School prayer vote is forthcoming from Senate

By TOM RAUM Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After weeks of talk, the Senate is ready to vote on a proposed constitutional amendment that would overturn the Supreme Court's 22-year prohibition against government-sanctioned, spoken prayer in public schools, with both sides predicting an extremely close vote.

Opponents of the school prayer amendment predicted they would be able to block passage of the measure, which requires two-thirds majority — or 67 votes if all 100 members of the Senate vote.

And, despite a last-minute lobbying effort, President Reagan appeared to have gained few converts to support the proposal that he has made a major reelection campaign issue.

Senate leaders scheduled a final yes-or-no vote on the proposal for 3 p.m. EST today.

Even if the proposal wins passage in the Republican-led Senate, its fate in the Democratic-controlled House seemed uncertain.

"It's still to be won or lost. We may not know until we vote," said Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., who has been an active sponsor of the amendment. "There still aren't enough votes to win and there still aren't enough votes to lose."

Despite an intensive weekend lobbying effort by the president, Baker said that only one or two additional votes had been picked up. However, enough undecided senators remained to tip the balance in either direction, Baker and other supporters claimed.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn.,

leader of the anti-amendment forces in the Senate, told reporters: "I think it's going to be close, but I don't think the president is going to succeed."

The president on Monday invited 20 senators to the White House to lobby personally on behalf of the amendment. But only four of the senators showed up, and two of them — Baker and Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., had already announced their support.

Of the other two, both Sen. John Chaffee, R-R.I., and Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., are opponents of the measure.

To become part of the Constitution, the amendment would require approval of two-thirds of those voting in each house of Congress and ratification by three-fourths of the states.

At the outset of the prayer debate, Senate leaders characterized it as having the best chance of all the so-called social issues pushed by Reagan in his 1980 campaign and since taking office.

Other proposed measures dear to New Right conservatives — prohibitions against school busing and abortion, an effort to limit the authority of federal judges and a proposal to balance the federal budget — have all been defeated by Congress.

The proposed amendment reads: "Nothing in this Constitution shall be construed to prohibit individual or group prayer in public schools or other public institutions. No person shall be required by the United States or any state to participate in prayer. Neither the United States nor any state shall compose the words of any prayer to be said in public schools."

Shuffling of Kentucky's 'slammer bill' snagging passage of state's tough drunk driving penalties

By CHARLES WOLFE Associated Press Writer

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The "slammer bill," a Senate measure to stiffen penalties for drunken driving, has been sent back to the Kentucky House of Representatives because the Senate would not agree to a major amendment.

By a 19-16 vote, the Senate on Monday refused to concur with a House amendment that would require sentencing hearings in drunken-driving cases.

If the House refuses to delete that provision, Senate Bill 20 will go to a conference committee, in which leaders of both chambers would try to find a compromise.

Opponents of the amended bill said it would create a logjam in district courts and actually discourage county attorneys from prosecuting drunken-driving cases.

Supporters of the bill countered that the conference-committee process could produce a measure bearing little resemblance to the original.

Sen. Doug Moseley, R-Columbia, said the House version should be given a chance to work. If it proved cumbersome, it could be changed by the 1986 General Assembly, Moseley said.

Sentencing hearings currently are held only in capital-offense and persistent-felon cases. Upon conviction of the defendant, a sentencing hearing — essentially a second trial — is held so the jury can recommend a penalty.

Under the House version of SB

20, a jury in a drunken-driving case would consider the defendant's previous record, including his history of drug or alcohol abuse, in the sentencing

Sen. Michael R. Moloney, D-Lexington, said it would have "created the best defense lawyer's full-employment benefit act that the commonwealth has ever seen."

"You're doubling the (court) docket," added Sen. David Karem, D-Louisville, "plus opening up a hole for a good defense attorney."

Karem said he could envision drunken-driving cases being lost because no social worker was assigned to a defendant to determine his history of drug or

Karem also said he thought county attorneys would get swamped with such cases and "take the easy way out" by pleabargaining the charge down to reckless driving.

Sen. Henry Lackey, a Henderson Democrat who was the bill's main sponsor, conceded the bill "may slow down the process" in court. But he said drunkendriving offenses were serious enough to warrant the extra trouble.

