Transfer station pact signed

By CYRUS AFZALI
Murray Ledger & Times Staff Writer

The Murray City Council approved an agreement submitted by a Hickman firm to operate a transfer station for the disposal of solid waste from Murray and Calloway County at a special noon meeting Friday.

B&J Sanitation of Hickman, owned by Glenn Jones, will begin taking waste July 1.

Prior to today's session, discussion had centered around Barker Brothers Waste, Inc. of Troy, Tenn. Murray City Planner Don Elias said although B&J Sanitation had submitted a proposal previously, its permit had not been approved by the state.

Elias pointed out that the firm has now resolved those problems and the permit has been approved. He said by taking the city and county's waste, the firm will be doubling the size of its present landfill operation.

B&J Sanitation will furnish all labor, equipment and services necessary to dispose of all the city and county's waste. The price structure begins at $24 per ton July 1 and will rise to $28 per ton through Dec. 31, 1994. This includes a $1 surcharge mandated by Fulton County.

On comparison, rates in the Barker Brothers proposal would begin at $27 per ton July 1 and increase to $30 per ton in 1994.

"B&J has been operating since 1979. The firm averages around 50 tons per day in its landfill," Elias said.

Elias said the rate structure for city and county residents bringing waste to the landfill will be equal. The fee on automobiles is $2 and pickups are charged $4 up to a level load. If a pickup has modifications that increase hauling capacity, it will be weighed and charged the same rate as commercial trucks, which is $32 per ton.

Murray Mayor Bill Cherry said although picking one of the two companies is a hard decision, he prefers to do business with B&J Sanitation because it is a Kentucky company.

"We're going to have to go into a big regional landfill in western Kentucky sooner or later. But for now, we have to go somewhere quickly," Cherry said.

Elias said because Liquid Waste Disposal (LWD) of Calvert City presently meets standards which will become effective in 1995, he feels it is possible that the city and county may examine a proposal from that firm in 1995 when B&J Sanitation's contract expires.

Judge rules part of KERA unconstitutional

By ALLEN G. BREED
Associated Press Writer

HARLAN, Ky. — A judge has reinstated the first three local school board members ousted under the 1990 Kentucky Education Reform Act and declared a portion of the law unconstitutional.

Harlan Circuit Judge Ron Johnson said Friday that Education Commissioner Thomas Boysen failed to prove the men engaged in "willful, knowing and calculated misconduct" as set out in the charges.

He also ruled the portion of the law that allows the State Board of Elementary and Secondary Education to conduct closed hearings on the removal of elected officials is unconstitutional.

In addition, Johnson ruled the state board had no jurisdiction to remove Chairman Benny Dale Coleman on two charges of profiteering.

Johnson's ruling, delivered in open court, will not be filed in written form until Wednesday.

Spurrier pleads guilty, will testify

By CHARLES WOLFE
Associated Press Writer

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Ex-lobbyist Jay Spurrier apparently will become a star witness in a federal investigation of alleged corruption in Kentucky government.

Spurrier, once the state's top harness racing official and a power behind the scenes of the General Assembly, pleaded guilty Friday to federal extortion and conspiracy charges.

He confessed to a federal judge that he passed $20,000 to a state official and $4,000 to a second person. Both were listed as unindicted co-conspirators in Spurrier's indictment but were not otherwise identified.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Duane

Schwartz told U.S. District Judge Joseph Hood that Spurrier would be testifying against others.

Spurrier resigned as chairman of the Kentucky Harness Racing Commission on Dec. 31. He was the second person charged in the investigation.

Former state Sen. John W. Hall of Henderson pleaded guilty May 5 to extorting payoffs from a Henderson harness track in 1990 for himself and other legislators, who have not been identified.

Spurrier's indictment also dealt with money extorted from the Henderson track, Riverside Downs, which was seeking extra racing dates from Spurrier's commission. The money was supplied by the FBI in a "sting" investigation.

His attorney, Harry B. Miller Jr.

of Lexington, told reporters after the arraignment that Spurrier did not personally profit from the payments.

"All the money was going out for campaign expenses, or things like trips to Florida, that lobbyists do," Miller said.

In court, Spurrier told Hood there was some irony in the crime because the harness commission's approval of Riverside Downs' racing dates "would have happened, anyway."

"There was never needed a vote to be bought," Spurrier said.

Miller said the government had a solid case against Spurrier. "I think I've tried about every defense in the world, and there is no defense," Miller said.

Offices to close for Memorial Day

Several governmental and local offices will be closed on Monday for observance of Memorial Day.

All offices in the Calloway County courthouse and Murray city hall will be closed, but sheriff's deputies and the fire department will be on duty.

The post office will be closed and no mail deliveries will be made. The Calloway County library will also be closed.

The Murray Ledger & Times will publish on Monday, but offices will close at noon.

Alleged bribe taker said to be no longer in office

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The state official who allegedly took a $20,000 bribe from former Harness Racing Commission chairman Jay Spurrier is out of office, according to Spurrier's attorney.

Harry B. Miller Jr. would not name the bribe-taker who was not identified in the indictment that charged Spurrier with fixing state decisions on harness racing.

However, Miller said, "It won't be too long before you find out. That's what I'm informed."

Gov. Brereton Jones reiterated during a radio talk show Thursday that the person was not connected to his administration.

"I have absolutely no idea (who it was), but I would guess, and would strongly state, that I don't believe it was anyone in our administration," Jones said.

The governor called news of the grand jury action "a black eye for the whole state."

