Oil experts, hampered by war, try damage limitation in spill

By MARK FRITZ Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain - Oil experts today set up barriers to battle the effects of a huge, fast-moving spill blamed on Iraq that threatened water supplies and the fragile ecology of the Persian Gulf. But both the experts and military officials said the dangers of war severely limited any moves to clean up the slick, which on Friday had grown to more than 11 miles long. "This is the disaster that everybody has feared," said Walter Vreeland, an environmental adviser to the government of Bahrain, an island kingdom off Saudi Arabia. Oil facilities and critical desalination and electrical plants on the Saudi coast were getting ready to try to fend off the spill, according to Saudi government officials. The Saudis keep the exact location of such facilities confidential. The United States has accused Iraq of "environmental terrorism" for allegedly dumping the Kuwait crude into the gulf. Saudi military spokesman Lt. Col. Ahmed Robayan said the spill began when Iraqi forces apparently turned on pumps at the Sea Island terminal, 10 miles offshore from Kuwait's main petroleum refinery and loading complex at Al Ahmadi, just south of Kuwait City. The pumps can move at least 100,000 barrels of oil per hour, or 2.4 million barrels per day, he said. But it was not known whether they were pumping at full capacity. "It's not just a matter of oil, it's in the middle of a bloody war zone," said Lt. John Wilston of the Canadian Navy. "If it's intentional, it's outrageous. If it's accidental, it's unforgivable." Already, black oil-laden water had begun lapping up Saudi

War on Northern Iraq from Turkey shrouded in secrecy

By MARY BETH SHERIDAN Associated Press Writer

ANKARA, Turkey - Several times a day, waves of gleaming U.S. bombers blast off from a base in southern Turkey, startling the peasants in nearby cotton fields. The planes are heading for neighboring Iraq in one of the most low-profile operations of the Persian Gulf air war. This is the "back-door" war - a battle aimed at hitting Saddam Hussein's forces from the rear.

While the main allied forces focus on southern Iraq and Kuwait, planes from the Turkish-American Incirlik base have been swooping into northern Iraq. U.S. and Turkish officials refuse to give details about the missions. But analysts say the Incirlik base has given allied forces an extra weapon. "It certainly does change the situation," a Western diplomat said, speaking on condition of anonymity. He said it allows the allied forces based in Saudi Arabia to concentrate their attention on southern Iraq and Kuwait. Don Kerr, an analyst with the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London, said Incirlik is ready-made for U.S. use. The sprawling base is a major supply facility and ammunition depot. "The significant thing is Incirlik is a base the U.S. has had access to for a long time. The facilities have been put together with the use of the U.S. Air Force command," he said in a telephone interview. According to military analysts and diplomats, the U.S. planes from Incirlik probably have been targeting three military airports in northern Iraq. They also are believed to be bombing chemical weapons facilities and weapons depots and searching for the Scud missiles that have terrified Israel and Saudi cities. Their missions have apparently become more important since Iraq reportedly moved aircraft and weapons to the north to hide them in the mountainous, rugged terrain.

Only 96 U.S. warplanes are stationed at Incirlik, compared with at least 1,900 allied tactical combat aircraft in the southern theater. But the F-15s, F-16s and F-117s at Incirlik can run more sorties in northern Iraq because of the shorter distance, experts say. They can launch about 400 missions from the base. "One hundred sorties from the north can do the same as 200 from the south," he said. (Cont'd on page 2)

Education commissioner wants department out of merit system

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) - Unless the state Education Department is removed from the merit system, it will be unable to offer the salaries needed to attract the best staff members, according to department's commissioner. Thomas Boysen, the new Commissioner of Education, and others say the department won't be able to draw talented school professionals away from the best school districts, which typically pay more than the merit system allows. The system might even prevent Boysen from rehiring his current staff members at their current salaries. That's because, under merit-system rules, the pay for newly hired employees cannot be set above the midpoint for their grade.

And, since all Department of Education jobs are abolished June 30, all staff members will officially be new employees as of July 1. Boysen said getting the department out of the system, which spells out job rights of state employees, would help him adapt his staff to schools' changing needs and offer competitive salaries. "I'd say it's crucial," he said.

Until recently, Boysen - as well as some other school officials and legislators - thought the state school-reform law permanently removed the Department of Education from the merit system. The law abolishes all Department of Education jobs on June 30, meaning Boysen can rehire, reassign or replace the 400 department employees as he sees fit.

But the law says the authority to reshuffle the department is designed for a single purpose only in response to the state's fiscal situation. And it says nothing about removal from the merit system. Senate Majority Floor Leader Joe Wright said "apparently the" (Cont'd on page 2)

City receives go ahead for Bee Creek bridge

Staff Report Murray Ledger & Times

Murray planners have received authorization from state officials for the design and construction of a new bridge over Bee Creek on N. Fourth Street. The authorization, which includes right of way and utilities reconstruction at the site as well, comes after months of efforts by city and county officials to replace the aging concrete structure, according to Murray Mayor Bill Cherry. The project is the third major road construction project to be approved by the state this year, Cherry said. State officials are also in the planning stages of reconstruction projects at the intersections of Main and 16th streets and Sycamore and Fourth streets which are set to begin this spring.

