DR. OMWAKE HONORS SENIORS BY BANQUET

Class of 1916 Spends Enjoyable Evening at Home of the President

On Tuesday evening Dr. and Mrs. Omwake very delightfully entertained the Senior Class, at their home on Main Street. At about eight o'clock various groups of the class began to assemble until thirty members from a class of thirty-four were present.

The entertainment of the evening was much varied by combining different thought-puzzling activities with the usual parlor games. A game for mixing the sexes was first introduced. By it a search was made for partners after which the activities went on smoothly and sped the time only too rapidly.

The contests and games were thus continued to the point where each member's ingenuity and originality were exercised in the capacity of producing an original poem. Varied poems were produced and great mirth-provoking effects were experienced when the productions were read for the judges to make their decision. Two prizes were awarded for the best poems. Miss Paul and Mr. Johnson were the fortunate recipients.

The next feature announced was the art in which all could easily engage and in which all members were found to be quite competent. The way was directed to the dining-room decorated in college colors where a happy hour was spent in the participation of refreshments.

Following the repast the class reassembled and sang the "Campus Song." It then bade the host and hostess good-night, gave college yells and the 1916 class-yell with the accustomed vigor after which the members retired to their respective dormitories.

The evening afforded everybody much pleasure and all left Dr. and Mrs. Omwake in a very happy mood, mindful, however, of the sad fact that their student days are drawing to a close and that they can remain together in the capacity of a class at Ursinus but a very brief time. This reception marks in reality the beginning of the commencement season, the season which all have been looking forward to with eager anticipation, yet upon its approaching

LOOSE FIELDING FATAL TO URSINUS

Lehigh Scored Four Runs in First Inning. Johnson Pitches Good Game

The all around loose playing of Ursinus permitted Lehigh to register a triumph at South Bethlehem on Wednesday afternoon. Score 7-5.

Lehigh scored four runs in the first inning and although the home team out-hit their opponents the lead was too great to overcome. In spite of this overwhelming lead Ursinus staged a plucky fight and succeeded in scoring three runs in the eighth inning after Lehigh had a five-run lead.

Coach Griffith picked Johnson to start on the mound for Ursinus. He allowed but seven hits and retired eight men on strikes. Had his support been less ragged the chances are that the tide of battle might have been turned. Three fingers were used by Lehigh, Rawle, Twombly and Hurley. Twombly was hit hard and in the eighth inning was forced to retire in favor of Hurley. The latter gave a good account of himself and held Ursinus scoreless during the time that he worked.

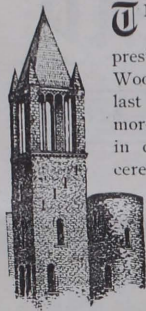

The first inning was fatal to the home team. Twombly secured a walk. Fishburn followed and sacrificed to Johnson, advancing Twombly to second base. Yap, the Lehigh 'chink,' who learned the national game as a member of the famous Chinese team, was next in line and tallied the first bingle of the game, sending Twombly to third base. Then on another hit by Lees, a walk by Winterhalter and erratic fielding on the part of Ursinus, four runs were sent across the rubber. Ursinus did not score in this frame.

In the fourth frame on an error, a sacrifice hit by Lape, and a two-base hit by Kerr, Adams was sent across home plate for Ursinus' first score. Another run was added in the seventh. In the eighth the home team hit very consistently and as a result gave their opponents a scare by increasing the score to five runs as a result of two singles and Stugart's double.

Stugart's stickwork was of the "Ty" Cobb brand. Out of four chances at the bat, he cracked out two singles and

The Tower Window

THE inauguration of J. Campbell White as president of the College of Wooster at Wooster, Ohio, last week was an event of more than ordinary interest in collegiate circles. The ceremonies attracted delegates from colleges and universities all over the country. The representation was particularly strong from the denominational and independent institutions. The coming of Doctor White into the field of collegiate education from the firing line of missionary effort where his success in arousing popular interest in world-wide Christian evangelization, especially among the men of the United States and Canada, was recognized as a significant step not only for Wooster but for the cause of the Christian colleges in general.

