Making the world a safer place Bush proposes sharp cuts in U.S., Soviet nuclear arsenals

U.S. President George Bush proposed sweeping cuts in U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals.

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush wants the Soviets to join in scaling back the world's most powerful nuclear missiles as he commits the United States to eliminating most short-range missiles.

In an announcement detailing some of the biggest changes in nuclear history, Bush pledged Friday to "take steps to make the world a less dangerous place than ever before in the nuclear age."

Bush said in a nationwide television address that he will eliminate ground-launched short range nuclear weapons — most of them stored in Europe — as well as those carried on ships and submarines, including the Pentagon's 350-400 Tomahawk cruise missiles. But the United States will keep those carried aboard aircraft.

He further offered to open negotiations with the Soviet Union to eliminate all long-range ballistic missiles, with multiple warheads, an area where the Soviet Union has a large advantage.

Bush, however, would keep U.S. ship-borne multiple warheads, where the United States has the edge.

It was not clear how many warheads would be eliminated under Bush's unilateral cuts, but a senior official who briefed reporters said it would be several thousand.

The president called on the Soviets to respond to his plan with "equally bold steps."

He telephoned Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Russian President Boris Yeltsin on Friday morning to inform them of his decision and also consulted Friday with European leaders.

"I have asked the Soviets to go down this road with us — to destroy their entire inventory of ground-launched theater nuclear weapons," Bush said.

Soviet Foreign Minister Boris Pankin, briefed in New York by Secretary of State James A. Baker III, said his country is "prepared to give a positive response to an initiative of the United States and to meet U.S. steps halfway."

From Capitol Hill, Democratic Chairman Les Aspin of the House Armed Services Committee, said of Bush's announcement:

"The thrust of his new policy is right and he's targeted the right

'Peace dividend' likely if Soviets reciprocate

By BARRY SCHWEID
An Associated Press News Analysis

NEW YORK — If the Soviet Union reciprocates, and the early response is favorable, President Bush's proposal to ban some of the most dangerous ocean-spanning nuclear weapons could produce a peace dividend from the Cold War far surpassing budget savings.

The long-range nuclear missiles with multiple warheads that the two superpowers have poised at each other from ground silos are considered by many experts as the most likely to touch off a nuclear holocaust.

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger lamented years ago the decision of the two superpowers to develop multi-warhead missiles as a terrible mistake.

It is these weapons that Bush on Friday night suggested the United States and the Soviet Union scrap only two months after he and Gorbachev signed a Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty that would have retained a mighty arsenal — and only a day after he asked Congress to provide funds for the MX Peacekeeper.

"The time is right to use START as a springboard to achieve additional stabilizing changes," Bush said in proposing the two sides vault past the cutbacks of about one-third in their globe-girdling nuclear weapons to "seek early agreement to eliminate from their inventories all ICBMs with multiple warheads."

He said "such an action would take away the single, most unstable part of our nuclear arsenals."

Bush ranged far beyond multiple-warhead missile cutbacks in unveiling one of the most sweeping arms control plans since the dawn of the atomic age 46 years ago.

Other presidents have spoken hopefully of reversing the nuclear arms race, and Ronald Reagan, in a summit meeting with Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Reykjavik, Iceland, in 1987 proposed eliminating all nuclear weapons.

The proposal was quickly altered to encompass only ballistic missiles — and not long after that was abandoned as unrealistic.

The end of the Cold War, Gorbachev's own arms reductions and persistent calls from Americans for a "peace dividend" all contributed to Bush's sweeping declaration. So did a series of initiatives from Democrats in Congress, including one by Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee nine years ago to ban multiple-warhead missiles.

The unification of Germany effectively removed fears in the West that Communist troops from the East would rush across the East-West divide. It also, as Bush acknowledged after slow deliberation, riddled the rationale for NATO's maintaining battlefield nuclear weapons.

As a result, Bush announced the United States would eliminate its land-based tactical nuclear weapons and remove all short-range atomic arms from U.S. submarines and ships.

"We can now take steps to make the world a less dangerous place than ever before in the nuclear age," Bush said in a nationwide address from the Oval Office.

The elimination of battlefield nuclear weapons can be accomplished with a stroke of the presidential pen. Many of the other provisions of Bush's plan require cooperation from the Soviet Union. And working together they would have to try to restrain the world's growing nuclear club.

Gorbachev, who pioneered in trimming troops and weapons, is likely to embrace at least the outline of Bush's proposal once he absorbs the details.

Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin promptly offered immediate support. "Boris Yeltsin gave high marks to the initiative and spoke in favor of identical huge cuts on the Soviet Union's side," the Russian Federation's official news agency reported in a dispatch.

In New York, Secretary of State James A. Baker III discussed the proposal Thursday and Friday with Soviet Foreign Minister Boris Pankin, who told reporters afterward:

"We have established that both sides are positive and radically inclined on the matter. We are prepared to give a positive response to any initiative of the United States and to meet U.S. steps halfway."

