MSU marks sagging enrollment for fall

By AMY WILSON Staff Writer

Although total enrollment is down from last year at Murray State University, the decline wasnot unexpected.

"There are minuses where we thought they would be," said Phil Bryan, dean of admissions and records

At the end of day five of registration, the headcount was 7,638, down 57 from the 1993 fall enrollment.

"We've had the largest graduating classes in the last two years so we've lost some numbers there," Bryan said. "Also, we have lost 60 students from the incentive grant counties because the grants have become more

Although it seems as if the university lost 30 new freshmen, Bryan said there were actually 28 new freshmen who came to the university in the summer to take classes. Because of standards set by the Council on Higher Education (CHE), those students couldn't be counted in the fall as new freshmen.

"We have increased our international student enrollment by 61 students, which is because of the various programs on campus. They are really paying off," Bryan said. "The English Language Institute has brought about

In addition to working with the alumni, Alexander has suggested that faculty members adopt one of 60 designated high schools and work to develop relationships effort to halt the flood of Cubans trying to reach the United States, U.S. officials and a Cuban delegation began talks today to discuss the exodus and the possibilities of legal migration.

The talks at the U.S. mission to the United Nations came after more than 19,000 Cubans fled their homeland in the past month. The exodus began when Cuba President Fidel Castro responded to Aug. 5 riots in Havana by suggesting he would no longer stop those trying to leave.

Michael Skol, the chief U.S. delegate at the talks, told reporters he expected serious talks on migration.

We know it is in their interest, as well as in the interest of the United States, to establish a firm system of legal, safe and orderly migration from Cuba, to replace what is happening now, which is dangerous, chaotic and unsafe migration," said Skol, a deputy assistant secretary of Cuba's delegate, Ricardo Alarcon, had no comment as he entered the U.S. mission, which is across First Avenue from the U.N. building protected by a police booth and concrete barriers to keep car bombers away.

As he left for the talks, Alarcon told Cuba's state radio Wednesday that the only way to stop the exodus was for the United States to end its 32-year economic embargo against Cuba.

"All they have to do is change that basic issue," said Alarcon, a former foreign minister and one of Castro's most trusted foreign policy advisers.

Kling would not confirm if TBI agents have been in Calloway County.

But Calloway County Chief Sheriff's Deputy Brian Wilburn said agents were recently in the Cypress Springs, New Concord

He said Tennessee authorities have asked the sheriff's office to be alert for any information it may receive about Bruce.

"They believe he has left the state (Tennessee)," Wilburn said. Bruce, a mussel diver, is described as a six-foot tall white male with brown hair and blue eyes. He weighs approximately 170 pounds.

Bruce escaped from the jail with two other prisoners by removing retaining devices from a fence in the exercise yard. Kling said Bruce is considered

"extremely dangerous." According to the Camden (Tenn.) Chronicle, Vine and Thorton, who were engaged, were shot in the head. Then Vine's house was set on fire and the bodies burned.

Camden is a rural community about 50 miles south of Murray.

At the time of the killings, authorities suspected robbery was a motive for the crime because several hundred pounds of mussel shells were stolen, the Chronicle

In addition, the newspaper said Vine's truck was taken from the residence. It was recovered two days later.

According to the TBI's wanted poster, a $1,000 reward is being offered for Bruce.

Anyone who has information about Bruce's whereabouts is encouraged to call TBI's 24-hour hotline at 1-800-TBI-FIND or the Calloway County Sheriff's Department at 753-3151.

Washington should teach by example

When I was a child, Mom used to say; "Son, you must set a good example for your younger brothers!" Then, when Dad messed up it was; "Jack, as a father you must set a good example for your children!" It seems this is neither unusual nor unwise advice! However, politicians are unaware of such sound practices. History tells us that in the 1920s Puerto Rico was the "Poor house of the Carribean," not Haiti! Then president, Woodrow Wilson, said to congress; "Let us embrace these people with kindness, give them citizenship, teach them Democracy, treat them as equals. By doing so, with little cost, we can create a shining example of Democracy in the Caribbean and for the world." So it did and so it has!

Now, our government, instead of showing kindess to the poor people of Haiti and embracing them with Democracy -- talks of embargoes, isolation and invasion! Next, Cuba is a Problem! Again, poor people are escaping their dying communist island in droves for the sanctuary of our democratic shores! But, does our government rejoice that Cuban communism has also failed? With Castro on his knees, has the battle not been virtually won? Apparently not! We must now squeeze the poor, starving, people even more by tightening the embargo, tightening the screws, squeezing the life from Castro! "We can not negotiate with a dictator" we are told. Strange, we forgave the Japanese for the slaughter of half a million of our sons? Strange, we embraced China, one of the last Communist strongholds, as a "Most favored nation trading partner?" Even wierder, we entered into an unpopular trading agreement (NAFTA) with Mexico, a country in the jaws of a dictatorship for over 65 years--and going strong for another six years?

The sage advice of leading by example, teaching Democracy by example, seems completely lost on Washington! I can feel Mom turning

Clinton lost early health-care gamble

By WALTER R. MEARS AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gambling to get change, President Clinton framed his health care reform strategy with a pair of bets, and now he's losing them. What's left is an effort to cut his losses. He upped his stakes at the start by having Hillary Rodham Clinton take charge of the drafting of the administration's health care legislation. A year later to the day, he told Congress he'd veto any reform bill short of universal health insurance coverage. Clinton's own bill is gone, to be replaced by more limited compromise, although even that could be beyond reach in Congress this year. Writing off his proposal a month ago, the president said a Senate Democratic fallback would be a less bureaucratic, improved alternative to what he had offered. By then, it was a matter of accepting the inevitable. At the same time, Clinton hedged the second wager, saying 95 percent coverage would come close enough to universal health insurance for him to

"Now he may have to decide as we get toward the end of the session whether to accept some initial legislation that moves toward his goals and can be added to later," House Speaker Thomas Foley said in a recent television interview.

Getting that much is questionable, since there is no consensus on what to do, and Congress will have less than a working month remaining when it returns from recess Sept. 12.

Foley said that might be possible, with bipartisan support, but a bill that could "be built upon later in the next Congress and doesn't constitute something like a painkiller" that would stall more meaningful reform later.

That has been an administration concern over proposals that would make incremental, step by step health care change. Piecemeal reform wouldn't work, Clinton's people said at the outset. Now they're saying that what the president intended to do with his intricate, 1,342-page proposal was to get everything onto the congressional operating table.