Moseley, meanwhile, said the purpose of the bill was to keep drunks off the road, not to see that they were all caught.

"If we can keep enough people off the roads, that in itself should cut down on the numbers (of cases) and ease the burden on the courts," he said.

MHS reports 'high' scores on national examination

Several French students at Murray High School have been informed that they have placed high on National French Examinations administered March 10 at Murray State University.

MHS Principal Bill Wells explains that several different levels of exams are given. As the level increases, the tests become more complicated.

Claiming the top position in level two of the competition is Jackie Boltz. Charles Cella, placed second in level four competition.

Jenny Kritzer earned the fourth place honor in level two competition and three MHS French students placed high on the level 0 examination. Claiming sixth place at that level was Bill Maddox with Jimmie Tipton and Joey Rexroat tying for eighth place.

Wells says he is quite pleased with these examination results and proud of the students.

"We were up against many private schools that place special emphasis on foreign languages. These high scores speak well for our program and certainly for the French teacher, Mrs. Sue Spann," Wells added

Paris Landing residents consider incorporation

Claiming they don't get enough support from county government, several residents of Paris Landing, Tenn., are eyeing the possibility of incorporating the area on the shores of Kentucky Lake to form a city.

The area known as Paris Landing is located about 17 miles from the Henry County seat of Paris. Most of the residents are retirees and as one resort owner puts it "practically everyone who moves in here is from somewhere else, it seems to us. We feel like we are the forgotten

Ray Mooso, owner of Overlook Resort, retired to the area from New York.

Mooso and other supporters of the move toward incorporation claim that the county government does not provide enough road maintenance funds for the area and that it does not spend enough on promoting lake area

Henry County Executive Jim Farmer has blamed the lack of tourism promotion in the area on the absence of a comprehensive promotion plan. He adds, however, that the county district including the lake area, received more money than any of the other six county districts for road maintenance last year.

Elvis McLain, a real estate agent in the area, says another concern is the lack of zoning measures in the area controlling "undesirable" development.

"Presently we have no control over the development of the area," he said. "With the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway coming through here in June 1985 there could be a lot ofdevelopment and we want to porating the area.

According to the law, residents must turn in a petition signed by 20 percent of the registered voters within the proposed incorporation area to the Henry County Election Commission as a first step. The commission would then set a date for a referendum on the issue.

The area being considered for incorporation includes more than five square miles which takes in about 270 people. The area includes Paris Landing Estates, Oak Hill Estates and three miles of shoreline from the Eagle Creek embankment to the Swan Bay embankment, according to Billy Sain, president of the association.

The new city would have at least 27 businesses, including resorts, grocery stores and restaurants.

Good news for employers announced

Program now underway to fill needs of business

If you're an employer who has been considering expansion of your work force, the West Kentucky Private Industry Council may have some good news for you.

The WKPIC, through the Purchase Area Development District, is offering an on-the-job training program designed to meet the needs of local employers while helping participants make successful transitions to permanent jobs, says

Jan Schorr of the PADD office. Shorr explains that through this program, employers may be reimbursed for up to 50 percent of the total wages paid to the employee during a specified training period.

The program is available to employers who normally provide year round employment and who are not in violation of any labor laws. Employers must agree to hire prior to training with the intention of retaining the trainee as a regular full-time employee after completion of the training period.

To be eligible for this training program an applicant or potential employee must be considered economically disadvantaged and determined eligible by the Department of Employment Services.

Shorr explains that the applicant cannot have been previously employed by the employer. However, persons with prior training in the occupation selected for training might be eligible for a shortened contract

According to program policy, there are a few cases in which funds are not provided for training. They are:

•Highly mobile, highly competitive industries where minimal employee training is needed.

•Industries with a substantial number of experienced and able workers presently unemployed and available to fill job openings with no extraordinary amount of training. (Approval for exceptions to this policy may be

•Establishment relocating from one area to another within the previous three years shall not be eligible for this program unless it is determined that such relocation did not result in an increase in unemployment in the area of the original location or in any other area where the industry conducts business operations.

Shorr adds that the program falls under the Job Training Partnership Act that replaces the CETA program. The pregram is currently funded until June 30 but Shorr is optimistic that it will be continued for the next year.

Schorr encourages any employer, regardless of the size of the business or firm, to call 753-8325 for more detailed information about the program and its policies.

