Crass: $6,752 storage bill to be paid

By MARK COOPER Murray Ledger & Times Staff Writer

A $6,752 bill owed to Tabers' Body Shop for storage of police evidence will reportedly be paid by the city although the City Council has not formally accepted the charges.

A check for the amount has been made and will be sent to Tabers settling the bill "in full," according to city clerk Jo Crass. The Council, however, has not formally agreed to pay the bill or from which fund the money should be taken. The Council had tabled the issue at its June 22 meeting but did not discuss the matter during Thursday night's meeting.

The bill stems from confiscated items stored by the Murray Police Department at the business during a March, 1988 police investigation.

Many council members voiced concern at the previous meeting over the handling of the bill and criticized the police department for not notifying the council sooner of the growing storage bill, which was allowed to continue for 421 days.

According to city attorney Don Overbey, the council reached "a consensus" before the meeting Thursday to use money from the general fund to pay the bill.

"Mayor Chuck Foster worked it out with Tabers to pay the bill," according to City Councilman Bill Cherry, who said he was notified of the bill being paid when he visited the mayor's office Thursday. Budgeted bill items are not normally discussed or approved by the council, Cherry said, and he assumes the mayor had the authori-

County board approves shorts at CCMS with Thursday vote

By DAVID TUCK Murray Ledger & Times Staff Writer

The Calloway County School Board rejected a recommendation from the high school and middle school dress code committee, saying it is short-sighted that shorts have not been sighted at Calloway County Middle School.

The committee, composed of administrators, parents, students, teachers, and a representative of the school board, voted 5-3 to leave the dress code policy as it was. The policy had read that shorts were allowed at the elementary centers and the high school, but not at the middle school. The board overturned the committee's recommendation 4-1, with members T.C. Hargrove, Walter Byars, Rick Murdock, and Wayne Blackford voting for shorts at the middle school. Chairman Robert McDaniel cast the lone vote in favor of maintaining the old policy.

Hargrove said he had heard the teachers say the students at the high school are happier and do better in class than the middle-schoolers, (because of the dress code that allows shorts at the high

Astronauts to commemorate moon-landing anniversary

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Apollo 11 astronauts kick off a weeklong celebration Saturday to commemorate the 20th anniversary of man's landing on the moon, beginning at the site where their lunar rocket was designed.

They will take part in ceremonies and parties at three NASA space centers and with President Bush in the nation's capital. Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin left the first footprints on the lunar surface on July 20, 1969, while Mike Collins circled overhead in the command ship. The three will start their anniversary trip Saturday at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., where the giant Saturn 5 rocket that propelled them to the moon was designed and tested.

There they will meet with rocket pioneers and attend a reception and an open house concert where the landing on the moon's Sea of Tranquility will be re-created by actors on a stage.

The astronauts will be at the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral on Sunday, the launch's anniversary. Against a backdrop of an unused Saturn 5, now a museum piece, they will make brief remarks and listen to a tape recording of the launch commentary in the minutes before the Apollo 11 liftoff.

The "taped liftoff" will occur at 9:32 a.m. EDT, precisely the time they left Earth.

After the ceremony the spacemen will ride in a motorcade that will travel 20 miles to Cocoa Beach, where they will be honored at a luncheon.

On Wednesday, they will be in Washington for an evening reception at the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum.

The next day, the anniversary of the moon landing, Armstrong, Aldrin and Collins will be joined by President Bush for a ceremony on the Mall in front of the museum.

Bush is expected to unveil a long-term space plan that could include strong endorsement of a permanent space station and proposals for building a lunar research

Burmester tells scholars his 'D' in biology best thing to happen

By DAN LOUDY Murray Ledger & Times Staff Writer

Making a "D" in biology while in college could have been one of the best things to ever happen to actor Leo Burmester.

Burmester spoke to Governor's Scholars at Murray State University Thursday night. He told them about majoring in biology while in college, until he took a "D" in a biology class. He then took a job in the theatre department and became very interested in theatre work. He got a part in the first play he tried Actor Leo Burmester tossed beach balls to the Governor's Scholars, left, and promoted his new movie, "The Abyss," while he spoke at Murray State University Thursday night. He also talked about his upcoming TV series, "Truck One," a show from the creators of "Hill Street Blues." He also advised the Governor's Scholars to find a career where they could be happy and do good things for other people.

school) and that CCHS principal Jerry Ainley had issued just five notices last year to students whose shorts were too short.

"That's a pretty good average," Hargrove said.

In personnel matters, the board voted unanimously to promote assistant football coach Tony Franklin to head football coach, pending the resignation of current football coach Jack Haskins. Haskins is expected to accept an assistant coaching position at Paducah Tilghman. Calloway Superintendent Dr. Jack Rose said the Paducah Board of Education is meeting today and their hiring of Haskins is almost a certainty, although the Calloway Board has not received a letter of resignation from him at this time.

A special session of the Calloway Board was called for Tuesday at 8 p.m. to finalize the resignation from Haskins.

Franklin, a native of Caldwell County, coached three years at Murray High School and has served as an assistant on the Laker football staff for one year. He teaches at the Mayfield Juvenile Treatment Center.

The board also approved Lt. Colonel William Cowan as the county athletic director. Cowan resigned from his post as middle school assistant football coach, although he will still coordinate the Junior Reserved Officers Training Corps program at the high school.

Also approved were Judy Overbey and Francie Ray to work with project WIN at the middle school, as well as teachers Debbie Pardue and Karen Kelso at North Elementary, and Sharon Blodgett Hart at Southwest Elementary. Lisa Polivick was named high school academic team co-coach, and Dana Stonecipher was approved as a substitute teacher. James Pigg was also approved to work with the weight lifting program for five months.

Classified employees approved were Denise Haugh, an instructional aid with the Writing to Read program at Southwest Elementary; substitute secretary Kim Roberts; East Elementary food service employee Betty McPhail; and food service substitute Vickie Hemdon.

The board also approved the Family Life Skills curriculum, as mandated by the state board of education. The family life program will be taught at all grade levels and will follow a model designed by the state, assistant superintendent Dr. Nancy Lovett said. She added that the course will cover all aspects of family life, including decision-making, health, and safety. No date has been set for a public hearing regarding the instruction, but Lovett said the hearing will be within the next two weeks. The plan was modified slightly by a local committee of teachers, administrators, parents, and representatives of the clergy and medical profession, and will be sent to Frankfort for final approval after the public hearing, Lovett said. The course will in place this fall, according to Lovett.

In other business, the board approved an outlay of $10,753.11 for a Macintosh computer system for the high school journalism program, including four Macintosh Plus terminals and a Laser Writer II printer.

Tax on smokeless tobacco killed by House committee

The tax on smokeless tobacco discussed by the state House Ways and Means Committee didn't live very long: the increase in the federal tax on snuff and chewing tobacco was dropped Thursday.

The committee approved on a voice vote an amendment to drop the higher levies, for now, from a $5.3 billion tax package proposed by committee chairman Dan Rostenkowski (D-Ill.).

The tax would have raised the tax on chewing tobacco and snuff to $2.67 a pound instead of the current tax of eight cents and 24 cents, respectively.

Taxes on the tobacco will eventually have to be considered, according to Rostenkowski, who reportedly told the committee the issue might be discussed again when the next tax bill comes up.

The amendment also knocked out Rostenkowski's proposal to raise the tax on pipe tobacco to $2.67 a pound from the current 45-cent rate.

The increases in the three tobacco taxes were expected to raise about $100 million a year. Dark tobacco, which is used in smokeless tobacco, is grown almost exclusively in Western Kentucky and Tennessee.

out for, "Bye, Bye Birdie."

He opened his speech by tossing beach balls and balloons into the audience to "get the crowd's attention." He kept their attention with stories from the making of his movie, "The Abyss," scheduled for release later this summer. He said the movie was along the lines of "Deepstar Six" and "Leviathan," but incorporated special effects never seen before. "This is a much better movie," he said.

One of his stories involved a free swim scene with actor Ed Harris in one of the huge tanks built for the movie. The water in this particular tank was 75 degrees and professional divers were present to take care of the actors in case of emergency. During one moment in the scene, a problem occurred in the tank and both actors looked at each other as if to say, "This is it." Burmester remembered not thinking of his family or anything along those lines, but of being distressed that he might be dying so soon. Luckily, he added, the problem was corrected in time.

During that particular story and for the remainder of his talk, Burmester spoke about taking care of others and doing good things for people. He told the Governor's Scholars that making a great deal of money was fine, but finding a job or position where you were happy and able to do good things for others was equally important.

base and sending Americans to Mars early in the 21st century.

The astronauts then will fly to the Johnson Space Center in Houston, site of their Apollo training base and home for the Mission Control Center that directs all U.S. manned spaceflights.

There they will attend a giant reception on Thursday night attended by 5,000 or more people who will re-create the infamous "splashdown parties" that went on all night after each successful Apollo mission.

Next Friday, they will attend a black tie gala at a Houston hotel. The master of ceremonies will be Walter Cronkite, the former CBS anchorman who reported on the mission for his network.

Dark tobacco growers to be measured: ASCS

The Calloway County ASCS office has been notified that effective July 13, all dark tobacco producers will be measured.

If the measured acres exceeds the effective allotment by more than 0.01 (1/100) or two percent not to exceed .09 (whichever is greater) then the producer will not be eligible for price support, will receive a pink marketing card and will have to destroy back to their effective allotment.

If as a producer you feel that you have excess tobacco, it is important that you destroy the excess now prior to the measurement of your tobacco. Measurement will begin in the near future and will be done by aerial photographs.

It is important that producers are informed of the issuance of no price support cards if excess tobacco is measured.

Brown leaves Humana

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Former Gov. John Y. Brown Jr., who underwent open-heart surgery earlier this month, was discharged from Humana Hospital-Audubon on Thursday.

The former governor walked out of the hospital at about noon.

Brown, who left office in 1983, was admitted to a Florida hospital after suffering chest pains last week. He was transferred to Audubon where doctors determined Brown needed surgery to correct a coronary blockage.