In accepting the presidency of a college, Doctor White does not change the great objective of his life—namely, the evangelizing and Christianizing of the world; he merely takes up the task at another point. This was made explicit in his inaugural address. Largely under the statesmanlike leadership of this big Christian layman, the vast missionary fields have been surveyed, denominational responsibility definitely determined and accepted by the churches, the cost of the necessary missionary work approximated, and business-like methods of supporting the world wide propaganda of evangelization established among the Christian congregations from one end of this land to the other. The extent of Doctor White's travels in foreign lands and up and down our own country in the interest of these things made him thoroughly familiar with every agency that enters into the vast enterprise of building up the kingdom of God on earth.

Was he mistaken, when he turned to the Christian college as the field presenting, at this time, the greatest opportunity, and as the agency most in need of being developed in our present stage of civilization? No. It is not overstating the case when we assert that the destiny not only of America, but of the world, will be determined by the degree of influence and service the few hundred avowedly Christian colleges scattered over this land will have in providing the leadership for both church and state in the immediate future. This step by J.

Campbell White should constitute a call to Christian America to look to her colleges. G. L. O.

In Memoriam

AN ADDRESS

Delivered by President Omwake at the Funeral of Augustus Wight Bomberger.

Few persons have sustained so many relations to our institution as did Mr. Bomberger. The son of the founder and first president, he grew up in the college environment. He received his higher education within its walls and in 1882 passed out into the world as a graduate. In his earlier career and again more recently he served with commendable zeal as a director, and he was the father of one of our well beloved students. As an officer of the college, I might say much regarding him with reference to these ties which bound him close to the institution. However, it is not as an officer, but as a friend that I prefer to speak to-day.

Seldom have I found suitable forms of expression with greater difficulty than I do in seeking to set forth that which fills my soul as I stand by the bier of this brother. The common terms in which we ordinarily state our thoughts seem not only inadequate but inappropriate. Even to one whose gifts include not those of lyric speech, every thought of this buoyant and abundant life of which I am to speak seems to compel a song. So completely did his personality in life inspire those who enjoyed his presence to share his own rare atmosphere of joyous living, that even now, in death, he seems to speak only words of cheer, bidding us lift our countenances to the sun, and reminding us that

"God's in his heaven,

In some beautiful lines of his own that I recall in this connection, he followed with a tender father's love the footsteps of his own precious child down to the mossy brink, across the silver stream and into that realm of transcendent beauty and unalloyed happiness whither his own fond father heart has now gone. We faint would peer through the leaves and blossoms and see this lover of children with little ones trooping about him there on heaven's hillside; we faint would pause and listen to the happy voices. It will be helpful to linger with this scene, for in the case of all those who die in the Lord, the distress of parting felt on this side is more than compensated for in what our faith causes us to believe are the joys of greeting and the happy mingling of loved ones over there. If the exercise of one's higher nature constitutes in any way a preparation for the enjoyment of heaven, as we may well believe it does, then what must be the song of this lover of nature, as, set free from nature's pain and physical restraint, he enters into the unbounded freedom of nature's God!

His interest in nature was not primarily scientific but aesthetic. Flowers and birds revealed to him not a material process. They indicated not a dull round of automatic evolutionary cycles telling merely of development with reference to the past and of direction with reference to the future. No, to the sensitive and sympathetic mind of this brother, the song of the bird was the voice of God, the little flower was the light of His countenance, the breath of air, His tender touch. As we think on these things, shall we not have our faith in God's wisdom and resourcefulness greatly strengthened? If he thus bestows the gift of spiritual enjoyment upon his children through the things which constitute our earthly environment, we shall not hesitate to believe that, with the limitations of our physical life cast off, He provides likewise, and even more abundantly, for the enjoyment of the high powers with which he has endowed us, in the infinite freedom of the life beyond.