Smokers' rights on airliners preserved

WASHINGTON (AP) -Cigarette smokers can rest easier today: Their right to light up at 30,000 feet has been preserved

For the second time in three years, the Civil Aeronautics Board rejected a proposal Monday to ban cigarette smoking aboard airliners even if a flight is only one or two hours long.

The decision was praised by the major air carriers who had strongly opposed a ban, saying it would have affected about 90 percent of all flights flown in the United States but still put some airlines at a competitive 'We think it's terrific," Bill

Jackman, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association. Less pleased, however, were members of the Regional Airline Association, which represents the commuter carriers.

The CAB, while refusing to prohibit cigarette smoking on large aircraft, decided to ban all smoking on airplanes of fewer than 30 seats. The ban's impact is not expected to be great since 90 percent of the airlines that fly small planes already prohibit

Hazel's Schnautz is honored as 'Tree Farmer of the year'

Hazel tree farmer Edward Schnautz has recently been named the Kentucky Tree. Farmer of the Year by the American Forest Institute.

Gov. Martha Layne Collins announced Schnautz the winner for his "outstanding work in managing his 162-acre tree farm in Calloway County.

State Forestry Director Donald A. Hamms said, "Mr. Schnautz is an outstanding example for other Kentucky forestland owners to emulate. Kentucky needs many more such owners who will take an active role in managing their forest products."

Schnautz has made annual timber harvests from his tree farm since 1975, according to the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet.

Donna Herndon, director of alumni affairs at MSU, explains that as the Century Club program progresses, features are being added to help attract more contributors.

Those who like the idea of becoming Century Club members but who may not have $100 to donate all at once may arrange with their bank or savings institution to have a specified amount withdrawn on a certain date each month to be paid directly to the Century Club scholarship fund.

Another incentive for several contributors is matching money donated by their employer to the scholarship fund. Herndon reports that several employers in the area offer a matching fund program for their employees who contribute to education. A list of these is available in the Alumni Affairs office.

In order to insure that the Century Club scholarship program will be an on-going one, the Alumni Association has started a perpetual Century Club fund. A portion of the contributions received are placed in this perpetual fund so that interest is generated to fund the scholarships on a long-range basis.

PROCLAMATION SIGNING — Murray Mayor Holmes Ellis has signed a proclamation declaring March 29, 1984 as World Population Day in Murray. In making the announcement, Ellis cited that fact that the projected population of the world by the end of the century will be 6 billion. The current population is 4.6 billion. Ellis noted that 75.2 percent of this population live in developing countries where growth rate is the highest. Murray State University, Murray City and Calloway County schools and the Murray-Calloway County community have currently planned several activities in conjunction with the event. Pictured above with the Mayor are (L-R) Judith Kingsley, coordinator of the steering committe for world population and Sally DuFord, a member of the publicity committee

Murray Mayor Holmes Ellis has also signed a proclamation declaring March 21, 1984 as Home Economics Day in Murray. In making the announcement, Ellis cited the fact that over 600 students, teachers and parents will visit the city and university to participate in the annual competition at the college. The event is chaired by Mrs. Sally DuFord, assistant professor of Home Economics and Judy Payne, professor of Home Economics at the university. It was noted that world overpopulation has led to global problems of malnourishment and hunger, economic disaster and resource shortages, environmental degradation and political and social unrest.

Bottom seen in energy cutback

The decline in demand for electricity that accompanied the recession appears to have bottomed out. The nuclear power industry is hoping that its fall from grace has bottomed out, too. A return to vigorous growth in electrical demand would require investment in new power plants in the late 1980s, and that would give nuclear power a chance to make a comeback.

Most likely, utilities will be choosing between nuclear and coal when they begin to plan major new generating stations. The choice may depend on more variables than anyone can forecast at this time, but there is a growing body of opinion that nuclear power could win back the confidence of utilities and the public by means of a complete break with the past in its basic

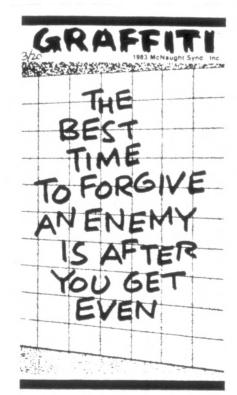

That adds luster to the high-temperature, gascooled reactor, or HTGR, which is a San Diego contribution to nuclear technology. GA Techologies, Inc., more familiar as General Atomic, is the acknowledged world leader in the technology, and built an HTGR which has been in operation in Colorado since 1974. The Gas Cooled Reactor Association, formed by 30 utilities to explore applications of the HTGR, is headquartered in San Deigo.

