

Other faculty members who read during the program and the books they read from included: Assistant Dean for Student Affairs David Baum, '89 (To Kill a Mockingbird, by Harper Lee); Visiting Professor from Cardozo Law School Susan Crawford (Lord of the Flies, by William Golding); Assistant Professor Nico Howson (Lolita, by Vladimir Nabokov); Professor Jessica Litman (A Wrinkle in Time, by Madeleine L'Engle); Assistant Professor J.J. Prescott (I know Why the Caged Bird Sings, by Maya Angelou); Assistant Dean for Admissions Sarah C. Zearfoss, '92 (The Handmaid's Tale, by Margaret Atwood); and Professor Scott J. Shapiro (Ulysses, by James Joyce). Ulysses has not been banned in the United States, but has faced censorship in many other countries, according to Shapiro.
