ZWINGLIAN FRESHMAN COMPETE FOR GOLD

Eight of Zwinglian's Freshmen in Enthusiastic Declamation Contest

The Zwinglian Literary Society was well represented on Thursday evening, February 22, in the Freshman Declamation Contest which is held annually by that society in Bomberger Hall. The contest was well attended and the attention manifested by the audience testified to their interest. The necessary heaviness of such a program was relieved by excellent musical numbers.

Each of the young orators acquitted himself with honor. The positions on the rostrum were easy. The thoughts were vocalized in a manner to win any doubter to the cause which was pleaded. In the delivery there was proof of efficient coaching and hard work on the part of the contestant. So nearly did one approach the others in excellence that the judges, Mr. Miles A. Keasy, '06, Philadelphia, Mr. Paul A. Mertz, '10, Philadelphia, and Mr. Paul W. Yoh, '12, North Wales, found difficulty in making the decision.

The program of the evening was as follows: Music, Zwinglian Orchestra; Invocation, Whorten A, Kline, Litt. D.; Declamation, "The New South", Grady, D. Edgar Grove, Shady Grove, Pa.; Declamation, "Heroes of the Land of Penn", Lippard, Leopold Paul Moore, Philadelphia, Pa.; Declamation, "The Curse of Regulus", Kellogg, Howard McColly Tice, Sellersville, Pa.; Music, Piano Solo, L. Bernice Wagner, '20; Declamation, "Affairs in Cuba", Thurston, Henry Clark Ferber, Linglestown, Pa.; Declamation, "The Burning of Moscow, Headly, Miles Victor Miller, Elizabethville, Pa.; Declamation, "Anniversary Address" Webster, Ethelbert Bretney Yost, Collegeville, Pa.; Music, Vocal Solo, John H. A. Bomberger, '17, Declamation, "Our Martyr President", Beecher, Clark Russel Long, Declamation, "Touissant L'Ouverture", Phillips, A. Roy Hefren, Hallton, Pa. While the judges were carefully deliberating to reach a fair decision the Zwinglian Orchestra played a number of selections.

Mr. Keasy, '06, of Philadelphia, gave the decision and awarded the prizes.

LECTURE RECITAL WEDNESDAY MORNING

Harry Sykes Pleases Audience in First of Series of Lectures

The first of the series of fortnightly lecture recitals on the organ by Harry Sykes was given Wednesday morning during the nine o'clock period. The students were in their regular chapel seats while interspersed among them was a goodly number of the people of the community. President Omwake introduced Mr. Sykes in a few well chosen words and then the brilliant young organist opened his series with a reference to his former connection with Ursinus and a personal incident that placed him at once on a basis of informal acquaintance with his audience that was most delightful. Before the hour was over every one was sure that this would ripen with time into a "musical" friendship that would mean much to all concerned.

His program, as announced in the preceding WEEKLY, was a judicious blending of "heavy and light" selections. His remarks about each number were interesting but more than that they were highly enlightening and calculated to add to the enjoyment of the masterful rendering that followed. Mr. Sykes is an interesting and pleasing lecturer with an excellent conversational style. At the organ, however, the man was merged in the artist who made the organ express in no uncertain tones the feelings and inspirations of the masters and added to his interpretation the personal touch that showed us himself better than any spoken words of his might have done. We shall all look forward to the next recital and feel grateful to Mrs. Bok for her thoughtful provision.

HOME TEAM WINS ANOTHER VICTORY

Ursinus Tossers Triumph Over Albright in Thompson Cage

Ursinus experienced little difficulty in trouncing Albright last Saturday afternoon in Thompson cage. The final score stood, 46-22.

The game was listless and slow and proved very uninteresting to the spectators at times. Both teams were a trifle off in their teamwork and handled the ball in "butter-fingered" style. Ursinus passed and dribbled poorly, possibly due to the absence of Coach Thompson. Of the two teams, Albright passed the ball more accurately and surely, but Light and Carling succeeded very often in breaking up Albright's teamwork whenever they advanced toward their goal.