Advocates of the HTGR say it is not prone to the kind if problems that have beset many power plants using conventional light-water reactors. The HTGR is cooled by pressurized helium gas rather than water, which makes it simpler to operate and maintain, and easier and safer to shut down. An accident like the one at Three Mile Island, or the theoretical case of the "China syndrome," would be impossible with an HTGR, according to those familiar with the technology.

A study recently completed at the Masschusetts Institute of Technology suggests that the HTGR could hold the key to a turnaround for nuclear power. According to one approach under consideration, HTGRs would be made small enough to be shipped from factories to power-plant sites by truck or barge, and strung in a series to generate steam.

The Reagan administration is backing continued federal particiaption in HTGR research and development. So far, private firms have invested $1 billion and the government $500 million in refining the technology. Congress should approve the $35 million requested by the Energy Department to support the research and development in fiscal 1985.

Cost overruns and canceled orders have brought the nuclear industry to its knees and are putting some utilities and their ratepayers through the financial wringer. Still, nuclear fission as a useful energy technology cannot be written off in an age of economic and enviromental uncertainties affecting the use of fossil fuels. When a gap develops between electrical demand and generating capacity, which is bound to occur sooner or later, the safe and simple gas-cooled reactor could turn out to be just what the doctor

Murrayans to play major role in restoration of St. Louis' historic Union Station area

In a few years, you can go to St. Louis and walk through one of the most fabulous convention centers in the world - created by a $200-million renovation project centering around the city's historic old Union Station on Market Street.

Where thousands of trains arrived from and departed for points all over the U.S. for more than six decades, there soon will be built under the spacious, canopied roof which covered the tracks, a sixstory hotel of 700 rooms, a ballroom seating several thousands of people, restaurants and all kinds of interesting specialty shops. There also will be a three or four-acre lake out back where all the switching tracks used to be.

The project is the goal of a citywide, community-coordinated effort to attract major convention gatherings to downtown St. Louis. Spearheaded by a Baltimore, Md., conglomerate, Rouse Company, it is being financed by five St. Louis banks as well as a number of others across the U.S. You can well imagine what a tremendous and complicated financial undertaking such a project involves.

The St. Louis Union Station project is the biggest renovation job currently under way in the United States, if not in the world. What does all this have to do with Murray?

It just so happens that the more than 2,000 window panels that will go into the project will have been made here in Murray

Ben Hogancamp and his people at Lassiter Plaster Company on North 4th Street have the contract to make them — a sub-contract job worth approximately one million dollars to the Murray firm. The over-all, general contractor is a Dallas firm and one of the top five international construction firms in the world

The panels, including 15 different types and mostly 14-by-9-feet in size, will have the windows already installed when they leave Murray. This is a new exterior panel construction concept, says Ben, who has spent a lot of time working with the architects in helping design the

Not only does having the windows already installed when the panels are delivered help to close the job in quicker, but it is a lot easier to put them in while the panel is flat on a table than having to install them high in the air on the side of a building.

To be built in the firm's fabrication shops just across old 641 from its main offices, the panels will be of welded metal and extra insulated with Dryvit, a special product which Lassiter Plaster

The first panels are due in St. Louis in June, and it is expected to take three months to build and ship the 2,000 or so needed

Ben figures they will have sent something like 60 semi-trailer trucks loaded with them to St. Louis by September.

Randy Garland of Dexter will be the superintendent in charge of their construction, and his brother. Gary, the foreman. Some 15 or 20 people will be involved in the job.

Bobby Adams of Coldwater will be the plastering foreman, while others on the job will include Howard and Donnie Garland, also of Dexter, and Randy Kursave and John Hill of Murray.

Ben has been president of Lassiter Plaster since this past January when Lynn Lassiter, his father-in-law, retired after 36 years with the business, founded about 1920 by his father, the late Joe Lassiter.

