INTERESTING LECTURE FOURTH IN COURSE

Dr. Andrew Johnson Takes For His Subject "Eli and Dennis"

The fourth number of the lecture course of the college was heartily received by a large audience last Wednesday evening when Dr. Andrew Johnson gave his well-known lecture, "Eli and Dennis." Dr. Johnson entertained his listeners with many jokes and amusing stories. These not only proved entertaining but also acted as the basis for a score of good thoughts. Eli and Dennis were names used to symbolize two types of people. Eli represented thrifty prosperous, happy man; Dennis, the unenterprising, discouraged one.

The lecturer spoke in part as follows: "Life often takes as its motto 'Get all you can; can all you get.' If this plan is followed then we have an Eli, but if it is lacking, in Dennis lies the trouble. It is the person with the money who can control the community and it is Eli who generally has this success. But money does not count for everything. It can buy the daily necessities—coal, food, clothing and shelter, but it can not purchase those thrills which make the nobler man. Just as a bank is valued according to the manhood in it, so each individual is valued, not according to what he has, but according to what he is. It is easy to get rich but in doing so it is necessary to neglect the highest standards of morality.

"If you want to be happy, healthy and wealthy you must get out of your life all the unnecessary things in order to make room for individual thought. The superfluities are as injurious to the making of an Eli as large corporations, with their watered stocks and bonds, are to the success of the small merchant. You must learn to think for yourself and not use your hands to do what others think out for you. Thought is the way to progress. The engine originated in the head. That head was taken to the shop where it caused each part of the invention of the mind to be moulded into the concrete object. Most of the inventions are of the man's origin. This is because the woman's position in the

CHARLES F. DEININGER
Retiring Editor of the Weekly

The WEEKLY has had a very successful year under the efficient administration of Charles F. Deininger, '15, of Newark, N. J., as editor. The publication has been enlarged from four to eight pages. Mr. Deininger deserves the highest praise for the conscientious manner in which he has acquitted himself in this capacity.

At a recent meeting of the faculty, Mr. Deininger was named as the valedictorian of this year's senior class. The WEEKLY extends its hearty felicitations to him in the attainment of this higher honor.

He also represented Ursinus in the Intercollegiate Contest which was held at Lafayette on last Friday evening.

Oratorical Contest

The annual contest of the Pennsylvania Inter-Collegiate Oratorical Union was held on Friday evening at Lafayette College. The program was as follows: "An Explanation of Pan-Germanism," Carl Shrode, Swarthmore; "A Chosen People," J. S. Hollenbach, Franklin and Marshall; "The Science of Human Life," W. R. Amberson, Lafayette; "The Despised Race," C. F. Deininger, Ursinus; "The Handwriting on the Wall," J. H. L. Trout, Gettysburg; "Peace in Armor," H. L. Snyder, Muhlenberg.

VARSITY MEETS DOUBLE DEFEAT

Ursinus Vanquished by Seton Hall and Princeton

The Ursinus College varsity nine suffered a double defeat during the past week, losing to Seton Hall at South Orange on Friday afternoon, 5 to 0, and to Princeton's fast team on Saturday by a score of 10 to 0.

The Ursinus boys were practically helpless before the delivery of Whelan, Seton Hall's clever pitcher, and except for Johnson's single when he batted for Miller in the ninth, the Red, Old Gold and Black representatives would have been let down without a hit. On the whole the boys showed the lack of sufficient practice owing to the disagreeable weather. Ziegler deserved credit for his work on the mound, and it was directly due to his efficient work with men on bases that the score was held to five runs.

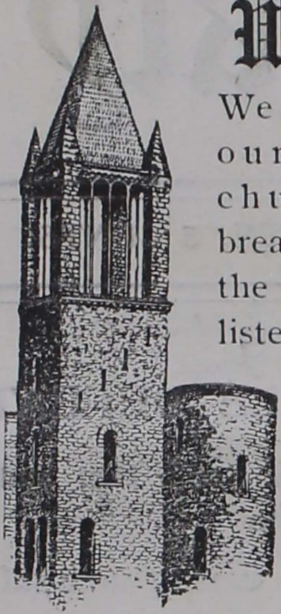

On Saturday, Princeton was easily master over Ursinus. Again, Ursinus failed to hit, having only two singles off Link, Princeton's pitcher. Princeton kept their initial sack vacant until the eighth inning when Miller reached third through a base on ball, a stolen base, and a passed ball. Features of the game were Link's pitching and Hoyt's spectacular catch of Johnson's long drive in the sixth inning. Scores:

The Tower Window

WHAT means Easter to the student?