Beauty, truth, goodness, love—are realities of our spiritual, not of our physical life. We have every reason to expect that they are experiences that go right on without regard to physical dissolution. Indeed we may well believe that they imply states and feelings which in the new and unrestricted life of heaven, are vastly purer and richer than here.

With the assurances of our faith in the continuity of these deeper things which constitute our real and enduring life, shall we say farewell, when one has passed over into this richer enjoyment? Like the resurrection and triumphant ascension of our Lord, the passing of every earnest, faithful son of God is to us an inspiration and an incentive to follow worthily his footsteps.

And so, to thee, husband, father, brother, friend, we speak no sad farewell. We shall miss thy word of cheer, thy kindly act, but only for a time. If earth will seem poorer, heaven will seem richer. The cup of sorrow which we bear, is it not a pure white calyx yielding the fragrance of sweet memories, and unfolding within itself the sure promise of life everlasting?

Editorial

During the past few years a cankerous and insidious evil has crept in and fastened itself upon our student body. At first this was considered lightly, as a mere pleasant competitive diversion, but later experiences have proved that its cankerous development has so distorted the hitherto common aims of the students that its presence has become most pernicious. I am referring to society spirit; not the upright and commendable competition between our two societies, but the lower, intriguing spirit which has recently obtained.

We realize that this is an unpleasant and delicate subject to approach and would fain wish to ascend above the material before discussing it, in order to view it more impartially and to fully comprehend its significance. We believe, moreover, the time is at hand when its almost disgusting activities and its detrimental results should be brought to light so that each one may decide to do his and her part in ridding the school of this octopus. It may seem like the opening of an old sore, but we believe this to be necessary to be certain there is no remaining infection which would on the slightest provocation cause its presence with renewed vigor.

It is a well known and obvious fact that such a thing as referred to has arisen among the members of the two societies of Ursinus. I say members of the societies in justice to the high ideals for which both of the organizations stand, the object and attitude of the founders being utterly at variance with this new and, must we say it, childish spirit. Zwinglian and Schaff are alike responsible for its origin and for permitting its continued presence among us. As is quite natural each is prone to thrust the blame upon the other. Granted this is commendable, why not each do the magnanimous and forgive and forget?

Its destructive influences and tendencies have spread to all branches of student activity. None seem immune from it. Even the athletic field is a frequent scene of its evidences. The evil it here works is inestimable. What a handicap there is to the essential good feeling and unity of effort when one member of a squad is unduly critical of another; and when we are aware that the origin of such antipathies is this absurd society spirit we can more nearly appreciate the pettiness of it all. What can be more paradoxical than to think that this unchristianlike attitude finds subtle expression even in the Christian organizations? Yet such is the case and cannot be denied. The same is true of all other activities. Whatever is attempted is always impeded and affected by this omnipresent society spirit-weevil, a miserable little insect persistently attacking hopeful undertakings in the inception—a pest dwarfing the achievements of our student body.

Even more to be deplored are its effects on the personal life of the students. Individuals are avoided and snubbed by others, dislike is created among them, for no other underlying reason than the fact that they belong to different societies. Is this in accordance with Christian and democratic principles? Is this in accordance with the ideals of our Alma Mater? Is it consistent with true and noble manhood and womanhood?

This is a matter for the private and serious attention of every one. No one seems entirely free from it. Let us therefore look closely within ourselves and see that we do not harbor any of this unjust and offensive element. Our societies have recently been the cause of many undercurrents of malice among the students. Yet our societies are also a cherished and necessary adjunct of our institution and honorable competition among them is commendable. But in the future let us view this matter in the light of the greater things which our societies stand for, and in the light of the loftier conceptions of real men and women.

P. J. L., '17.

Y. W. C. A.

The meeting on Tuesday evening was in charge of Miss Borneman. Her subject was "Medical Missions." She spoke in part as follows: "A medical missionary is one who by his knowledge of modern medicine can plant the roots of Christianity among ignorant people. His purpose is to win men to Jesus Christ by such methods as He used as the Great Healer of bodies and the Divine Savior of souls.