He was in surgery for more than five hours July 6 while doctors performed by-pass surgery on four vessels.

The surgery was Brown's second heart operation in six years.

ty to pay the bill.

But according to Crass, the bill was not a budgeted line item.

Crass said she did not know whether council approval was needed in this particular case but because the police department had funds left over from their 1988 budget, the mayor decided to pay the bill from those funds.

Mayor Foster is on vacation and unavailable for comment.

In other business, three members of the Murray electric plant board — and one member of the housing authority — were reappointed Thursday night by the Murray City Council.

Rob Ray, Tommy Carroll and Clifton Cochran will serve staggered terms on the electric plant board while Irma LaFollette was reappointed to a four-year term with the housing authority.

The board also:

- amended the personnel policies and procedures for the police and fire departments redefining paid holidays.
- requested an ordinance to be drawn rezoning lots 100, 102 and 104 N. 12th Street from B-4 (medium density business) to B-2 (highway business).

Yankee ingenuity comes to the forefront with all clunker owners

We borrowed our friend Paul Leahy's pickup truck to haul some furniture home.

Chomped on the passenger door was one of the finest examples of Yankee ingenuity I've ever seen: an old pair of Vice Grip pliers.

The handle that rolled up the window had broken off, hence the pliers. They worked like a charm.

It's funny how clunkers bring out the engineer in even the most non-mechanical of motorists. I drove a vintage '54 Chevy to Murray State University.

To fire up the heater, you had to twist a couple of blue wires together. They'd spit, spark and scare passengers half to death. But eventually heat would be produced.

On the coldest days, too, the driver's side door latch would freeze. Until the heater thawed the latch, I had to roll down the window and hold the door shut with my left arm, all the while trying to shift gears and steer with my right hand.

To make things more interesting, the gear shift linkage under the hood sometimes would stick. No problem. All it took was a couple of taps with a wrench I carried in the glove compartment just for that.

The car was a hassle, but also a source of perverse pleasure. That seems common among clunker drivers, though I don't understand why.

"Watch out for the gear shift, the knob comes off," Paul warned his wife, Melinda, almost gleefully.

Maybe that ought to embarrass, not amuse. But I understood perfectly. Front seat springs on my Chevy had gnawed through the stuffing. "Don't let the seat bite you," I'd advise passengers, punctuating the warning with a grin some defined as fiendish.

I loved clunking along Ky. 121 in my baby-blue Chevy. About 50 was flank speed. So what if the guys in shiny new Road Runners and Camaros laughed as they blew past me. They had to worry about the state trooper who liked to hide behind the trees at the Calloway County fairgrounds entrance.

The Chevy gave out after 200,000 miles. The guy who bought it put the engine in his pickup truck and used the rest of the Chevy for a chicken house. I called the car the "blue bomb," "clunkers always have nicknames like "land shark," "the barge," "war wagon," "gray ghost," "green monster," "mean machine," "Sherman Tank" and "B.T.U." -- Basic Transportation Unit.

Some clunker jockeys add bumperstickers that proclaim: "My Cadillac is in the garage," "My other car is a Rolls-Royce," "Don't laugh, it's paid for" or "Don't honk, I'm pedaling as fast as I can."

I avoided all that, preferring to let the Chevy speak for itself, which it did loudly on one fateful trip to MSU. The tailpipe slipped off the muffler as I sailed through Stella.

No problem. I just happened to have some old TV antenna wire in the trunk.

Bahamas rescue 'once in a lifetime thing' for unit

MIAMI (AP) — The four members of a special U.S. Air Force Reserve unit who parachuted over the sinking wreckage of a single-engine plane routinely practice the sea rescue maneuver. They've never rehearsed a miracle, however.

The team watched the powerless Cessna 210 spiral into the sea off the Bahamian island of Eleuthera with Thomas Root slumped unconscious in the pilot's seat. When they leaped from the HC-130 Hercules plane 3,000 feet above the crash site, they assumed they would recover a body.

"Then we saw there was a survivor," said Tech. Sgt. Dave Dahl. "It was very special — on the verge of being a miracle. In fact, it was right at miracle."

Root, who passed out after taking off from Washington National Airport about 6:30 a.m. Thursday and flew for nearly four hours on autopilot, was awakened by the impact and managed to hang onto a raft dropped from the HC-130. He was bleeding from the abdomen and is listed in stable condition at Memorial Hospital in Hollywood, north of Miami.

"I was slowly parachuting down then I heard from the plane that he was alive. My first reaction was that they either saw a body floating or they were mistaken," said Staff Sgt. Scott Tracy. "It's almost unreal."

Around the country, nearly 82,000 Air Force Reserve personnel augment the Air Force in crises and in peacetime.

The unit from the 301st Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Squadron in Homestead is one of three such teams trained to "bring 'em back alive," said Air Force Lt. Col. Robert Dubiel in Robins, Ga. The others are based near Detroit, and near Portland, Ore., he said.

"They have to know how to pull them from the water, pluck them off a mountain if they have to," Dubiel said. "They have to be in super condition."

The three squads had more than 400 military and civilian rescues during the past 10 years, Dubiel said. The unit based in Homestead, about 20 miles south of Miami, is credited with 142 rescues in the Atlantic and the Caribbean.

Dahl said there are fewer than 10 sea-parachute rescue missions in any year around the world.

"We wait for years for one of these missions," said Dahl. "For everything to go perfectly like this is just a great feeling."

"Looking back now, the whole scene was incredible," said Sgt. Paul Hayden. "It's like a once-in-a-lifetime thing."

"If everyone would stop mumbling, I could hear just fine."

SOUND FAMILIAR?

Do you always ask people to speak louder, or repeat themselves? Do your friends and loved ones tell you that you play the radio or TV too loudly? If so, you may have a gradual hearing loss. I should know. Before I was fitted with two Beltone Petite hearing instruments, just listening to everyday conversation was a struggle.

Perhaps Beltone can help you too. They'll give you, or one of your friends a thorough electronic evaluation at no cost and with no obligation.

Former aide offers to implicate Pierce

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators eager to determine former Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce's role in abuses at his agency are mulling an offer by a former Pierce aide who reportedly would implicate him in the scandal.

Sources who spoke Thursday on the condition of anonymity said Deborah Gore Dean, who for three years was Pierce's top aide, has told a House panel that if granted immunity she could testify that Pierce personally approved funding for several projects in a program under scrutiny.

Meanwhile, two former HUD officials were to testify today before the panel about a North Carolina housing project that is the subject of questions about Pierce's involvement. Scheduled to testify were Shirley McVay Wiseman and Janet Hale.

A congressional source said the chairman of the House subcommittee on employment and housing, Rep. Thomas Lantos, D-Calif., has "an open mind" about making a deal with Ms. Dean but has made no decision.

Ms. Dean last month refused to answer questions from the subcommittee, invoking her Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. One of the sources said that if granted immunity Ms. Dean was prepared to testify that Pierce ordered funding for numerous projects under the Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation program.

The program was suspended briefly earlier this year and its selection guidelines rewritten after Department of Housing and Urban Development auditors criticized project selections. Auditors said influential Republicans had successfully lobbied HUD officials in favor of projects involving their clients.

Pierce told the subcommittee last month he had no direct role in HUD funding decisions. Since then, however, there have been reports that Pierce intervened on behalf of associates, including a former law partner who was seeking HUD financing for the North Carolina project.

Ms. Wiseman has said she quit her job as HUD's assistant secretary for housing because Pierce ordered her to fund the North Carolina project over the objections of other agency officials.

Pierce replaced Ms. Wiseman with Ms. Hale, now a specialist in the Office of Management and Budget, who in 1985 approved funding for the project.

Pierce has been recalled by the panel but a date for his appearance has not been set.

New HUD Secretary Jack Kemp said earlier this week that abuses at the agency during the Reagan administration — the period of Pierce's tenure — cost HUD in the "ballpark" of $2 billion.

A Kemp aide said Thursday that more than half of that amount, $1.1 billion, was believed to have been lost by just one program, a co-insurance venture administered by HUD's Federal Housing Administration.

Meanwhile, The Washington Post reported today that HUD hired attorney Peter E. Novick to head a program that had losses three years earlier estimated at $240,000. The paper said the losses occurred because Novick made false statements working as a settlement attorney in real estate transactions from 1982 to 1984.

Novick, 47, pleaded guilty May 25 in U.S. District Court to one count of making a false statement and has been ordered to report in mid-August to a halfway house to serve a one-year sentence, the paper said.

Novick had worked for HUD as an attorney before going into private practice. He was rehired by HUD in February 1987 after talking with Thomas Demery, then assistant secretary for housing.

In other developments Thursday: —The Senate Banking Committee voted to launch its own HUD investigation.

—That committee also approved the nomination of Francis A. Keating II as HUD's general counsel, a post that will have a key role in agency dealings with investigations by law enforcement agencies.

—An aide to the Lantos subcommittee said U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills, who was HUD secretary during the Ford administration, will appear before the panel next week to face questions about her lobbying of HUD officials after she left the agency.

—A Houston-area lawyer acknowledged he has been barred from doing business with the federal government because he was slow in turning over some $1.5 million from sales of HUD property. Attorney Larry E. Thomas said he had not kept any money, and a HUD official confirmed that almost all the money had been recovered.

Report to Kentucky

SENATOR WENDELL FORD

U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510

THE PRESIDENT'S CRIME PACKAGE NOT QUITE ON TRACK

President Bush has embarked on a questionable road to the right destination with his recently announced package of crime-fighting proposals.

The President should be commended for addressing the drug abuse, alcohol abuse, violent crime, prison overcrowding and related problems that have become such predominant and highly justified concerns of our entire society. We need to paraphrase a well-known slogan from our history and tell the lawbreakers and violent criminals of this nation that we have just begun to fight back.

It is important, however, to make sure that we use our limited resources as wisely as possible in this emerging war on crime. With this in mind, I have become convinced that some of the President's proposals need to be re-examined, redirected and strengthened to meet the law-enforcement challenges of the 1990's.