We have come back from our homes and our churches. We have breathed the fragrance of the Easter flower; we have listened to the choir's triumphant refrain, "Christ is risen," to the beautiful hymn, "I Know that my Redeemer liveth;" we have been edified by the comforting message of the busy preacher made happy by the large gathering of earnest people and encouraged by the presence at the altar of many who for the first time professed their faith in the Christ. To us whose paramount interest is to build up a body of experience predominant with intellectual quality, all this should be inspiring and peculiarly significant.

Christ's resurrection was for him a moral and not a religious achievement, although it has magnificent religious import for us. It was a triumph that in simple justice should follow a life in which personal sacrifice for the sake of principle marked every act. Were the tomb to be the end of such a life the world would ever have cried out against the bitter injustice, just as it now sings its paeans of triumphant joy. Easter means then that personal sacrifice in the interest of truth and right, even in the midst of apparent failure, means triumph.

My faithful fellow-student, if you have labored all through the long evening in working out a difficult translation in order that you may gain a knowledge of the language in which it is written, and although your recitation next day may be halting and imperfect as compared with that of him who, by dishonest means, appears to surpass you, be not dismayed. Zero cannot be the end of such effort any more than the tomb could be the end of the Christ—your ultimate triumph is certain.

It should be kept in mind, also, that the results of genuine intellectual effort have significance for all time. The elements of knowledge are spiritual entities. What you are at any time can be described only in terms of your experience—the sum and summary of your thoughts, feelings and deeds. These are not material things and their chief significance is in the world of ultra-physical experience. They belong to the

Despots of a Republic

D. STERLING LIGHT, '16.

Certain newspapers accuse the president of exercising autocratic and despotic powers for imposing, on Congress, his attitude on the Panama canal tolls question. The partisan orator, in the town hall or opera house, paints vivid word pictures of Mr. Wilson as the incarnation of Julius Caesar, Nero or Napoleon. The minority congressman clamors that the manacles of presidential authority shackle the hands of individualism in the national representative body. Much opposition seems to be arising against President Wilson, especially among his political opponents. His unusual success in exercising his power over Congress is the chief cause of this opposition. But, what are these so-called autocratic and despotic powers of the highest executive authority, and, how has Mr. Wilson employed them?

The powers, granted to the president by the constitution and those, added by usage, are numerous. However, he exercises four principal powers through which he determines the character of his administration. Of these powers, two are weakening to the prestige of the president while the other two are strengthening. The weakening influences are the appointment of ambassadors, consuls, as well as similar diplomatic officials, and the negotiation of treaties, while the strengthening tendencies are the appointment of postmasters, revenue collectors, as well as other like officers, and the somewhat absolute powers in war times.

At first glance, it appears that the appointment of ministers and ambassadors would greatly increase the president's domination, but this is not a fact. These appointments usually originate with the president or the state department, which is an organ of the president, and must be satisfied by the Senate. It is not unusual for one strong senator to prevent the confirming of an appointment, so that when the president learns of the opposition of a strong senator, he must frequently make concessions to that senator to remove the opposition. Thus, the president often becomes badly entangled with the Senate, which, as a rule, compels him to come to terms. There were several instances of this in President Wilson's recent appointments.

The power to negotiate treaties contributes very little to the president's real strength and has, at times, humiliated strong administrations. It is true that the president has the whole Department of State behind him in drawing up these treaties, but the Senate has jealously guarded its authority to ratify them and has frequently changed the whole tenor and intent of a treaty through its privilege of amendment. President Roosevelt and Secretary Hay were powerless to save the first Hay-Pauncefote treaty which was amended to such a degree that England rejected it. Almost single-handed, Charles Sumner defeated President Grant's San Domingo treaty which was submitted to the Senate in one of Grant's strongest messages.

On the other hand the appointment of postmasters and revenue officers is one of the chief forces strengthening the presidential position. More than five thousand posts of this nature must be filled by each president. It is impossible for him to make a personal investigation into the character and record of every applicant for these offices, so that he must depend upon the recommendations of the members of Congress. As a rule, every member tries to secure several appointments and it is through these appointments that the administration can control the majority of Congress, for the administration and the majority are usually of the same party. The party organization at home is almost invariably managed by the federal office-holders, so that a careful selection of these officials secures a favorable party organization throughout the country. The strength to be gained in this way is plainly evident. This party patronage constitutes the greatest force behind the president.