National Guard troops get sendoff before deployment

By MARK PAXTON Associated Press Writer

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. - Sgt. Wade Johnson, like many of the National Guard troops preparing for deployment to the Persian Gulf, has mixed emotions about going off to war. "I'm nervous and confident at the same time," Johnson said Friday. "I'm confident that this is a well-prepared unit. I'm nervous because I don't know how I'll react."

The Windgap, Pa., resident is part of the 196th Field Artillery Brigade, made up of National Guard units based in West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee. The 1,500 guardsmen have ended their training at Fort Campbell and are preparing to leave for the Persian Gulf following a rousing send-off Friday in a ceremony that combined military pomp with calls for peace. Arabia's shores, witnesses reported. Experts predicted that the brisk, prevailing winds from the northwest would soon wash the crude down into the central gulf.

A Saudi official at the huge oil installation at Ras Tanura said oil booms were being readied at the port.

The devices, used to seal off spills, were also being moved into position at Jubail, the coastal site of a desalination plant that provides Saudi's capital, Riyadh, and hundreds of thousands of allied troops with fresh water, officials said.

"But if it's as big as we think it is, the oil booms won't protect much," said a Saudi environmental official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The spill was first reported by Saudi environmental authorities on Wednesday. It could amount to a dozen times the nearly 11 million gallons that the Exxon Valdez tanker spilled into Alaska's Prince William Sound in 1989, authorities in Washington said.

Wilson said the slick was 11 miles long early Friday. "But that's an old report. I just know it's very, very large."

Chris Squares, an International Television Network cameraman speaking from an empty hotel in Khafji, a Saudi port city on the border with Kuwait, 60 miles south of the spill site. He said the air had been thick with the smell of oil for about the past three days.

The slick came within view of shore Thursday, he said.

"The oil is so thick the water can hardly hold up a wave," he said. "It's a gurgling noise, it's like mud."

The next major population center to the south is Jeddah, about 105 miles from Khafji. The gulf is about 550 miles long, 150 miles wide on its northern end and widens to 250 miles in the southern portion.

Freeland said the war could scuttle any attempt to clean up the crude. "I don't know how you could contemplate coping with the situation," he said.

The war could prevent commercial clean-up planes from flying over the slick and dropping chemical dispersants on the slick, Freeland said. The presence of Iraqi-laid mines in the region could also stop commercial ships from trying to collect the crude, he said.

Prevailing northwest winds will push the spill down the gulf, said Peter Whitbread, head of International Marine Services, one of the largest marine salvage companies in the gulf.

"There's no place in the gulf that is able to do a major containment. I know for a fact that the Navy doesn't have the ability to do this sort of containment," he said.

"It's going to play havoc with fishing, with marine life in general. It could wipe out large portions of the turtle population, dolphins and whales," Freeland said.

In addition, rare cormorants, now nesting the gulf, could also be killed.

"You will end up with thousands upon thousands of dead birds," he said.

home soon?"

"I know I speak for all West Virginians," Caperton said. "We salute you. We are proud of you. We respect you. You have a tough job to do. We know you will do it well and return home quickly."

Wilkinson said Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein was hit hard by U.S. bombs and added, "Right now, I think he's hunkered in his bunker wondering what hit him and what to do about it."

The pass-in-review — a parade of the troops accompanied by martial music — was followed by receptions for each of the three states.

At West Virginia's reception, wives, girlfriends, mothers and children waited anxiously for the event to end so the guardsmen could begin their weekend leave.

"It's a real tough thing, but we're going to enjoy this weekend," said Shari Stewart of Morgantown, W.Va., waiting for her boyfriend, Capt. Ronnie Lawler, so they could leave for Nashville, Tenn., about 60 miles to the southeast.

Lawler, a 25-year-old psychiatric specialist in Morgantown, W.Va., said he joined the National Guard eight years ago to earn money for college. He said the weeks of intensive training have given him "the warrior spirit."

The 201st from West Virginia includes several members from western Maryland and southwestern Pennsylvania and is augmented by 18 guardsmen from New Hampshire who volunteered for active duty even though their detachment has not been called up yet.

The troops were addressed briefly by Govs. Ned McWherter of Tennessee, Wallace Wilkinson of Kentucky and Gaston Caperton of West Virginia.

McWherter called the guardsmen "spotlight professional soldiers. We will pray for your safe return."

Merit system...

law does not provide for the flexibility that we had intended." He said he hopes any needed changes can be made in the special session.

Boysen said he needs more flexibility in how to spend the amount of money he has earmarked for salaries. "I would rather have fewer people and have them be the best," and that could require salary offers beyond the merit-system limits.

The solution, Boysen said, is to "establish another merit system" that combines hiring and salary flexibility with job protection.

House Majority Whip Kenny Raper said the governance committee of the task force that drew up most of the school-reform law talked about removing the department from the merit system but decided against it "to keep down all the contention" such a move might cause.

He said Boysen aired his concerns with House and Senate leaders this week, "and the consensus was that ... if it is indeed a problem, we're supportive of doing something in the special session" to correct it.

He said that, if the problem requires legislation, Boysen should be the one who asks Gov. Wallace Wilkinson to add it to the legislative agenda — "with the caveat that we're supportive."