When the investigation became public March 31, Kentucky's U.S. Attorneys Joseph Whittle and Karen Caldwell told Jones that his administration was not a target.

McPherson says legislators wasting taxpayers' money

By CYRUS AFZALI
Murray Ledger & Times Staff Writer

Joe McPherson, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for state senator in Kentucky's First District, contends that legislators are costing the state a large sum of money and have little to show for it.

In a telephone interview from his Graves County home Thursday night, he said on the occasions that he has observed them, legislators do not take their obligations seriously.

"It's not fun and games to me when they are spending taxpayers' money. They had plenty of time to do three times the work they did. It's ridiculous to think our elected officials would go to Frankfort to play games, waste time and then turn around and pretend they need to have special sessions," he said.

McPherson also claims people are unhappy with the way current state Sen. Jeff Green assumed that position by winning a special election Jan. 30 in which he was the only registered candidate.

"People are disgusted with the way Mr. Green was put in office. Larry Wilson and myself were running at the same time and, of course, we didn't have a chance. We weren't even permitted to come before the committees and state what we believe in. He (Green) is a representative of the establishment. I feel that if things had been done properly, Mr. Wilson and I should have had the opportunity to have met with the committees from the various counties," McPherson said.

McPherson said he and Wilson favored having Lloyd Clapp of Wingo assume the office for the remainder of the term of Greg Higdon, who resident to accept a post in the Natural Resources Cabinet.

"Mr. Green served only about a month. His ad stating what great things he did is ridiculous. It's not a joke, it's a serious matter," he said.

McPherson said he frequently hears people say they are losing trust in their elected officials.

"They feel like they're being bypassed, overlooked and not being properly taken care of in a sense. Many elected officials are fine, decent people and are accountable for their actions. It's those that are not being accountable that are angering people," he said.

McPherson said ethics is a problem that needs to be addressed, but that it could be done in ways other than a special legislative session.

"I sometimes see when they get together and try to straighten things out, they do more covering up. To me this is a ridiculous situation also. I see nothing bright in a special session. If he (Governor Jones) calls a special session dealing with insurance and workman's compensation, they could have a part to deal with ethics. But to call a special session just for ethics would be a waste of taxpayers' money," he said.

He said insurance and worker's compensation are two areas that make it harder for small businesses to compete. McPherson said the fact that businesses are already closing shows it needs to be dealt with quickly.

McPherson also accused Green of allowing additional state funds to be drawn away from western Kentucky to other areas.

Bush plan would weaken wetlands protection

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department wants to let farmers drain millions of acres of wetlands, from the Mississippi Delta to the prairie potholes of the Great Plains where migrating waterfowl rest and feed.

The department's draft proposal, obtained by The Associated Press, would exempt the farmers from a 1990 law barring federal subsidies to producers who drain or otherwise alter wetlands in "bad faith."

"This is tantamount to USDA's authorization of the use of taxpayer subsidies to agriculture for the destruction of important wetlands resources," said Clark Williams, wetlands specialist for the National Audubon Society.

Galen Bridge, associate chief of the Agriculture Department's Soil Conservation Service, said the draft is merely one of many working papers under consideration and the environmentalists "are poking sticks at a non-policy."

The proposal, which still must be approved by Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan, would be in line with other efforts by the Bush administration to ease what the president has described as an undue regulatory burden on American business.

For more than a year the administration has been trying to rewrite federal regulations that protect wetlands, more narrowly defining what a wetland really is. Developers and farmers for years have complained that federal protection of wetlands is too broad.

Last year the administration floated a draft wetlands proposal, but it was met with such strong opposition — including from the government's own wetlands experts — that it has been in limbo for months. Critics of that draft proposal said it could lead to the destruction of as much as half the land currently protected under federal law.

During the 1988 president campaign, President Bush declared that "all existing wetlands, no matter how small, should be preserved."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said the Agriculture Department's own estimates indicate that the exemptions under consideration could destroy 10 million acres of wetlands.

Leahy, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said that if the changes are adopted, "it will be a complete breach of faith with the Congress and the final nail in the coffin of the 'environmental presidency.'"

In a separate proposal, Bush recommended on Friday that 487,186 acres of federal land in New Mexico be designated as wilderness areas and that 420,400 other acres in the state be released from public protection.

In a statement released in Kennebunkport, Maine, where Bush was spending the Memorial Day weekend, the White House said the lands being set aside "contain the highest wilderness qualities of naturalness and opportunities for solitude and primitive recreation."

However, Wilderness Society spokesman Richard Hoppe called the proposal "a ridiculous low-balling of what really needs to be protected. It will mean that more logging, more mining and more grazing will be permitted in numerous ecologically sensitive areas."

Peter A.A. Berle, president of the National Audubon Society, said the wetlands plan at the Agriculture Department would "sanction the destruction of literally millions of acres of ecologically valuable wetlands."

The proposal notes that about 58 percent of the wetlands in the prairie pothole region of the Dakotas and upper Midwest, as well as extensive areas of farmed playa lakes and farmed wetlands in the lower Mississippi valley would no longer be protected.

"The evidence documenting the values of these wetlands for migratory waterfowl, water purification, flood water retention and ground water recharge is incontrovertible," Berle said in a letter to Madigan urging him to kill the proposal.

Under the 1990 farm bill, producers who had drained a wetland were forbidden from receiving federal farm subsidies unless they had met certain conditions indicating they had acted in good faith. The law was the result of an agreement between environmentalists and agricultural interests.

The American Farm Bureau Federation favors department's new proposal.