Owsley County case could have statewide effect on PVAs

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Local tax assessors across Kentucky may have to redouble their efforts because of a state Supreme Court ruling in an Owsley County case, a state revenue official said.

"The implication here could be very significant," said James Coffman, state property tax commissioner. "It's impossible to say at the present time, but certainly we're concerned about it as far as its statewide impact."

The opinion issued Thursday appeared to say that local tax assessors — known as property valuation administrators — must re-evaluate all property in their counties before any reassessments can be sent to taxpayers.

Counties now are required to reassess every piece of property at least once every four years. With the possible exception of a few counties, new tax bills are sent out as the assessments are done, not when the whole county is completed, Coffman said.

"What it seems to be bringing us to is the possibility that every property is going to have to be revalued every year by the PVA office. That becomes a very major task," Coffman said.

Coffman said it was unclear whether the justices meant for the ruling to apply to all counties or whether they were ordering any refunds.

Candidates offer different views on education reform

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Gubernatorial candidates Larry Hopkins and Brereton Jones both say they support the 1990 education bill, but their stands part company after that.

Hopkins told the Pritchard Committee for Academic Excellence on Friday that education reform will probably have to proceed more slowly because of financial concerns.

school councils, family resource centers and testing.

"Can we do all we promised? I believe the answer is yes," Hopkins said. "Can we do it as quickly as we would like? The answer to that question is not as clear."

Hopkins noted that a legislative economist this week predicted a $157 million shortfall in state tax receipts this year.

During a separate appearance Friday, Democratic gubernatorial

U.N. inspectors free, meeting with Iraqis

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Free from five days of detention in a Baghdad parking lot, U.N. weapons inspectors met today with Iraqi officials to catalogue secret documents detailing Saddam Hussein's nuclear weapons program.

After completing that job and additional inspections, U.N. officials say, the inspectors will leave Iraq — with the documents.

"They're going to just keep going and going and going until it's all done," said Jeremy Mansfield, of the 44-member inspection team.

Mansfield, a Canadian, spoke to The Associated Press in a telephone interview from the Hotel Palestine in Baghdad, where the U.N.-Iraqi effort was under way. He estimated that it would take nearly 24 hours.

At U.N. Headquarters, the head of the U.N. Special Commission in charge of dismantling Iraq's weapons of mass destruction said Iraq may still be trying to continue its research on nuclear weapons.

"We know that there is still a large number of people employed" in Iraq's nuclear program, Rolf Ekeus said Friday.

World leaders endorse Bush's arms initiative

By ERIC TALMADGE
 Associated Press Writer

Boris Yeltsin joined other world leaders in praise for President Bush's proposal to sharply reduce superpower nuclear arsenals, and Australia's leader today described the cuts as "the single most decisive step for world peace since the nuclear age began."

The Russian republic president, according to an official report, gave his hearty endorsement to the initiative, one of the broadest changes in U.S. nuclear strategy since the start of the nuclear arms race in the early 1950s.

"Boris Yeltsin gave high marks to the initiative and spoke in favor of identical huge cuts on the Soviet Union's side," the official Russian Information Agency reported Friday in a brief dispatch.

And though there was no immediate public response from Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Soviet Foreign Minister Boris Pankin said Moscow is receiving the initiative in a "positive" manner.

"We are prepared to give a positive response to an initiative of the United States and to meet U.S. steps halfway," he said in New York.

Bush, in a speech from the Oval Office Friday, announced the United States will eliminate its land-based tactical nuclear weapons and remove all short-range atomic arms from U.S. submarines and ships.

He also called on Moscow to open negotiations to eliminate all long-range ballistic missiles with multiple warheads.

Bush cabled details of the plan to Gorbachev, Yeltsin and others on Thursday, and followed that up with calls Friday to Gorbachev, Yeltsin and Western leaders, nominee Brereton Jones told the Prichard Committee that he too supported education reform, virtually without exception. He also tried to deflect longstanding questions about his depth of support, since he refused to answer questions about the legislation for 11 months after it passed.

according to White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

British Prime Minister John Major, in a statement released soon after the speech, hailed the proposals and urged the Soviets to respond "with equal imagination."

"These are far-reaching proposals," he said. "I trust that President Gorbachev and President Yeltsin will respond with equal imagination. If they do, it will be a turning point in our history, bringing enormous benefits to mankind."

Australia's prime minister, Bob Hawke, described the cuts as "the single most decisive step for world peace since the nuclear age began nearly 50 years ago."

"In an act of great imagination, vision and courage, George Bush has moved the world a step back from the brink of nuclear annihilation," Hawke said in a statement.

In Japan, the only nation to have been bombed by atomic weapons and a strong advocate of nuclear disarmament, Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu called the initiative "epoch-making."

"The government of Japan strongly welcomes this epoch-making and courageous initiative by President Bush and strongly supports this initiative as a major step forward," he said.