Drug abuse not a new problem

America has a drug problem. It was a big story again in 1990, grabbing newspaper headlines and rating plenty of coverage on the TV news.

"It's never been like this before. The country is going down the tubes," a lot of Americans have thought or said out loud in letters-to-the-editor or on radio or TV phone-in shows.

Writers and callers cited violent crime, the breakup of families, serious illness and early graves, all related to drug addiction and abuse. Evidence is ample.

Politicians have picked up on the theme, making illicit drugs public enemy number one, at least before Saddam Hussein invaded Kuwait.

There seems to be a consensus among the elected and the electorate: the country's drug problem is unprecedented.

But consider some young men who get drugged up and roast a friend to death over a campfire. His offense? He refuses to get high with them.

The drug is cheap and easy to get. Murder and assault are common where it is abused.

Abuse and addiction know no social distinction. It is so bad that a church pastor begs his congregation to refrain from drug use during services.

It all may sound as current as today's news. But it all happened in frontier America, where drug abuse was also a major problem.

It wasn't crack cocaine or other of today's assortment of illegal drugs. The abused drug was booze, much of it made unlawfully as moonshine.

Frontier Americans were heavy consumers of alcohol. By the opening of the nineteenth century distillers had popped up in Kentucky along almost every live spring branch," wrote Thomas D. Clark in his book, "Kentucky Land of Contrast." Clark added that stills may have been more numerous than water mills.

Contemporary accounts tell of much liquor-fired violence. There are too many to be dismissed as mere propaganda produced by would-be booze banners.

The youths who murdered their companion in the fire were drunk. Drunkenness was often connected with frontier slayings.

Fundamentalist Protestants would make their churches anti-alcohol bastions late in the 19th-century. But many of their forbears were fond of liquor.

One Sunday morning, a Kentucky frontier congregation reportedly drank two barrels of whiskey before 10 a.m.

"Pray drink before you enter or before service, not go out in the midst of prayer," a desperate minister admonished his flock.

So we despair of a national drug problem that includes alcohol abuse. It is a tragedy, but it is not new.

Security forces have ordered journalists out of a wholesale market, and a hotel nightclub they were using as viewing points.

U.S. officials have said the Turkish government has ordered the news blackout.

But the effort to keep the base's role quiet has not fooled the Iraqis.

In a stinging note, Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz told his Turkish counterpart Wednesday: "It has become certain to us and the world that U.S. military aircraft have used the Turkish base of Incirlik to raid targets within the Iraqi borders."

Iraq threatened unspecified consequences to Turkey for the attacks.

Ironically, Iraq has been the most forthcoming with information on the raids on its northern territory. However, it is impossible to confirm those reports independently.

Iraqi communiques have said air strikes have hit the northern cities of Mosul, Kirkuk, Erbil, Nineveh and al-Taamir.

Kurth reportedly close to making position decision

Murray State University President Ronald Kurth has not yet decided which of the three finalists will be the university's first vice president of university relations and administrative services.

The three finalists are Dr. Gary W. Shepherd Jr., 50, vice president for community services at Vincennes University in Vincennes, Ind.; Neil K. Smith, 50, vice chancellor for administrative services, University of Missouri-Rolla in Rolla, Mo.; and Don W. Kassing, vice president for development and public affairs, Western State College in Gunnison, Colo.

Endangered Species Program may itself be facing extinction

By RUSS KENNEDY
Kentucky Field Writer

Could it be that the Endangered Species Program is itself in danger of one day becoming extinct?

In a recent audit report, the U.S. Interior Department's Office of the Inspector General (OIG) concluded that the program's "mission cannot be fully accomplished at present funding levels" and further "questions whether... the program as it is presently structured and funded is feasible."

Translation? The battle to conserve and protect endangered species is being lost primarily due to lack of funds.

The federal government spends some $8.4 million annually on its recovery plans to aid endangered species. Though that may sound like a lot of money, split 50 ways (among the states) it's really not much at all.

"I think it's safe to say that endangered species are not a high priority item with the federal government," said Lauren Schaaf, director of the wildlife division for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR).

"Literally billions of dollars are spent on other social and environmental problems, so in relative terms, we spend next to nothing on endangered species," Schaaf commented.

In addition to the lack of dollars, wildlife management officials generally agree that another major problem with the program is that monies are awarded annually on a competitive basis, making any long-term planning impossible. Management agencies don't know from year to year how much — if any — they'll receive.

In Kentucky, 27 wildlife species, including selected mammals, certain birds, and several freshwater mussels are protected by the federal Endangered Species Act.

At this time, most of Kentucky's allocation is being spent on bats — the gray bat, the Indiana bat and the Virginia big-eared bat. Extensive studies are being conducted to determine their seasonal locations as well as breeding and feeding habits.

This information will one day aid in the recovery and protection of bat species found in Kentucky.

"The practice of wildlife management has a long history of success. Wildlife management works," Schaaf said. "There just hasn't been the level of commitment — in terms of dollars — necessary to achieve the results we'd like to see."

In a nutshell, the OIG's report might be interpreted to mean we need to take a hard look at our present endeavors. The Inspector General seems to be saying it's time to get seriously into the business of endangered species conservation and protection — in terms of both structure and major financial commitment.