When it got there, six months after his initial target date, surgery was the one certainty. The bill didn't survive the operation, in part, the president says, because his opponents succeeded in depicting it as the big government way, when it was designed to be moderate.

Time will be a major problem then. With adjournment and elections coming up fast, it's relatively easy for a handful of Senate opponents to bar action on any issue, just by stalling.

Timing has been a problem all along, although it didn't seem that way when Clinton first put his wife in charge of shaping his bill, giving her a policy-making platform no first lady ever had before. "She's better at organizing and leading people from a complex beginning to a certain end than anybody I've ever worked with in my life," Clinton said. That was Jan. 25, 1993, and the assignment dramatized the commitment of the new president to take on health care reform. Her task force was to write legislation Clinton meant to get to Congress within his first hundred days, so the deadline

The complex beginning became even more complicated. Eventually, there were 500 people involved in health care bill. The administration bill wasn't ready until Oct. 27. By then, there wasn't time to get started, let alone finished, in that session of Congress.

Still, there was ample time for the action Clinton demanded, "now, not next year or the year after," when he pressed his health care case in his State of the Union address to Congress on Jan. 25.

That was the night he said he'd veto any bill that did not guarantee every American private health insurance that could never be taken away. "And we'll come right back here and start all over

TVA needs facelift

It's not hard to have an uneasy feeling about the future of Land Between the Lakes. Most news stories about the current budget situation are full of obvious holes that TVA officials fill with vague bureaucratic jargon.

Employee cuts have jumped from below 30 to as many as 60. It isn't clear where pieces of the LBL budget pie will be cut but the federal government's fiscal year starts in October so I guess we'll have the unveiling then.

Calls to TVA leave the impression that no one wants to take charge and the ones who answer the telephone are too busy passing the proverbial buck.

If that bouncing buck won't stop on any desk, it certainly stops at the door of Congress. TVA's federally funded half must answer to Congress and it is time for our elected officials to demand some answers. LBL was created from the life with histories. The formation of LBL broke those communities forever. Some towns are now underwater. Others are shells where people gather once a year to remember that they once lived and worked ties. That commitment was to provide a place that future generations could share for education, recreation, tourism and wildlife. The area draws tourists — so now there is an economic commitment. It also serves wildlife and has become a sanctuary for bald eagles. TVA has a responsibility here - profitable or not. It became a heavy one when the 170,000 acre refuge uprooted thousands of people. There is talk of making LBL self-supporting, but before addressing that issue, the TVA board of directors needs to do some fine tuning of their own. Currently, the board presents top management employees with performance bonuses and supplemental retirement in order to short circuit the federal salary

The TVA president receives the government's cap salary of $112,000 a year which is supplemented by a $150,000 performance bonus and $73,000 for retirement.

With the padding, the president's wage power is now leveraged by $335,000. Not bad take home pay, huh.

Add that figure to the news that TVA wants to sink money into a rural development self-help center. This idea will "initially" (watch out for that word) employ and operate on a $600,000

The board of directors says it is looking for ways to make LBL more efficient, but it is going to open a center like this.

LBL has helped this area with rural development and a center located in Tennessee isn't going to do the other six states in TVA's service area any good. The next step will then be to open rural development centers in all those states, as well.

That kind of commitment won't even last the 30 years that LBL has existed.

Another housekeeping chore facing the board is a recent ruling requiring TVA to pay 2,600 union members back wages totaling $2.1 million.

That figure comes on top of another ruling that requires TVA to pay $2.5 million in back pay for 1990. TVA is still in a labor dispute with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers over pay for 1992, 1993 and

There's no doubt things need to change at TVA. The question becomes: where will those changes occur?

Even more importantly — who will pay the price? Figuratively, that's an open ended question — literally we all know who pays. We do, of course.

EDITORIAL ROUNDUP

Aug. 28 — Sunday Republican, Springfield, Mass., on ethnic

Many Americans believe it is time for the U.S. government to drop all ethnic distinctions in everything - census, health data, financial aid, civil rights enforcement, etc.

However, it is painfully clear that some racial and ethnic groups are treated differently by certain ailments and viruses, as well as by the diseases of the human spirit. It would be wonderful if "American" was the only distinction needed, but the time for that has not

It was in 1977 that the government issued Directive 15, listing 17 racial and ethnic categories for all federal programs and records - and it is time now for revisions.

Politicians, alert to the growth of ethnic consciousness, eschew the "melting pot" analogy, as well they should.

When the melting-pot concept became popular in the United States some 150 years ago, many writers assumed that all European peoples would blend into an American people.

The more politically correct reference to the United States is as a 'mosaic,' a decoration made up of many distinct parts of different colors but forming a harmonious design.

The Office of Management and Budget will begin its labors (soon) to determine new racial and ethnic identifications, and it should eschew the various political agendas and make the designations which are unfortunately still needed to seek fair and equial opportunity for all Americans - in disease control and in public, social and economic life.

Aug. 28 — The Providence (R.I.) Sunday Journal on nuclear proliferation:

Nuclear proliferation ... has added a new wrinkle in recent weeks with highly publicized accounts of attempts to smuggle weaponsgrade nuclear material stolen in Russia and intercepted in transit through Germany.

It is, unfortunately, easier to say what should not be done about this problem than what should be done. For example, it is important not to sensationalize the situation.

Another thing that should not be done is to unnecessarily enflame nationalistic passions. Also, this issue should not be turned

Everyone should recognize that, regardless of which countries' nuclear materials are pilfered and which countries unwittingly serve as transit points for the thievery, it is impossible to know for sure which ones will end up being targeted by nuclear-armed regimes or terrorists. So all countries have a stake in combatting nuclear smuggling. Those with responsible governments will cooperate.

Of course, that leaves irresponsible governments. The example of North Korea's brazen disregard of its responsibilities under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty ... underlines the fact that legal documents are little more than scraps of paper in an international community that is so weak and unstable that the law cannot be enforced regularly.

So self-protection is often the only recourse. With regard to the smuggling of clear materials, that means beefing up security against thefts — and, no less important, waving a very big stick at any regime or group found willingly participating in this international black market.

Aug. 25 - Daily Jefferson County Union, Fort Atkinson, Wis., on a fashion comeback:

Unfortunately, the rumors are true.