The Italian government welcomed Bush's proposals with "the strongest satisfaction," saying in a statement they would "contribute to consolidating the new climate of international collaboration."

Premier Giulio Andreotti, in a letter to Bush, said he also hoped the Soviet Union would adopt similar measures.

Andreotti was also informed by Bush on Friday morning of the U.S. measures, which include reductions in short-range nuclear missiles, a statement from the premier's office said.

While he also worried about declining revenues, Jones said he could solve the state's financial problems by cutting waste.

But Jones declined to identify those wasteful items except for two minor areas involving less than $10 million by combining the lieutenant governor's office with other state offices and cutting the number of elections.

TBILISI — Opponents of Georgia's president gave up their weapons, and negotiators for both sides prepared today to meet to try to end the worst upheaval in the Soviet republics since the failed coup in Moscow. The atmosphere was notably calmer in the streets of Tbilisi, the Georgian capital, and at a broadcasting center on the outskirts where hundreds of rebel national guardsmen and opposition activists were maintaining a vigil. There were, however, government trucks forming roadblocks.

•The interim committee running the national economy decided to cut defense allocations by 5.6 billion rubles ($10 billion), about 6 percent of the officially stated defense budget of 96.5 billion rubles ($173.7 billion).

•In Tadjikistan, Muslim leaders canceled Friday prayers for the first time in memory so thousands of faithful could continue their protests over the naming of a Communist Party hard-liner to replace the republic's acting president. Tadjik President Rakhman Nabiyev insisted he would not resort to violence and said he was ready to negotiate with opposition leaders, who claim his rise to power amounted to a coup.

•Deputy KGB Chairman Nikolai Stolyarov said in Moscow that the security police would be dissolved in newly independent Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia by early next year.

JAPAN

TOKYO — Typhoon Mireille, pelting Japan with heavy rains and strong winds, has killed at least 39 people and injured 660 and caused blackouts at more than 3 million homes, police and other government agencies said today. Mireille, the 19th typhoon spawned in the Pacific this year, hit Japan's southern shores Friday afternoon with winds gusting up to 133 mph. Heavy rains triggered landslides and flooding on the southern island of Kyushu, where 30 deaths were reported Friday. According to the National Police Agency, 39 people had been killed, most by falling debris, landslides and floods, nationwide as of this afternoon. Six other people were reported missing and 660 injured. Police said the typhoon capsized 32 ships and flooded 10,614 homes. More than 3.6 million homes, including 2 million on Kyushu alone, had also been affected by temporary power outages — the nation's worst typhoon-related blackout on record.

ROMANIA

BUCHAREST — Police used trucks and tear gas today to clear the central square of hundreds of protesters unsatisfied with government promises to meet their demands for better living and work conditions. "We need sincere people to lead us," Doina Cornea, a leading anti-Communist dissident, told Romanian TV on Friday. "The leaders we have now lied to us." Marian Munteanu, a leader of student protesters brutally beaten by miners last year when they were called to Bucharest to crush anti-government protests, later appeared alongside miners at downtown University Square. "The miners are our brothers," he told the crowd of about 5,000. "I don't agree with violence, but I must admit that in crisis situations like this, we need unity. 'Unity! Unity!' the crowd cried.

systems." But he complained the proposal would save only $500 million from the $291 billion defense budget.

Administration officials did not offer cost estimates but said some of the scaling down steps would likely end up costing money.

Bush warned against any expectations for "a budget windfall for domestic programs."

Much of Bush's plan is geared toward reducing the hair-trigger status of U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals, which has caused great concern about an unintended nuclear exchange.

Eliminating tactical weapons from Europe, Bush said, is appropriate because, "a Soviet invasion into Western Europe, launched with little or no warning, is no longer a realistic threat. The Warsaw Pact has crumbled. In the Soviet Union, the advocates of democracy triumphed over a coup that would have restored the old system of repression."

With some Soviet leaders questioning their need for a large nuclear capability, Bush said, there is "an unparalleled opportunity to change the nuclear posture of both the United States and the Soviet Union."

In addition to the elimination of tactical nuclear missiles, Bush announced the following unilateral steps:

— Removing U.S. B-52 and B-1 strategic bombers from day-to-day alert status and returning their weapons to storage. Bush asked the Soviets to withdraw their mobile intercontinental missiles to their garrisons.

— Withdrawal from alert of all intercontinental ballistic missiles scheduled for deactivation under the yet-unratified Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty. He asked the Soviets to do the same.

— Abandonment of the controversial rail-based system for the 10-warhead MX missile, which the Senate voted down Thursday. The MX missiles based in silos will remain.

— Creation of a new U.S. Strategic Command to streamline the previously separate Navy and Air Force commands of strategic weapons. The new command will be based at Offutt Air Force Base in Omaha, with commanders rotated between the Navy and Air Force.

