

for myself," writes Mr. Quaife, "I have undertaken no thorough-going study of this controversy, but so far as I have gone into the matter my impressions coincide with the conclusions of Chittenden, and until a new and abler critic of Astoria shall appear I am content to accept his seasoned judgment in the premises."

The latest addition to the Lakeside Classics will be appreciated for its readability and for its convenience. This book will fit into one's coat pocket and will make an agreeable companion for a week-end trip, or will afford more than one evening of real entertainment at home.

J. ORIN OLIPHANT

---

"A Scrap of Paper." By W. T. DOVELL. (Seattle: Privately Published, 1924. Pp. 19.)

Not long before his death, Mr. Dovell read a paper before his associates of The Monday Club giving his recollections of the treaty broken with the Nez Perces and the remarkable leadership of Chief Joseph in the war that followed in 1877. Mr. Dovell's boyhood was spent in Walla Walla, not far from the beginning place of that war. He says that he and his boy friends were easily terrified by mention of Chief Joseph's name. How the judgment of manhood looked upon that broken treaty may be felt from this paragraph:

"We have called it the 'Nez Perces War'—perhaps because the conquerors chose to dignify the mighty effort it cost them by that name. It was not a war; it was a single flight; and in all history no hegira swifter, bolder, or, in one view, more pathetic."

The author carefully assembled dates and facts from documents to fortify those held so vividly in his memory.

After the author's death, one of his law partners, Mr. Otto B. Rupp, had this beautiful pamphlet published as a tribute to the one "who had gone on before."

---

To Oregon by Ox-Team in '47. By FRED LOCKLEY. (Portland, Oregon: The Author, 1243 East Stark Street, 1924. Pp. 16.)

Mr. Lockley is a newspaper man. He starts his booklet with an interview with Jephtha T. Hunt, County Commissioner of Marion County, Oregon, whose father, G. W. Hunt, crossed the plains in 1847 and who went from Oregon to California in 1848 to participate in the gold mining rush. Jephtha T. Hunt asked the newspaper man to condense the story in his own words. The last two-thirds of the work is a compact story well worth saving in this permanent form. G. W. Hunt was a relative of Wilson Price Hunt, a partner in the John Jacob Astor enterprise of 1811.

---

Unveiling of the Memorial Stone to Peter Skene Ogden. By FREDERICK V. HOLMAN. (Portland, Oregon: Oregon Historical Society, 1924. Pp. 16.)

The address delivered on October 28, 1923, by Mr. Frederick V. Holman, President of the Oregon Historical Society, has been reprinted from the Quarterly of the Oregon Historical Society. The ceremonies were held in the Mountain View Cemetery, Oregon City, to honor the memory of the humane and historic character of Peter Skene Ogden, Chief Factor of the Hudson's Bay Company. Mr. Holman treats the subject with commendable sympathy.

---

Hawaiian Historical Society, Thirty-First Annual Report. (Honolulu: The Society, 1923. Pp. 48.)

Pages 37-40 contain an article, "The Identity of the Oregon Mission Press" by Howard Malcolm Ballou. In this Quarterly, Volume XIV, (October, 1923), pages 291-298, there appeared an article entitled, "Hall's Visit to Oregon in 1839." It was E. O. Hall who brought the famous printing press to Oregon during that visit in 1839. Mr. Ballou has found some additional material about the old press which he has placed in the above publication.

---

The Red Man in the United States. By G. E. E. LINDQUIST. (New York: George H. Doran Company, 1923. Pp. 461.)

The subtitle of the book is "An Intimate Study of the Social, Economic and Religious Life of the American Indian." Preceding the title-page is this statement: "The Committee on Social and Religious Surveys, which is responsible for this publication, was organized in January, 1921. The Committee conducts and publishes studies and surveys and promotes conferences for their consideration. Its aim is to combine the scientific method with the religious motive. It cooperates with other social and religious agencies, but is itself an independent organization. The Committee is composed of: John R. Mott, Chairman; Ernest D. Burton, Secretary; Raymond B. Fosdick, Treasurer; James L. Barton and W. H. P. Faunce. Galen M. Fisher is Executive Secretary. The offices are at 370 Seventh Avenue, New York City."

Hon. Charles H. Burke, United States Commissioner of In-