War is the other feature which strengthens the position of the administration. It is true that a president cannot declare war, but he can place affairs in a state that will make a declaration of war unavoidable. In times of war, the president is vested with greater authority than on any other occasion; he directs the operations of the army and the movements of the navy; any conquered territory is under his domination, and, in cases of extreme necessity, his word becomes law, even over the national domains. But the real strength, supplied to the president through war, lies in his freedom to act almost entirely without the restraint of congress.

However, to learn the actual power of a president, one must study the man rather than the office and its incumbent prerogatives. As in the parable of the talents, so, in a governmental sense, he who employs his political pieces of silver to the best advantage, becomes ruler over many things while the one, who buries his, is deprived even of that which he had. There are many instances which illustrate that the power of the executive head depends principally on the character of the man.

Among the Colleges

Lafayette is considering the adoption of lacrosse as an inter-collegiate sport next year. This sport is growing rapidly among the colleges. It holds a very prominent place among the sports of Lehigh at present.

In June Governor Brumbaugh will receive an LL. D. from Lafayette.

The honor system is rapidly finding a home among the American colleges. 135 of the 395 colleges have at present some form of an honor system in operation.

Co-eds at Northwestern University, Chicago, are to play baseball for the first time in the history of the institution. The games will be seven innings in length.

Francis Dunn, Dickinson star football player for several years, and a graduate of the school, has been elected coach for the coming season.

Seventy-one colleges are giving credit courses on the liquor question. Of the comparative large number of colleges offering this course in the east, Pennsylvania has but one.

The University of Michigan has organized gym classes for faculty members.

Freshmen at the University of Alabama are seriously considering the question of matrimony. It may be that there is some inducement because a married man in the first year class is exempt from wearing the first year cap.

A compulsory fee for student activities is being considered at George Washington University. The fee of five dollars will be so divided as to entitle the student to a subscription to the university weekly and annual publications, as well as a number of other activities.

The student discipline at Lehigh including the enforcement of the honor system is in the hands of 14 students.

Professor Langdon of Oxford has recently found the oldest college book known to-day. It was probably written about four thousand years ago and is a small clay tablet.

The University of Pittsburgh has recently adopted the semester system to replace the former system consisting of three terms. It is believed that the standard of scholarship will be materially raised by the new system.

The Pennsylvania Building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition was dedicated on Thursday, March 18, in the presence of a throng of visiting Pennsylvanians and ex-Pennsylvanians who now reside in California and other States of the West.

Editorial

The newly elected staff assumes its honored position of responsibility with the editing of this issue of the WEEKLY. It is not insensible to the high standard of work which must be produced in order that it may compare favorably with the work of the retiring board, and with this thought in mind, the staff will continue its work during the coming year. We believe that the work of last year's staff has, without question, met with the general approval of all persons who are in any way interested in this publication, and, in view of this fact, we deem it wise to continue, as far as possible, the policy which has been followed during the past year.

In order to edit a paper which shall be truly representative of the college, it is absolutely necessary that we have the co-operation and assistance, to a certain degree, of the student body, members of the faculty and the alumni of the college, for we believe that to the degree which this constituency of the college takes an interest in the work, to that degree will the efficiency of this publication be proportionately increased or diminished. It shall be the aim of the present staff to do its part toward the production of a paper which will be worthy of our college.

It is a well known fact that this publication is issued under the auspices of the alumni of the college. We, therefore, consider it our duty to give them the proper representation in the column which has been set aside for their exclusive use. Our means for obtaining the desired information is limited, and, in some cases, the items which are published are not altogether authentic; however, not due to any fault of ours. We feel that the alumni can be of material assistance to us if they will, from time to time, forward suitable articles for publication in this department.

Criticism, in the best interest of the paper, will always receive careful consideration, for we believe it is conducive to good results; however, we would suggest that all criticisms be properly directed and submitted in good faith.

With these few suggestions, the new staff formally begins its work for the current term with the hope that the coming year will be productive of a publication which will be truly representative of Ursinus. L. F. D., '16.

Literary Societies

Zwinglian Society

A debate held the attention of the society on Friday evening. The question for consideration was: Resolved, "That the present system of conducting final examinations at Ursinus College is unwise and should be abolished." The subject, although somewhat hackneyed, was of vital interest to every member present, and the society showed its appreciation for the efforts of the speakers by its applause.