The consolidation coupled with elimination of short range missiles from naval ships is sure to be considered a worrisome diminution of power in naval circles.

— Immediate implementation of the START treaty, which was signed in July in Moscow but which the administration still has not sent to the Senate for ratification. Although it has a seven-year implementation allowance, the United States will begin eliminating the long-range weapons it covers at an accelerated pace.

Despite the cuts, Bush said, "Let no one doubt we will still retain the necessary strength to protect our security and that of our allies and to respond as necessary."

He said he remains committed to full funding of the B-2 bomber program and Strategic Defense Initiative known as Star Wars.

Lottery president projects optimism

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — It may be a while before the Kentucky Lottery can get to returning 35 percent of total sales to the state, but President James Hosker said that is not the point.

Hosker said Thursday he hopes to give the state $90 million this fiscal year, which is what the budget calls for from the lottery. But the percentage of total sales may not even reach 25 percent.

He emphasized it is possible that by returning a smaller percentage, the total number of dollars could be larger.

For example, Hosker said that returning more money in the form of prizes will increase total sales and therefore the take to the state.

Currently, the state is getting about 24 percent of each dollar spent on lottery tickets. The remainder goes to prizes, administration and retailers.

Lawmakers, who had been worried by earlier predictions that the lottery could return only $60 million or so to the state, appeared satisfied with Hosker's prediction and explanation.

"The bottom-line dollar is the more important figure," said Sen. Mike Moloney, D-Lexington.

Hosker also told the interim Appropriations and Revenue Committee that he was not advocating any plan to use lottery proceeds to build a new football stadium for the University of Louisville.

Smokey Bear takes to the air

The Kentucky Division of Forestry announced today that Calloway County will be patrolled daily by airplane beginning October 1st and continuing through December 15th for grass and forest fire protection.

Local Forest Ranger Ron Talent explained, "The Kentucky fire laws will go into effect October 1st and continue in effect through December 15th. KRS 149.400 states that there will be no burning except between the hours of 4:30 p.m. and 12:00 midnight." He further stated that all fire spotted by airplane will be reported to the local Ranger and will be checked out by him or cited into court. Mr. Talent stated that citizens using the excuse of not knowing the law will not be excused.

Mr. Talent is asking your fullest cooperation again this fall to help him keep fires in Calloway County to the absolute minimum. If you must burn, wait until after 4:30 p.m., never burn if the wind is high, and always stay with the fire until the last spark is out. If you let a fire get out of control, even if you are burning during the legal hours between 4:30 p.m. through 12:00 midnight, you will be cited into court.

To report a wildfire, please call the Kentucky Division of Forestry Office in Mayfield at 247-3913 or call your local Forest Ranger Ron Talent at 753-9894.

Residents of Murray should be aware that it is illegal to burn at any time.

REPORT TO KENTUCKY

Wendell Ford
U.S. Senator

Airport improvement efforts are taking off in the Commonwealth

I have long viewed the development of safe and efficient airports as one of our most promising tools for economic growth in large and small communities across Kentucky and the nation.

This is particularly true in a time of economic recession, which makes this the right time, in my opinion, for a report on the very encouraging progress we have been making with regard to our Kentucky airports.

As chairman of our Aviation Subcommittee, I have been working for some years now to encourage the use of our federal Aviation Trust Fund for much needed airport improvements in every part of our nation. This fund has a surplus of more than $7 billion. It is supported by those who use our aviation system -- and it should be used for their benefit.

We are achieving increased use of our Trust Fund for a variety of far-sighted purposes, including the alleviation of airport noise problems. These problems must be solved in connection with airport projects to meet the tremendous growth of air-passenger traffic in recent years.

I have also been very pleased with our success in building federal support for vital improvements and essential-air-service programs for many of our smaller airports, such as those in Owensboro and Paducah.

These and other efforts have produced some impressive results in recent years. But I don't think we have ever seen more encouraging results than we are seeing in Kentucky today. Some of our most recent results include:

- A federal commitment of $149 million for Standiford Field expansion, which could create as many as 16,000 jobs in the Louisville area over the next few years. We have also obtained $585,000 for a security system and Senate approval of $3 million for a new control tower at Standiford Field.

- Funding of $4 million for noise abatement, $805,251 for a taxiway and $500,000 for a master-plan update at the Cincinnati-Northern Kentucky International Airport. We are also looking at the possible release of $100 million to resolve noise problems in connection with the expansion of this airport, which will contribute some $3.3 billion to the regional economy in 1992.

- Ninety percent federal funding of a $6 million reliever airport in Scott County.

- A $1.3 million security-system grant for Lexington's Blue Grass Airport.

- Funding of $500,000 for runway overlay and $648,000 for an instrument-landing-system (ILS) site at the Bowling Green Airport, which has already received ILS equipment funding.