The Nehru jacket is making a comeback. Some of the biggest design houses ... are among those with the five-button, stand-up collar jacket in their menswear lines this fash-

The style originated with Jawaharlal Nehru, the stately prime minister of India who wore the jacket on the international diplomatic scene in the 1950s and early '60s. Pierre Cardin put it in his Paris shop in the mid-'60s, and it enjoyed fleeting fame in the United States in 1968 on the backs of celebrities the likes of Johnny Carson and Sammy Davis Jr.

Like the elephant-leg bell bottoms, the Nehru didn't last too long; Esquire magazine lists it under "fads and foibles." But now it has returned ... in cognito, under the names of "band collar jacket" and "the Bombay."

Considering the reprise of the miniskirt, peace medallions, and tie-die ties, though, it was inevitable the Nehru would resurface. But if fashion history does repeat itself, does that mean disco is unedited debate on C-SPAN concerning the proposals to reduce crime makes one wish that the truth-in-labeling law applied to legislation as well as food. Can those making impassioned pleas to pass the "crime bill" really believe its programs will work?

If members of Congress are unaware of the facts, they are naive and haven't fully studied the issue. If they know the facts and hold positions that contradict the evidence, they are lying to us.

Supporters of the bill act as if the billions of dollars in additional spending for social programs, which they call "crime prevention," is something new. It is no more new than attempts by the federal government to end poverty by throwing money at the poor without addressing the poverty of some of their

We have spent $3 trillion fighting crime in our cities with social programs. This approach has followed the liberal philosophy that people commit crimes because their material desires have not been sufficiently met. This is why we get proposals like midnight basketball that, history shows, just don't work. UCLA professor James Q. Wilson offers a reality check about crime and our mostly failed responses to it in the September issue of Commentary Magazine. Wilson says that only about 6 percent of the young male population is responsible for more than half of all serious crimes committed by young men, so proposals for reducing crime should focus on that 6 percent. He also asserts that the most frightening change in criminality over the past 10 years is the growth of random killings by young people, most of them male. Wilson also chanllenges widely accepted nostrums and fads, such as "three strikes and you're out" legislation, gun control, rehabilitation and censorship of violent television programs because of their negative influence on the crime can be reduced by targeting police deployment in neighborhoods with high rates of youth violence, aggressive supervision of the small percentage of people who are responsible for serious violations of the law (he admits that will be controversial and challenge to civil libertarians), enforcement of truancy and curfew laws, and welfare reform.

He rejects the supposed causes of crime, such as unemployment, racism, poor housing, too little schooling and lack of self-esteem. The real causes, he argues, are temperment, early family experiences and the disastrous effects the neighborhood culture of violence can have on a young person. To which I would add the failure of society to instill a moral compass and affirm a virtuous code for living.

Republicans should do more than play defense against the Democrats' allegations of callousness about the poor and deprived. They whould begin an offensive against failed and morally and financially bankrupt liberal policies.

The entire Great Society rested on the premise that government could "buy out" the evil that lurks in some souls. The evidence shows how wrong this thinking was. It didn't work, it has been incredibly expensive, and now the Democrats want to up the ante miss this one! Now, you wouldn't want to say that Patrick McManus would tell stories that weren't true, but he certainly works with a more colorful reality than the rest of us. How I Got This Way, his latest book of short pieces, is one of the funniest things you'll ever read. For those of you who aren't familiar with McManus, think of him as the Outdoors in Idaho equivalent of the late Lewis Grizzard, Only funnier. How I Got This Way is guaranteed to make you laugh. Highly recommended.

On the other hand, if you're in the mood for something with a little more substance, try out Larry McMurty's Pretty Boy Floyd. A highlight of the cycling season, it has been rated as one of the top 57 best organized rides by Bicycling Magaine, and draws about 200 area cyclists each year. Rides are designed to appeal to every level of cyclist. Beginning at 8 a.m. at Heath High School, riders will ride along the scenic backroads of McCreacken, Ballard and Carlisle counties.

The 25 and 40 mile routes are extremely flat, staying in the bottom land along the Ohio River. The 65 (Metric Century) mile route starts flat and encounters gently rolling hills. Century (100 mile) riders will enjoy flat sections, rolling hills and some challenging climbs.

A registration fee of $10 per person, $20 per family if paid before Sept. 10 (late registration of $12/$22) will entitle riders to a map, rest stops with home baked cookies, sag support, ride bag with freebes, an advertisement free t-shirt (two per family) and marked routes.

Ride day registration begins at 7 a.m. Riders may pick up packets and preregister at Bikeworld, Cardinal Point Shopping Center, Paducah, between 6 and 8 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 16.

Teddy bears may be collector's valued items

LONDON (AP) — Teddy bears, introduced in 1902 in tribute to President Theodora Roosevelt, can sometimes be valuable as collector's items.

At a recent auction here, a 13-inch-high teddy bear named Elliot, created by the Steiff Co. in 1902, sold for a record $74,250 - three times over the preauction estimate.

What makes Elliot unique is his distinctive blue fur.

Instead of being brown, this unusual teddy bear was a specially colored sample made up by Steiff in 1908 for a London department store but never produced.

Purchased at the auction by anonymous bidders, Elliot's new home is in Canada.

Ford praises fiscal progress

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) -U.S. Sen. Wendell Ford praised Congress for helping boost the economy while reducing the federal deficit, but said it hasn't found a "clear consensus" on health-care reform.

Speaking to the Green River Area Development District's annual meeting, Ford pointed to new jobs and construction, helped by low interest rates. He said Monday that Congress has a 'newfound fiscal restraint' that has lowered the deficit.

Ford, the second-ranking Democrat in the Senate, said the democratic process eventually worked with the passage of the crime bill last week. But he said the process was more painful than it needed to be because some members of Congress became "more quotable than

Russia turning embassy into hotel, health club

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) - Russia's embassy is going from Marx to muscles and from revolution to room service. Trading the Cold War for cold cash, Moscow is leasing most of its sprawling oceanside diplomatic building to a hotelier who will turn it into a health club, hotel, bar and apartments.

The 10-year deal, the first of its kind, is part of a worldwide plan to cut Russia's diplomatic costs.