Richard Knight, who has been with the company for almost 25 years - having started when he was 17 years old - is the secretarytreasurer. Greg Travis is their chief estimator, Patricia Evans is the office manager, and Danna Crouse is their secretary.

Jerry Grogan of Murray joined the company last June as a sales representative. He spends his time seeking out proposed and planned construction projects across their 250-mile-radius market area to be sure the company has an opportunity to bid on the job involved.

CHAWIN

At the moment, the company has major projects going at both hospitals in Paducah, at the Ramada Inn in Mt. Vernon, Ill., and the Bank of Benton as well as at Fort Campbell, Greenville and Hopkinsville in Kentucky, Madison, Ind., and at Clarksville, Tenn., to name a few.

One of the company's most recently completed projects was the installation of all the window panels in the new Executive Inn in Paducah.

Lassiter's weekly payroll averages more than $25,000 a week, and the people making up its crews range in total from 60 to more than 100, depending upon the jobs involved and working conditions.

The Lassiter Plaster people have established an expanding reputation in the industry with their work on all kinds of window panels. Architects, contractors and construction superintendents have been frequent visitors in their facilities to see first hand how the panels are made and the windows installed.

The old station, long a cherished, downtown St. Louis landmark, is especially remembered by thousands of military personnel from three wars, although, perhaps, its heyday was during World War II.

It seemed that regardless of where you were going by train in those days, you had to stop or change trains at Union Station in St. Louis - leaving for service, coming home on leave, departing for overseas service or coming home for good.

Presidents of the United States, dating from Harry Truman back to the turn of the century, as well as all kinds of celebrities and internationally known personalities, were on trains pausing at Union Station, many making appearances before hastily-gathered crowds from the rear of their coaches.

The old station was long a major railroad terminal. Hundreds of trains going across Mid-America either originated, terminiated or stopped at Union Station, backing into the station from more than 30 acres of tracks and switches just south of its massive canopy. Crews changing trains stayed overnight in the historic and sooty old hotel in the station, and many a weary traveler snatched a few winks of restless sleep on one of its ponderous benches with the big arm rests between the seats. Working from recovered architectual blueprints dating back to the turn of the century, the developers hope to restore the old hotel as closely as possible to its original state and grandeur.

Plans call for the waiting room benches to be recovered, refinished and put back where they were in what will become a mall-like area between the restored hotel and the new restaurants and specialty shops. The whole place will be landscaped into almost a junglelike enviroment.

The old canopy over the tracks, 120 feet high at its highest point, is being retained. It will be reworked and will form a cover over some 20 acres of the complex, including the new six-floor hotel to be operated by the Omni chain.

From a 6-by-6-foot scale model of the entire project displayed in the old station today, St. Louisians as well as visitors to the city can get a pretty good idea what is planned for the renovation.

And you can point out with pride to whomever will listen that all its window panels were made right here in Murray.

Kentucky News in Brief

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - State police posts in western Kentucky, where a tornado watch was in effect, reported minor damage or none from high winds and rain.

The National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., issued its watch for a large part of western Kentucky Monday night, as well as for portions of southern Illinois, extreme southern Indiana, middle and western Tennessee, extreme southeast Missouri, extreme eastern Arkansas and much of northern Mississippi. That watch expired at 10 p.m. EST.

Dispatcher Bob Marine said the Mayfield post area had rain and lightning but no severe damage. A shed and two or three electrical poles blew down, and a trailer was slightly damaged, Posts in Henderson and Madisonville said there had been no damage reports.

Occasional showers and thunderstorms were expected today, with highs in the 60s. Mostly cloudy weather was expected tonight and Wednesday with some showers in eastern Kentucky, according to the National Weather Service forecast

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - A $38 million contract should permit the Lake Coal Co. of Letcher County to recall more of its laid-off workers, a company official said.

Steve Howell, executive vice president of Lake's parent company, Howell Corp., said he could not estimate how many employees will return because of the Roxana underground mine's new pact with Central Illinois Power and

The mine is operating at a 1.1 million to 1.2 million ton annual rate to supply the three contracts with Central Illinois, Michigan's Consumers i ower Co. and Gainesville Power Co., he CAVE CITY, Ky. (AP) - Funeral will be Wednesday for Cave City Mayor William Clyde Hubbard, who died Sunday at age 76 at Glasgow's Community Hospital.