- Other projects, including funding for a new runway at Hatcher Field in Pikeville, a new airport for Russell County, priority consideration of runway extension for McCreary County and airport improvements at Georgetown, Murray, Mount Sterling, Mayfield and Sturgis.

I look forward to working with state and local leaders across Kentucky as we continue to strengthen our economy through an improved aviation system in the months and years ahead.

World editorial roundup

Sept. 23; Starkville (Miss.) Daily News:
What has happened to the Democrats?

The pugnacious party of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman has wallowed lately in defeatist moaning over the difficulty of capturing the presidency in 1992. After three straight losses in national elections, most Democrats see small chance of beating a popular Republican incumbent with his string of victories in war and foreign affairs. The biggest Democratic names have dropped one by one from the list of likely candidates.

Until just over a week ago, former Sen. Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts was the only announced contender.

The announcements by Virginia Gov. Douglas Wilder and Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin tripled the Democratic field. Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey are expected to add their names soon.

None of these candidates look(s) likely to sweep the primaries and make next summer's convention just a formality. A wide open convention with a huge television audience would, in contrast to a yawn-producing coronation, launch a nominee with no problem of face or name recognition.

Issues? While Democrats share the need to bash George Bush for his preoccupation with foreign policy and the thinness of his domestic policy, they cover a range of other emphases.

Wilder is a champion of fiscal restraint. Harkin seeks to evoke the give-em-hell style of Harry Truman, with a populist peal for liberal solutions.

Democrats face the hard fact the Republican party, nationally, commands the loyalty of most white middle-class voters. Yet the same voters choose Democratic congressional majorities.

However, translating local political success into a credible bid for the White House is the elusive trick. The relative unknowns seeking the office need to demonstrate their worthiness in honorable combat for their party's nod.

A well-publicized fight producing a nominee of newfound stature, speaking to a broad cross-section of American, could result in a real challenge to a complacent Bush.

SOUTHERN SCENE

Larry McGehee
Syndicated columnist

The country music television networks have me hooked. I flip back and forth between two cable channels to get them.

Country is the only music I can understand the words to anymore. No one writes ballads nowadays, and the words to rock music are harder to decipher than classical opera, which at least has the excuse of being in Italian or some other non-English language.

I was reared on country music; nobody in Tennessee in those times escaped the influence of Saturday night and "clear-channel" radio station WSM. Hank Williams, Jimmy Dickens, Roy Acuff, Patsy Cline and the others were all members of our families.

Other than being so readily at hand, what made country music a family matter were the words to the songs. "Blue Roses," "Your Cheatin' Heart," "The Great Speckled Bird," "D-I-V-O-R-C-E" and such were about the longings and heartaches of living.

In fact, I'm "Almost Persuaded" that country songs are soap opera for plain folks, set to music.

That makes me wonder: Why are all the television afternoon soaps about well-off people -- tycoons, doctors, lawyers, Mafia figures? Why are there no soap operas for ordinary folks?

Is it because working people are out working in the afternoons and can't watch "Days of Our Lives" or "The Young and the Restless"?

Probably not. Most viewers have VCRs with timers now and can record the soaps if they are not at home. In fact, we understand that they do precisely that when it comes to afternoon soaps.

One theory is that working people are drawn to the soap operas because the characters are caricatures of a lifestyle that can be consumed vicariously in the absence of affluence. Through soaps, we enjoy the fancy restaurants and cocktail parties without having to put them on our credit cards; we are involved in the illicit relationships and trysts without having to pay any emotional or legal price for them.

Country music provides us with many of the same entanglements and surprises that afternoon soap operas do. The difference between the two genres is in the characters, who are more likely in country music to be beauticians, truck drivers, cowhands, farmers and millhands.

Why have the two media never merged? Why is there no country music soap opera on afternoon television? Surely there is as much viewer market for plain-folk actors named Tammy and Roy and Porter as for high-rollers like Michael or Sabrina or Roman.

Actually, there is a form of country soap evolving, and seeping through the back door. Used to be that television merely showed the singers doing their thing on stage, in front of an audience, at the Opry or elsewhere. Copying MTV, many of the songs are now presented in story-line vignettes, with pictures that follow the song's lyrics.

For example, Randy Travis has a good video about visiting his grandmother's old farm and having flashbacks of happier days of youth and memories of the old man. There are steamier tapes, of course, depending upon the message in the words.

As these short pieces show, country music has in it the makings of television drama every bit as tearful -- and as convoluted, plastic and phantastic -- as the uptown afternoon soap operas.

The primary argument against such a merger of entertainment forms is that it could disintegrate into a musical version of "The Beverly Hillbillies" or "The Dukes of Hazard," canning only the corn of country life and not the cream. The fantasy for viewers of regular soap operas is in getting on television what they otherwise personally cannot afford either financially or morally. Viewers won't watch soap drama that is too much about people like themselves as they are; they want to see themselves as they ought to be but are not.

