

3-1-2019

Acknowledgements

Carly M. Celestino

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarship.richmond.edu/lawreview>

Part of the Courts Commons, Judges Commons, State and Local Government Law Commons, and the Supreme Court of the United States Commons

Recommended Citation

Carly M. Celestino, Acknowledgements, 53 U. Rich. L. Rev. ix (2019).
Available at: <https://scholarship.richmond.edu/lawreview/vol53/iss3/2>

This Prefatory Matter is brought to you for free and open access by the Law School Journals at UR Scholarship Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in University of Richmond Law Review by an authorized editor of UR Scholarship Repository. For more information, please contact scholarshiprepository@richmond.edu.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The University of Richmond Law Review is incredibly excited to present its 2019 Symposium Issue: The 50th Anniversary of the Fair Housing Act—Past, Present, and Future. Each year, the Law Review hosts a Symposium which seeks to critically examine and debate a specific area of law. This year, we celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the Fair Housing Act (“FHA”). We were honored to host an outstanding assembly of scholars and practitioners to reflect on the social and legal precursors to the FHA, evaluate its impact to date, and anticipate the role of the Act in providing equal access to housing in the future.

The Law Review hosted the Fair Housing Symposium on October 5, 2018, at the University of Richmond School of Law. The event began with a Keynote Address delivered by the Honorable L. Douglas Wilder, the first African American Governor in the United States, who led the Commonwealth of Virginia from 1990 to 1994. We were honored to have Governor Wilder at our Symposium and we thank him for his contribution; a transcript of his address begins this issue.

Following the Keynote Address, the Symposium featured four panel discussions, a Lunchtime Address given by Sara Pratt of Relman, Dane & Colfax, and concluded with Closing Remarks given by the Reverend Benjamin P. Campbell of Richmond Hill and St. Paul’s Episcopal Church. These discussions centered on issues of gentrification, the contemporary face of housing discrimination, and access to both education and housing. An adapted version of the Lunchtime Address and a transcript of the Closing Remarks are also included in this issue.

In addition to speaking at the Fair Housing Symposium, some of the scholars in attendance authored scholarship on the topic of Fair Housing. We would like to thank Professor Richard Sander of the UCLA School of Law, Professor Olatunde Johnson of Columbia University School of Law, Professor Allison Bethel of the John Marshall School of Law, Professor Valerie Schneider of Howard University School of Law, Megan Haberle and Philip Tegeler of the Poverty & Race Research Action Council, and Professor Michael Diamond of Georgetown Law School for their contributions to this issue.

Hosting such a successful Symposium would not be possible without the hard work of the administration, faculty, alumni, and our very own Law Review members. We would like to extend a special thank you to Professor Carol Brown for all her help planning and organizing the event, as well as serving as a moderator for one of the panels. Without her, we would never have been able to assemble such an impressive collection of speakers. We would also like to thank Professor Kimberly Robinson for serving as a thought-provoking speaker on the “Access to Education” panel.

Additionally, we would like to thank Mary Ruth Walters for her work publicizing the event and Leigh Deignan for her help with many of our budgetary needs. We thank Maureen Moran for her assistance in registering the symposium for Continuing Legal Education Credit. Finally, the Law Review would like to thank Carl Hamm for all his multimedia help before, during, and after the Symposium. Thanks to Carl’s expertise, the Symposium can be viewed on the Law Review website.

The Law Review would like to thank Dean Wendy Perdue and President Ronald A. Crutcher for their dedication and leadership. We also appreciate the guidance and insight of Professors Carl Tobias and John Douglass, our esteemed faculty advisors.

We want to extend a huge thank you to Glenice Coombs, Law Review’s Legal Publication Coordinator. Her knowledge of the traditions of the Symposium played a key part in making the event so successful. Without her, timely publication of the Symposium Issue would be impossible.

This year, Law Review added a new position to our staff, the Assistant Symposium Editor. We were fortunate to have Matt Lasher fill this role and set the tone and direction of this position for years to come. I personally cannot thank Matt enough for all his help.

Lastly, I would like to thank the entire Law Review staff and the executive board (Emma Greger, Charlie Brooks, Emily Benedict, Emily Palombo, Kurt Lockwood, and Sherfón Coles-

2019]

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

xi

Williams) for their efforts during the Symposium and the editorial process. Specifically, I would like to thank So Ra Ko, Law Review's Editor-in-Chief, for her outstanding leadership and her immense knowledge of the Bluebook. I was incredibly lucky to have such a hardworking and passionate team.

The University of Richmond Law Review hopes you enjoy the Volume 53 Symposium Issue: The 50th Anniversary of the Fair Housing Act—Past, Present, and Future.

Carly M. Celestino
Symposium Editor, Volume 53