"If USDA were to make these changes, it would greatly ease the tension and the controversy and the conflict out there in agricultural lands," said Mark Maslyn, director of national affairs for the Farm Bureau.

Maslyn said USDA's efforts should be concentrated on protecting "true marshes, swamps and bogs," and not farmland "that doesn't exhibit any wetland characteristics."

According to the draft, wetlands that had been farmed six out of 10 years would be considered "prior converted croplands," which means they are not subject to the law forbidding drainage or other alterations.

The draft indicates that about 58 percent of all wetland areas in the prairie pothole region are farmed four out of five years.

Environmentalists say the potholes provide a breeding ground and resting stop for many migrating waterfowl.

U.S. IMPOSING SANCTIONS ON SERBIA

LONDON — In a policy shift, the Bush administration is imposing new sanctions on Serbia in a drive to end the bloodshed in the Balkans. Urging the Europeans to follow the U.S. lead, Secretary of State James A. Baker III announced the pressure moves after dinner Friday night with British Prime Minister John Major. "The civilized world really should begin to contemplate what they might be able to do," Baker said. The secretary was flying today to Lisbon, where a conference on aid to the former Soviet Union is likely to be overshadowed by the ethnic strife in what used to be Yugoslavia and the expected signing of a protocol to the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty.

THAI KING SEEKS RESIGNATION OF P.M.

BANGKOK, Thailand — Thailand's king sought to speed the resignation of Prime Minister Suchinda Kraprayoon, granting him clemency from any wrongdoing in a bloody military crackdown earlier this week, officials said today. The move came a day after coalition partners withdrew their support of Suchinda and backed a proposed law that would force him to step down. Suchinda has come under increasing attack because he was not elected to the parliament, was leader of last year's coup and allowed soldiers this week to fire on demonstrators. At least 40 were killed. Suchinda met with King Bhumibol Adulyadej Friday night, when it was agreed the prime minister should resign in response to mounting pressure from the public and factions in the military, sources said.

HAITIAN REFUGEES WON'T TURN BACK

WASHINGTON — Boatloads of Haitian refugees undaunted by a cutback in U.S. rescue operations on the high seas are sailing toward Florida, ignoring Coast Guard appeals that they return home, officials say. Coast Guard officials said Friday that several boatloads set out from Haiti after the announcement that cutters would no longer pick up fleeing Haitians unless they required immediate medical care or their vessels were deemed unseaworthy.

McPherson says...

that is receiving more than what I refer to as the western part of the state. The western part is even having to pay for additional funds being drawn from our educational system to pay for education in eastern Kentucky. Jeff Green went along with sending our tax dollars to eastern Kentucky," he said.
McPherson also said the "golden triangle," a term sometimes used to refer to the Louisville-Lexington-Northern Kentucky area, is taking industry and jobs away from western Kentucky.
"We have every opportunity in the western part of the state to advance in industry and jobs. It's wrong for us to export, if you please, our young men and women to other areas of the country to make a living when we have good transportation, the best water transportation, an abundance of coal, cheap electricity and the manpower to really make the Purchase Area an outstanding industrial opportunity site," he said.

McPherson said his career in education has given him experience in every facet of life which adds to his qualifications for the job.
"I've had years of experience on many things and I feel some of these things come about with age and maturity that you can't get by just reading a book," he said.

Kentucky tax refunds held up by low revenue receipts

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — If you're expecting an income-tax refund from the state, don't hold your breath.

Finance Cabinet officials announced Thursday that individual refunds will be delayed until there's a better handle on state finances.

Kentucky's revenue receipts are running below projections for the fiscal year that ends June 30.

"Individual income tax refunds have a large impact on state government's cash flow," said Finance Secretary Joe Prather.

Refunds that have been prepared since May 8 will be those delayed. "We are hoping to release these around the first of June after analyzing the May revenue receipts," Prather said.

Under state law, the state has until July 15 to release returns filed by the April 15 deadline without having to pay interest. Prather said all refunds should be released by that deadline.

"We are simply managing our cash flow until a better view of the balance between tax receipts and individual income tax refund requests can be determined," Prather said. "As we become more sure of our income and refund liabilities, we will be able to release additional refunds."

Jones may impose deadline to end own fundraising drive

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Gov. Brereton Jones said Thursday he may impose his own deadline to end fundraising to repay himself for financing his 1987 campaign for lieutenant governor.

Jones made the comment during an appearance on the A-OK Prime-Line radio program but provided few details.

Press Secretary Frank Ashley said later at the Capitol that Jones was only thinking about putting an end to the fundraising. And Jones declined to answer questions at a news conference to announce a new plant for Bowling Green.

Jones' 1987 campaign debt has been a continuing political nightmare for his administration.

Jones, then an unknown horse farm owner from Woodford County, spent some $1.6 million of his own money to win the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. He has charged interest to his campaign committee and the outstanding balance in April was just over $1 million.

Jack Hall, a Jones confidante, has the full-time job of raising money from an office at Kentucky Democratic Party headquarters.

Jones' fundraising and the debt was a continuing issue during his gubernatorial campaign. Most recently, legislative leaders said Jones' fundraising would be a legitimate topic of interest if Jones calls a special session to take up legislative ethics and campaign finance.