"The arguments for medical missions are manifold. The native doctors are entirely ignorant of the qualities of medicine. In China frequently those who fail to pass examination for literary rank or those who are unsuccessful in business become the doctors. Besides being ignorant the people are very superstitious. Illness is believed to be the vengeance of a demon upon the individual and to be cured it is necessary to obtain the good-will of that demon.

"If more medical missions could be established there would be opportunity to bring the message of courage to more sufferers. With the knowledge and training they receive in these missionary hospitals they are able, upon release, to assist in bettering the economic, social and religious conditions of their people."

Y. M. C. A.

"What Would Jesus Have Us Do?" was the topic that had been assigned to Mr. Philip May '19, for discussion in the regular religious meeting of the Y. M. C. A. last Wednesday evening. A small but devoted bunch listened to Mr. May's carefully prepared talk, and participated in the service. In part, the speaker said:

"What Christ would want us to do is a peculiarly appropriate question for us to ask ourselves at this time when it seems as if the whole world were in the chaos and disorder of strife and hatred. Christ wants us to look at the world through His eyes. In these days of war, He would have us be at peace with all men. Forgiveness was one of the principles of Christ's life, and He wants us to be forgiving. It is our duty to supplant force as the ruling motive in this world with love.

"The ideals which He gave mankind He would have us follow with our lives' devotion. Without compromise, we must declare our allegiance to His kingdom, and follow Him in self-forgetful service."

Literary Societies

Zwinglian Society

The miscellaneous program in Zwing on Friday evening before an unusually large audience was opened by a very well interpreted piano solo by Miss Craft. A dialogue by Messrs Yoch and Wildasin followed. They presented a modern version of a scene from Shakespeare's, "Two Gentlemen from Verona," which proved extremely amusing. Mr. Jones then treated the society to a violin solo played with skill and technique. Mr. Weiss followed and rendered a choice vocal solo with his usual pleasing expression. Perhaps the most enjoyed number of the evening was a short sketch led by Miss Brant. The setting was local and the characters and references provoked much laughter. Another musical number followed in the form of an enlivening chorus led by Mr. Wintyn. The oration of the evening was delivered by Miss Rogers. Both the composition and presentation were excellent. Miss Rogers deserves much commendation. A very humorous and well written Review was read by Mr. Savage. Mr. N. K. Wiest gave the Critic's Report.

Schaff Society

The second of the inter-class debates was held in Schaff last Friday evening. On this occasion the discussion was between the Sophomore and Senior classes, and both sides presented a spirited debate. Messrs. Johnson and Bemisderfer representing the Seniors upheld the affirmative side of the question Resolved, "That the United States Should Have a Government-owned Merchant Marine." Messrs. G. Deitz and Kochel and Miss Rosen composed the Sophomore team. The judges, Mr. Richards, Mr. Koons and Miss Schweigert decided in favor of the affirmative. The house also decided in favor of the affirmative.

The musical numbers of the evening which were very well performed, consisted first of a piano solo by Miss Hinkle. Miss Hyde was leader of a mixed quartet composed of Miss Schweigert and Messrs. P. Deitz and Messinger. Messrs. Trucksness and Paladino played a flute and violin duet. Mr. Ruetzer read a well written and very witty Gazette. The program was concluded with the Critic's Report by Mr. H. Gingrich.

The baccalaureate sermon on the evening of June 4 will be delivered by the Rev. Daniel Hoffman Martin, D. D., pastor of the Fort Washington Presbyterian Church of New York city.

Alumni Notes

We note the following article in the "Moving Picture World" of April 29, 1916, concerning Mr. McCollum, who was a popular member of the class of 1915 of Ursinus. The article is headed, "H. H. McCollum Marries Authoress," and reads as follows: "One of the pleasantest happenings at the George Kleine studios last week was the marriage of H. H. McCollum, who has attracted so much attention recently by his splendid work in support of Harry Watson, Jr., in George Kleine's "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer." The bride in the case is no less a person than Lottie M. Meaney, authoress of the big Cort theatre success "Pay Day." The marriage occurred Sunday last at the Little Church Around the Corner. The happy couple are installed at 343 St. Nicholas Avenue, New York, where McCollum is now experiencing the many domestic joys that come the way of travel-tired actors on similar occasions."

