GEORGE C. HAND & AVERY.

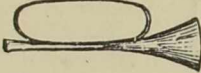

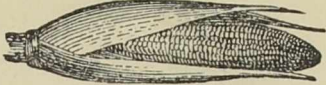

It is often said that folks now-a-days are a deal wiser than their fathers and grandfathers; but I don't think so; for who has ever written books like Mother Goose, Mother Hubbard, and Mother What's-her-name, that lived a great while ago? and books for children, too, little dears. How many of them owe their lives to the influence of their soothing songs and lullabys! The world would not have been half peopled, had not these old sages once lived and written their invaluable little books for children.

When the doctor sends for physic for a nervous little chick, make a mistake, and go to the bookseller's and buy Mother Goose in Hero-glyphics; that's what is wanted — a pretty book, written with pictures, as they wrote in Egypt a long while ago, when folks knew something, — about the time when Mother Goose herself was a little gosling.

Yes, buy one of these little books, and when it is torn up, buy another, and another, till the wee ones are old enough to read Robinson Crusoe, and the like. My word for it, there is nothing like books with pictures, to keep children quiet; and this is the best that was ever written, as everybody knows