As it has been put forth, the President's package places far too much emphasis on warmed-over proposals making marginal changes in laws passed since 1984. In that period, the Congress has enacted 208 separate provisions creating new criminal offenses, raising penalties and giving new legal tools to prosecutors.

We have allowed pre-trial preventative detention. We have abolished parole for those convicted of drug-related felonies. We have enacted mandatory minimum sentences for drug offenders and the death penalty for drug kingpins in murder cases. We have given federal law-enforcement agencies virtually everything they have asked for, but you would never know that from looking at the Bush proposals.

To cite just one of many examples, the President wants a minimum 10-year penalty for using semi-automatic weapons in crimes of violence when the law already provides for a minimum penalty of five years for using any firearms and 30 years for using a machine gun in such crimes.

I have no objection to this and other marginal proposals. But they cannot substitute for the more fundamental changes needed to pave the way for an effective attack on crime.

We need to stop concentrating so much on federal programs and start channeling more funds and information to officials at the state and local levels where the battle is being fought on the streets. We need to explore new ideas -- including the idea of Army-style boot-camps -- to reduce overcrowding and lower the rate at which released prisoners are returning to our jails and prisons. And we need to come up with more than $1 billion in fiscal 1990 to wage a comprehensive attack on drug abuse and related crimes under the tough anti-drug bill enacted last year by Congress.

At this writing, the President has not faced up to funding problems. Without specifying a source of funds, he seeks to spend an additional $1 billion on prison beds and other programs while we are still trying to fund our anti-drug bill in a way that is fair to all Americans. He has an obligation, as does Congress, to put aside easy promises and begin working in a truly cooperative spirit to develop and fund an effective war on crime.

Teacher recalls her own educational experience

Dear Editor:

Mrs. Lillie Farris has been and always will be an inspiration to those of us who were a part of the Kirksey School and community. As our first grade teacher, she always managed to bring out the very best in everyone and have such a good time while doing it.

My fondest memory of Mrs. Farris was in the late 1950's when she took the Kirksey Rhythm Band (first graders) to Nashville on a Brooks Bus to perform on WSM-TV for the Saturday morning program, "Pride of the Volunteer State". I was privileged to be her piano accompanist and made that trip with her. I remember playing The Charleston for her as she danced on the stage during our PTA Variety Shows and who could forget her as Minnie Pearl!

As a teacher now myself, I feel that our students of today may be missing the kinds of school experience that Mrs. Farris and other teachers provided for us. I'm glad I didn't miss them.

Firmly resolved on abortion, sort of

"I never thought you was chick-en," said Stas Grobnik, "but now I gotta wonder."

Chicken, meaning cowardice? Repeat those words and I'll challenge you to step outside and fight my large sons.

"No offense meant, but I notice you haven't said a word about this abortion flap."

I'm simply waiting until all the ramifications of the recent Supreme Court ruling have been made clear. This issue is not as simple as it may appear.

"Maybe so. But in all the years I've known you, I don't remember you ever writing anything about abortion. I mean, you stick your big honker into anything else that gets people hot under the collar, so how come you never got around to abortion?"

Because I've been pondering the issue.

"Pondering? All these years? I seen you come up with wild opinions even before you knew what the argument was about. So what's there to ponder?"

Lots. Can't we just have a beer and talk about the pennant races?

"Nah. I want answers. Are you in favor of a woman having control over her own body or ain't you? Or are you against abortions or ain't you?"

Yes.

"Yes to what?"
Yes, I'm in favor of a woman controlling the destiny of her body. And, yes, I don't like abortions.

Royko Says

By Mike Royko

"Wait a minute. You can't have it both ways."

"I know. That's why I'm still pondering. Why don't we have another beer and both ponder in silence?"

"Quit ducking. So you're in favor of women having the final say about their own bodies, right? I mean, except for getting tattoos on their rumps, which any decent person is against."

"Yes, I believe in that right. However, I think that before they hop in the sack, women should give some thought and care to avoiding pregnancy. I don't like abortion used as a birth control device."

"But accidents happen."

I know accidents happen. But when you have 1.3 million abortions in this country every year, that's rather a high accident rate.

"OK, even if a lot of them are careless, are you saying they should go ahead and have the baby?"

In many cases, yes.

"Yeah, white babies. What about the minority kids?"

That's why I'm still pondering.

"Then ponder this. What does some uneducated teen-age black girl whose mother is on welfare do when she's pregnant? If she has the baby, who's going to take care of it? Who's going to adopt it? You don't see couples waiting 10 deep for those kids."

Yes, that's why I've always favored better education on sex and birth control.

"Where, in the schools?"
At home, preferably, but if necessary, yes, in the schools.

"Hah. Don't you know that a lot of the people who are against all abortions are also against sex education in the schools and telling high schools kids about birth control?"

I'm aware of that. Which is why I favor a law saying that everyone who opposes abortion and birth control and sex education should be required to adopt, raise and suitably educate a minority child born to a poor teen-age mother.

"I like that idea. Jeez, you'd wind up with 50,000 little minority kids running around Vatican City calling the Pope 'dah-dah.'"

I'm sure he'd make a doting dad. And we could put thousands more in the various archdioceses and churches across this country. If they're going to be called "father," let them change some diapers like the rest of us.

"Yeah, but Catholics aren't the only ones who are anti-abortion and anti-birth control or anti-sex education. You got a lot of professors who are fundamentalists or some who are just all-around busybodies and prudes."

I'm aware of that, so I believe we should have special tax.

"People are against any more taxes."

This one might have surprisingly strong support. I would place a special 10 percent surcharge on the income tax of everyone who belongs to any religion or organization that opposes abortion while, at the same time, opposing birth control and sex education. The money would be used to support children who are born to mothers who lacked one, two or three of the above elements.

"You know that ain't going to happen. So what's the real answers?"

Some conservative states will eventually outlaw virtually all abortions. Other states will make very few changes in their present laws and abortions will be readily available. So those who can afford it -- the middle class and the well-to-do -- will travel and get abortions. Those who are poor will have their babies or take a chance with some quack in a basement.

"That's what I think, too, and there will be more poor kids and everybody's taxes will go up and the same people who are yelling about abortion will be yelling that there are too many welfare mamas."

And we'll all live unhappily ever after.

"I'll have to ponder that."

Chances for capital gains tax rate cut have somewhat dimmed

NEW YORK (AP) — While President Bush still supports a cut in the capital gains tax rate, the chances of it occurring this year have dimmed, largely because it got caught up in politics.

Opposition to a cut, which would have made it financially less costly to sell stocks that have risen in value, was largely based on fears among elected officials that the public would view a cut as a gift to the rich.

Lost amid the concern were such arguments that a cut might actually raise federal revenues, helping to lower the deficit; that it might be fairer, and that it might encourage business formations and the creation of jobs.

True or false, the "gift to the rich" brand, promoted by opponents of a cut, is a brand that could harass an elected official for the rest of his or her political days, which could be brief if voters took it to heart.

True, it might help the rich, but true also is the assertion that it might help the less-than-rich, as Professor Lawrence Lindsey of Harvard University indicated in testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee.

Suppose, he said, that 20 years ago you managed to buy one unit of the Dow Jones industrial average, which at the time was selling for about $900. A small investment, to be sure, but one that grew to a high of $2,700 in 1987.

You would have an $1,800 capital gain, which might seem to be a compliment to your great patience and your ability to withstand the risk of violent market ups and downs. Then you figure the tax: state and federal, roughly one-third.

Quite a belt, but that isn't even the tough part. Even tougher to digest is the realization that an enormous amount of that is simply inflation. Inflation is bad enough, but you might conclude that to be taxed on it is insulting.

The fact of the matter is you would have come out a loser — not a gainer — for your risk-taking and patience. Economist Lindsey points out that for you to have merely broken even you would have had to sell at $3,000, not $2,700.

That, of course, would have been impossible, since the Dow Jones industrial average has never in its history reached that level, having plunged right after reaching 2,700 points. It is now around 2,500 points.

Drowned out by the gift-to-the-rich contention is the assertion that a cut would raise federal revenues by billions of dollars a year. The thesis is backed by various studies, but most convincingly by history, since a capital gains tax reduction in 1979 was followed by a sharp increase in revenue.

Dear Abby

Boy Who's Reacing Out Needs a Little Reining In

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My 2 1/2-year-old son is entirely too friendly with strangers. He runs up to people he has never seen before and puts his arms up, asking to be held — and, of course, these strangers pick him up. He's an adorable little boy, and I am glad he's not a shy and withdrawn child, but I am concerned that his friendliness might lead to his being abducted someday. I have tried to tell him not to act that way, but he turns right around and does it anyway.

Is this something I should be worried about? If so, what action should I take to discourage this behavior without offending the stranger?

ARIZONA MOM

DEAR MOM: Don't worry about offending strangers — they should understand a mother's concern about a child that age approaching strangers.

Do more than just "tell" your son; forbid him to speak to strangers. Explain that there are people who could do him harm — and one cannot tell by looking at a stranger who is harmless and who is not. If your child defies you, punish him by depriving him of something he considers a treat — but make that punishment memorable.

Be firm, Mother. Your child needs to be protected, and it's your responsibility to protect him.

thought it was wonderful, but there's no date on it.)

"Dear Abby: Whether this is true or not, I cannot say, but it has an important message, so use it if you wish."

"Several worldly-wise teen-agers were chiding one of their group because of her virginal status. She took it good-naturedly for a while, then quickly silenced them with this remark: 'Should I ever become dissatisfied with my status, I can change it. How about you?' — No Name, Please"

R.R.C. IN BEND, ORE.

DEAR R.R.C.: I would have, but I didn't think of it. I'm glad you did, and I thank you for it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's brother and his off-again, on-again live-in girlfriend were visiting us one evening. During the visit, I was stunned when this woman asked my husband, who is 32 years old, "What would you do if you were 21 again, and knew you were going to be married and have three children 11 years later?"

He answered, "I'd get a shotgun and blow my head off!"

Abby, I thought we had a good marriage. I also thought he loved his children. He is rather moody and can be verbally abusive at times, but I never thought he was that miserable.