Ursinus Men at Dayton

Of the six Ursinus men in the graduating class, four were elected to charges before the year closed. Lockart will be located at Bremen, Ohio; Jacobs at Thorneville, Ohio; Yoh and Bear have been elected to charges in Pennsylvania, Wetzel and Yingst will probably locate in the East also.

What was pronounced as "the best quartet Central ever had" was disrupted by two of its members graduating this year. Five full programs were given during the winter in Dayton and neighboring towns, besides numerous other engagements being filled. Three Ursinus men—Yoh, '13, Wetzel, '13, and Small, '14, were members.

Of the nine Ursinus men in the two lower classes at least seven will remain in Ohio during the summer, supplying vacant charges.

A prize of fifteen dollars in gold for the best paper from the middle class on the subject of missions was awarded to Small, '14, who wrote on the subject: "The Obligation of the Protestant Church in the United States to Mexico."

After an absence of over a week, due to the death of his father, Bomberger, '17, returned to classes last Monday.

On the Campus

The drawing of rooms for next year will take place in the college chapel at 10 o'clock a. m. on Tuesday, May 23.

President Omwake spoke to the students of the West Philadelphia High School on last Wednesday morning and delivered an address on the united campaign for Christian education before Philadelphia Classis of the Reformed Church in the afternoon. On Thursday he spoke at the commencement of the Theological Seminary at Lancaster, Pa., and on Friday at the inauguration of Dr. J. Campbell White as president of the College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio.

The Biology II class has again started field trips under the guidance of Professor Crow. Valley Forge will be visited on Thursday.

Professor Yost did not meet his classes on Wednesday of last week, because of his attendance at the meeting of Philadelphia Classis held in Mt. Hermon Church, Philadelphia.

The Senior class, last week, planted their class tree on the campus. The tree, a scarlet oak, is expected to add very much to the appearance of the already beautiful grounds.

A new and attractive folder has been issued by the college under the supervision of the secretary, A. H. Hirsch. It sets forth clearly and pleasantly the advantages of Ursinus and contains many beautiful cuts of the college and college activities. It will no doubt prove an efficient agent in interesting prospective students.

Early morning bird walks with the Dean are becoming quite popular with the girls.

Pictures of the baseball squad for the 1918 Ruby were taken last Tuesday by Gilbert and Bacon.

realization all feel much keen regret.

The occasion was a pleasing event in the life of the class, not alone because of the entertainment, but because it brought the members of the class together in a much desired relation, thus uniting more closely their friendships, and because it assured the class of the friendly and congenial relations existing between itself and the head of the College.

Freshmen Trim Sophomores

In the regular annual Freshmen-Sophomore baseball game which was held at 9.30 Saturday morning on Patterson Field, the Freshmen triumphed over their competitors by the score of 5 to 2. The winners played an exceptional game. Barkley pitched excellent ball, striking out 13 men and allowing only three hits. Kreckstein's batting for the Freshmen featured, while the catching of Richards was of high calibre. Diehl pitched a nice game, and except for loose fielding, should have held the Freshmen to a lower score. H. Gulick fielded well for the Sophomores. The score :

a two-bagger. Doc Kerr also increased his batting average by swatting out a single and a two-base hit. A change was made in the batting order, Lape batting as 'clean-up' man. This is Lape's first season as a regular 'Varsity man and he is giving a very good account of himself. He is a Lebanon High product and according to all appearances will remain a fixture on the team.

The team as a whole has shown considerable improvement in the past few games, especially in hitting. We must not forget that Coach Griffith had to whip a new team into shape in the beginning of the season and the recent games have been played with teams of no ordinary calibre. Lehigh is rated as having the best baseball aggregation in years and taking these things in consideration we should be proud of our team and support them whether they win or lose. Score :