"This is now the policy of the government," said Ambassador Mikhail Sobolev in an interview. He noted Russia closed its embassy in neighboring Suriname in 1992 for financial reasons. The former den of diplomats will soon house a health club, a banquet hall and a 140-seat auditorium, Sobolev and local hotelier Nafis Khan told The Associated Press on Tuesday. The former Soviet diplomatic staff of 35 families has been reduced to six, allowing Khan to lease 16 apartments. He plans to rebuild other areas as an auditorium, bar and restaurant. He laughed when asked if the bar would be designed to recall Soviet salad days, with red stars, Lenin photos and long lines for rationed drinks.

"We haven't gone that avant garde," Khan said, "but we'll probably serve borscht."

Postal Service's two largest unions join contract negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service and its two biggest unions are sitting down to negotiate new contracts, determined to reach a settlement rather than the arbitration that was needed the last time around.

"We will come to the table with one objective, that is to negotiate a contract. We have no interest in going to arbitration," said Vincept R. Sombrotto, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers.

Postmaster Marvin Runyon agreed that the two sides "need to reach a negotiated agreement.

"We need to determine our future together, rather than leaving it in the hands of others," he said today as an array of union and postal lawyers and executives faced each other across a long table at a Washington hotel.

Parallel negotiations were getting under way a block away with the American Postal Workers Union, where union President Moe Biller declared: "We seek to empower our workers and to reach a collective bargaining agreement that is fair to the workers, fair to the Postal Service and fair to our customers."

It was the first time that the agency's two largest unions have chosen to bargain separately rather than as a team, reflecting differences over how to cope with modernization and the threat of how their members jobs will be affected by automated machinery.

The Postal Workers represent 314,344 clerks and other workers while the letter carriers union has 223,012 members.

Their contracts expire Nov. 20, as does that of the 53,187-member National Postal Mail Handlers Union. Talks with that union began Aug. 9. They are legally barred from striking.

Last year, the post office reached a separate agreement with its 44,780 rural carriers. which remains in force until Nov. 20, 1995.

Currently, postal workers' average pay is $15,60 per hour, or $20.53 including the value of benefits and overtime.

That was not the case last time. The agency and its unions had to resort to arbitration in 1991 after months of fruitless talks.

The post office is facing a deficit of $1.3 billion or more in this fiscal year. It is seeking a 10.3 percent rate hike for next year that would raise the cost of a first-class stamp to 32 cents.

Baseball strike could stretch into 1995

By RONALD BLUM AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As the chance of completing the 1994 season dwindles, the likelihood of the baseball strike extending into 1995 rises.

"It's a grave source of concern," acting commissioner Bud Selig said Wednesday after federal mediators failed to call for bargaining to resume. "But as bad as the short-term pain is — and it's bad - the long-term pain of not solving this problem is worse."

The baseball strike completes its third week today with no movement. Federal mediators met Wednesday for three hours with management negotiator Richard Ravitch and for 15 minutes with union head Donald Fehr. They found there was no reason to call another bargaining session.

"They're out of ideas at the moment," Fehr said.

Ravitch said owners never would abandon their insistence on getting cost-certainty.

"I'm very disappointed," he said. "The mediators are there to determine what the give and take is. If they (the union) are not willing to talk about costs, there's nothing to talk about." Fehr said owners never would get a salary cap and said every proposal management suggested would restrict players. "As far as we can figure out, when they use terms like 'aggregate salary costs,' 'cost controls,' 'cost certainty,' etcetera, they are merely euphemisms for salary cap," Fehr said.

In the event there is no more baseball this season, the union expects owners to impose a salary cap. Ravitch said no decision has been made but said thoughts would turn to 1995 very soon.

"No later than the beginning of October, we're going to have to sit down and figure out how to put next season together," he

In that event, the strike would continue, threatening the start of next season. The union has threatened litigation if owners impose a cap, and even Ravitch seemed to realize an imposed cap would be meaningless.

"Strikes don't make the game work. Implementation of contracts unilaterally don't make the game work," he said. "The only thing that will is sitting down at the bargaining table and coming Agreement."

Fourteen more games were canceled Wednesday, increasing the total to 260 since the strike began Aug. 12. Fehr said he believes owners are trying to break the union and test players' resolve, a charge Ravitch denies. "Whatever calendar or clock they're on, it hasn't gone off yet," Fehr said of owners.

Chang adjusts game; wins U.S. Open match

By FRED LIEF AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — He had just gone four tough sets, and Michael Chang decided this was no time to sit down.

He had put in a good night's work — a 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3) victory Wednesday over MaliVai Washington in the second round of the U.S. Open — and wasn't about to take any chances.

He stood for his post-match news conference after midnight, doing whatever it took to keep his legs from cramping.

"I'm just trying to make sure," he said. "It's pretty chilly out tonight, so it's easy to

One of tennis' more famous bouts of cramped legs involved Chang. Five years ago, he was playing Ivan Lendl in the round of 16 at the French Open. Late in the match,

So Chang got cagey. He served underhand; he stayed close to the service line, daring Lendl to pass him. Amazingly, the strategy worked. Chang won in five sets and would go on to win the title. This from a kid who was all of 17 at the time. In capturing the French, Chang was branded a clay-court player. But his game now zips on all surfaces, including the hard courts of the U.S. Open, although as Boris Becker said after his first-round exit, the stadium court is not playing especially fast this Chang, seeded sixth, has adjusted his game as tennis has become a launching pad for big hitters and supersonic rackets. He has been working on his service, growing more confident of holding serve. He has tinkered with his technique and toss, and added muscle to his upper body.

QB situation good at Alabama

By PAUL NEWBERRY AP Sports Writer

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Gene Stallings considers it a pleasant dilemma rather than a potential problem: two players with the credentials to start for No. 11 Alabama, but only one position.

"Do I have any problem with having two good quarterbacks?" the Crimson Tide coach asked. "The answer is no. I wish I had five.'

For now, senior Jay Barker has been tapped as the starter, which should come as no surprise. He has directed Alabama to a 23-1-1 record and the 1992 national championship in three years as the No. 1 signal-caller.

On the other hand, Barker wasn't handed the job until the start of the week when Stallings named him the starter over Burgdorf, his understudy the past two seasons. Burgdorf, a junior, entered the fall as the starter based on his MVP performance in the Gator Bowl last season, a game Barker missed with a severe knee injury.

Two have ability to start

"Both of us are going to get playing time in that first game,' Burgdorf said of the season opener against Division I-AA Tennessee-Chattanooga. "If I play well Saturday, we'll see what happens after that. "It's not been made clear to me (that the job is still open). But I feel like whoever moves the team, that's the one they're going to have out there.