But if that is the case, that opens an interesting avenue of thought. Maybe the hidden audience for a country soap opera is not the housewives and working women who watch the fast-lane soaps, but the fast-lane wives and single women who are tired of the view at the top and who want to get "down and out" without actually sacrificing anything.

Country soap opera is just a thought, born out of a feeling that afternoon television probably needs something other than what it now has. Country music in soap opera packaging offers as much stilted staging as Worldwide Wrestling, as much innuendo and scandal as Gerardo, and as much intrigue and drama as "Santa Barbara."

Pick up on this idea, Nashville. Rope it and ride it.

And then, after that, let me also advise you to look into getting Pat Sajak to replace Ralph Emery as your all-night talk host.

JUST A DONKEY ON THE WINDSHIELD OF LIFE.

Top leadership being lost to this state

AGREE OR NOT

S.C. Van Curon and Todd Duvall
Syndicated columnists

long and hard before aspiring to live in Washington these days.

So, it would seem only reasonable that top legislative leaders like Wright would move toward the Governor's Mansion as a logical career step. After all, that's what Ford did when he went from the state Senate to lieutenant governor to governor and on to the U.S. Senate. Julian Carroll followed the route from speaker of the House to lieutenant governor to governor. It doesn't always work, as former state representative, attorney general and lieutenant governor Steve Beshear can attest, but it does have possibilities.

Or, it once did. Former House Speaker Bobby Richardson, Speaker Pro Tem Pete Worthington and Attorney General Fred Cowan (a former state representative) ran for lieutenant governor in this year's Democratic primary. All three lost. Although both gubernatorial candidates this year have legislative backgrounds, Republican Larry Hopkins took a long detour in Congress first and Democrat Brereton Jones presided over the state Senate as lieutenant governor.

Wright even considered a race for governor this year but decided against it.

Once again, it all comes down to money and time. A successful race for either of the two top elected jobs in Kentucky consumes at least a year, which must be spent almost equally divided between raising huge sums of money and actually campaigning for votes.

In fact, it is the fund-raising necessity that is the most odious to anyone of principle. Million-dollar primaries for lieutenant governor and $4 million primaries for governor are now commonplace. To get that kind of money, if you aren't already wealthy or have in place a herd of wealthy contributors, is as close to playing Faust and dealing directly with the devil as anyone comes these days.

Thus, a lot of top leadership potential in the General Assembly -- and in courthouses, city halls, university campuses and business -- is being lost to this state. Only those with the time and the stomach to spend it raising millions have a chance to the highest offices in Kentucky.

And, until the rules of the campaign finance game are changed to give everyone an even chance to play, it will only get worse in the years ahead.

State editorial roundup

The Richmond Register:

We see where State Treasurer Robert Mead CPA, with 3½ months left in his term, has taken a $5,000 trip (at taxpayer expense, of course) to the Russian Republic.

Comrade Mead's reason?

"To build goodwill and perhaps ... open up trade relations" and to "network with Russian counterparts on financial matters which could be beneficial to all concerns."

Bull! Anyone can see that Mead just couldn't pass up an opportunity to take the trip of a lifetime, to visit the Soviet Union during a time of historic change. Who wouldn't want to tag along?

Equal blame needs to be placed on the state officials who approved the trip. It may be a proverbial drop in the state budget bucket, but it's that constant dripping, much like the leaky faucet in a kitchen sink, that angers taxpayers and destroys their faith in state government.

What makes matters worse is here's a fellow who, because of a fall that caused a head injury in June, has seldom worked in his Frankfort office of late, relying heavily on an executive secretary to travel to and from his Jefferson County home.

Mead was unsure at the last moment that he would be well enough to make the trip.

Maybe he should change his last name from CPA to AWOL.

Besides, even the best and the brightest of citizen-politicians think

Attended by more than 500 invited guests from America's top convention cities, the showcase was the 7th organized and presented by API. The Roger Allan Herndon Memorial Fund has been established for Calloway County Schools. This perpetual fund was established in memory of Herndon, Calloway County High School Class of 1988, who died in a plane crash on Aug. 2, 1991, while in his final year as a cadet at the United States Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. Interest from this fund will be available to assist Calloway County school students to pursue school-related opportunities that because of family and financial circumstances might not be possible otherwise. Funds would be available to meet such needs as purchase of shoes to enable students to play football, basketball, or other sports; to participate in related camps or training activities; to purchase books or school supplies; or to provide scholarship assistance for those wishing to go to college. The fund will be administered by representatives of the faculty, administration and counseling staff at Calloway County with the input of the family as appropriate. Tax-deductible donations may be made to Calloway County School Board, designated for the Roger A. Herndon Memorial, 2108-A College Farm Rd., Murray, Ky. 42071.

LIBRARY NEWS

by Ben Graves, Calloway County Public Library

WOW! The books are pouring in almost faster than we can get them processed and on the shelves. Here are some of the great new titles you'll see next week.