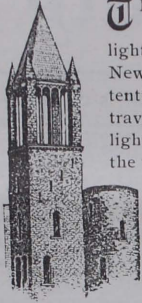

For Ursinus, Light played a wonderful game. This chunky guard held his forward scoreless and tossed eight foul goals and six field goals. Since the opening of college, this plucky lad has made his presence evident both on the gridiron and basketball floor through his aggressiveness and athletic ability. Grove's playing also featured. Soon after the opening of the second half, he was thrown violently to the floor, resulting in a broken nose, but he showed his mettle by returning to the game in spite of the mishap. Five field goals were netted by him.

Albright caged only five field goals throughout the entire contest. At the end of the first half, the score stood 21-9 in Ursinus' favor. At that time, Albright had caged but three field goals and as many foul goals. During the second half, C. Hoffman and Teeter contributed the other thirteen points on two field goals and nine foul goals. In this half, C. Hoffman sent nine fouls through the net out of as many tries.

A fact of noteworthy interest is that four freshmen, Grove, Mellinger, Light and Carling are members of the Ursinus team. The fifth man is Captain Havard who is completing his third collegiate year as a student. The Freshmen class contains a wealth of athletic material which in the course of four years' collegiate development should prove the backbone of winning teams in the three

The Tower Window

THE recent conference of the National Daylight-Saving Convention in New York City brings attention again to the extravagant waste of daylight arising from carrying the winter schedule of daily duties into the summer when the period of daylight is much longer and hours of this valuable commodity pass into oblivion every morning before the day's duties are begun.

For the country at large the practical expedient of simply changing the position of the hands of the clock is proposed, it being easier to move the hours of the day forward on the clock than to move the program of all human activity forward on the hours of the day.

The advantages of daylight-saving are chiefly economic as there would be much less need of artificial light. But there would be also much benefit accruing to people physically if they were to rise earlier during the summer months. The principal objection to moving the hands of all clocks forward seems to lie in the notion that such procedure would be a species of self-deceit and that a civilized people should be able to arise earlier without resorting to this childish device.

In college, certainly no such expedient should be necessary. I would suggest that we merely adopt the schedule of daily duties that was laid down when Ursinus was founded and on which its work was conducted during the earlier years. In an announcement of the College published in 1870 the following order of the day is set forth:

"At 5.30 a. m., the large bell is rung to rouse the students from sleep. At 6 they breakfast. After breakfast, lessons are studied until 7.30, when those who wish are allowed recreation until 8.45, when the large bell calls to morning prayer and roll-call in the chapel. From 9 to 12 recitations to the professors. At 12 the noon bell and soon after, the dinner bell. After dinner, whatever recreation may be preferred until 1.30 p. m., when the large bell calls to recitations, which continue until 4 o'clock. Then evening prayer and roll-call, soon followed by supper. From after supper until 7 o'clock, recreation. At 7 p. m., the large bell calls to study until 9.30, when the large bell is again rung as a signal to prepare for bed. At 10 minutes before 10 all lights must be out, and the students must retire, which all are usually prepared to do." G. L. O.

CULTURE VS. EFFICIENCY

Alba B. Johnson Makes a Plea for Classical Studies

[From the Philadelphia Press of Saturday, Feb. 3, 1917]

A striking protest against the tendency to place business efficiency above all other considerations and a warning lest marketable ability overshadow the development of broad culture in the training of the younger generation, were sounded in an interview given to "The Press" yesterday, by Alba B. Johnson, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works.

In the course of his expression, Mr. Johnson took issue with recent statements made by W. D. Lewis, principal of the William Penn High School for Girls, that Latin and Greek and a few other classical subjects of study are fit only for the "junk heap" and called Prof. Lewis' ideas those of an extremist.

"We hear much in regard to efficiency," said Mr. Johnson. "It is the popular catch word of the day and it signifies a degree of human development which is of itself desirable. But efficiency is not everything.

"I heartily believe in every effort made to promote technical education. The future of our industries and foreign commerce require the highest development of this education. But I believe that in promoting it we should not lose sight of the necessity for promoting also liberal studies. Those who advocate technical and practical education are apt to over-emphasize its importance and to minimize the advantage of liberal studies and, particularly the study of Greek, Latin, Philosophy and that entire group known as humanities. They do not ascribe due importance to the mental discipline, which can only be derived from these liberal studies."