BANNER YEAR FOR HUNTER EDUCATION

Last year, nearly 16,000 students successfully completed the Kentucky Hunter Education Program, an increase of approximately 3,000 over 1989. An additional 224 trainers also were approved, bringing the number of certified instructors statewide to 912.

Effective March 1, 1991, successful completion of a state-approved hunter education program is required for all hunters — resident or nonresident — born on or after Jan. 1, 1975.

Bowhunters not in possession of a firearm while in the field may carry a "National Bowhunter Education Program" course completion card to satisfy the requirement.

Children under 10 are exempt, provided that while in the field they're accompanied by an adult capable of taking immediate control of the child's firearm or bow.

Persons exempt from having a hunting license are also exempt from the hunter education course completion requirement.

To find out when the Kentucky Hunter Education Program will next be presented in your area, contact the Kentucky Dept. of Fish and Wildlife Resources, #1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, KY 40601; phone (502) 564-4762.

A LOOK AT KY'S MAJOR LAKES

The March-April edition of Happy Hunting Ground magazine promises to be a genuine "keeper" copy, especially for anglers. Featured articles include a profile of each of Kentucky's major lakes, advice on ideal times for productive fishing and a peek into what the decade of the '90s may hold in store for Kentucky's fishermen.

The early spring edition also takes a look at the state's growing bald eagle population and introduces readers to a new concept in conservation education.

A one-year subscription to HHG costs only five dollars, a two-year subscription sells for just nine dollars, and $14 buys a three-year subscription and entitles the purchaser to a one-year gift subscription to another person.

Happy Hunting Ground magazine is the official publication of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. To find out more about how you can receive HHG in your home, contact the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, #1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, KY 40601; phone (502) 564-4336.

Fishing Line

by JERRY MAUPIN
Outdoor columnist

I would like to thank all of you nice folks who came to the Expo Center and participated in the seminars and for the questions you asked.

I thank you also for the nice comments about my column and the help you give in passing good information on to the public. One of my goals is to help others learn how, when and where to fish, so they too can enjoy some of the many pleasures of sport fishing!

I try to be exact with my information but we all know that conditions can change very quickly. Using the knowledge you have yourself along with some basic methods and techniques I provide can help increase your success.

Each trip I make is a new learning experience which I try to remember for future reference. I look for the humor in most situations connected to fishing and they are many. I laugh at myself as much as anyone, and I believe this is one of the reasons I do what I do. Enjoy life in the outdoors, and you will be forever be young!

Now then, it's time to get down to fishing. Our lake level has dropped back down to winter pool and with a few more days of sunshine, the water color will be clear.

Some good crappie are being caught now on both sides of the lake but the east side is more clear. A lot of you have trouble catching fish in dingy water, so I would suggest that you try some of the larger baits which are plentiful or have a good creek feeding into it.

The forecast is more cold weather for Saturday but possibly warming on Sunday. If you have the warm clothing and boots, go for it, there's fish to be caught!

Kentucky Lake crappie like the 10-20 foot depths after a big drop and a hard breeze, so start looking there first. Barkley Lake should have some fish at the 8-12 foot levels. All of these fish should be close to or over wood cover. I haven't seen any evidence of a big shad kill yet, so the gametish just may get active this weekend.

Remember, carefully release all crappie which are under 10 inches in length! They will be the fish of the future for many of us! Happy Fishing!

For the record... Safari Club drops illegally-taken endangered species from its lists

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — The Safari Club, a 20,000-member hunters' organization, is dropping endangered species from its record book.

The club will not, however, change its policy of trying to convince the government that some listed species are not endangered in parts of their ranges and hunters who take those animals legally should be allowed to bring their trophies home.

"Everything that is illegal to bring into the United States" will be dropped from the record books, said Safari Club International spokesman Jim Morehouse.

"Even though we're an international organization, our headquarters is in the United States, and we believe we have to abide by U.S. law."

The club publishes two books, one lists African species and the other lists "every legally huntable (non-African) species in the world," Morehouse said by telephone from SFP's Tucson, Ariz., headquarters.

The first of the two due out is the worldwide book, to be published in June. The African book is due out in June, 1992.

Animals that will no longer be listed include the polar bear, jaguar and black faced impala, Morehouse said.

"We felt that by having some of those animals in our record book, it might encourage people to go and take those animals," Morehouse said. "I can only speculate that if they're not in there, somebody might not take one."

He called it an ethical issue more than a legal one because some of the animals being removed from the book are legal game in some areas.

"In Namibia, black-faced impala are raised on ranches. In the rest of Africa, it's an endangered species," he said. "Hunting there is an incentive to raise their numbers, and when the data shows there is a surplus, hunting would help raise revenue for those ranches."

He also cited the African elephant, which is legal game under a quota system in Zimbabwe and like a legal elephant and under the right export and import permits bring that ivory back to the United States," Morehouse said. "We think the same thing will occur in South Africa and Botswana."

The United States lists the Nile crocodile as endangered, but the 106 nations which comprise the international treaty regulating the trade in wildlife allow trade in Nile crocodile skins.

The club, which has members in 50 countries, said that in most cases, wildlife is found in developing countries where human population is rapidly growing and poverty is growing as fast or faster.