Should I leave him and take the children? They are 1, 2 and 3 years old. I am a good wife and mother — or so I thought.

CONFUSED AND HURT

DEAR CONFUSED: Have a heart-to-heart talk with your husband. Tell him you were hurt by his remark because it not only put you down, it was an insult to your marriage. If he really is dissatisfied, and his moodiness and the verbal abuse continue, the two of you should consider family counseling before those little sparks become a bonfire.

Dog biting of postman stops area mail-delivery

LIDO DI CAMAIORE, Italy (AP) — It was a case of dog bites mailman, mail route bites the dust. Many residents in this coastal town north of Pisa have been forced to collect their mail from the post office since postman Carlo Lari lost a war of nerves with a local dog, the Italian news agency ANSA reported Thursday.

According to Lari, the German shepherd barked furiously every time he appeared at a certain house and chased him if the gate was open, the news report said.

But Lari found out the dog's bite was even worse than his bark. After he was bitten, the post office decided to eliminate part of his route, including the house of the dog owner.

Local police had warned the dog's owner to keep the canine tied up and muzzled, the report said.

It did not say when Lari was bitten.

Al Hirt proud of award

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Trumpeter Al Hirt has Grammys and gold records, but he says an award from the New Orleans Saints football Hall of Fame means more.

Hirt, who played during half-times in the Saints' early years, was honored with the museum's Fleur De Lis Award.

"I love this team," he said. He said he was the team's biggest cheerleader during the team's beginnings in the late 1960s.

"We used to play right behind the bench and I'd lead the fans in cheering 'Go Saints Go.' Sometimes I'd forget to shut the microphone off and lead them in something I wasn't supposed to," Hirt said.

The Rev. and Mrs. Jerry Lee and daughter, Tabitha, visited the Rev. and Mrs. Glynn Orr Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitch Sykes went on short vacation June 24-25. Their son, Matthew Sykes, spent the weekend with his cousin, Tabitha Lee.

The comedian-actress, who portrays a sarcastic, overweight housewife in her highly successful ABC television show, is seeking joint custody of the couple's three children.

The youngsters, Jessica, 14, Jennifer 13, and Jake, 12, live with their mother, according to the petition.

The divorce petition does not seek any spousal or child support. The couple married Feb. 4, 1974.

Hirt, 66, no longer plays at games, but he still goes. "This is the greatest team ever," he said.

Toopie Thomas Moore plans trip for area senior citizens on July 26

Toopie Thomas Moore, tour director for Murray-Calloway County Senior Citizens Program, Inc., has planned a trip to Paducah Art Guild on Wednesday, July 26.

One of the featured artists at the Guild will be Maggie Lee Sayre who was born April 4, 1920 in Paducah. She and her sister, Myrtle, lived with their parents, Archie and Mary, in a three-bedroom houseboat on Click Creek in Paducah.

Maggie was born deaf and has never been able to communicate verbally and did not know her name until she was 7. A neighbor provided support for Maggie to attend the Kentucky School of the Deaf in Danville. She attended the school, returning to the houseboat each summer until she was 19.

In the 1930s, Maggie purchased a small box camera. She shared pictures of her school with family and pictures of her home with her friends.

The photos, preserved in small picture books, created a visual narrative of Maggie's life. Her photos show the day to day working life of her family.

Events in their life, spring floods, winter ice on the river, etc., are documented in the photos made between 1937-1965 and on display at the Guild.

The local Senior Citizens group will leave at 8:45 a.m. on July 26 from the parking lot at North Fourth and Walnut Streets. The group will return at 4 p.m.

The cost will be $10 per person. The group will have lunch at Bonanza and shop at Kentucky Oaks Mall while in Paducah. For reservations call Mrs. Moore at 753-8274 or 753-0929.

People, places & games

Athletes who think inhaling pure oxygen helps them are full of hot air, according to a new study. "Using 100 percent oxygen applied for short periods offers no advantage on recovery from exhaustive exercise or on subsequent exercise performance," researchers said in today's edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Where have those guys been? NFL trainers have, according to one, known that oxygen provides little more than emotional support.

"We have only a handful of players who will utilize oxygen," Brian McCaskey, an assistant trainer with the Chicago Bears, said, adding that most trainers know breathing pure oxygen provides no real performance benefits.

"If I have a player who's having a tough time breathing, I'll utilize oxygen, because psychologically, it has a relaxing effect, and that in turn will have a physiological effect and help them get calmed down," he said.

He added that National Football League rules require oxygen tanks to be available on the sidelines at all games in case of medical emergencies.

Researchers, led by Dr. F. David Winter Jr. of Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas, studied 12 members of the Dallas Sidekicks soccer team, the JAMA article said.

Tests on the athletes showed they had the same heart-recovery rates and capacities to perform after bouts of exhausting exercise whether breathing room air or 100 percent oxygen during brief recovery periods.

An accompanying editorial by fitness pioneer Dr. Kenneth H. Cooper and colleagues at the Institute for Aerobics Research in Dallas stated that blood in the arteries is nearly completely saturated with oxygen when people are breathing regular air, making it unlikely that breathing oxygen-enriched air would add any benefit.

George Lesmes, director of the Human Performance Laboratory at Northeastern Illinois University, said, "You're putting more fuel into the engine, but if the engine doesn't have added cylinders to burn that fuel, it's just wasted fuel."

Ironically, previous research suggests the body could clear itself of blood-borne waste products faster if the person walked and breathed ordinary air rather than sat and breathed pure oxygen after exhausting exercise, said the JAMA editorial.

Physical injury could actually result if an untrained person set a regulator incorrectly on a tank and a player was subjected to a blast of highly pressurized oxygen, he said.

"It's like putting a balloon on a pressurized tank," he said. "It's probably not a good idea."

Rod Dibble needs some cool air, whether it has oxygen in it or not. Dibble, a reliever for the Cincinnati Reds, isn't happy about his second league-ordered suspension, but he's most upset about an injury-forced break from pitching.

Watch out. When Dibble gets upset, anything can happen. The Cincinnati Reds' setup reliever was given a three-day suspension Thursday by National League president Bill White for his role in a brawl Saturday in New York.

Dibble also was one of four players — two on the Reds, two on the Mets — to receive fines from White. He said it was "ridiculous" that he got the toughest punishment of the four, even though the fight started when he plunked Tim Teufel on the back with a fastball.

"I don't even think I should have gotten ejected," said Dibble, who hit the Mets' Tim Teufel with a pitch to start the fight. "I didn't do anything."

It's the second time this season that Dibble "hasn't done anything" and been suspended. He served a total of four days earlier this season for throwing a bat against the backstop screen at Riverfront Stadium on May 23 after giving up a run-scoring hit.

Dibble also was fined by White for another incident this season, when he allegedly threw at the Los Angeles Dodgers' Willie Randolph.

The quick-tempered reliever said he won't contest his latest suspension, although he doesn't agree with it. The suspension, however, will still be waiting for Dibble when he comes off the 15-day disabled list because of tendinitis in his right elbow.

Dibble has been one of the most effective setup relievers in baseball. He is 6-3 with a 2.52 earned run average, and has struck out 92 batters in 60 2-3 innings.

The fight occurred last Saturday with the Mets leading 7-0 in the eighth inning. Dibble, who has been clocked at 100 mph this season, hit Teufel squarely in the back and then walked toward home plate to retrieve the ball.

Teufel broke away from the home plate umpire and charged Dibble, throwing two punches before they both fell to the ground in a pile of players.

After order was restored, Teufel charged and the benches cleared again as the players wrestled near the mound.

If Dibble needs recreation during his time off, he can listen to country-western recording artist Jim Terr's latest effort — maybe.

Terr, who has poked fun in country-western songs at Soviet premier Mikhail Gorbachev, and former senator John Tower, now turns his musical ear to baseball and the not-so-funny situation surrounding Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose.

Called "The Gambler-Pete Rose," the song will make it's national debut this week on the CBS radio network.

"It's part of our overall comedy service," said Frank T. Cammarata, director of music-entertainment programming for the network. "It kind of parodies Pete and his predicament. It's very well sung and well written ... and we're anxious to get some feedback from our affiliates on it."

The song lifts along to the tune of Kenny Rogers' hit, "The Gambler." That was the one in which Rogers sang: "You got to know when to hold 'em, know when to fold 'em, know when to walk away, ..."

For Rose, the Cincinnati Reds manager under investigation by baseball for allegedly gambling on his own team, the lyrics were somewhat redone.

"You got to know who's been hittin'/' Know who's been missin'/' Know who's been strikin' out/' And who's got the runs. "But don't advertise your point spread/' Or you'll have to face the eggheads." There'll be time to count the money/' When the game is done."

The song then concludes: "He said, 'Howdy, son, my name's Pete. And do you see all these receipts?'"

"Well you might think you're a baseball fan, but I bet I know the score."

Terr's previous efforts have sold, oh, at least a half-dozen records.

TONY FRANKLIN

Franklin named to succeed Haskins pending resignation

By DAVID RAMEY
Murray Ledger & Times Sports Writer

As expected, the Calloway County School Board named Tony Franklin as the Lakers' new head football coach on Thursday night, pending Jack Haskins' resignation.

Haskins, Laker football coach the past four years, is scheduled to be named an assistant football coach at Paducah Tilghman sometime today at a meeting of the Paducah School Board.

The Calloway Board scheduled a meeting on Tuesday to formally hire Franklin as football.

Franklin spent last season as an assistant at Calloway, after serving three years during 1985-87 as head coach at Murray High School, where he compiled a record of 16-14. He ran a college scouting service for one year.

In another development, Calloway named Bill Cowan as athletic director to succeed Jim Jury.

The two hirings leave Calloway with one vacancy in an athletic staff which has seen a rash of resignations in the past few months. Russ Wall was named earlier this month to succeed Craig Morris as basketball coach, but Calloway is still looking for a successor for baseball coach Randy McCallon, who stepped down in June.

Calloway superintendent Jack Rose said Calloway is not actively seeking applicants for the baseball position, and will probably fill the position from within.