First Christian youth group says thanks

Dear Editor:
I want to take this opportunity to publicly thank Delbert Saalwaechter, the manager of Piggly Wiggly, and the rest of the staff there, for all the hard work they did to help make our youth group's recent fundraiser a success. The store gave us our materials at cost, the personnel on duty during our fundraiser provided us with everything from physical labor to ice water (not to mention that they bought their lunches from us!) and Mr. Saalwaechter donated his time and talents for the full two days of the event (which included being at the store at 4 a.m. to start the fire). We realize that our fundraiser would not have been the success it was without the selfless giving of these people. So, we thank you all and pray that God blesses your for the service you did for us so that we could raise enough money to go out and serve others.
A special thanks also goes to Blalock-Coleman Funeral Home for the use of their tent, and to the Coca-Cola Company for the use of their wagon and the donation of drinks. Thank you for supporting our group!

World Editorial Roundup

May 13; The Sun Herald, Biloxi, Miss., on hate crimes:
Hate is ugly. Hate is malignant. It is a passion that poisons everything it touches, even those who would inflict its manifestation on others. And yet, as destructive as hatred can be, there are at least two troubling aspects to the increasing number of "hate-crime laws" enacted by various states. ...
First, can a nation founded by people desperate for freedom to express their thoughts without fear now be moving to legislate what thoughts are acceptable?
And second, when a harsher penalty is levied in one of two identical crimes because of the category of the motive, where does that place the victims, who in this country are guaranteed "equal protection of the law"?
Hate for persons of different colors, genders and beliefs is undeniably harmful and unhealthy, but, as an emotion, it is not against the law. Neither is greed. Neither is anger. Criminal acts that may result from these emotions are against the law, however, and those acts call for punishment. Punishment for the crime, not for the motive. ...
What we need more of, rather than laws that mandate unequal punishment, are courts that mete out sentences that deter and punish, no matter who the offender might be or what his motives might have been.
The increase in the number of hate crimes deserves attention, but adding this responsibility to our overburdened legal system is not the proper avenue. Two words describe the idea of legislating a person's thoughts: unconstitutional and impossible.

May 13; The Leaf-Chronicle, Clarksville, Tenn., on accountability:
People should be held accountable for their own actions. It's as simple as that.
Unfortunately, the court dockets in the United States are filled with cases brought by those who don't adhere to this philosophy.
One of the latest cases concerns Maureen O'Neill. She and her three children died in a house fire in Boston two years ago.
Her estate is suing Philip Morris Co. — maker of Marlboro and other cigarette brands — in federal court, charging it with unfair and deceptive trade practices, negligence and other claims. ...
According to the suit, Myles O'Neill — Mrs. O'Neill's husband and the father of her children — caused the fire while smoking a Marlboro Light on upholstered furniture. The suit alleges he was under the influence of alcohol at the time and that the children and their mother were asleep when the fire started and unable to escape the blaze.
Mrs. O'Neill's estate is suing the cigarette manufacturer because it contends that the company should have made a safer cigarette — one more likely to go out when it was not being smoked. ...
It's tragic that four innocent people's lives were snuffed out in a preventable accident. But responsibility and blame for the fire should be placed squarely upon the individual who started it, and no one else.

May 13; The Daily News, Longview, Wash., on Healthy Start:
President's Bush's "Healthy Start" program, launched with great fanfare ... is what could be characterized as a rhetorical assault on infant mortality. The central feature of Bush's effort to reduce the nation's high infant mortality rate is a 30-second television ad that commercial stations will be asked to broadcast for free.
"I know that public-service ad campaigns like this work," Bush said. "Most of this death and disease is easily preventable."
Unfortunately, not so easily as Bush would have it.
Encouraging pregnant women to seek a physician's care is a good idea when women can find a physician to care for them. A great many poor women cannot. All too frequently the only physicians available to these women reject their business because Medicaid will pay only a fraction of what the physicians consider their services to be. It'll take more of a commitment than Bush has made ... to overcome that problem.

May 14; The News, Greenville, S.C., on NASA:
Space agency officials can take heart in knowing that Americans apparently are keenly interested in the exploits of the nation's astronauts. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration also is finding out that Americans are creative, even if we aren't always very practical.
While astronauts from the shuttle Endeavour tried to retrieve a disabled communications satellite, the great American mind was at work.
Get out a rod and reel, one would-be satellite rescuer suggested to NASA, but make certain the hooks are big. To another, magnetism was the key; just tie magnets to the soles of the astronauts' boots and have the spacemen point their feet toward the satellite.
A Texan — no surprise there — had a Wild West solution: Round up the satellite with a lasso. There was no indication of whether the orbiting cowboy should be sitting tall in the saddle.

Considerable thought about the topic of my maiden voyage as a columnist for the Murray Ledger & Times kept taking me in circles — always coming back around to M.C. Garrott.

Finally, I thought, "Why not?" My purpose, more than anything else, will be the same human interest flavor that earned him such immense local popularity in the twice-a-week column he wrote for so many years right up until his death in January 1989.

Please notice I said that will be my purpose. But no amount of vanity on my part, not even in my most delusional moments, could ever persuade me of an ability to tell stories about people the way he could.

His everyday manner, as well as his writing style, reflected an uncommon affinity for people. And it was obviously genuine. Often I have thought how successful he could have been if his career path had been politics.

My image of M.C. never changes, and I don't suppose it ever will. I still see him in my mind's eye with his head thrown back and his mouth wide open in laughter as he traded tales with someone.

His writing had the same kind of vitality that he demonstrated in his personality. It was alive because he loved people and relished telling their stories.

They appreciated his talent too. Readership surveys indicated that his column was one of the most popular features of the newspaper. Several times he was recognized by the Kentucky Press Association for the quality of his work.

He and I worked together at Murray State University for some 13 years. Because of that relationship, I sometimes have been inclined momentarily to believe I knew him better than most.

But that is not necessarily true — for two reasons.