Does this have the makings of a potential quarterback controversy? Stallings is somewhat of an expert on that subject, having been a Dallas Cowboys assistant in the 1970s when Roger Staubach and Craig Morton battled for the starting job. "Sometimes the players like players just a little bit more than they do others ... so the camp divides a little bit," Stallings recalled. "And it came to the point at Dallas where coach (Tom) Landry said one person was going to be the quarterback, and that was basically it." After Landry made the decision to start Staubach, Morton was traded to Denver. He directed the Broncos to the 1978

Super Bowl, where they were defeated by the Staubach-led Stallings doesn't have the option of trading one of his potential starters, so he'll try to create enough playing time for both. That may not be hard considering the Tide's cupcake schedule, which also includes games against Tulane, Southern Mississippi and Vanderbilt. "Regardless of what I say, that could always change," Stallings said. "A lot of times that's a feel. You can make all the plans you want to, you can say, 'OK, I'm going to play this one the first quarter,' and then all of a sudden things happen.

"All I'm saying is our plans are to play both of them. How much? That would be putting too much pressure on Homer (offensive coordinator Homer Smith) and I don't want to do that."

For Burgdorf, who passed for two touchdowns and ran for another in the 24-10 Gator victory over North Carolina, the frustration is obvious.

"It's tough," he said. "I'm a competitive guy in whatever I do, whether it's at quarterback or inthe classroom. I like competition, and I'm disappointed not to be the starter. That's something I've always wanted and something I strive for each day. Still, he agrees with Stallings that two quarterbacks are better

In fact, having someone like Burgdorf standing on the sideline might prompt the starter to push himself a little harder.

"I feel like I can be more aggressive out there," Barker said. "I realize if I get hurt again, there's a guy who can step in and get the job done.'

That's little solace for Burgdorf, who has been rumored more than once to be considering a transfer but now says his roots are firmly at Alabama.

Fall soccer registration winding down

The Murray-Calloway County Soccer Fall 1994 registration continues through tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the park office on Payne Street. Registration ends tomorrow so that teams can be Registration is open for both boys and girls who are between six and 14 years of age as of Aug. 1. Younger participants will require a parent to assist as a coach. The cost will be $30 for the first child in a family, $20 for the second and $10 each for any additional children. Additional charitable donations to improve soccer facilities would be greatly appreciated.

Any soccer equipment belonging to MCCSA can be brought to registration or turned in to Dennison-Hunt Sporting Goods. For more information, call Bill France at 753-6524.

Twins send Winfield to Cleveland

Selig and Ravitch said fear of canceling the World Series for the first time since 1904 wouldn't change management's stance. Many players predict a long strike and say they are willing to outlast the owners in a war of attrition that extends into next

"I certainly have too much respect for the players to think they did this quixotically," Ravitch said. "I hope very much that they didn't do it because they were told that the owners were going to behave as they have in the past and fold. If that was the reason for striking on Aug. 12 it will have proved to have been a tragic strategic said weren't productive. error.

Ravitch said that whatever revenue the owners lose this year would be saved next year in the form of lower salaries.

"It doesn't come out of thin air or out of the fairy godmother," he said. "It comes out of the total revenue of baseball." Fehr convened the union's executive board in a telephone conference call and discussed the players' strike fund, which totals

$175 million to $200 million. The union will mail its first checks to players on Sept. 15 if the strike continues that long.

He has said many times that the strike will go on "as long as it takes." He said if owners believe players will crack if the World Series isn't played, the walkout could continue into next

"The only thing that will dissuade them is the passage of time," he said.

Fehr also took another shot at Ravitch, saying: "Dick doesn't have a lot of credibility with players.'

There were rumblings of activity away from formal channels, which Ravitch denied and Fehr

"I'd like to put those rumors to rest — at least the ones I've heard — there's been no change whatsoever in the owners' position," Ravitch said.

Fehr downplayed the informal contacts. Player and management sources outside the negotiations, speaking on the condition they not be identified, said the owner Fehr was referring to was Jerry McMorris of the Colorado

Rathman to start against old team

By JOHN NADEL AP Sports Writer

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) - As he's done so many times in the past, Tom Rathman will be starting at fullback Monday night at Candlestick Park. Only this time, he'll be doing so for the visiting

Los Angeles Raiders coach Art Shell announced Wednesday that Rathman will start against his former teammates when the Raiders face the San Francisco 49ers in the first game of the season for Rathman, 31, was a starter for most of his eight seasons with the 49ers, although his playing time was limited last year by injuries. He signed with the Raiders as a free agent earlier this summer, another victim of the salary cap, and was listed as a backup to Napoleon McCallum throughout the exhibition season, "I'm just another squirrel looking for a nut," Rathman said when asked about being elevated to starting status. "I'm very excited about starting, especially against the 49ers. It's exciting, but it wouldn't have mattered if they started Nap.

Rathman gained 20 yards on seven carries and caught three passes for 17 yards this summer. McCallum gained 41 yards on 11 carries and caught two passes for 10 yards.

Shell and McCallum also said the starting assignment was no big deal, and Shell said the fact that the Raiders were opening against the 49ers had nothing to do with his decision.

"We do things based on what's good for our football team," Shell said. "Napoleon McCallum is still a key member of our football team. There are places for him, there are places for Tom

Coach's comments:

"South Hopkins is a blitzing type of team. We've got to protect (quarterback) Sam Arnett and give him time to throw, and we feel like we can. They will try to get penetration and on the film we saw of them, they put seven and eight people on the line and they had 10 people within a three-yard radius of the ball. We've got to make sure our gameplan is sound because if we're on and clicking, we'll be able to move the ball pretty good, but if we're not, we'll struggle.'

Popeye sails to Murray

The live stage production of "Popeye the Sailor in Fantasyland" is coming to Murray on Sept. 6, at 7 p.m. at Murray Middle School Auditorium. The show is a professional production on a national tour, licensed by King Features Syndicate, owners of the "Popeye" copyr-

The local engagement is being sponsored by Murray Business and Professional Women's Club as a fund-raiser for their civic projects.