McCallon could also reconsider his surprise decision to resign.

"That's still an option if he wants to," Rose said.

McCallon could not be reached for comment.

Unsigned players dominate league roster as camp nears

By The Associated Press

This is the fourth straight year since the demise of the USFL that NFL training camps will open with a lot of players unsigned. It is a situation that leaves agents fuming at general managers playing hardball.

Reggie White and Mike Quick are threatening to stay out of the Philadelphia Eagles camp. New York Giants quarterback Phil Simms may do the same when the New York Giants begin practice.

And, as of Thursday, only 35 of the NFL's 334 draft choices had signed contracts.

Contributing to the situation is the 80-man training camp roster limit established by the owners last March. Many teams are already at the 80-player level and each new player they sign means they will have to cut another. Washington, for example, has 87 players under contract, but has 10 unsigned rookies and three unsigned veterans.

"It's unbelievable," agent Leigh Steinberg said. "They just don't seem ready to do any business."

Actually, Steinberg has already done business, which may be one reason for the slow pace.

He represents Troy Aikman, the UCLA quarterback who was the first player taken in the draft by the Dallas Cowboys. Before the draft, Aikman signed an $11 million, six-year contract, making him the highest-paid rookie in history. Steinberg has also negotiated a $10 million, five-year deal for Houston quarterback Warren Moon.

The only other first-round draft choice to sign is wide receiver Andre Rison of Indianapolis, who agreed to a $3 million, five-year deal shortly after the draft. Rison was the 22nd player chosen and his signing led to grumbling that he and Aikman had already inflated the cost of doing business.

In fact, of the 35 rookies signed, 27 were chosen after the seventh round.

In the past few years, teams have generally used a "slotting" system basing salary on a player's draft position.

The same kind of system applies to veterans. Washington cornerback Darrell Green wants $1 million a year, but is waiting for the signing of two cornerbacks of comparable worth, Albert Lewis of Kansas City and Hanford Dixon of Cleveland.

"The market will be set by these three guys and it's almost a who's-going-to-go-in-first? situation," Steinberg said.

In the majors

Canseco, Martinez start second half off right

Compiled From AP Reports

A couple of guys who missed the All-Star Game showed out in major league action Thursday night as the teams returned to action for the second half of the season.

Jose Canseco, voted into the game but denied permission to play due to his season-long injury, got back into the swing of things quickly for the Oakland Athletics, while Montreal pitcher Dennis Martinez, who wasn't selected by NL manager Tommy Lasorda, won his ninth straight game for the Expos.

The Expos, averaging 4.5 runs per game when Martinez starts, defeated Cincinnati 6-3 at Riverfront Stadium. "That's the way it's been my last three or four games. Everything's been going our way, especially my way," Martinez said.

"Every time I go out we're able to score some runs. That's how you manage to have a decent year." Martinez, 10-1, allowed six hits in six innings and singled home a run as he set a club record for consecutive winning decisions. Charlie Lea won eight consecutive decisions in 1983.

Martinez's nine victories have come in a span of 13 starts.

At 50-38, the Expos are 12 games over .500 for the first time this season.

The victory kept the Expos 1 1/2 games ahead of Chicago and 2 1/2 in front of the New York Mets.

The Reds have lost four straight and 20 of their last 29. They got some more bad news on Thursday when All-Star shortstop Barry Larkin was placed on the 15-day disabled list with stretched fibers in an elbow ligament.

"It's kind of a tough road to go when you don't have an extra infielder or an extra catcher," Manager Pete Rose said. "I had 21 or 22 (healthy) players and a banged-up bullpen. It can only get

Murray, Hershiser lead LA past Cardinals despite rally

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eddie Murray knows what it takes to win games. He also knows it will take a little more of it the rest of the season.

Murray drove in two runs and Orel Hershiser allowed two runs in 8 1-3 innings as Los Angeles beat St. Louis 3-2 Thursday night.

"I relaxed a little bit," Murray said. "You can't do anything if you are not relaxed."

Hershiser improved to 10-7, allowing six hits before Jay Howell got the last two outs for his 16th save.

"We haven't had anything all year," Hershiser said. "We need to get a winning streak going. This could start something."

The Dodgers started the second half of the season in fifth place in NL West.

Until the ninth inning, the Cardinals had only scored in the third when Hershiser gave up two singles and two walks.

"I don't like to make excuses," Hershiser said. "But in that inning, the sun was right in my eye. I just couldn't see."

Rookie right-hander Ken Hill, who has beaten the Dodgers twice this season, allowed nine hits and three runs in seven innings and fell to 5-5.

In Hill's prior three starts, including a no-decision, against the Dodgers, the Cardinals had outscored Los Angeles 27-2.

With the score 1-1, Kirk Gibson doubled with one out in the third and scored on Murray's single.

In the fifth, Murray singled, Mike Marshall was hit by a pitch, Mike Scioscia walked to load the bases and Jeff Hamilton hit a sacrifice fly. "I think I was swinging pretty decent coming off the road trip," Murray said.

Alfredo Griffin walked leading off the first, moved to third on Willie Randolph's single and scored on Murray's single to make it 1-0.

Jose Oquendo opened the St. Louis third with a single to extend his hitting streak to 11 games and moved to third on Tony Pena's single. After Hill struck out, Hershiser walked Vince Coleman and Milt Thompson to force in a run.

Oquendo added an RBI single in the ninth and has 21 hits in his last 49 at-bats.

"The whole game hinged on the play at third base in the third inning," St. Louis manager Whitey Herzog said. "Ozzie Smith crushed the ball, and (Jeff) Hamilton made a great stop."

The Cardinals had the bases loaded, one run in and one out. Smith hit a grounder to Hamilton near the third base line. He threw to home for one out, and the relay went to first to get Smith for a double play.

"After the third, Hershiser pitched like hell until the ninth," Herzog said.

tion," Green's agent, Kyle Rote Jr., said.

A few veterans have gone in first, notably Cleveland quarterback Bernie Kosar, who got a new six-year deal averaging more than $2 million a season.

But others are staying put. White, the Eagles' All-Pro defensive end and the NFL defensive player of the year two years ago, is seeking a contract at least comparable to the $7.5 million over five years given to Buffalo's Bruce Smith. Smith only signed because Buffalo was forced to match a free-agent offer tendered by Denver.

And Quick, Philadelphia's Pro Bowl wide receiver, says he's nowhere near agreement.

If there is any consolation for the Eagles, it is that their two chief rivals in the NFC East are also having contract problems.

While Washington worries about Green, the Giants are working on extending the contract of their quarterback. In any event, Simms will almost surely pass Lawrence Taylor, due to make $1.1 million this year, as the team's highest-paid player and perhaps causing problems with Taylor, who stayed out of mini-camp to protest his contract.

Simms, the most valuable player in the 1987 Super Bowl, is due to be paid $800,000 in the final year of the contract he signed in 1985. That makes him 22nd in salaries among NFL quarterbacks, fifth in his division.

He is seeking a three-year contract at $1.6 million, a 100 percent raise. The Giants are offering $1.2 million and Simms' agent, David Fishof, isn't happy.

"We are not going to report until we settle this whole thing," Fishof said. "Phil is committed to this."

Jason Chapman and Robby Tabers homered, and Herbie Tabers tripled for Ross/Tabers/Ceiling.

In the girls league, Allison Photography/Bank of Murray scored a two-run victory, with Elishia Smith and Shannery Jones homering. People's Bank/Maple Hill Kennels won a rematch later in the week, 8-5, with Chanda Dawson hitting a homer.

In Little League, Burgess and Associates/Tabers Acoustical and Murray Wholesale Tire/Pete Gunn Chevrolet split decisions. Burgess/better." After missing 86 games with an injured wrist, Canseco came back with a bang Thursday night to lead the Athletics to an 11-7 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

"I'm a bit surprised, the way I hit in the minors, but I convinced myself before the game that I would do well," Canseco said after hitting a home run and driving in three runs.

Canseco, last year's American League MVP with a league-leading 42 homers, had a sacrifice fly and an RBI single in his 1989 major-league debut. He also managed to steal a base, even though he was admittedly not quite himself.

"I'm only about 80 percent right now, but my attitude is to go up there and see the ball well," said Canseco, who had spent the last couple of weeks with the Athletics' Southern League affiliate at Huntsville, Ala.

While Canseco stole the spotlight, a couple of other big hitters contributed to Oakland's winning effort.

Mark McGwire and Dave Parker both hit three-run homers. McGwire's 18th of the year came in the A's four-run first inning and followed a run-scoring single by Dave Henderson.

"We've heard from guys around the league that the ball doesn't carry here," McGwire said of the Blue Jays' new SkyDome. "I guess tonight was the first night it carried."

Parker's homer proved to be the difference as the A's turned George Bell's error into a four-run fifth inning.

Canseco's homer, an opposite-field blast to right, put the A's up 10-7 in the top of the seventh.

Meanwhile, reliever Dennis Eckersley made his first appearance since May 27 for Oakland, retiring the side in order in the ninth.

In other AL action, it was New York 6, Kansas City 0; Boston 3, Minnesota 1; Texas 9, Cleveland 3 in 11 innings; California 13, Baltimore 5; Seattle 5, Detroit 4 in 12 innings, and Chicago 5, Milwaukee 4.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Chicago 7, San Diego 3; New York 5, Atlanta 1; Los Angeles 3, St. Louis 2; San Francisco 3, Pittsburgh 2 in 13 innings, and Houston and Philadelphia split a doubleheader, with the Phillies winning the opener 11-4 and the Astros the nightcap 3-0.

Golf

LAKE ORION, Mich. (AP) — Betsy King shot a 4-under-par 67 to take a one-shot lead over Marie-Laure de Lorenzi-Taya in the first round of the U.S. Women's Open championship.