Wildlife is being devastated, the club said, and the only chance game animals have is to be given some value. If wild game can help the economy of the people, there is a much better chance their kind will survive.

Those that have no value, no matter how rare or beautiful, will be replaced by cattle or corn.

LBL's spring turkey season dates are set

The spring turkey season at Land Between The Lakes (LBL) will open April 17 and close May 7.

Hunters who want to hunt during the first five days of the 19-day season must apply for a quota permit.

There will be a two-day quota hunt April 17 and 18, followed by a three-day hunt on April 20-22. A total of 1,250 permits will be issued for each quota hunt. April 19 and 23 are non-hunt days. The non-quota portion of the season will be April 24-May 7.

Those interested in the quota hunts must submit an LBL application prior to Feb. 28. Hunters will be selected for the available quota permits by computer drawing. All applicants will be notified regarding selection or rejection by March 22.

For additional information, hunters should read the LBL Turkey Hunting Regulations. Regulations and quota turkey-hunt applications are available at the North and South Welcome Stations, Golden Pond Visitor Center, or by writing the Fish and Wildlife Management Unit, TVA/LBL, 100 Van Morgan Drive, Golden Pond, KY 42211-9001, or by calling (502) 924-1213 between 7 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Why the Bills will be Super Bowl champs...

By BARRY WILNER
Associated Press Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. — It won't be 51-3. Not even close to that. It probably won't be 17-13, either although it likely will be respectable for the Giants. Still, the Buffalo Bills, in their first Super Bowl, will win their first Super Bowl. Why, particularly since history tells us that few teams appearing in their first Super Bowl beat a club that already has been there? Let's start with the fact the Bills simply are the NFL's most talented team. Offensively, they have been overwhelming, particularly in the playoffs. Defensively, they have the right weapons to shut down the Giants, who don't exactly scare anyone with their attack. Also, despite being in their first NFL championship game, the Bills are well-tested. They've overcome self-created adversity stemming from internal feuds that earned them the tag "Bickering Bills." Often, erasing dissension is tougher than any on-field opponent. Plus, the Bills beat the Giants 17-13 at the Meadowlands, handing the NFC champions their only home loss. They did it with Jim Kelly playing less than half the game before hurting his knee. And Kelly wasn't nearly as efficient guiding the no-huddle attack then as he is now. The lack of a one-week break also helps Buffalo. The Giants don't have extra time to come up with defensive schemes to shut down Thurman Thomas, the NFL's total offense leader; or Andre Reed, the AFC's most dangerous receiver; or James Lofton, the veteran receiver who always has done well against the Giants. New York's strength is its line-backing and secondary. It will be severely tested. Coming out of the backfield,

Prediction: Bills 27, Giants 17.

Thomas could not be handled by the Raiders' linebackers, sparking the 51-3 rout in the AFC title game. The Giants have Lawrence Taylor and Pepper Johnson, who have the mobility to guard Thomas. But that will take away from the pass rush, which is nothing special, anyway. Buffalo's offensive line is playing at peak efficiency. If Taylor or Johnson — or both — are in coverage, and Kelly recognizes that, the Bills will find room to run. If they rush him, Kelly will get the ball to Thomas or tight end Keith McKeller. Often. The Giants don't figure to pile up a lot of points, although they can score if Buffalo doesn't produce a better pass rush than it has in the playoffs. The Bills need that rush because the secondary is decent, but vulnerable. Buffalo has not been bothered by mobile quarterbacks because it has Bruce Smith, Darryl Talley and Cornelius Bennett on the outside. As it does every week, New York will seek to run, run and run some more early in the game. The best way to get the Giants out of that mode is to build a quick lead, and no offense is better equipped to do so than the Bills. An edge in special teams goes to New York. That, however, was true with the Raiders as well, and Buffalo outplayed Los Angeles in that area, too. The Bills will win because and isn't this rare from the AFC? they simply are the better team.

...and why the Giants will win instead

By DAVE GOLDBERG
Associated Press Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. — Joe Montana staggered off the field. Staggered, not walked, which is the way he has left the last two playoff games the San Francisco 49ers have played against the New York Giants. NFC football leaves quarterbacks in that state. NFC football wins Super Bowls, the last six to be exact. OK, so Buffalo isn't Denver, to the relief of the NFL, ABC and everyone who watches Super Bowls everywhere. OK, so Buffalo averaged 47.5 points in its two play off wins. OK, so the Bills beat the Giants 17-13 at Giants Stadium on Dec. 15 and scored the first two times they had the ball. OK, so Jeff Hostetler will be at quarterback for the Giants instead of Phil Simms, who was only 22 of 25 the last time New York was in the Super Bowl. However, Jeff Hostetler has a career record of 6-0 as a starter, something neither Simms nor Jim Kelly (nor even Frank Reich) can claim. He has also shown the ability to keep his cool in the waning minutes of close games, which are the only kind the Giants play.

Prediction: Giants 24, Bills 21.