Three heavy hitters start off our lineup. Sidney Sheldon's "The Doomsday Conspiracy" is in. The story starts with an investigation of a weather balloon crash in the Swiss Alps. The problem is, the witnesses are winding up dead. This one passed the "interest test" with flying colors. If you'd like to read it, just call us and have your name put on the hold list. If you haven't read any of Sheldon's books, now is the time to try one. (The "interest test" involves opening the book at random and reading two pages in a row. If you don't want to put the book down, it passes.)

If your taste runs towards romance, Jude Deveraux's "The Duchess" has arrived. In "The Duchess" a young girl goes to Scotland to find a husband and fulfill the terms of her grandfather's will so that she can keep the family fortune. This is romance that is romance. "The Duchess" is likely to have a hold list put on it, so call ahead. By the way, Jude Deveraux is from Mayfield and graduated from Murray State.

For you action/spionage types, Frederick Forsyth's "The Deceiver" is the third new major novel this week. "The Deceiver" is about a top British secret agent defending himself from being retired against his will. It seems that the agent has had a very wild and woolly (and very successful) past that has come back to haunt him. This is another book that passed the interest test.

Forsyth also wrote "Day of the Jackal," "The Dogs of War," and "The Odessa File." We don't think the man knows how to write a dull book.

We try to provide books that meet our patron's interests. One of the big interests among our collectors is antique glass. It's so popular that they literally wore one of our price guides into rags. We took the hint and have gotten a new copy of "Collectible Glassware From the 40's, 50's, and 60's" by Gene Florence.

On a different subject, Time-Life's "Gardening In Small Spaces" has arrived. Time-Life books are short, clear, to the point and very well illustrated. "Small Spaces" is no exception. If you want ideas on what to do with a small yard and advice on how to do it, this is the book for you.

We have in a set of 15 new "Choose Your Own Adventure" books. These are books where the reader is required to make a choice at the bottom of each page. The story is continued on different pages, depending on the choice made. That means that each time the book is read, the story can be different. It's a lot like working a puzzle. It's also a great way to get kids to read and to keep them reading. If these circulate well, we will consider buying more of them.

Our book sale is winding down. It may go another week or so, but one day you'll walk in and it will be gone, just like summer. So we want to take this opportunity to thank all of you who generously donated books and magazines and to remind the rest of you to not miss your chance to come on in and find a bargain.

Tiger touchdown which put Murray up 14-0. The first half then settled into a pattern of playing at the Fulton end, and the Tigers missing scoring chances. Murray drove to the Fulton 31 where they were stopped on the next possession, and after getting the ball on the Bulldog 49, ran out on four downs at the 32.

added a 30-yard field goal from McNutt, and a two-yard touchdown run from Robert Weatherly after Murray's Chad Caldwell picked off a pass and returned it to the Fulton 2.

Racer volleyball wins

Staff Reports

Murray Ledger & Times Sports

The Murray State volleyball Racers moved to 2-0 in Ohio Valley Conference by sweeping Middle Tennessee in three games in front of a frenzied crowd at the Carr Health Building Friday night.

The North Gym of the Carr Health (which could be called Carr Hell by Racer opponents) maybe the toughest place to play in the OVC, and with Murray trailed 12-4 in the second game, the crowd picked up the Racers as they rallied for a 16-14 win to take command of the match.

"The crowd was amazing," Racer coach Oscar Segovia said. "When they get behind us like they did, we feel like we can do anything."

After winning the first game 15-8, Murray jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the second, before Middle Tennessee ran off 12 straight points. The Racers battled back, and after Middle Tennessee led 14-12, the Racers ran off four in a row to win the game. They won game three 15-10.

Jill Doty, who sparkled in the second game, had 14 kills and 10 digs, while Darla Morthland had a career-high 12 kills, including seven in the second game. The Racers had a .316 kill percentage on the night and had 19 service aces, including five each from Beth Bair and Belinda Rubio.

The win pushed the Racers to 4-8 overall, while Middle Tennessee fell to 2-11 and 1-1. Murray will host Tennessee Tech tonight at 7 p.m. in Carr Health.

Red, White and Blue USA leads Ryder Cup play

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — For the first time in four years, the United States came out of opening-day Ryder Cup play in something other than a catch-up position.

The Americans' lead was by the smallest of margins, a single point over the European stars who have dominated this biennial competition since 1985.

But it was a lead, 4 1/2 points to 3 1/2, and that's a far, far better position than the 6-2 and 5-3 deficits they faced in 1987 and 1989, respectively. The margin could have been — and perhaps should have been — even larger.

But a great rally by Spanish stars Seve Ballesteros and Jose Maria Olazabal prevented an American sweep of the morning foursomes matches, in which each member of a two-man team plays alternate shots on the same ball.

In the afternoon, in fourball play in which scoring is based on the better ball of each two-man team, Sam Torrance of Scotland and David Feherty of Northern Ireland came back from 3-down after 10 holes and halved a match that appeared to be the property of Lanny Wadkins and Mark O'Meara.

