

DIXON, THOMAS

Dixon Volumes Are Donated By Lee B. Weathers

In the spring of 1945, largely through the efforts of Lee B. Weathers, publisher of The Shelby Daily Star, a valuable gift of books from the personal library of the novelist Thomas Dixon Jr., and several of the original oil-painted illustrations for his novels were given to the college.

This was only one of the many ways in which Mr. Weathers has supported and worked for the college through the years.

He has helped in practically every fund-raising drive over the years, giving of his own substance and influencing his friends to give.

He has always given generously of the news columns of The Star to the news of the college and its activities.