That first game is deceptive. It meant little to the Bills. It meant less to the Giants, who were in the midst of a run during which they lost three of four — the only three games they lost this season. Moreover, the Giants actually outplayed the Bills but were done in by penalties, misplays and referee calls and non-calls. More important, New York rushed for 157 yards in that game, although 105 came from Rodney Hampton, whose broken left leg will keep him out Sunday. The combination of Otis Anderson, Dave Meggett and Lewis Tillman plus an offensive line bolstered by the return of Jumbo Elliott should be able to come close again. That means Kelly and his perpetual motion offense may not have the ball long enough to run up anything close to 47.5 points. A couple of other things. The Giants (or at least 22 of them) have been to the Super Bowl before. The only guy on the Bills who comes close is kicker Scott Norwood, who once played in a USFL title game. Now these guys aren't always silent, particularly Bruce Smith, who took it upon himself before the last Giants game to proclaim himself the best defensive player ever. A couple of years ago, they took the first Monday night game they had had in several years and acted like it was a Super Bowl. Buffalo gets one break. They only get one week to absorb the hype. But it's not easy to spend half a day to learn a game plan, practice and talk to the media. That's mandatory and the media sessions are a mob scene very different than the intimate gatherings during the regular season in Buffalo, where the locker room is open only for an hour on Wednesday. The Giants have experience with the Super Bowl media circus. In fact, they endure something like it on a weekly basis. One more thing. Jeff Hostetler is not Jay Schroeder.

Company to recall girls' belts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Levi Strauss & Co. will recall an estimated 36,000 red leather belts for girls, the first recall in the giant clothing manufacturer's history, the Consumer Products Safety Commission said Wednesday.

CPSC said a metal tip on some of the belts may detach. It is small enough to be swallowed by a child and could cause choking. The firm has received one complaint of a child starting to choke on a metal tip, although the child was not injured, the commission said.

The belts were sold nationwide last summer and last fall along with two styles of the company's "Little Levis" denim jeans and skirts, which were sold in sizes 2-4T and 4-6X. CPSC said the belts were embossed with strawberry designs and had silver-colored metal trim.

MSU chooses band participants

Murray State University has placed 11 instrumentalists and four alternates on the roster for the 1991 Kentucky Music Educators' All-Collegiate Band.

Representing Murray State are Terri Hernon, Martin, Tenn.; Karen Johnson, Ledbetter, Andrea Rudd, Symsonia, Tim Barnett and Joel Johnson, Evansville, Ind.; Ben Gritton, Henderson, Dana Raymer, Greenville, Melanie Cron, Rockfield, Robert Cross, Henderson, John Murrey, Glasgow, and Glenn Shaffer, Paducah. Selected as alternates this year are Cathy Krizan, Murray, Scott Griffin, Greenville, Curtis Bucy, Buchanan, Tenn., and Tony Brown, Shelbyville.

Membership in the All-Collegiate Band is determined by a panel of university directors and represents the top instrumentalists at the collegiate level in the state. Students are nominated by their university band directors and perform in conjunction with the Kentucky Music Educators' state convention Feb. 6-9 in Louisville.

This ensemble was formed approximately seven years ago to bring together the most talented collegiate musicians in the state and has now become highly competitive and one of the premier events at the state conference," according to MSU director of bands Dennis L. Johnson.

Johnson has coordinated the event for the past two years.

The selected members will meet on Feb. 6 for chair auditions and rehearsals in the University of Louisville. They will present their concert on Feb. 7 in the Louisville Performing Arts Center at 8 p.m., with guest conductor Don Schleicher, associate professor of bands and orchestras at the University of Michigan.

"This is the highest representation we have ever had for this prestigious ensemble and the highest representation of any university in the state," according to Johnson. "I am delighted with the numbers we have participating this year which is indicative of the respect our band program has in the state."

'Fitness for fun' program available at Murray State

"Fitness for Fun," a total fitness program that includes an evaluation of overall physical condition and a personalized exercise and lifestyle prescription, is available at Murray State University for anyone who feels the need to get in shape for spring and summer.

A 45-minute orientation as an introduction to the program has been scheduled at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 30, Room 109 of the Carr Health Building, according to Dr. Pam Rice, associate professor of health, physical education and recreation on the campus.

She explained that the program is a non-profit community service with several options, which are prescribed for participants based on a series of carefully controlled fitness tests. Elements of the program include:

- Choice of aerobic activities; different strength exercises; flexibility exercises; nutritional analysis and/or counseling; and stress management counseling.

The fee for the program is $25. Additional information may be obtained by calling Dr. Pam Rice at 762-6188 in the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Sears has been selected Business of the Month for January by the Murray-Calloway County Chamber of Commerce. Pictured above, Chamber President Sam Parker presents Opal Hart, the owner of Sears, with the Business of the Month plaque.

Sears is business of the month

Sears has been chosen Business of the Month for January by the Murray-Calloway County Chamber of Commerce.

Opal Hart, who has been the owner of Sears in Murray since August 1990, said that being chosen Business of the Month was a surprise.

"I really appreciate the vote of confidence," Hart said.

Last August, Sears enlarged and now offers a larger display area. The store is able to display more appliances and lawn and garden equipment.

Later this year, Sears will be expanded even more, Hart said.

Hart has been working with the Sears company for over 25 years. She has been with the Murray Sears since 1972.