Last year's production of "The Adventures of Popeye the Sailor" was so enthusiastically received that the producers agreed to bring out a completely new and different "Popeye" show for 1994. Ingenious masks and costumes again transform cast members into exact duplicates of Popeye, Olive Oyl and Bluto in a series of hilarious new

The "fantasyland" element adds a completely new dimension to this year's show, including a number of startling special effects and magical illusions. In one scene, a boy and a girl are invited on stage from the audience. The boy becomes Aladdin and the girl becomes Jasmine. They then go through magical adventures, climaxing with a ride on the Magic Carpet.

The fact that all this is live on stage and not a movie or a TV

MCMA drive ends Friday; shows begin in October

Murray Civic Music Association's membership drive for the upcoming 1994-95 season continues until Sept. 2.

Memberships can be purchased from MCMA volunteers or by calling 753-3257 or 762-4516. The offerings of this season include: Marian McPartland Trio, Saturday Brass Quintet, For a Song, and the Louisville Orchestra.

MCMA members also receive the benefit of reciprocity with several regional associations as part of their membership: Paducah Community Concert Association of Union City/ Obion County, and Carbondale's Concert Series.

On February 21 at 8 p.m. MCMA will present it's third offering - "For a Song", with Katherine Terrell, soprano, and Lewis Dahle Von Schlanbusch, baritone. These artists have enjoyed a 12 year association that has led to repeat performances with the major symphonies in North America including the Los Angeles Philharmonic; Chicago, Toronto, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Vancouver, Montreal and Winnepeg symphonies and the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington

Terrell and Von Schlanbusch have been lavishly praised for their outstanding theatricality, their compelling chemistry and their beautiful, sonorous voices.

Displaying an incredible range of vocal and acting techniques, these versatile artists choreograph, program and narrate their concerts in such a fashion that audiences rise to their feet time after time.

This season is funded in part by a grant from the Kentucky Arts Council, a state agency. All performances are accessible to the handicapped.

Holocaust exhibit opens

On April 11, 1945, the American Army liberated the Nazi death camp of Buchenwald, reaching it just ahead of the SS troops who had been dispatched to murder all the remaining captives. Among the bodies awaiting incineration were some inmates who were still alive.

One, found unconscious and sick with typhus, was the Hungarian artist, Gyorgy Kadar. During his imprisonment, Kadar had made sketches of death and life in the camp, -even though it would have meant his life had he been caught.

Once free, he began his first cycle of 57 holocaust drawings as catharis and testimony. In 1988, these drawings were acquired by Vanderbilt University as the core of its Holocaust Art Collection, which moved Kadar to again probe the horror of his experience and produce another 16 drawings.

Library funding approved

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The Urban County Council has endorsed a complicated financial plan to help the University of Kentucky build its $58 million Commonwealth Library on a 30-acre site across from the main

UK President Charles Wethington said construction ty, Harper said. could begin as early as November without using state money.

Although the council's action was unanimous Tuesday, some members had questions.

Several asked repeatedly if there were any way the Urban County Government could end up footing the bill for the massive project. Wethington said there wasn't.

UK has raised more than $21 million in private funds for the library building and a book endowment. Wethington said he wanted to go ahead with the project, in part so the people who made the donations would not be bonds.

Under the plan, the UK Alumni Association, an independent taxexempt corporation, would ask the Urban County Government to issue $41 million in bonds.

But it would be against the law for the Urban County Government to put "one red cent" in the project, said Spencer Harper, a bond attorney who has been advising the university on the

The alumni association would then use the proceeds of the bond sale to build the library. The alumni association wouldn't pay the estimated $3 million annual payments on the bonds, however. The alumni group would contract with the UK Athletics Association to make the payments. Wethington said he would make changes in the budget so athletics wouldn't be hurt under the deal, but he declined to elaborate.

Under state law, the athletics association can't directly contract with the Urban County Government to issue the bonds. But the alumni association can because it's an independent public chari-

If the legislature approves paying for the project during its next session, it could give UK additional money to make the bond payments instead of having the payments come from the athletic association, Harper said.

Wethington asked the legislature to approve a $46 million bond sale during the last regular and special sessions. The state House voted twice to approve funding for the library and a host of other building projects. But the state Senate rejected funding for the projects, saying the state could not afford to issue more

UK badly needs the new library because its current one is outmoded and far too small for a research university, Wethington

The new building "is designed to be a library for the future, one that will be a communications hub to serve the entire commonwealth," he said.

It will seat as many as 3,000 visitors at a time — more than three times the number the crowded Margaret I. King Library can hold.

In making his pitch to the council, Wethington pointed out that UK is Lexington's largest employer, with more than 11,000 full-time and part-time employees, and asked the council to think of the plan as an economic development project.

Typhoon kills six in Taiwan

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) -Typhoon Gladys battered Taiwan today with 78 mph winds, killing six people and setting off landslides and widespread power disruptions.

A 22,000-ton Indian freighter ran aground off Yehliu in northern Taiwan, but rescuers fastened ropes to the vessel so the 40 crew members could climb safely to shore, police said.

Tons of oil leaked from the ship, the Kalidas, and police said they feared substantial damage to the coast, known for its beautiful rock formations.

The typhoon forced the cancellation of more than 300 domestic flights and triggered landslides that closed highways. More than 300,000 homes were without electricity.

Five people died in Ilan in eastern Taiwan. A woman was killed when an electricity pole fell on her car, a man drowned in a flooded river, and three other people were killed by falling objects, police said.

Another woman was killed when strong winds brought down her house in Taoyuan in northern Taiwan, police said.

Seventeen people were injured by shattered glass or falling billboards in Taipei, they said.

Gladys is the fifth typhoon. to hit Taiwan since early July. The storms have killed more than 20 people and caused millions of dollars in damage.

Gene linked to melanoma

tists have identified a defective gene that appears to cause an inherited tendency to the deadly skin cancer melanoma and may also-play a role in non-inherited melanonia.

MURRAY LEDGER & TIMES

In its normal state, the gene acts as a brake on cancer. But people who inherit a defective version apparently lose part of unusually vulnerable to melanoma, the researchers said.

About 32,000 melanoma cases and nearly 7,000 melanoma deaths are expected in the United States this year. Only about 10 percent of melanoma occurs in people with an inherited tendency and it's unclear what percentage of inherited cases are because of the gene.

Detective versions of the gene may also be involved in many or maybe even most cases of noninherited melanoma, researchers said. In those cases the gene would be inherited in normal form but later damaged by sunlight or other causes.