The affirmative side of the question was argued by Messrs. Bahner, Greiman and Pritchard, while the interests of the negative side were looked after by Messrs. Koch, Wiest and Lamont. The rebuttal speeches were delivered by Messrs. Pritchard and Wiest, for the affirmative and negative side respectively. All the debaters gave a good account of themselves, but especial mention should be made of the work of Mr. Pritchard, whose clear insight into the question was of material assistance in securing the decision for his side. The judges, Messrs. Shearer and Kerschner, decided in favor of the affirmative, and the house arrived at a similar conclusion.

Other numbers on the program were a vocal solo by Mr. Thena, and a "Sweet Potato" solo by Mr. Weiss. The Sophomore Debating Team was then elected and Messrs. Hain, Grove and Lehman were chosen to serve in this capacity.

The criticism of the evening's program was made by Mr. Boyer.

Schaff Society

The newly-elected officers were installed at the meeting on Friday evening, and after the gavel had been handed over to him by the retiring president, Mr. Hartranft, the new executive, Mr. Kilmer, made a neat speech of acceptance to the society, in which he outlined the work for the ensuing term.

A spirited debate on the question Resolved, "That the Monroe Doctrine as developed and applied by the United States should be abandoned as a part of our foreign policy" was the main feature of the program. Messrs. Yeatts, Bemisderfer and G. A. Deitz upheld the affirmative side, while Messrs. Light, Gobrecht and Richards argued for the negative side of the proposition. While both sides developed excellent lines of reasoning and showed careful preparation, the judges rendered a unanimous decision in favor of the negative debaters.

Miss Seiz sang a pleasing solo and responded to the applause with a well-chosen encore. The Schaff Gazette, written by Miss Rosen, was read by Miss Miller. The program was concluded with some helpful remarks by the critic, Mr. Beltz, who showed that, as a whole, the meeting was quite up to the usual high standard.

TO THE READER.

The weekly edition of this paper is eight hundred copies. At the present subscription price of only One Dollar it is necessary that the edition represent paying subscriptions in order that the paper may be self supporting. Until this end is reached the copies that are not paid for are mailed as samples.

The Weekly is sent only to persons who are interested in the work of Ursinus College. We feel assured, therefore, that whether this paper has come into your hands as your very own or as a sample copy, it gives you a delightful hour in which your spirit is refreshed by the contact it affords with the buoyant life of college boys and girls and the inspiring influences of the college itself.

If the paper you hold is merely a sample copy it means that this happy experience will be denied you next week, and indeed may never come again, unless you remove all doubt about it by sending an order at once to the Business Manager. The fact that you have this sample copy shows that we have not yet reached the required number of subscriptions and that we will therefore greatly appreciate your dollar.

Alumni Notes

A bright and interesting parish paper comes from the Dryland Reformed church, near Bethlehem, Pa., of which the Rev. Charles A. Butz, A. M., '99, is pastor. The current issue reflects a busy and successful church life in which the people seem to follow with becoming loyalty the progressive leadership of their able pastor.

Miss Edna Claire Booser, '10, of Steelton, Pa., continues as an instructor in the school conducted by the Church of the Brethren at Grantham, Pa. In scholarship and teaching ability Miss Booser enjoys the confidence of her students and the patrons of the institution.

Rev. P. H. Hoover, '98, of Bloomsburg, Pa. paid a visit to Collegeville during the past week. Mr. Hoover is meeting with great success in his church. During the Easter season he received seventy new members into his congregation.

Dr. Charles E. Wehler, '87, Vice President of Hood College, was one of the speakers at a special meeting of the Presbyterian Brotherhood in Frederick, Md., on Friday, March 26.

Trinity Reformed Church, Philadelphia, received 110 new members on Good Friday, making, in all, 175 additions since January 1. "All departments have been greatly stimulated as a result of the Sunday campaign," says the pastor, Rev. J. M. S. Isenberg, '93.

George R. Eusminger, '14, who is a teacher in the South River, N. J., High School, was also the efficient coach of the basket ball team representing that institution. Several weeks ago his team was defeated by the New Brunswick High School five, after a hard fight, for the championship of Middlesex county. The team was exceptionally light, but its excellence is indeed evident from the fact that they were victorious in ten of the fifteen games played.

Rev. D. U. Wolf, '75, of Myerstown, Pa., is confined to his bed by an attack of pneumonia. The most recent reports are that he is improving.

Rev. Charles B. Heinly, A. M., '00, of the York High School, spent Easter in Collegeville and called at the college. Mr. Heinly is a successful teacher and is holding a responsible position. He has under his tuition several boys who will come to Ursinus next year.

realm that knows not the limitations of time and space. The resurrection of Christ was a spiritual triumph. It should impress us, as no other event in history, with the permanent character of our spiritual life. At Eastertide we should be reminded that education is the process by which we build up this life, and that intellectual endeavor, therefore, has significance for all the ages.