Sawyers employee of the year

HT Marketing, Inc., selected Debbie Sawyers as Employee of the Year for 1990. The Board of Directors presented Sawyers with a plaque and $1,000 as tokens of appreciation for her dedicated and loyal service.

Sawyers became part of the Hawaiian Tropic team in April, 1983, as a computer operator. She has held various positions within the Marketing Department, including data entry, order processing, and customer service. She advanced quickly to become a secretary to the president of a subsidiary corporation and to the Vice President of Marketing. From there, she was promoted to Assistant to the Vice President of Marketing.

Sawyers is highly skilled and knowledgeable of many computer programs and equipment operation. She is responsible for generating specialized sales reports, creating graphic presentations of market research data, compiling informational portfolios for presentation of major accounts, creating the company's annual sales handbook, and building many other special reports and graphs as needed. She works closely with the company's six regional managers in assisting them with professional-looking brochures to distribute to customers.

An Employee of the Month award was given to Sawyers four times: September 1988, June 1989, June 1990, and November 1990. This is an outstanding achievement as selections for this honor are made company-wide from all departments.

Sawyers constantly strives to improve herself. She is always eager to learn and stays current on technological advancements in computer software and hardware. She devotes many long hours whenever necessary to complete projects accurately and on time. In spite of her busy schedule, Sawyers is always willing to stop to help a co-worker. She has taught many employees at HT Marketing how to use the computers at their desks.

HT Marketing greatly values Sawyers' talents. The many awards that she has received are just small tokens of the deep appreciation the company feels for her and for the contributions that she has made.

Early leukemia is marked by anemia

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can you provide information on myelodysplastic syndrome?

DEAR READER: The myelodysplastic syndrome (also called subacute myeloid leukemia and chronic myelomonocytic leukemia) is a form of early leukemia (blood cell cancer) that usually affects men in their 50s and 70s. It is marked by anemia or low white blood cell counts (leukopenia) or low platelet counts (thrombocytopenia), or any combination of the three. The syndrome is considered to be a precursor of more serious leukemia, which may take years to appear, however.

The myelodysplastic syndrome is associated with infection and hemorrhage, which — for obvious reasons — must be treated promptly. Therapy for the syndrome itself involves drugs, such as prednisone, danazol and medicine to promote the growth of white blood corpuscles. Patients with this condition should be under the care of hematologists (blood specialists) or oncologists (cancer specialists).

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been told I have an elevated blood pressure and am overweight. Can you tell me what can be done to lower the pressure and control my weight?

DEAR READER: On first reading, your question seemed so rhetorical that I debated answering it. However, on reconsideration, I concluded that you need further information — even though my answer will seem too simple. Hypertension and overweight go hand in hand.

Your first goal is to achieve an ideal weight. Cut out sweets, alcohol and fattening foods, avoid salt and engage in regular exercise. If necessary, join a weight-control support group, such as Overeaters Anonymous or Weight Watchers. Follow your doctor's instructions about diet and activity.

As you shed pounds, your blood pressure will probably improve. However, during your period of dieting, you may require medicine to reduce your hypertension. Commonly prescribed drugs include diuretics, beta blockers and calcium-channel blockers. Your doctor can advise you and, if necessary, recommend the necessary medication.

Remember that your two diseases — obesity and hypertension — are related; you need medical guidance in avoiding their consequences, such as stroke and heart disease. As a major component of your care, you need to take responsibility for your health — in particular, your weight. The doctor can help you but can't do it all.

To give you more information, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports: "Calorie-Wise Cooking," "Winning The Battle of the Bulge," "Weight Control Through Calorie Control" and "Hypertension." Other readers who would like copies should send $1.25 for each report to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title(s).

Reelfoot Lake, Tennessee
Tuesday, February 12

Sign up now for a close-up look at the majestic and powerful symbol of our nation.

Stopping at the park's Visitor Center, we'll look over exhibits of the geological and human history of the lake, and even experience an earthquake simulator. The bald eagle tour is conducted by a park naturalist. It combines a slide presentation that provides an excellent overview of the lake, its flora, fauna and environs with a short bus tour into the park for that too-rare treat of seeing the bald eagle.

This day trip includes:

- Lunch at the legendary Boyette's Restaurant for their "all-you-can-eat" family style lunch.
- A visit on the way home to Flippen's Hillbilly Barn, home of the world's best fried pies.
  - All taxes and tips.
- Deluxe motorcoach transportation.
  - $48 per person

Call Doris Rowland or John Williams at 753-3231 to make your reservation. We'll leave at 8:30 and be home by 4:30. Very little walking is required.

BUSINESS NEWS IN BRIEF

Woodmen of the World

Receive awards

Student of the Week

Megan Malinauskas, a ninth grader at Murray High School, has been selected Student of the Week. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Mark Malinauskas of 1600 Keenland. Megan is an honor roll student and a member of band, the speech team, Spanish club and student council. Pictured from left are James Hart, a representative of Century 21; Pete Lancaster, a representative of WSJP; Megan; and Bill Wells, principal of Murray High School.

HT Marketing, Inc. is proud to announce that Nancy Todd has been selected as Employee of the Month for December, 1990. In honor of her achievements on behalf of the company, she received a check for $100 and a plaque, presented by Hunt Smock.