Turning to the article of Prof. Lewis, which urged a thorough reorganization of our educational system, Mr. Johnson continued:

"I see that Mr. Lewis has fallen into this error. I stated before, I agree with much of what Prof. Lewis says, but I believe his statement is that of an extremist. I am in entire agreement with the views which are expressed by Lord Redesdale in his 'Memories,' recently published, in which he says:

"It is very easy, very cheap, to say that Greek and Latin are of no use in learning the modern languages. I have had some experience in the study of both, and I am of the opinion that nothing has helped me so much in the acquisition of even the most out-of-the-way modern languages as the work which I did under Jelf, dissecting every sentence and every particle in the Medea with the help of his grammar.

"The man who starts upon the study of the modern languages after having dissected, conscientiously and thoroughly, the work of one of the Greek giants, has insensibly been placed in the position of a man who goes to a new exercise with trained muscles and, therefore, with marvelous ease, as compared with the man whose muscles are flabby and slack.

When Darwin spent seven years dissecting barnacles it was not simply a knowledge of barnacle nature at which he was aiming; he was training his mind for other purposes." Continuing his argument for the liberal studies and the development of culture, Mr. Johnson said:

"The world would be very poor indeed without leaders in science, in literature, in the higher sphere of politics. Which man has done the greater service to his race, the writer of 'Lead, Kindly Light' or the automobile manufacturers who can turn out a quarter of a million motor cars annually? The world could ill afford to wipe out the achievements of Browning, Tennyson, Longfellow or Thackeray, and would be immeasurably poorer had these great minds been devoted to perfecting new designs of textiles or accomplishing even the highest achievements in electrical engineering.

"The soul is more important than the body; intellect is more important than matter and leadership is more important even than efficiency, and the history of the world has shown that the highest qualities of leadership, the highest achievements of scholarship, the best stimulus to thought and the greatest achievements which have added so much to the development of that intangible side of man's nature which we call the soul, have been the fruits of liberal education.

"Rudyard Kipling's great poem, 'The Sons of Martha,' magnifies the achievements of those who have devoted their talents and their lives to the world's material achievements. All honor to these men, but in honoring them we must not forget to honor also the achievements of the sons of Mary, which have made life better worth living.

"All this talk about efficiency," said Mr. Johnson, "reminds me of a paper which was read last September before the Engineers' Club of St. Louis, by Edward E. Wall, the water commissioner of St. Louis. It was published later in the 'Engineer,' of London. It says in part:—

"To ask me to believe that efficiency

consists of reducing human beings to the mathematical accuracy of automatic devices, so that they may be indexed and each one placed in an organization so that he will fit in and become an infinitesimal part of some great machine directed by an expert, is too much of a strain on my credulity.

"Let us beware of becoming too efficient, lest we lose sight of much of the beauty of the world and miss a great part of the joy of living."

Mr. Johnson concluded his statement by saying: "Let us strive to afford opportunities to every youth who desires to obtain a technical or vocational education, and let us provide equal opportunities to those who desire to fit themselves for the professions and vocations, which have their best preparation in a course of liberal studies. Let us strive to increase our efficiency, but let us not forget that efficiency is but a means to the end and that the development of the highest qualities of man in professional achievement, in intellectual development, in human leadership are the ends to be sought."

Inter-Class Basketball League

The Senior Class clinched the league pennant on Saturday morning when they won their seventh victory without a defeat. On this occasion the Freshmen were the victims. The Sophomores again surprised the Juniors by trouncing them by a big score. Only two more series of games remain to be played, and while the Seniors are the winners it will be interesting to see how the other teams end the season.

Editorial Comment

Why is an individual proud of his college? Not because of the character of the work it promotes; not because of its past records, or its noble aspirations for the future, but for some distinct characteristic which makes it in some way distinguished. In this, "our little university,"—or the "Old Homestead," we may call it—we have a spirit of democracy with such proportions that we defy any profession of superiority by any institution. A little exemplification will illustrate the above statement. Many Ursinus students are engaged by the College so that their expenses may be handled without embarrassment, yet these students are met socially, or any other way, on equal grounds with all other students. This seems not unusual to us, nor should it, but the same spirit does not exist so evidently in many institutions.