Studying the gene may eventually lead 40 better treatments forthe non-inherited disease, researchers said.

More immediately, the discovery of a susceptibility-gene could be used to screen for people at risk for melanoma. They could be counseled to take steps like avoiding too much sun, keeping track of possibly pre-cancerous moles and and using sunscreen, researchers said.

The normal gene tells the body how to make a protein called p16, which helps regulate cell division. Prior studies suggested the p16 gene is a so-called tumor suppressor that discourages development. Previous studies also indicated defective versions play a role in cancer.

The new work is reported in the September issue of the journal Nature Genetics by two independent teams of researchers.

One study was done by Nicholas Dracopoli of the 'National Center for Human Genome Research, part of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., and colleagues at NIH and melanoma-prone families they screened showed defects in the p16 gene that appeared related to the disease. In the nine families, the gene was defective in 33 out of 36 people with melanoma.

The second study was done by Alexander Kamb of Myriad Genetics Inc. in Salt Lake City with scientists at the University of Utah and elsewhere.

They studied 13 families who already appeared to have a predisposition to melanoma from some abnormality in the neighthe protection, making them shorhood of the pl6 gene. The researcher's found a defective p16 gene in two of the families. They found no evidence of a defective p16 gene in 38 other melanomaprone families.

Nonetheless, the Utah and NIH studies "really support each other, fundamentally?" said, noting that two types of plant gene defects appeared in both studies:Dracopli said the combined results provide Wer strong" data linking defects a the p16 gene to melanema

Students nix on longer school year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Today's students like school more than their older brothers and sisters did, but they still don't want a longer school year. Weekly Reader, in its National Survey on Education, asked students in grades four, five and six grades. what they thought about a longer school year. Eighty-one percent were against the idea. There also was opposition — 77 percent to lengthening the school day by Fourth-graders were most receptive to both ideas - 21 percent favored extending the school year and 26 percent favored lengthening the school day, the survey found.

The findings were based on written survey responses by about 19,000 students in the three

Last spring, the National Education Commission on Time and Learning said that lengthening the school day and the school year are just two ways that schools can free themselves from the "shackles of time" threatening to cripple American

"The six-hour, 180-day school year should be relegated to museums, an exhibit from our education past," the commission

Since 1985, when Weekly Reader's survey was first conducted, there has been an 8 percentage point increase - to the current 36 percent — in the proportion of fourth-, fifth- and sixthgraders who said they liked school a lot. An additional 55 percent said they liked it some.

Girls still like school more than boys do — 42 percent to 29 percent - "but encouragement is to be found in the steady overall rise among all students in these grade levels in how much they like school," the survey

Forty-two percent of the students said math was their favorite subject, up 10 percentage points since 1989; 44 percent also thought it was the most important one for them to learn. Writing, on the other hand, was their least favorite subject and the one they considered least important.

Twelve percent said science was the most important subject to study, but nearly 25 percent say it is their favorite subject.

"Obviously, elementary teachers are making progress in science education, as demonstrated by the increase in the number of students who enjoy it," said Sandra F. Maccarone, Weekly Reader's editor-in-chief. "But it looks as if we need to find a better way to communicate its importance, given the national priority on science and technology."

The National Assessment of Educational Progress reported Aug. 17 that students had begun to make progress in math and science education but that their writing and reading skills were still lacking.

On other issues, the survey

-Fifty-three percent of the students said computers should be taught in schools; 72 percent viewed physical education as an important component of instruction.

—The most common problem students run into in school is 'not the use of drugs or of alcohol, not fighting or vandalism, not even cheating; it is incomplete homework." Drugs, alcohol and weapons in school were each cited by 2 percent of the students responding.

-Nearly all the students said they planned to go to college. "Statistically, however, not much chance exists that more than 60 percent of them will actually do that," the survey said.

-Nearly half the girls, but only 13 percent of the boys said they wanted to become teachers, a field predominantly female.

The Weekly Reader, survey also queried children in grades two and three on some of the same issues. The same subject is surveyed every four years.

All of the children who responded read the Weekly Reader in school. The newspaper is used in about 70 percent of the nation's school districts and is read by more than 8 million children. Since the survey did not constitute a random sampling, no statistical margin of error was estimated.

Klan-linked man is sentenced for torching church

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - A man convicted in the torching of a church whose pastor had criticized the Ku Klux Klan was sentenced to 152 months in prison on Tuesday.

U.S. District Judge John Heyburn sentenced Brian Tackett of Bowling Green, who was found guilty of taking part in a conspiracy to burn the Barren River Baptist Church on Dec. 6, 1991. He was also convicted of burning the church and of carrying a firearm while committing a crime of violence.

Ernest Pierce Sr., a former Klan leader, was sentenced to 51 months in prison earlier this year for his role in the arson.

The test typically gives an answer within two hours, not 12 to 24 hours as is now required. If it is used the way its inventors hope, the test could vastly reduce the cost of treating heart attacks by allowing doctors to quickly discharge patients with false alarms,

About 5 million people with chest pain go to emergency rooms each year. While some heart attacks are clearly evident from the start, many are not; and ambiguous cases are routinely admitted to coronary care units until doctors know for sure.

As a result, fewer than 30 percent of those admitted to cardiac intensive care actually turn out to have had heart attacks. These units are often the most expen-

By helping emergency room doctors keep patients out of intensive care, the new test could lead to big savings.

"We estimate that you could save three or four billion dollars a year using this test," said Dr. Robert Roberts, one of the developers at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. The Baylor team describe their results from using the test on 1,110 emergency room patients in a report in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

"Had this test been used as a screening test, we would have reduced our coronary care unit admission rate by 70 percent," said Dr. Peter R. Puleo, the report's principal author.

Often doctors can tell by electrocardiograms whether people with chest pain are having heart attacks. But when these readings are normal, they frequently have to wait until blood enzymes reve-

The heart constantly releases very low amounts of this enzyme, called creatine kinase MB. Levels gradually rise after a heart attack. But typically it takes a day or so before they are high enough for doctors to be sure a heart attack has occurred.

The enzyme begins to break down in the bloodstream soon after its release. Ordinarily, the blood contains equal amounts of the fresh and degraded versions of the enzyme. Soon after a heart attack, though, the ratio changes: The fresh variety outweighs the degraded type, even though the total amount of enzyme in the bloodstream may still be in the normal range. By measuring changes in the ratio of these two kinds of 'creatine kinase MB, the new test can reveal with 95 percent certainty whether someone has had a heart attack within six hours after the start of symptoms.