First, his wide variety of interests put him in contact with so many people. He was a man perpetually on the move who derived great satisfaction from using his unique talent.

And second, as versatile as he was, he was easy to know because he was not a complicated individual but disarmingly open and honest, a classic example of "what you see is what you get."

M.C. lived by a rather simple set of values that some of us would probably call old-fashioned. He believed in working hard, having fun, being fair and treating others with respect.

As I begin the challenge of producing a column on a regular basis, I intend to take many of my cues from my memories of M.C. Of course, I cannot write exactly as he did, but I fully expect to use his influence as a pattern.

My intent with the column is to avoid I-strain and to set my compass in a you-turn. From time to time, I may stray and write about some of my own experiences or inject some personal opinions, but generally I shall try to steer clear of that temptation.

If I adhere to these principles and show half the empathy and interest in others that M.C. did, maybe I can tell some interesting stories.

As enthusiastic as M.C. always was about his column, the only time I saw him get antsy was when a deadline was approaching and he was scurrying about for an idea. More than a few times, he called on me and others in search of a lead he could develop.

Running dry in the idea department must be an uncomfortable feeling. No doubt it will happen to me — and I'll be chasing some of my friends, as well as some of those who were helpful to M.C. through the years, to try to pick their brains.

Another concern has been what to call the column. As M.C.'s faithful readers will recall, his was known as "Garrott's Galley."

Late last month I retired from Murray State University after more than 24 years there with no really specific plans in mind, in fact, in a bit of a quandary about where I was headed next.

Then, almost overnight, the opportunity developed to join the folks at the Murray Ledger & Times — and my "retirement" ended rather abruptly. An appropriate title for the column, therefore, seemed to be "On Second Thought."

SOUTHERN SCENE

Syndicated columnist

and rugged individualism. This is a paradox never lost.

These are but observations of what is happening in our economy. We can be wistful in wishing for more local prosperity and more home-owned success even as we understand the economic pressures that force the region into welcoming absentee owners.

One can only hope that the 21st century's international economy transcending familiar nationalistic boundaries, which all the pundits prophesy to be at hand, will bring the salve and salvation expected of it. But after 127 years under absentee owners, southerners can be pardoned for being sometimes a wee bit pessimistic and suspicious. At the same time, southerners ought to be admired for extraordinary patience in waiting in line at the trough of the American Dream.

There is a counter-trend that makes the irony of southern dependence/independence a three-way street, or at least a street with a median. In many places, the purchasers from outside are actually moving to their southern properties. The North is more panicked by the loss of dozens of major corporate headquarters to the South than by the purchase of its Rockefeller Center symbol by international owners.

As Blanche DuBois, the withered southern belle, said for all of us, in A Streetcar Named Desire, "I have always depended upon the kindness of strangers."

Southern dependency upon absentee ownership somehow coexists with enormously strong southern traditions of independence and rugged individualism. This is a paradox never lost. In some of these places, the outsiders are becoming more southernized than the southerners around them or working for them. It's not unlike the phenomenon of Rome and Greece. Rome conquered and occupied Greece, but adopted Greek learning, Greek art and architecture, Greek civic patterns, and even Greek gods. In the end, it was really a debatable question as to who conquered whom.

As the controversies continue over celebrating the 500th anniversary of the arrival of Christopher Columbus, all of us aware that all Americans, perhaps even the Native Americans who were here before Columbus, are either immigrants or their descendants. Immigration into the South from other nations admittedly may have been considerably slower and less diversified than in the North, but most southerners are aware that before they or their ancestors were here they were somewhere else.

In their habits of stoicism and passion, southerners are strikingly similar to the ancient Greeks. They have confidence in their abilities to assimilate newcomers.

One easy error that southerners could make as they diversify their ethnic and economic portfolios is to assume too quickly that all outsiders are alike. The truth is that newly-arrived owners/managers are as different from each other as they are from southerners. They come in no single style, but in a spectrum.

One should not, for example, in observing the recent re-settling of the south, equate the Amish with the Arabs. And Lord help those of us who confuse the French with the Germans. Though all incoming parties have philosophies and lifestyles conspicuously different from traditional southerners, they differ just as conspicuously from one another. Some settlers are more amenable to assimilation and sensitive to domestic mores than others.

Some southern subtlety and sophistication in reaching out to bring in new faces and monetary fuel needs to be nurtured. Simply accepting the premise that "any dollar gained is a dollar worth getting no matter what its source" will not do for the 21st century South.

The wisest outside investors will be those who actually believe and act in good faith on the litany all of them recite when they hold press conferences announcing their arrival: "The South is indeed a superior place to live, and southerners really are fine folks."

Only acceptance of mutual responsibility can make this inter-dependency work. Southerners have a responsibility for being selective in and then hospitable towards those whom they invite in, and newcomers have a responsibility for treating oldtimers with respect and for marrying into the family as quickly as possible. As the sheik and Agnew knew, choosing the right bed and bed-fellows is not something to take lightly.

Business Page Policy

The Murray Ledger and Times welcomes news about local business and industry for its Business News in Brief page each Saturday. In order to assure sufficient space for such news from the hundreds of businesses in Calloway County, we follow these guidelines in evaluating items for publication:

Articles and pictures should have genuine news value. Examples of genuine news stories include employee promotions and awards, a significant expansion of facilities, new ownership or affiliation with a new company, a relocation of business, and, of course, the establishment of a new business. Business page items should not be considered free advertising. Stories that have no news interest but simply promote the store's products are unfair to other businesses and will not be published. Any business page story should be geared to a specific news item related to your business.