Hubbard had been mayor since 1978 and had been a city police judge for 13 years. He also was a former Cave City restaurateur and gift shop

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) - Jefferson District Judge Daniel Schneider has been appointed special judge in a misdemeanor gambling case, replacing Daviess District Judge George Triplett.

The order by Kentucky Supreme Court Chief Justice Robert Stephens said Triplett was removed from the Delbert L. Glenn case "to obviate any possible question as to the impartiality of the trial court."

Glenn's attorney, David Yewell, had sought to have Triplett removed from the case. His affidavit alleged the judge said he would dismiss the charge of possession of a gambling device if Glenn would donate $25,000 to be split among five Triplett's counter-affidavit said the judge "discussed a $25,000 charitable contribution as part of a sentence on a plea of guilty.

Glenn, who owns Glenn Drilling Co., Hercules Petroleum Co. and Diamond Lakes Resort, was arrested Oct. 19 after city police allegedly found a blackjack table and 47 slot machines at his

Schneider said Monday night that he expects to proceed with the March 27 trial date that Triplett set, but he added he would need to check his

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Interior Department will lease no more federal coal reserves this year, except for potential leases already allowed under present law, Secretary William Clark told Congress.

In reporting to Congress his views on the report of a special study commission that examined federal coal leasing, Clark said Monday it would take until the end of the year to revise procedures to allow the department "to responsibly determine whether specific proposed sales will be in the national interest.'

A congressionally imposed ban on leasing expires May 18.

The department had planned to lease at least 2.6 billion, and possibly as much as 6.9 billion, tons of coal in the fiscal year expiring Sept. 30.

The potential leases not affected by the hold are those for which applications were filed before 1976. Congress has banned processing of those applications in some areas.

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) - A scale model of the national Vietnam Veterans Memorial was brought to the Capitol rotunda in Frankfort as a group sought support for a similar memorial in Kentucky.

The architectural model of the monument in Washington, D.C., is scheduled for display in nine Kentucky cities through April 30.

Vietnam Veterans Leadership Program of Kentucky Inc. is trying to raise at least $300,000 for a monument in Frankfort to the 1,049 Kentuckians killed or missing in Vietnam, said spokesman Jack Andrews of St. Matthews.

'These Kentuckians came from virtually every county in the commonwealth," Andrews said at a news conference Monday.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - Three utility workers cleaning a downtown Louisville manhole were hurt in an explosion that apparently followed an attempt by one of the men to light a cigarette, officials said.

All were employed by the Louisville Gas & Electric Co.

Two of the men admitted Monday to Humana Hospital University were in satisfactory condition with second-degree burns of the hands and face, while the third was in good condition with superficial injuries, LG&E spokesman Calvin

Centering studs seems sometimes frustrating

By ANDY LANG

AP Newsfeatures Q. - I have started finishing our attic and have run into some trouble in erecting the studs so that they are exactly the possibility of setting 16 inches apart on center; that is, 16 inches from the center of one wood, which would stud to the center of the next. Every time I drive a nail diagonally into place at the bottom, it seems to shift the stud a bit. Not much, but just a frared heater. I have usfraction of an inch is enough to throw off the 16 inches apart on call. The heater is center idea. Is there some special way to do this?

A. - A professional carpenter will sometimes drive in a nail on one side just enough for it to take hold. He will then do the same thing with a nail on the opposite side. From then on he will alternate tapping the nails into place. In this way, there is little chance of dislodging the studs. Still another way is to nail in one side while you hold your knee against the other side, working very carefully and without too much force. Many years ago, I discovered the surest way to keep the studs the same distance apart was to cut a small length of studding and use it as a spacer between studs. Nail it horizontally just lightly enough to hold. Then nail in the bottom of one stud. The spacer will keep it from sliding. When the nail is securely in place, remove the spacer and nail in the other side. Keep using the spacer as you put up each new stud and they will all be the same distance apart. Just be doubly certain the spacer is precisely the correct size to keep the studs 16 inches apart on center. --

Q. - I read your reply to a reader about removing old paint from the outside of a house. As a painting contractor for 22 years, I would like to tell you what I have learned. Removing paint with a liquid remover produces fumes which are a health hazard. Remov-

In addition to fire to the house, the flames will char the cause a great deal of sanding to take place. A. - Thanks. ---. - We have baseboard heating what is called a hydronic system. Every once in a while there is a slight gurgling sound, not very much, but just enough so it can be heard. What causes this and what can we do about it?

