

Contributors

Dr Henry King studied English Literature at the University of Glasgow, UK, receiving his Ph.D. in 2014. He has taught literature and both academic and creative writing at Malmö University, Sweden, and American Studies at the University of Southern Denmark. His previous work on Kenneth Burke has appeared in The KB Journal (Summer 2018).

Joanna Wilson-Scott received her PhD from the University of Leicester in 2018, and lectures in literature at Bishop Grosseteste University in Lincoln, having previously taught at the University of Gloucestershire and the University of Leicester. In 2019 she was a Postdoctoral Visiting Research Fellow at the University of Oxford, and is the Susan Manning Postdoctoral Fellow at the University of Edinburgh for 2021-2022.

Seunghyun Hwang is an assistant professor in English Language and Literature at Incheon National University, South Korea. He earned his PhD in Theatre at The Ohio State University, USA. He also collaborates with the Korean theatre company Theater 2 Moments. His research interests are in British Renaissance theatre, Modern British and American theatre, and adaptation.

Vahit Yaşayan received his MA and PhD degrees in American Culture and Literature from Hacettepe University. He conducted research as a Fulbright Visiting Fellow in the Department of English at Harvard University in the 2018-2019 academic year and specializes in masculinity studies, American cultural history, and western studies at Erzurum Technical University.

Ali Rezaie is an assistant professor of English at Southern University and A&M college. His article “Cultural Dislocation in Monica Ali’s Brick Lane: Freedom or anomie?” has been published by The Journal of Commonwealth Literature and he is the chief editor of SUBR English Composition Handbook. His research focuses on issues relating to culture, politics, religion, migration, and identity.

Ari Helo (Ph.D) is a Visiting Research Fellow at the University of Helsinki and previously taught intellectual history at the University of Oulu and cultural studies at the University of Vaasa. As an ASLA-Fulbright and Academy of Finland Fellow, he has also worked at the University of Virginia for several years. His books include Thomas Jefferson’s Ethics and the Politics of Human Progress (Cambridge University Press, 2014) and History, Politics, and the American Past: Essays on Methodology (Routledge, 2020).