Some drawings for prizes cannot be published for legal reasons under the Kentucky lottery laws.

Pictures will generally be taken by the advertising representative who handles the business account. Pictures may also be submitted by the business itself. Forms will be supplied to the business by the advertising representative for story information. If possible, type the information or write in neatly to avoid errors in transcribing the information. If writing a story for the business page, please limit it to 150 words.

We cannot guarantee a story or picture will be published on any given Saturday, although we will try to work with the advertising staff and businesses so that publication is timely and to the businesses' advantage. First priority must be given to items that are submitted the earliest.

If you have a question about a story you are interested in having published, feel free to call the paper and inquire. We want to know about the published items that will be of interest to the business community and Murray as a whole.

Local pharmacy will offer free fitness profiles twice

Your bathroom scale can't give you a full picture of your fitness. Even if your weight is in the ideal range, your lean muscle and fat tissues may not be a proper ratio. Discover the "real picture" inside your body. Find out what your bathroom scale's not telling you by getting a free personal fitness profile.

The Murray Medicine Shoppe Pharmacy, located at 200-A N. 12th St., will be offering free fitness profiles this Wednesday, May 27 and Thursday, May 28 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. This confidential profile is recommended for people of all ages, regardless of personal exercise level or weight.

An electrolipograph instrument, manufactured by BioAnalogs, generates the fitness profile, accurately determining the amount of fat, water and muscle in your body. How are these amounts determined?

The procedure is called bio-electric impedance, which introduces a tiny, painless electrical current onto the participant's hand and counts the microseconds required for the current to reach a sensor on the individual's foot.

Finally, you'll get a computer printout with nutrition and diet tips designed to help you maintain your current weight or lose excess pounds and a personal exercise chart showing how many calories you burn doing different exercises.

For more information on the free fitness profile please call the Murray Medicine Shoppe at 759-9245.

The bidding:
West North East South
1♥ Pass 2♥ 2♠
Pass 3♥ Pass 4♠
Opening lead — four of hearts.

Good bridge is based mostly on sound logic, and usually the logic involved is of a relatively simple sort. Even so, a player who applies his powers of reason to a particular situation may sometimes achieve a result that appears to border on the miraculous.

Consider this case where South gets to four spades on the bidding shown. West leads the four of hearts, dummy follows low, and East takes the ace as South contributes the jack.

At this point, any South worth his salt knows all he needs to know to bring in the contract! He sees 15 high-card points in his own hand, nine in dummy, and also sees East play the ace of hearts at trick one. Since this accounts for 28 of the 40 high-card points in the deck, it follows that West must hold every one of the 12 missing points for his opening bid.

This knowledge of where the unseen high cards are located tells South it is safe to take a diamond finesse, and at the same time tells him it would be foolish to attempt a finesse in either spades or clubs.

So, when East returns a club at trick two, South goes up with the ace, cashes the ace of trumps, and leads the queen of diamonds, planning to finesse. If West covers with the king, which he is apt to do, declarer wins with dummy's ace and exits with the jack of trumps. West wins with the queen but, whatever he returns, South makes the contract.

The outcome is the same if West follows low on the queen of diamonds. In that case, South plays low from dummy and then puts West on lead with a trump. It does not matter whether West returns a heart, a diamond or a club — he simply cannot stop declarer from making four spades.

Three churches will sponsor Bible School

Good Shepherd United Methodist Church, in conjunction with Martin's Chapel United Methodist Church and the Christian Community Church, will hold a Vacation Bible School at Good Shepherd starting Monday, June 8, and continuing through Friday, June 12.

The hours of the Bible School will be from 9 to 11:30 a.m. The school will be the Marketplace-29 A.D. concept.

Instead of classrooms separating the various ages of the children enrolled, each child will belong to a "family," with a mother (as their teacher) and brothers and sisters

(as classmates). They will have their own tent for their Bible School (classroom) home.

Activities to participate in are varied. Shops will be set up in the marketplace for making jewelry, bricks, kites, tools, belts, pottery, woven items, and many other types of crafts.

The children will be making their own bread, and their snacks will be fresh and dried fruits and fruit juices.

For more information and to register your child, contact Janice Wilson at 436-5540 or the Rev. Richard Denton at 753-5809.

LIBRARY NEWS

by Ben Graves, Calloway County Public Library

The permanent floating used book sale has one more week to run. When we close on the last day of May, it will too. Come on down and pick up a real cheap read.

If you didn't make it to the POST-DERBY BRUNCH last Saturday, you really blew it. Bill Boyd is a first-rate chef. He and his volunteer cooks really outdid themselves.

Help! We're knee-deep in new books! Come on in and start your summer reading early. Here are some of them in no particular order.

Silent Prey by John Sandford is a crime thriller about a doctor who has become a serial killer. I read two pages at random and it SCARED ME, so it must be good.

Intimate Strangers by Alexandra Thorne is about a woman who takes the place of her double with out the knowledge of the other woman's friends, family or HUSBAND. He doesn't love his real wife, but he does fall in love with the non-wife and the real wife is on the way back and is this ever good trash!

How about Dangerous Games by Susan Crossland? It's sex, power, Washington, money, London, the IRA, the press, more sex, more money. Tacky, Tacky, Tacky. (There'll be a waiting list for this one.)

Another book that will have a waiting list is Margaret Truman's Murder at the Pentagon. As always, Ms. Truman comes across with a great read.