With such underlying principles as our foundation, it is possible for us to be part of a great initiative movement to set an example for other colleges. Now, to keep this machine in good working order, it must be overhauled from time to time and, though at the present time there is no flagrant disorder in our machine, there are many things that we can acquire which will push us farther to the front. The excellent spirit of fellowship existing in abundance has a tendency to make us lax and cause us to forget our responsibilities. We must not merely exist on our laurels, but consciously exert our energies for the elevation of the institution and thus make possible the derivation of a broader and higher degree of intelligence.

There is a decided lack of initiative in regard to coöperation between faculty and students. Of course, the students are the beneficiaries of intercourse with the faculty, but at the same time, the students, Freshmen especially, on account of former dependence and inexperience, do not fully realize what they have at stake. A word or two and a little personal interest by one whose achievements have been honored by a position as a member of the faculty, may be all that is needed to guide in the right path. Those students who come to college at a very early age are just at the threshold of life, with vague and uncertain ideals and a tendency to follow the path of least resistance. The former will be remedied by a provision which will make the latter improbable. Some will say that when a person is old enough to enter college he is old enough to realize attendant responsibilities. Perhaps this should be the case, but the fact remains that it is not, and so long as the college allows the entrance of such students, some provision should be made for their guidance and protection. And then, after they have basked in the sunshine of a life that is clean and serious and intense, they will be better fitted to choose their own courses. They will have had instilled into them the true college spirit.

Viewing the splendid efforts of alumni, friends and faculty of Ursinus to give us better opportunities for mental, social and physical development, their attempt to socialize and humanize every intellectual activity, it is with regret that lack of enthusiasm and coöperation on the part of the student is evident. The only opportunity which we fully grasp is the additional social advantage. This is, indeed, a selfish attitude, and it seems that if the officers of the College are willing to bend their efforts to make our school life more enjoyable and profitable, we should in turn do those things which will advance the more difficult and intricate problems with which they must contend in their plans to make our College more eminent.

Our Y. M. C. A. can make its enrollment more representative and do greater good by catering to every element alike and not confining their work to those whose religious and moral convictions are beyond reproach. There are other more sinful mortals among us who need this spiritual enlightenment. Christian organizations in a school are more essentially to guide and instruct fundamentally rather than for scientific research. Unity must prevail so that any project set forth by the college or its recognized constituents, is not supported alone by any separate body of individuals, but by the entire constituency working together with the same principles and interests. All concerned must cultivate a more adequate and increasingly intelligent participation in affairs that are part of the College.

The opportunity is at the disposal of all, to wake up from our lethargy and not only maintain past standards, but strive to heighten the democratic atmosphere which makes Ursinus exclusive.

H. G. P., '17.

Y. W. C. A.

The interesting and profitable meeting last Tuesday was in charge of Miss Jones. The subject, "As Others See Us", was discussed in a helpful manner. Miss Jones said in part:

If we want to see ourselves as others see us we must make a self-examination, must take time to get underneath our thoughts, motives and actions, and take account of our defects and our good points.

"All is not gold that glitters" may here be applied. Some lives that appear rosy are filled with thorns. Others which seem dull and listless to inexperienced eyes are genuine gold.

Again our actions are often judged by others to be wrong when really the motives which lie in back of the actions make them right. We are told to judge not that we be not judged. If a friend then does something of which we do not approve, let us, especially when all the circumstances are not known to us, give that friend the benefit of the doubt.

But to go to the heart of the matter, it is of little consequence what others think of us. The test lies in what God thinks of us. Men for centuries have been misunderstood and have been persecuted for their stand. Reputation is fleeting, but character is for eternity.

"Man may misjudge thy aim,
Think they have cause for blame;
Say thou art wrong;
Hold on thy quiet way;
Christ is the judge—not they;
Fear not, be strong."

The Rev. John A. Crawford, Norris-town, spoke at the vesper services yesterday.

Alumni Notes

Rev. George H. Miller, '86, has resigned his pastorate at Nescopeck, Pa., and will remove to Durham, Pa., March 15, 1917.