King, who has won four tournaments this year, holed a 20-foot birdie putt from above the hole on the huge 18th green of the Old Course at Indianwood Golf and Country Club for her final margin. Jane Geddes, who shot a 70, was the only other golfer in the field of 156 to break par.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Hal Sutton, fighting to regain the form that brought him seven victories in his first five years on the PGA Tour, shot a 7-under-par 64 that tied him with Tim Simpson for the first-round lead of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

Sutton and Simpson both had bogey-free rounds that were one shot off the course record over the 6,776-yard Kingsmill Golf Club.

Tennis

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Top-seeded Andre Agassi won in a breeze, but chief challenger Mats Wilander had a lengthy struggle in the U.S. Pro Tennis championships at Longwood Cricket Club.

The 19-year-old Agassi needed just under an hour to whip unseeded Barry Moor, 6-1, 6-2, in the third round. But Wilander, tournament champion in 1985 and 1987, had a two-hour and 25 minute struggle subduing 15th seeded Jimmy Arias 3-6, 7-5, 6-4.

GSTAAD, Switzerland (AP) — Second-seeded American Aaron Krickstein beat Czechoslovak Martin Strelba 6-2, 6-3 in second-round play at the Swiss Open tournament.

Carl Uwe Steeb of West Germany ousted Cassio Motta of Brazil in their second-round match, while third seed Emilio Sanchez of Spain lost to Udo Riglewski.

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Glenn Layendecker upset No. 1 seed Paul Annacone of Knoxville, Tenn., 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-0), to reach the semifinals of the $155,000 Volvo Tennis Hall of Fame championships.

Other winners were Danie Visser of South Africa; American Jim Pugh; and Australian John Fitzgerald.

Cycling

MONTPELLIER, France (AP) — Laurent Fignon and Greg LeMond stayed one-two in the Tour de France standings after the 12th stage on a day made eventful only by a group of demonstrators who blocked the road in an environmental protest.

Otherwise the overall standings remained the same with Fignon of France leading LeMond of the United States by seven seconds with 10 days remaining in the race.

Italian Valerio Tebaldi won the 150-mile stage from Toulouse to Montpellier with countryman Giancarlo Perini second and Frenchman Dominique Arnaud third.

Legal

CHICAGO (AP) — Sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom will remain free on bond while they appeal their racketeering and fraud convictions for illegally signing college athletes to contracts, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge George Marovich ruled Wednesday that Walters and Bloom have a substantial legal basis for their appeal, and therefore should not have to begin serving their sentences.

The two New York-based agents were found guilty in April of racketeering, conspiracy and mail fraud.

They were convicted of defrauding several universities by signing athletes before their college eligibility had expired, and of threatening to harm the players if they tried to back out of the agreements.

Marovich last month sentenced Walters, 57, to five years in prison, and Bloom, 30, to three years.

The men had originally been scheduled to surrender to authorities on July 19 to start serving their sentences.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By H.C. CHILES

After a period of chafing under extreme poverty, miserable servitude and terrible suffering for seven years, due to their disobedience to God, the Israelites cried unto the Lord for help, mercy and deliverance. God showed his matchless grace to them by raising up a deliverer in the person of obscure, humble, valorous, brave and heroic Gideon.

Judges 6:11-16
This call came as a complete surprise to Gideon. This call came when Gideon was threshing wheat with a flail near the winepress on his father's farm, which was a very unusual location for such a procedure. He did the threshing in that location in the hope that the Midianites would not discover what he was doing lest they might rob him of his grain.

God greeted Gideon as a "mighty man of valor," and assured him that "The Lord is with thee." To these surprising words Gideon made the significant reply, "If the Lord be with us, why then is all this befallen us?" It was as if Gideon said, "If failure and defeat and slavery are marks of the Divine presence, then the Lord may be with us, but I have been under the impression that victories and freedom and abounding joy are the evidences of His presence and help." aware of his personal limitations, Gideon protested against assuming such tremendous responsibilities by saying, "Oh my Lord, wherewith shall I save Israel?" He honestly felt that he was not qualified for this great task, since he had come from a poor family and from an unimportant tribe. Furthermore, he did not have any fame that would allow him to raise an army and to rally to his banner. Therefore, God encouraged him with the promise of His divine presence and power, two things that were necessary if he were to experience success. Gideon's humility and distrust of self were highly commendable, and he provided us with a splendid example of the right spirit for entering upon any high task, namely, distrust in one's own powers and implicit reliance upon a mightier source of help. God's promise, "Surely I will be with thee, and thou shalt smite the Midianites as one man," was sufficient for him and without further hesitation Gideon complied with the Lord's will.

Judges 6:25-29, 32
As has been the case with multitudes, the Israelites called on God for help and at the time refused to separate themselves from what they knew to be very displeasing to Him. However, if they were to enjoy His favor, and to serve Him acceptably and effectively, it was necessary that Baal worship be eradicated.

So, that night God commanded Gideon to destroy the altar of Baal and to erect in its place an altar to Jehovah, and to offer a burnt sacrifice thereon. Courageously and heroically Gideon did as he had been commanded. When the men of the city discovered what had been done to the altar of Baal, they immediately inquired who had destroyed it, meanwhile suspecting Gideon because he has previously repudiated all idolatrous practices.

Before God sent Gideon against the foe, He called him to live the separated and dedicated life. Gideon is a splendid example of the action which every present-day Christian should take in separating himself from worldliness and sin-

Having discovered the will of God for his life, Gideon dedicated himself without reservation to the doing of that will in the strength and under the direction of the Lord. Like Gideon we should display both faith and wisdom by implicit obedience to God's commandments.

White stripes starting to become successful

We have spent several hours in search of the white stripes and have had moderate success. Deep drops and ledges are usually where the big stripes are found, but since the strong current has been flushing so long, they just pass right on through.

The water is clearing slowly but surely and is 82 degrees so we should see more action by the weekend!

Ed and Nancy Wallis fished with me last weekend. We started out after bass with top-water lures and spinnerbaits. Ed caught the largest which was a 6 1/4 pound beauty, but Nancy wasn't to be outdone. She caught a couple of good bass herself and then took a rest break for awhile. We found some mixed stripes and put a few in the cooler the next day.

Jr. Pittman his wife and son caught a sackfull over the weekend on spinners. Junior said the stripes were skinny but still weighed about 1 1/4 pounds.

They were schooled after minnows but not racing on the surface.

A lot of locals and tourists are taking the best stripes under the bridges at night. The boats tie to the pilings and bounce bait off the bottom. Fresh caught minnows seem to be the best to use.

Don Wells lost a big bass in a tree top and Norm Lewellyn had his line broken in the moss. Steve Pember, caught a great bass and released it after showing it around a bit. It looked to be 8-9 pounds easy.

Jeanne and I caught some on a scum frog lure while Mike and Diana caught theirs on do-nothing worms.

Almost everyone has taken good fish of some kind so lets keep it going. Have a good weekend.

Happy Fishing!

Mears uses outdoors to get away from hectic world of auto racing

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — When Rick Mears wants to slow down he escapes to the outdoors — especially the "wet" outdoors.

In Allentown recently to claim title to a new boat, the three-time Indianapolis 500 winner discussed his off-track sporting pursuits, among which is an affinity for water.

"I enjoy hunting and fishing but just getting out on the water is the one way I truly relax," said Mears, looking over his new Sea Ray 250 Sundancer.

"That's why I bought this. Put me on the water and the whole world changes."

Mears, a native Californian who lives in Bakersfield most of the year, also spends considerable time at his second home near Reading, Pa. That's home base for the Penske Racing Team and the place where Mears met his wife Chris. It's also near Blue Marsh Lake, where he occasionally spends time fishing and boating.

Blue Marsh permits unlimited horsepower motors, but even Mears wasn't sure that his new craft would take well to the lake. He was particularly concerned about launching a vessel more suited to the Chesapeake Bay or coastal waters, which he also visits as time permits.

While Mears occasionally runs a bass boat in California, he's more often aboard an even bigger Sea Ray that he purchased with his brother to cruise the Pacific.

"I like as big a boat as I can trailer," Mears said. "On weekdays when everyone else is working I can get a few days off and go to the Chesapeake or the coast and live on it. There I can fish or just relax if I want to."

Mears' new 250 Sundancer is far from a typical "fishing boat" — especially the type seen on Blue Marsh. It includes a lounge, dinette, sleeping quarters, full galley, head and vanity and other options.

The 27-foot craft is churning by a 454-cubic-inch Chevy V-8 engine. Mears' said the "floating house" will provide a change of scenery and a way to keep his sometimes hectic personal and business life afloat.

"If you want a change of neighbors all you have to do is turn the key," he joked. "Racing infringes on my time to get on the water, but it's been pretty good to me."

"Yet, sometime down the road I plan to spend a lot more time on the boat. In the meantime, I'll have to squeeze in the time as I can afford to."

Mears also likes to hunt. He's taken trophy whitetails and elk, and two years back downed a giant grizzly in Alaska.

His bear story, however, is one with an unhappy ending that's been both embarrassing and educational.

"I was up in Alaska fishing for silver salmon when our guide asked us if we wanted to hunt grizzlies," Mears said. We said "Sure!" so he made the arrangements.

"We were all licensed and thought everything was in order. I shot a nice bear and so did my partner."

A year later, the phone rang and Mears found out that he'd taken the bear illegally and was under arrest. Alaska law prohibits hunting on the same day that a hunter flies.

Following a morning of fishing after flying to camp on a seaplane, the outfitter spotted some bears nearby, which they stalked and eventually shot.

The guide, he later learned, had been under investigation and surveillance by state and federal game agents.

The bear was confiscated and both Mears and a friend paid $20,000 fines.

"I sure didn't need that kind of publicity," Mears said. "I didn't even realize we'd done anything wrong or we certainly wouldn't have done it."

Several dozen hunters also were fined at the same time. Mears said one person fought the case in court and had his penalty reduced to only $500.

"But he spent $30,000 in lawyers' fees," Mears said. "I just wanted to get it over with so I paid it."

Most of Mears' other hunting and fishing pursuits have been pleasurable.

"I try to get out on my bass boat as much as possible when I'm home (California), but for the past 16 years or so I haven't done it as much as I want to," he said.

"I do what I can when I can. I can't say I have a favorite kind of fishing. Whatever's available — I enjoy it all."