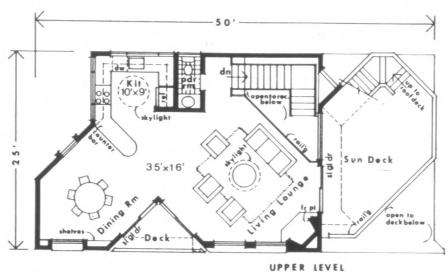

A. - Baseboard heaters are usually trouble-free or almost so. There seems to be ding" inside the tube. which in hydronic heating is copper and thus not susceptible to rust or corrosion. The gurgling can occur. although not very often, if some water is drained from the system and fresh water comes in bearing entrained oxygen. If there is automatic air eliminator near the boiler, the free oxygen might form an air pocket at some high point in the system and slow down the flow of water. In such an event, a small amount of water can be drained with the entrained air until there are no more bubbles. This can be done at the baseboard if, as usual, it has an air vent or at the vent near the boiler. You can get more information about this subject from the Hydronics Institute, P. O. DEAR ABBY: I like this guy I'll call Mike, and my problem is his girlfriend. I'll call her Judy.

It all started when Mike followed me to my locker one day and started talking to me. We seemed to hit it off real well. I could tell that he liked me, but there is just one thing standing between us-Judy.

For a while the minor flirting between us was pretty hush-hush, but the kids started teasing us and then Judy got wind of it. I know Mike doesn't really like her any more, but I heard that he confronted her with his true feelings about me and she broke down, so he gave in and now they're back together again stronger than ever.

Mike hasn't told me what's going on between them, so I am in the dark except for what I hear from my friends who are close to his friends. I have deep feelings for Mike and I know he really likes me, but Judy is in the way. I don't want to lose him. What should I do? NORA (NOT MY REAL NAME)

DEAR NORA: You never really "had" Mike, so 14,000 years ago, scienyou can't very well "lose" him. No boy-Mike intists say. cluded-stays with a girl very long after he's lost his heart to another girl. Time will tell.

If Mike doesn't come around in a few weeks, forget him. Judy has him all locked up, and he appears to be a willing prisoner.

DEAR ABBY: My husband spent many years in prison where he had someone telling him what to do all the time, so I hate to give him any orders, but this is serious. So far it's been two months since he took a bath or washed his stringy hair, and I just can't take it any longer. He thinks deodorants are for sissies and he really smells bad. He looks awful and has dirt in places that nobody except me sees.

Meanwhile he expects me to have sex with him regularly. I love him, but I'm turned off by him and can't find I am immaculate myself and bathe regularly-twice a week. Please tell me what to do.

DEAR NO: Try these words: "Darling, I love you, but you smell bad. Please take a bath, if not for yourself, for me.' DEAR ABBY: I don't mean to sound ungrateful, but I have had it with homemade decorator items from my in-laws with the message, "This will look lovely in your living room or kitchen or den.' Believe me, Abby, lack of money is not the reason for these homemade gifts. I appreciate the thought and effort that went into these gifts, but they are creating a real problem for me. I have my own style of decorating, and these craft items simply do not fit in. I don't want to hurt anyone's feelings, but I also don't want the pressure of trying to remember to get all these items out on display when my in-laws visit. Please tell people to reserve their handicraft items for their own homes. They should not impose their personal taste on another person's home. I know from talking to my friends that I am not the only one with this problem You could do us all a tremendous favor by printing this

McVie awaits return to Fleetwood Mac

The album is "Christine McVie," on Warner Brothers. It was No. 24 and climbing on the best-selling chart of March 10. The single, "Got a Hold on Me," was No. 16 and climbing on that date. Miss McVie says, "It is the music and the sound I like. It isn't meant to sound like Fleetwood Mac. I have been involved so heavily for the last 15 years, if a little didn't rub off on me, it would be a great surprise. I am one-third the writers and onefourth the musicians.'