Mr. Ulrich D. Rumbaugh, '14, who gave his lecture "The Sunny Side of Life", in the Trinity Reformed Church, Collegeville, some time ago, will be graduated from Drew Theological Seminary in about a month. He expects to locate in the East.

Mrs. Amanda Heffrich, widow of Rev. W. U. Heffrich, '93, whose father was one of the founders of Ursinus, died recently at her home in Fogelsville, Pa. She was also aunt of E. M. Fogel, '94, Ph. D., and P. H. Fogel, '01, Ph. D.

Miss Katherine E. Laros, '00, for twelve years the head of the Modern Language department in the College for Women, Cedar Crest, Allentown, Pa., has returned to her studies in Columbia University, where she is pursuing work in her chosen field. She has spent the last two summers at the University and expects to complete her work this year for the A. M. degree. She has also spent a year abroad and studied the French Language under efficient teachers in Paris.

Thursday evening, February 15, 1917, Dr. James H. Leuba, '87, professor of psychology at Bryn Mawr College, engaged in a joint debate on "Psychical Research and Materialism" with Dr. James H. Hyslop of the University of Pennsylvania in Witherspoon Hall. In the debate, which became quite heated, Dr. Leuba showed scant regard for "Spirits" and so called psychical Media. He also denied that those who disbelieve in a life after death were materialistic.

George K. Oberholzer, '99, a lawyer and real estate operator of Phoenixville, died there Thursday. Mr. Oberholzer was for a number of years a prominent figure in Chester county affairs. He studied law with Oberholzer and Benham, of Philadelphia; was a director of the Morris Cemetery Company, the Penn Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Chester County; the Masonic Hall Association of Phoenixville and the Mechanics National Bank of that place. He was also a member of the Board of Viewers for Roads and Bridges of Chester County. The deceased was forty years of age.

Y. M. C. A.

The ordinary type of Y. M. C. A. meeting was held last Wednesday evening in the chapel. Mr. Lloyd Yost, '17, was the leader, and did not let the interest lag. The topic for consideration was "Compelled Men," and its very nature, being somewhat obscure, really compelled men to attend and listen. The thoughts which were brought out are taken from that excellent book by Dr. F. L. Pettee of the same name as the topic, and are gleanings from a series of talks delivered before the students of Penn State.

Some of the outstanding ideas were these: The notion of being compelled to do certain things at certain times is very likely to lead to fatalism and yet we all are undoubtedly compelled by character, which is the sum total of our past experience. Fate is nothing but character. Habit, inheritance, responsibility, self-respect, all compel me. But most important is the fact that the love of Christ compels men, turning stagnation into power, and transforming the entire nature.

The Quartette gave a concert at New Tripoli on Saturday evening.

Why Shouldn't You Change Hats

SEMINARY NOTES

Dr. Philip Vollmer, '99, Professor of New Testament Literature, a few weeks ago delivered a series of six lectures on "The Plan of Salvation According to Romans," at Bethel College, Newton, Kansas. Dr. Vollmer has just completed the writing of a book on "The Reformation as a Liberating Movement and its Message to Modern America." The first edition will appear in about two months.

The western members of the Board of Visitors of the Seminary recently spent several days on the campus, during which time they made a thorough survey of conditions. The application of several helpful recommendations, made by them, has made our life here even happier than it formerly was.

Dr. Hoy, one of the pioneer missionaries of the Reformed Church in China and Japan, delivered several instructive and highly inspirational addresses at the Seminary recently. His presentation of the "Macedonian Call" was most telling.

E. V. Strasbaugh, ex-'17, a member of this year's graduating class, preached at Blaine, Pa., two weeks ago. Mr. Strasbaugh will in all likelihood locate in the East.

Last Friday night, in the banquet hall of the Seminary, the student body of Central entertained the students of Bonebrake (United Brethren) Theological Seminary, also of Dayton. This reception is an annual event, and stands as a mute witness to the splendid spirit of Christian cordiality that exists between the two Seminaries.

H. B. K., '16.

A telegram from Coach Thompson to President Omwake conveys the sad news of the death of Mr. Thompson's father, which occurred the latter part of last week. Mr. Thompson, who has been spending some time at his home during the illness of his father, will return to the college in a week or ten days.