As a boy, he frequently bottom-fished with his parents off the California coast. In recent times, he's cruised the coast and occasionally he sets compass for the waters off the Baja.

Mears' love of precision in boats and race cars carries over into the shooting sports, as evidenced by his affinity for target shooting and the development of loads and rifles to pinpoint his shots.

"Working a load to a particular gun is like tuning a race car," he said. "I like to fool around with different types of powder and bullet weights. It's precision work."

"Even out on the range you have to read the wind or the effect of the sun and mirages on the target range. It's like reading the conditions on the race track. I really enjoy that."

Any discussion of Mears' outdoor pursuits eventually returns to his love of boats and water.

"Speed is only a kick to a certain point," he said of his love of auto racing and big boats.

"Mainly, I like to pack into a trip as much as I can. I don't need a hot rod, but I do like a quality boat that will get me from one place to another as quickly as possible."

After competing in the Marlboro Grand Prix at the Meadowlands on July 16, Mears will embark on his maiden voyage with the new Sundancer — if he already hasn't yielded to whim and launched it on Blue Marsh.

Sons Clint, 16, and Cole, 14 are visiting from their California home for the summer and Mears plans to take a respite from the track and "escape to the water" for a while.

"After winning Indy last year I had to make the best use of it," Mears said. "It's kept me busy doing commercials and appearances — and of, course, racing — and I couldn't plan much."

Fishing pumps millions into state economy

HENDERSON, Ky. (AP) — If you carpool with three other people, chances are one of the group is a fisherman.

Nationwide, one in four Americans goes fishing, and if you spend much time around this representative angler, you probably know exactly who he or she is, because we talk a lot about our sport.

At the drop of a fly-festooned hat, we'll tell you about the good fish we caught last time out, and we'll expound at length on rods, reels, lines, leaders, lures and recipes.

But without the least provocation, we'll tell you volumes about the whopper we almost caught and would have if our tackle hadn't been faulty.

Or if the fish hadn't got behind a log. Or if the wind hadn't changed.

One thing we don't talk about very much is the importance of sport fishing as an industry, about how many jobs and how many dollars Isaac Walton's "gentle art" provides.

The fact that we don't brag about that is not a matter of modesty, because modesty is a quality blessedly lacking in the makeup of the really dedicated fisherman.

It's just that the impact of the youngster catching his first fish, of the senior citizen celebrating his autumn in a lawn chair by a placid lake, or the regeneration of the executive from fishing's strange combination of challenge and relaxation always overshadows the dollars involved in the big picture.

How would $1.24 billion a year in Kentucky strike you?

$1.24 billion!

That's how much the Sport Fishing Institute says the gentle art is worth to this state's economy annually.

The calculations get complicated enough to take up about 30 pages of a report titled "National Survey of Fishing, Hunting and Wildlife-Associated Recreation," but the total includes:

—$338.6 million for direct expenditures — tackle, transportation, food, lodging.

—$152.9 million for fishing-related businesses — bait shops, guides, lodges.

—Nearly $17 million from taxes, either Kentucky sales taxes or state income taxes.

In addition to the cash figures, sport fishing in Kentucky provided almost 11,000 jobs for state residents.

The other three folks in the carpool may say, "So what? You're helping the state's economy, and that's good. So?"

The "so" is that we must work as hard to continue a friendly atmosphere for this major Kentucky industry as we would to create such a climate if a similar employer-revenue-producer were looking to locate here.

That means that the state's waters must be kept clear and clean and habitable by the game fish us ole boys pursue.

Anything and anybody who pollutes and poisons Kentucky's waters isn't just wiping the smile off the face of the kid trying to take his first bluegill or sending the oldster home with another day darkened or denying the hard-driver his unique reward.

Stream and lake pollution digs into all our pockets, too, fishermen and non-fishermen alike.

$1.24 billion.

That's a lot of money for schools, highways, the environment, health care and the general safety and welfare no matter how you file it.

Musseling views sought

A MURRAY STATE University study will be getting a feel for public attitudes about musseling on Kentucky Lake.

Dr. James B. Sickle of MSU's Department of Biology is distributing a questionnaire to gauge opinions about the mussel industry, the status of mussel resources and how musseling affects other activities on Kentucky Lake. The study is being conducted for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

Mussel harvesting has been a hot topic on the TVA reservoir. The rising price of shell in recent seasons has brought substantial numbers of "brailers" to the lake to harvest the mussels. The proliferation of musselers has prompted claims by sportsfishermen and others that brailing is damaging the lake bottom habitat and hurting the quality of fishing.

The questionnaire is being distributed to a number of people representing different interest groups in the Kentucky Lake area — commercial musselers themselves, sport fishermen, recreational boaters, fishing guides, commercial fishermen and marina owners and operators.

Copies of the questionnaire presently are being mailed to prospective participants. In addition to those, a limited number of copies are available to other people who want to take part in the study.

The remaining questionnaire copies are available only on a first-come, first-served basis by contacting Sickle at the Department of Biology, Murray State University, Murray, Ky. 42071, telephone 762-6326.

The questionnaire is targeted for completion and return to the MSU office by a deadline of July 28.

JEANETTE STOREY of Murray took luncheon laurels at a recent Bass'n Gal tournament on Texas' Lake Livingston.

Storey, a regular on the women's national circuit, caught the biggest single fish during the Bull Dog Lures/Bass'n Gal Texas Invitational. The Lone Star largemouth weighed in at 6.66 pounds.

Overall, Storey finished in the money at 19th place in the competition.

The tournament was won by Rhonda Wilcox of Cleburne, Texas, with a two-day weight of 23.46 pounds.

S&L plan stalling in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $157 billion taxpayer bailout of savings and loan losses is snarled in Congress over differences in the approaches of key negotiators attempting to craft a package agreeable to both the House and Senate.

An effort to have a bill ready for President Bush's signature in August stalled Thursday night after Senate negotiators surprised House conferees with an all-encompassing compromise proposal and demanded its consideration.

The chief House negotiator, Banking Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, described the offer as "aggravating" and a "horrendous injustice" to an agreement earlier to consider the hundreds of differences between the Senate and House versions piece by piece.

"We'll be doing all that step by step and it will take us until Christmas," said Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa. "It's to the advantage of all concerned to open the deck and put all 52 cards on the table up."

The two sides were scheduled to meet again today, but all five senators and several of the 94 House members in the conference said they don't expect any substantive issues to be resolved until next week.

The Senate proposal includes most of the tougher capital and regulatory requirements approved by the House and endorsed by Bush. It also accepts new House-approved housing subsidies opposed by the administration and rejected by the Senate.

But the proposal also supports Bush's plan to pay for the bailout through 30-year private bonds as a way to prevent the costs from swelling the federal deficit.

The House, in the biggest confrontation of the debate dividing Democrats and Republicans along party lines, has demanded some $45 billion of the bailout costs be reflected in the deficits for 1989, 1990 and 1991.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady issued a statement from Paris saying the administration would "strongly support" the Senate offer, but wanted to review its details. Administration officials, meanwhile, worked furiously behind the scenes Thursday night to prevent votes on specific issues.

The dispute brought to the surface major procedural differences in the way the House and the Senate have addressed the S&L crisis and the bailout — the largest in history, with an estimated cost of $1,000 to $1,500 per taxpayer.

Both Gonzalez, a populist Texas Democrat, and Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., are new to their respective banking committee chairmanships.

Riegle's 21-member Senate committee met behind closed doors last spring, negotiating compromises on most issues — including several provisions to benefit specific companies — before voting on it in public as a package.

Gonzalez had his 51-member panel put the House version together entirely in open sessions. He called the Senate offer Thursday an attempt to avoid taking stands on specific items in the package that might offend industry and other constituencies.

"For the first time, there is a spotlight on them, everybody is watching, and they're not used to that," Gonzalez said. "They're used to getting behind closed doors and cutting deals, but that's where all the mischief has been."

Among other key elements of the Senate offer are:

— Acceptance of the House's plan to require S&L owners to risk $3 in real, tangible capital for every $100 in lending by Jan. 1, 1995. The Senate bill had provided a laxer standard of $1.50.

— A compromise limiting S&L ownership of junk bonds to 6 percent of their assets. The House had wanted to require S&Ls to sell their junk bonds within two years, while the Senate bill has a more liberal junk bond limit of 11 percent of assets.

Excess of drug worsens osteoporosis

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been taking thyroid medication for over 15 years. Does the hormone trigger osteoporosis?

DEAR READER: In excess, thyroid hormone can worsen osteoporosis, the loss of bone calcium that comes with age. Note, however, that I say "excess"; a therapeutic level is beneficial for patients who need thyroid replacement. This is one reason people taking thyroid supplements should have periodic blood tests to determine whether they are receiving the proper amount of medicine. Using appropriate analyses of thyroid hormone in the blood, physicians can adjust the dose of medicine and avoid the possibility of drug-induced osteoporosis.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Eight years ago I was found to be a biological false positive. I underwent lumbar puncture and three shots of Bicillin for three weeks. My pregnant wife was also found to be positive. My physician has indicated I can look forward to having yellow jaundice, hepatitis and arthritis. Is this true? I've questioned other physicians who say they've never heard of this.

DEAR READER: A "biological false positive," or BFP, usually means that a patient has a false reaction to the blood test for syphilis. That is, the blood test shows the patient to have syphilis when this is not so. This troublesome reaction was a problem with the older syphilis tests because people with certain diseases, notably lupus erythematosus, commonly exhibited false positives. This is less a worry now, with the advent of newer blood tests that are more specific for syphilitic infection.

I am confused why, if you are a BFP, you needed a lumbar puncture (to test for syphilis in the central nervous system) and penicillin (to treat syphilis). Also, I'm concerned that your wife, too, tested positive. Frankly, your story sounds as though you are not a false-positive reactor; you were treated as though you had syphilis.

I do not understand the reference to your getting hepatitis and arthritis. These afflictions are not consequences of a BFP or syphilis itself.