What can you say about the "most trusted man in America"? Quite a bit, apparently. Walter Cronkite: His Life and Times by Doug James is 274 pages long with a chronology and bibliography. It looks interesting, as does Eleanor Roosevelt by Blanch Wiesen Cook. This is volume one of what looks to be a two-volume biography of one of the most influential women of modern times.

I learn something every day. For example, I didn't know that Hopalong Cassidy was a character created by Louis L'Amour. Well he is and he's alive and kicking in L'Amour's The Trail to Seven Pines.

Then there's Patron Saint of Liars by Ann Patchett. Set in "Habit" Kentucky, Patron Saint is about the life of a woman who came to a home for unwed mothers and stayed on as cook. She gets married, the child grows up, and eventually the past must be faced. Looks good, there will be a wait list.

Scales of Gold by Dorothy Dunnett is a historical novel of adventure and discovery set in the mid-1400's in the Mediterranean world and the Western Sahara.

Acts of Faith by Erich Segal is now in LARGE PRINT. It's highly recommended.

For something completely different, try The Mount Sinai Medical Center Family Guide to Dental Health by Jack Klatell and others. It's got "how to floss," "first aid for dental emergencies," and more about serious dentistry than most folks would ever want to know. If you (or your kids) are about to require some serious dental work, this is the book you want to read first.

The Folklore of Trees and Shrubs by Laura C. Martin is not your run-of-the-mill botany book. Not only does Ms. Martin describe the various trees and shrubs, but each entry is accompanied by a discussion of the plant's history and the tales that are told about it. Very interesting.

I'm out of space and I didn't even get to tell you about the quilting books, the Victorian wedding books, or Setting Ceramic Tile, much less Jan and Michael Stern's wonderful guide to the best road food, A Taste of America. Oh, well.

Carter speech stresses helping poor

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter told a seminary commencement crowd Friday that rifts in the Southern Baptist Church could begin to heal if members refocus their attention on helping the poor.

Citing one Baptist missionary who has dug 120 wells to provide drinking water for the needy in Africa, Carter told about 240 people receiving masters or doctorate degrees that they each can make a difference in the world.

"No doubt words mean a lot, but actions combined with words are what exemplifies the teachings of Jesus Christ," Carter said at the 169th commencement of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville.

But he said the graduates also should focus their religious mission heavily upon assisting the impoverished in America. He said poverty is a key impediment to social justice in this country.

"I grew up in the South in Georgia," Carter said. "I am familiar with racial discrimination."

However, he said one of the main problems today "is discrimination of rich people against poor people."

"Who are the rich people? Everyone in this room is a rich person. A rich person is one who has a home, has a family and knows where they are, who has a modicum of education, hope for the future, who believes the police are on your side, and who believes when they make a decision it will have some effect on their life.

"Where do the poor live? Obviously in Bangladesh ... but they also live next door."

He said churches sometimes mistakenly judge success by the size of their budgets and congregations. The former president said a true measure of a church should be its efforts to end discrimination against the poor.

Carter also touched upon the ongoing feud between conservatives and moderates in the Southern Baptist Church.

"When I tell people I am a Southern Baptist, it is treated with something of a joke," Carter said. "The term Southern Baptist is related to schism and incompatibility."

Nevertheless, Carter urged the graduates to avoid complacency and to be afraid of questioning their faith. Carter said all disagreements over church philosophy may never be resolved, but he said Southern Baptists need to find compromises.

He said ministering to poor can be a starting point to heal the divisions in the church. Those divisions have been particularly apparent at the Louisville seminary where moderate faculty members have left the campus under fire from conservative trustees.

"All Baptists can find common ground in dealing, church by church, minister by minister with the poorest among us," Carter said. "That is a rarity, I tell you, and it ought not be a rarity."

Carter spoke at the Kentucky Center for the Arts in downtown Louisville. The former president has been a Sunday school teacher since he was 18, and is a deacon at his local Baptist church in Plains, Ga.

Sherwood Forest tree cloned, saplings may be marketed

LONDON (AP) — The Major Oak, the tree of Sherwood Forest popularly associated with Robin Hood, has been cloned through propagation by a company that hopes to offer saplings for sale.

"Our research in cloning the Major Oak ensures that if it dies we can replace it with an exact replica and, given 500 years, it will grow into an identical tree," Neal Wright, a director of Micropropagation Services, said Thursday.

Trees could be grown from acorns but they would not be genetically identical to the 80-foot-tall Major Oak, believed to be centuries old.

Supported by Nottinghamshire County Council, Micropropagation removed buds from the tree and got them to take root in compost.

"Next, we will work to make the clones commercially viable. That will take another year or so," he said.

We Helped Betty Pickens Get Back On Course

Betty Pickens says she's not a "great" golfer. But she's also quick to say, it's great to get back out on the course after a year-long battle with lung cancer.

Betty has been in and out of Community Hospital in Mayfield since March of last year. "I think I've been in every room on the second floor," she says. "And I got the same marvelous care each time I was there."

"It meant so much for us to be able to stay here in our home community during my surgery and treatment. Having doctors and nurses that I know caring for me gave us such a sense of comfort and security. We had complete confidence in my surgeon, the oncologists and the nursing staff. I don't think I could have gotten better care anywhere else. And neither does Dr. Pickens!"

Today in History

Today is Saturday, May 23, the 144th day of 1992. There are 222 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
 On May 23, 1934, bank robbers Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow were shot to death in a police ambush as they were riding in a stolen Ford Deluxe along a road in Bienville Parish, La.