Do you see then the importance of a rich intellectual life, and in relation to this, the wisdom of making the most of your opportunity in college? Here you are preparing for life—life temporal, and as Easter suggests, life eternal.

Christian Organizations

There was a joint meeting of the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. on Wednesday evening. The leader was the Rev. Calvin D. Yost. He delivered a very good talk, one from which every college student could get valuable advice. He emphasized the fact that our lives are moulded and shaped by our thinking. He proceeded to prove this from the standpoint of nature, bringing out the fact that no two plants are identical. What is true in nature and mankind is true in our intellectual lives as well. This is due to the fact that each one forms a world for himself. We are what we are largely by heredity and environment, but we may shape and mould our future lives by our individual efforts and attempts. It is true that we get a great many things from our ancestors, but at the same time the important factor in bringing about changed conditions is our thinking. The condition of Europe to-day is due largely to the thinking of a few men. It is a case where thought is working itself out in the lives of individuals.

Thinking shapes one's life. Action lies deeper than the mere impulse of the moment. "As he thinketh in his heart so is he." Man must have something to anchor himself to, for there is not much originality in the thinking of the average person. The average individual thinker accepts the best of other men's thoughts. The best book to acquaint one's self with is the Bible. It is the fundamental anchor to which we should hold fast. The problems of life must be decided by right thinking and not by impulse. Therefore, let us read the "Old Book," and let it be the basis of each one's thinking.

THE CURRICULUM

embraces four years of work in the arts and sciences leading to the degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science, and includes

SEVEN GROUPS OF COURSESI. THE CLASSICAL GROUP

This is a course in the liberal arts with special emphasis upon the Latin and Greek languages. It is specially adapted to fit students for the theological schools and for general work in the teaching profession.

II. THE LATIN-MATHEMATICAL GROUP

This group has exceptional disciplinary value and provides a broad general culture. It constitutes an excellent group for students expecting to make teaching their life work.

III. THE MATHEMATICAL-PHYSICAL GROUP

This group includes advanced courses in mathematics and the sciences. It is designed for students who wish to teach these subjects, or who wish to pursue courses in high grade technical schools.

IV. THE CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL GROUP

This group is designed primarily for students who expect to enter the medical profession and for persons who wish to become specialists in chemistry and in the biological sciences.

V. THE HISTORICAL-POLITICAL GROUP

This group furnishes thorough preparation for the study of the law, and enables students who expect to teach to become specialists in history, economics, political science and public finance.

VI. THE ENGLISH-HISTORICAL GROUP

This group fits the student for a life of letters in general and offers exceptional advantages for persons expecting to enter the educational profession.

VII. THE MODERN LANGUAGE GROUP

This group affords special advantages to students who expect to enter the field of literature, or who desire to become specialists in teaching the modern languages.

Oratorical Contest

At a recent meeting of the Junior Play Committee, it was decided to present the play, entitled: "The Junior," on Saturday evening, May 8, at 7-30 o'clock, in Bomberger Hall. Several musical numbers will be rendered between the acts. The caste is working hard to make the play a success and all should try to lend encouragement by being on hand that night. Admission, 25 cents. Watch for further announcements.

"Then, too, to be an Eli you must be headed in the right direction. Dennis says, 'I'll do nothing unless I am paid for it.' There is no success with such a rule. He forgets that jobs worth while were done without pay. Peter, Paul, Calvin and Luther suffered much, but did great good for humanity. Christopher Columbus was rewarded for discovering America by being left to die in chains. The sanitation which the people of Cuba and Mexico enjoy today was bought with the lives of three men who sacrificed themselves to prove that the mosquito carried the deadly germs of the yellow fever. These martyrs show to you that life is not made up of what you spend, but of what you do. God comes to each one of you as he did to Solomon and asks your choice. If you choose wisely you become an Eli, but if your choice is unwise, then you are a Dennis, in whom nothing remains. The impressions of today knock out those of yesterday, and those of tomorrow, the impressions of today. In Eli the power of retaining things has developed a consciousness of manhood.

"The universe was built on loyalty and no one can hope to succeed without it. The student who copies another's work injures himself. Soon he will be before the world. Then how will he solve his problems? In the twilight of life he learns his mistake. Some day God will ask, 'Is the world a better world for your having passed through it?' If your answer is 'no' then instead of being crowned as Eli, you will suffer and be called dense as Dennis."