I think you need to go back to square one. Find a doctor who is familiar with current tests for syphilis, and request a repeat blood test. In this way, your eight-year mystery may be solved. (Your wife should also be tested.) Depending on the results, the new doctor can offer further advice and testing, if indicated.

I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Lupus: The Great Imitator." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Culliver to study in Michigan

Dr. Concetta C. Culliver of Murray State University will begin a four-week study of national crime statistics in late July at the University of Michigan.

Sponsored by the Bureau of Justice Statistics of the U.S. Department of Justice, Dr. Culliver's project will focus on major criminal justice research in three areas: youths in custody, a survey of jail and prison inmates, and physical violence in American families.

The program -- involving Dr. Cul-liver and six other faculty members from various schools -- will be conducted at the university's Ann Arbor campus July 24-Aug. 18.

An assistant professor of criminal justice at Murray State, Dr. Culliver holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Baltimore, master's degrees from Coppin State College and the University of Alabama and a doctoral degree from the University of Alabama. She joined the Murray State faculty in 1987.

NASA crews prepares Columbia

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Technicians made final preparations to move an overhauled space shuttle Columbia to the launch pad tonight for an early August flight with a secret military spy satellite.

A giant tracked vehicle, moving at maximum speed of 1 mph, is to start the four-mile trip at 8 p.m. NASA had hoped to make the move early in the day, but spokeswoman Lisa Malone said more time was needed to complete work on the craft's thermal protection tiles.

The space agency had planned to launch Columbia on July 31, but NASA administrator Richard Truly said Thursday that preparations were behind schedule and that lif-toff now is expected during the first week in August. A firm date will be set July 25 during a flight readiness review.

The flight will be the first in more than three years for the oldest vehicle in the shuttle fleet. Columbia's last mission ended just 10 days before Challenger exploded on Jan. 28, 1986, killing the seven crew members.

During the 32-month grounding following the accident, NASA concentrated on Discovery and Atlantis in making engineering changes to improve safety and reliability. Columbia was last in line for the 250 changes ordered.

Discovery and Atlantis each have been launched twice since flights resumed last September.

Now it's Columbia's turn. The shuttle's all-military five-man crew is to deploy a Defense Department payload believed to be an advanced reconnaissance satellite.

Defense chief hoping B-2 won't be canned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney is asking Congress not to "nickel and dime to death" the B-2 stealth bomber.

Cheney's plea was the latest in a Defense Department offensive to try to convince skeptical lawmakers to overcome the "sticker shock" over the expensive radar-evading plane and look instead at its strategic value.

"It's time ... that we move this debate from the question of simple cost to one of strategic value," he told the House Armed Services Committee Thursday.

"The B-2 ... is an essential addition to our strategic bomber force if we are to have confidence in our ability to penetrate improving Soviet air defenses in the late 1990s and beyond," he said.

The defense secretary spoke as both the Senate and House moved toward showdowns on the plane's place in President Bush's request for a $295.6 billion Pentagon budget next year.

The Senate Armed Services Committee met behind closed doors Thursday to write its own version of a defense budget, which was expected to be revealed today.

Concerned about the price tag of $500 million to $1 billion for each plane — making it the most expensive bomber in history — the House panel last month cut some $800 million from the B-2 budget.

A prototype of the plane made its first taxi tests in Palmdale, Calif., earlier this week but has yet to make its maiden flight. The plane successfully completed final ground tests Thursday, taxiing at speeds up to 75 mph, in preparation for a maiden flight that could come as early as Saturday.

Recent figures have indicated that $23 billion has been spent on the B-2 so far, much of it in secrecy, and there are estimates that it will cost an additional $50 billion through the late 1990s.

Legislative committee set to check pay scale

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — A legislative committee charged with overseeing state contracts will review the current pay scale for attorneys with an eye toward increasing it.

Rep. Lawson Walker, R-Villa Hills, said the state may be paying more for legal services now at a maximum scheduled rate of $75 per hour than if it raised the rates.

Walker, who is a member of the Personal Service Contract Review Subcommittee and an attorney in northern Kentucky, said law firms may be charging the state for several hours work by an inexperienced attorney when the same work could be done much more quickly by someone else.

"What's worth more, $750 worth of associate time or $250 worth of partner time?" Walker said.

Chairman Jim LeMaster, D-Paris, said the committee staff will seek information from the Kentucky Bar Association on prevailing rates for legal work or survey attorneys across the state.

LeMaster said Thursday the review may be extended to the pay rates for all professional services, such as auditors, dentists and doctors.

The current schedule, adopted several years ago, sets a maximum rate of $75 per hour for attorneys who are partners in a firm. For an individual attorney, the maximum rate is $40 per hour.

Walker said the going rates for legal work have moved beyond those levels.

"At those rates, these larger firms are doing one of two things — padding the actual time, I believe, or the work is being done at a lower level than we are paying for it," Walker said.

Walker said the fees paid to attorneys must also cover overhead items such as offices, support help and other matters.

An example of the rates elsewhere was driven home to the subcommittee on Thursday when it approved a contract with a San Diego law firm to defend a Kentucky State Police officer being sued in federal court in southern California.

The committee approved a contract that will pay partners in the firm of Higgs, Fletcher & Mack $140 per hour and associates $115 per hour. Larry Fentress, the state police legal officer, said that rate was negotiated down from $165 per hour.

Sen. Ed Ford, D-Cynthiana, a member of the committee, said he feared that if the committee sets a new maximum rate, all contracts will eventually be for that amount, just as most are now.

Walker said he agreed that could be a problem and suggested there should be more latitude in allowing state agencies to negotiate legal fees.

Illinois governor won't run again

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson, the longest-serving incumbent governor in the nation, said Thursday he will not seek a fifth term in 1990.

The announcement set off a political scramble for the governor's seat. But the 53-year-old Republican, who was mentioned early in his political career as a presidential contender, said he hoped his legacy would go far beyond the coming battle to succeed him.

"I believe with all my heart that in most ways this is a better state, with a better chance for the future, than when I entered the governorship in January of 1977," said Thompson, who was near tears during a 30-minute news conference at the State of Illinois Center.

Thompson, flanked by his wife, Jayne, and their 10-year-old daughter, Samantha, said he chose to leave public life because he needed to provide for his family and sought the challenge of returning to the private sector as a lawyer or businessman.

Thompson declined to rule out running for another office, and said he could have won another term as governor.

"My wife and daughter have told me they are willing to support a campaign for re-election, but I am not willing at this time to ask them to do that," Thompson said. "My family and their happiness and security are more important to me than anything else in the world."

Mrs. Thompson, who spent a month earlier this year at the Betty Ford Clinic in California undergoing treatment for alcoholism, said she supported the decision and acknowledged that public life extracted a toll from the family. "I think it's sometimes difficult to live your life in the public eye," she said.

Jokeying for position has already begun among possible candidates for next year's primary race for governor. At least three Democrats and as many Republicans are considered possible candidates, with Democratic Attorney General Neil Hartigan and GOP Secretary of State Jim Edgar among top likely contenders.

Though titular leader of the state GOP and a backer of President Bush, the moderate Thompson has frequently been at odds with fellow Republicans on fiscal and social issues.

Thompson was mentioned as a possible presidential candidate after his 1976 and 1978 victories made him one of the few Republicans to buck the post-Watergate wave that swamped many GOP colleagues.

He first burst into the national spotlight during a four-year tenure as the U.S. attorney from 1971-75, when he sent several prominent allies of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley to prison on corruption charges.

Passing up an offer to run against Daley, Thompson instead claimed the GOP gubernatorial nomination in 1976 and defeated Daley-backed Democrat Michael Howlett by a record 1.39 million votes.

He bested former Democratic U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson III in his last two campaigns — in 1982 by the narrowest margin in state history, and again in 1986 to become the only four-term governor in state history.

The son of a Chicago physician, Thompson once autographed a high-school yearbook, "Vote for me for president." But he spent much of his early career in law — as a Cook County prosecutor, a Northwestern University law professor and an assistant state attorney general.

White House to nominate King to administrate Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House plans to nominate Gwendolyn S. King, a former Pennsylvania aide to Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, to replace Dorcas Hardy as head of Social Security, according to an informed source.

King, currently a corporate executive, was director of Pennsylvania's Washington office when Thornburgh was governor of the state.

A source familiar with the nomination, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said a news release announcing King's nomination as Social Security commissioner was sent by the White House to Paris, where President Bush was attending the economic summit of the world's largest industrial democracies.

If confirmed by the Senate, King would take over an agency criticized by labor and congressional Democrats for cutting back from 80,000 to 65,000 employees during the Reagan administration.

She also will face questions of whether to continue to invest the mounting Social Security surplus in government securities or channel funds into financially pressed domestic programs.

Reached Thursday at the government relations firm of Gogol & Associates, where she is executive vice president, King said it would be premature to comment. Told in April that she was being considered for the post, she told The Associated Press, "I will be pleased to serve wherever the president needs me."

Political fund drives begin

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — 'Tis the season for political fund raising.

Senate President Pro-Tem John "Eck" Rose has joined the ranks of those picking up some extra political cash.

Rose, a Winchester Democrat whose 28th District is made up of Clark, Bath, Estill, Fleming, Montgomery and Powell counties, held a $250 per person fund-raising event Wednesday at the Louisville Water Tower.

A group of lobbyists organized a fund-raiser on his behalf a few weeks ago in Lexington.

About 100 people attended the Louisville event, Rose said in an interview Thursday. "I was pretty well pleased with it," he said.

Rose said he has not heard of anyone, specifically who might oppose him next year. "I want to be prepared if I do have any," he said.

Lobbyists also organized another fund-raiser for Rose about three weeks ago in Lexington. John Cooper, a former aide to Rose who now lobbies for real estate agents, bankers and doctors, among others, was the chief organizer of the $100 per person event in Lexington.

Gov. Wallace Wilkinson, who has had a few run-ins with Rose during the past 20 months, has been holding a series of fund-raising events this week for his political action committee, Kentuckians for a Better Future.

Wilkinson declined to say what he would use the money for except that it was nice to have money available "for a rainy day."