On this date:
 In 1430, Joan of Arc was captured by the Burgundians, who sold her to the English.
 In 1533, the marriage of England's King Henry VIII to Catherine of Aragon was declared null and void.
 In 1960, Israel announced it had captured former Nazi official Adolf Eichmann in Argentina.
 In 1977, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the appeals of former Nixon White House aides H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman and former Attorney General John N. Mitchell in connection with their Water-gate cover-up convictions.
 In 1983, Vladimir Danchev, an announcer on Radio Moscow, surprised everyone by praising Muslim rebels in Afghanistan and criticizing Soviet policy before he was taken off the air.
 In 1986, the White House said President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, would participate in Hands Across America to help raise millions of dollars for the nation's hungry and homeless.
 Ten years ago: Argentina announced its air force had carried out a major attack against British ships that had moved in to support the British beachhead on the Falkland Islands.
 Five years ago: Rescue workers and survivors searched through the rubble of a killer tornado in Saragosa, Texas, that had claimed 30 lives. Texas Gov. Bill Clements expressed his sorrow, and pledged all possible help.
 One year ago: By a 5-4 vote, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld regulations barring federally subsidized family planning clinics from discussing abortion with pregnant women, or from telling women where they could get abortions. Tommy Greene of the Philadelphia Phillies hurled a no-hitter as his team defeated the Montreal Expos 2-0.
Today's Birthdays: Bandleader Artie Shaw is 82. Actress Betty Garrett is 73. Pianist Alicia de Larrocha is 69. Singer Rosemary Clooney is 64. Actress Barbara Barrie is 61. Actress Joan Collins is 59. Boxer Marvelous Marvin Hagler is 40.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Four days ago, my father told me that he has lung cancer. I am devastated, sad and very angry all at the same time. I want to shake all those selfish smokers of the world and scream at them: "How dare you take the love of your family so lightly! Wake up—you are killing yourself!"

My father will never be able to apologize enough to his family to make up for the pain we are going to feel as we witness his painful end, and bury him before his time.

Abby, this is my message to all your readers who smoke: The next time you light a cigarette, imagine yourself telling your children that you are going to be dead in six months. Imagine telling your only daughter that you won't be alive to see the birth of her first child. And telling your son you won't be there to see him graduate from college.

That is exactly what my father will have to tell us, his family. Imagine knowing that you caused your loved ones all this pain, because of your selfish habit and wanton disregard for your health.

Your family loves you enough to forgive you—but how will you ever forgive yourself?

 GRIEVING DAUGHTER

P.S. Abby, you help so many people every day. They listen to you. Even if you don't publish this, it has helped me to write it. Thank you.

DEAR GRIEVING DAUGHTER: Not all people who are diagnosed with lung cancer are destined to die from it. Many have been helped through surgery and subsequent treatment. Although your anger is understandable, please don't be judgmental and unforgiving. Your father needs your love and support now.

DEAR ABBY: I am 33 and recently married a most wonderful man. So far, we have been able to sit down and talk about anything. But

His mother is the beneficiary on his second insurance policy. (I am on his first.) Last year, when the payment was due, he said he'd change it "later." It is due again, with his mother being the "chosen one."

I don't want to nag, but this really bugs me because he thinks I am being selfish. Am I? Doesn't he trust me enough to know that I will take care of his mother in the event of his death?

I love this man with all my heart, so how do I bring this up without his thinking less of me?

ON A MOUNTAIN (OR A MOLEHILL) IN MISSISSIPPI

DEAR ON: For your husband to want to provide for both you and his mother in the event of his death is commendable. According to his plan, if he predeceases you in death, you can go on with your life without inheriting the responsibility of his mother's welfare.

If you love him with all of your heart, let him decide when, if ever, to change the second insurance policy.

DEAR ABBY: My husband let a neighbor borrow our power lawn mower. It was returned filled with a cheap gasoline mixture, which clogged the mechanism. We had to take it in for repairs that came to $35.

Should we say nothing, and write it off as a "learning experience"? The bill has already been paid.

FRIENDLY NEIGHBORS

DEAR FRIENDLY: No. Tell your neighbors what you have told me, and ask them to reimburse you for the repairs. It will be a good "learning experience" for them, too.

Dr. Gott

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been a diabetic for about two years and do not fully understand my condition.

DEAR READER: Diabetes is a disorder of metabolism, marked by abnormal insulin secretion, elevated blood sugar levels and a host of consequences, including hastened arteriosclerosis, heart disease, retinal disorders and renal disease.

Regardless of whether a diabetic needs insulin injections (type I) or can be managed by eating properly and possibly taking anti-diabetes pills (type II), he or she still needs to follow a diet without sugar. Basically, for diabetics, sugar is poison.

The complications of diabetes can be delayed — but not avoided altogether — by efforts to keep the blood sugar in line. Thus, diabetics require close monitoring of sugar levels, strict attention to diet (and weight loss, if appropriate), supervision of prescription drugs (such as insulin and pills), and as much information as the patients can assimilate.

It's this last point that has me concerned in responding to your question. You seem to have been given little education about your disorder. In my view, it's your responsibility and your doctor's obligation to correct this.

You should return to your physician for educational sessions detailing the facts about diabetes, the rationale behind your therapy and the potential consequences you may suffer in the future. In short, you must become a more active participant in your ongoing treatment; for this, you need more information.

In addition to your doctor, other resources are available. Check out your local library for books, written for laymen, that will help you. Furthermore, many hospitals and clinics offer diabetes education courses. Finally, the American Diabetes Association, 2 Park Ave., New York, NY 10016 will send you information about your disease, including tips about other educational services in your community.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Diabetes Mellitus."