Ray Floyd, at 49 the oldest man ever to play in these matches and the only former captain to return as a player, teamed with Fred Couples as the most prolific American team.

They scored two victories, 2 and 1 over Bernhard Langer of Germany and Mark James of England in foursomes, and 5 and 3 over England's Nick Faldo and Masters champion Ian Woosnam of Wales in the fourball.

The fourball drubbing of Faldo and Woosnam was their second in the 10 1/2 hours of competition on Friday over the sand dunes and marshes of the new Ocean course.

The duo, one of European captain Bernard Gallacher's principal weapons, also lost 1-up to Payne Stewart and Mark Calacavecthia in the morning foursomes.

The two losses on this windy day equaled their total of defeats in eight appearances as a pairing in 1987 and 1989 and raised the possibility that the may be separated for Saturday's play, which again will consist of four fourball matches and four foursomes.

Gallacher's other major pairing, Ballesteros and Olazabal, kept the Europeans close with a pair of victories over Paul Azinger and Chip Beck, each by 2 and 1 margins.

American veterans Wadkins and Hale Irwin beat Ryder Cup rookies David Gilford of England and Colin Montgomerie of Scotland 4 and 2 in the other morning foursomes match, and Steve Richardson of England and James beat Calacavecthia and Corey Pavin 5 and 3 in the other fourball.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a secretary and have been for some years now. But recently, I started working with a new company, and I have one major problem with one of the higher authorities (who isn't my boss/supervisor) who uses me as her personal secretary—and I do mean personal. She has me doing her income taxes, her daughter's income taxes, her lease, etc., and making coffee. The last duty is extremely irksome.

Yes, I am supposed to assist her, as directed by my boss. But she means as an aide, not a maid. I do not like coffee, therefore I don't drink it—so why do I have to make it? I really don't think coffee-making is in any secretarial job description.

I really would like to tell her to do her own personal things and make her own coffee, but she's very sneaky and I fear she might go behind my back and tell my boss some off-the-wall story: "How do I handle this without jeopardizing my job or any future references I may need when I decide to change jobs in the future?"

NO PERSONAL SECRETARY

DEAR NO PERSONAL SECRETARY: If you are comfortable with your own boss, talk with him confidentially. Keep the level professional, and calmly explain what this lady is asking you to do, specifically. Tell him that the woman's personal requests are cutting into company time and productivity.

From there on it is the responsibility of your boss either to direct you to fulfill this lady's requests or not. But remember, it is the boss's responsibility to speak to this "higher authority"—and not yours.

DEAR ABBY: I need to settle a dispute concerning proper telephone etiquette. When someone telephones me and I am not at home, my brother asks if there is a message. If there isn't one, he terminates the conversation.

I say he should ask who is calling, so that I will, at least, know who called. As it stands, when I get home all I am told is, "Someone called—and he didn't leave a message."

My brother insists he has no right to ask more than, "Do you care to leave a message?" He says it would be rude—an invasion of privacy—to ask more.

I say it is acceptable to ask, and if the caller does not wish to leave his name, he can say no. Who is right?

Dr. Gott
By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I require surgery due to a cancerous polyp, and I question whether a colostomy will automatically cause me to become impotent. Would a colostomy bag interfere with sexual activity?

DEAR READER: Malignancies of the bowel can, if discovered early, be removed with very little disruption of intestinal function. This is particularly true of polyps, growths that extend out from the intestinal wall like a mushroom growing on a log. Therefore, you may not have to worry about a colostomy.

On the other hand, once malignant cells have invaded the bowel wall or worse, the tissue and lymph glands near the intestine, more extensive surgery is required. Along with the cancer, some normal bowel tissue has to be removed to ensure that hidden cancer cells do not remain. In this circumstance, provision must be made for alternative methods of evacuation, while the injured area of bowel heals.

The most satisfactory method is to reroute the intestinal contents through an abdominal opening into a collecting apparatus. Such a colostomy may be temporary or permanent. In the former, patients undergo re-operation, after the original surgery has healed, to return the intestine to normal. In the latter, patients have to use an external collecting appliance indefinitely.

Except in highly unusual cases, colostomy surgery does not interfere with the circulation and nerve supply to the penis. Thus, impotence should not appear as a consequence of surgery alone. Obviously, all bets are off in the presence of extensive surgery (for widespread disease), bowel cancer that is near to or has spread to the prostate gland, or the need for radiation therapy.

Whether a colostomy bag will interfere with normal sexual activity depends on where it is located and the attitude of its wearer. A man who is ashamed or embarrassed about his colostomy may well have trouble. On the contrary, a colostomy patient who is familiar with proper care of the appliance and accepts the necessity for it will probably experience no difficulties during sexual activity.

If everyone recycled this much of their daily paper, we'd save 9,000 trees a year.