Todd employee of the month

HT Marketing has selected Nancy Todd as Employee of the Month for December, 1990. Todd has been with the company since December 1987 and holds the position of Console Operator. Her duties involve working closely with the Accounting Department in the areas of accounts payable, accounts receivable, and payroll. She is responsible for the computer programs and procedures in these areas and in other areas company-wide. Todd operates the mainframe System/36 computer that disseminates data and generates reports for all departments. The most significant and outstanding contribution that she made for December was to voluntarily work on a payroll program during the Christmas holiday when the company was officially closed. She came to work two full days and several half days during the Christmas week in order to get the program installed and running.

Because of Todd's efforts, all employees received their paychecks as scheduled the week they returned from their holiday vacation. The company is very proud of Todd and looks forward to her continued success as an Employee of the Month for the second time in 1990. She will receive the Perfect Attendance Award for 1990 for not missing any work days due to illness. She has received this award for each of the last three years that she has worked at HT Marketing.

Joann Erwin

Erwin wins trip to Gatlinburg

Over $3,500 in prizes were given away by WBLN-FM during the "Christmas Vacation Basket Give-Away," in which 40 merchants in 10 area cities participated.

Over 10,000 people registered and one lucky name was selected. Joann Erwin of Hazel won a ski vacation for six to Ober Gatlinburg, Gatlinburg Summit Resort. The vacation provided by Pennyrile Travel, Hopkinsville, was one of the many prizes received by Erwin. She also received $103.70 from WBLN. Erwin qualified herself, as did 39 others, by winning a Christmas basket stuffed full of merchants' goodies. Her winning basket was provided by Pier 1 Imports of Murray.

Haverstock participates in council

Van Haverstock of Murray recently served as a member of a special group of independent insurance agents from 17 states who participated in an Agents Marketing Council sponsored by the State Auto Insurance Companies. The meeting was held at the company's headquarters in Columbus, Ohio.

The council representatives gave marketing input that will help create corporate policies and procedures. The agents contributed key ideas about improving service to customers, generating sales, and enhancing products. They also provided valuable information about the marketplace, insurance industry trends and legislative developments in their respective states.

Haverstock, president of Holton, Melugin & Haverstock Insurance, is one of 6,900 independent agents representing State Auto, an A+ rated insurance company offering business, auto, homeowners and life insurance.

Lindy Suiter

Lindy Suiter joins insurance agency

Van Haverstock recently announced the association of Lindy Suiter with the Holton, Melugin & Haverstock Insurance Agency as of Jan. 1, 1991.

Suiter is a 1976 graduate of Murray High School and attended Murray State University. He has been working in the insurance business since 1982 and was the personal lines manager for another local agency for two years. He has received valuable education in the personal lines area through his completion of the Personal Lines Agency Development Program offered with the Commercial Union Insurance Company.

Suiter has also attended the Independent Insurance Agents of Kentucky programs for Agency Management, Personal Lines, and Commercial Lines.

"We are pleased to have Lindy join our staff as he adds a broad range of product knowledge including auto, home, commercial, life and health," Haverstock said. "Lindy would like to invite all of his business associates and friends to come by and see him."

Presents check

financial planning by Michael H. Keller CPA

SBA IS ALIVE

The Small Business Administration (SBA) is alive and doing well, despite the fact that it was almost abolished in 1986.

The SBA provides a much needed service in helping to provide financing to small businesses. Except for farmers and those companies listed on the stock exchange, most businesses in the United States are considered small businesses by SBA standards. In addition to being classified a small business, a SBA loan applicant must have been denied financing from a bank or other lender.

The SBA has two types of loans, guaranty loans and direct loans. Most SBA loans are actually guaranties by the SBA made to a local bank. The SBA guarantees that the bank will get at least 90% of its money back in the event the borrower defaults. The maximum guaranty loan is $750,000; there is no minimum loan. Some banks may have a minimum loan amount because of the bank's administrative costs.

Direct loans (the second type of SBA loan) are for amounts up to $150,000. The SBA has very little money available for direct loans. As a result, these funds are often reserved for special groups, such as the disabled, or special economic target groups.

To help expedite loans, the SBA has given certain banks special authority to make loans under the "Preferred Lender Program." An approved bank can make a loan without first obtaining SBA approval. The SBA simply reviews the loan later and provides the appropriate 90% guarantee to the bank.

Those interested in obtaining an SBA loan should first start with a conventional loan request to a local bank.

Dear Abby By Abigail Van Buren

Removing Hazards for Elderly Reduces the Risk of Falling

DEAR ABBY After reading the letter in your column about older persons who live alone...

on his left side over a long period of time, it will damage his heart...

The risk of falling can be reduced substantially by identifying those medical conditions that increase the risk of falls...

DEAR LEFT-SIDE SLEEPER: A call to the American Heart Association confirms the following: Sleeping on one's left side does no damage to the heart.

DEAR DR. RESNICK: Thank you for a valuable letter. Anyone interested in obtaining a booklet should write to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission...

DEAR E. COLBY: Beautiful!

DEAR ABBY: My husband of three years refuses to sleep on his left side. How does that affect the sleepers?

Abby's family recipes are included in her cookbooklet. Send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope...