Among those who actually had heart attacks, definitive results were available within an average of an hour and 15 minutes after they arrived in the emergency

Dr. Georges Benjamin, an emergency physician at Holy Cross Hospital in Silver Spring, Md., called the new test a useful Ideally, doctors would like to know the moment patients arrive in the emergency room whether they have had a heart attack, he said. "Until something better comes along, we can go with this. I think it's a step in the right direction.

Doctors say the test could also guide doctors when deciding whether to give clot-dissolving drugs, which can stop a heart attack by removing blockages in the heart arteries. Doctors are often reluctant to use them if they are less than certain patients have suffered heart attacks, since the drugs can trigger strokes.

The Baylor study was financed by the American Heart Association and the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute.

A commercial version of the test, which takes 20 minutes, was recently introduced by Helena Laboratories of Beaumont, Texas. Vice President Joe Golias said 70 hospitals are using it, and the test costs them about $40.

of astronomers believe they have found the first example in our galaxy of what looks like the impossible: an object moving faster than light. But don't chuck those physics textbooks yet. It's just an illusion and the blob of matter is really poking along at only about 92 percent of the speed of light. That's still a record for the galaxy.

The faster-than-light illusion had been spotted several times before outside the Milky Way. But because it's closer than previous ones, further study might help scientists confirm their understanding of the illusion, researchers said.

The discovery is reported in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature by Felix Mirabel of the Saclay Center for Studies in Gifsur-Yvette, France, and Luis Rodriguez of the National Autonomous University in Mexico City. They did the work at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory in Socorro, N.M. They observed two blobs of matter blasting away in opposite directions from an object that appears to be a black hole or an ultradense neutron star. One of 25 percent faster than the speed of light, which is 186,000 miles per second.

But it's an illusion created by the blob's very high speed and its moving closer to Earth while angling well away from a direct

The object launching the blobs is about 40,000 light-years away in the direction of the constellation Aquila, or Eagle. A lightyear is the distance light travels in one year, about 5.88 trillion

The fast blob is the fastestmoving bulk of matter ever detected in the galaxy, said Galen Gisler, an astrophysicist at the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico. Individual particles have been known to move faster, he said.

Gisler said further study of the object that ejected the blobs might help scientists understand much more distant objects that pour out large amounts of energy, like quasars.

A slight chance also exists that scientists might be able to determine the object's distance very precisely, which would help them estimate distances to other celestial bodies in the galaxy, he said.

Luck is undeniably an important factor in bridge, but in the long run it is not nearly as important a factor as skill. An "unlucky" lie of the cards can often be overcome by skillful

Take this case where the success of the słam appears to depend upon the location of the king of hearts. If East has it, the contract is reasonably secure, but if West has it, the slam is in jeopardy because declarer could lose two heart tricks. The location of the king of hearts is, of course, simply a matter of luck.

The element of skill now enters the picture. No declarer worth his salt is willing to settle for defeat merely because a card is badly located, Some effort must be made to overcome the unfavorable lie, if it

Declarer should start by assuming that West has the king, because there is no problem if East has it. the presumed bad luck. The remedy in this hand is an elimination play which, if trumps break satisfactorily, is certain to nullify the luck

After winning the queen of spades with the king, declarer cashes the K-Q of trumps, both opponents following suit. A low diamond to the king is followed by another to the ace and a diamond is trumped. South then plays the spade ace and trumps

With diamonds and spades having been cleared from both hands,

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Sept. 1, the 244th day of 1994. There are 121 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history; On Sept. 1, 1939, World War II began as Nazi Germany invaded Poland. Great Britain and France declared war against Germany two days later. On this date:

In 1807, former Vice President Aaron Burr was found innocent of treason.

In 1878, Emma M. Nutt became the first female telephone operator in the United States, for the Telephone Despatch Company of Boston. In 1894, 100 years ago, a raging forest fire destroyed Hinckley, Minn., and about a dozen other towns, killing more than 400 people. In 1905, Alberta and Saskatchewan entered Confederation as the eighth and ninth provinces of Canada.

In 1923, the Japanese cities of Tokyo and Yokohama were devastated by an earthquake that claimed some 150,000 lives.

In 1932, New York City Mayor James J. "Gentleman Jimmy" Walker resigned following charges of graft and corruption in his administration.

In 1942, a federal judge in Sacramento, Calif., upheld the wartime detention of Japanese-Americans as well as Japanese nationals, striking down a challenge brought by the American Civil Liberties Union. In 1945, Americans received word of Japan's formal surrender, ending World War II. Because of the time difference, it was Sept. 2 in Tokyo Bay, where the ceremony had taken place. In 1951, the United States, Australia and New Zealand signed a mutual defense pact, the ANZUS treaty. Ten years ago: The astronauts aboard the shuttle Discovery launched their third commercial satellite in three days, sending Telstar

Three into space. Five years ago: Baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti died of a heart attack at his summer home in Martha's Vineyard, Mass., at age

One year ago: The Pentagon unveiled a five-year defense plan to further shrink the U.S. military in favor of a lean, high-tech force. Louis Freeh was sworn in as director of the FBI.

Today's birthdays: Former Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird is 72. Actress Yvonne De Carlo is 70. Texas Gov. Ann Richards is 61. Conductor Seiji Ozawa is 59. Comedian-actress Lily Tomlin is 55. Singer Barry Gibb is 48. Singer Gloria Estefan is 37. White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers is 33.

Thought for today: "There are no warlike peoples — just warlike leaders." — Ralph J. Bunche, American diplomat (1904-1971).

LOOKING BACK

Ten years ago The New Concord Post Office has been relocated to the new quarters after the May 17th fire destroyed the office and New Concord Grocery, housed in the same building. The new post office is now in the former Spiceland Grocery building, owned by Gene Lovins, directly across the street from the former location.

Ann Carr of Early Childhood Development Center at Murray State University spoke at a meeting of Sigma Department of Murray Woman's Club.

Pictured is the 1974 graduating class of Calloway County High School at its 10-year reunion at Executive Inn, Paducah.

Births reported include a girl to Mr. and Mrs. Crandall Woodson, Aug. 22; a girl to Mr. and Mrs. Allen Cunningham, Aug. 24.

Twenty years ago

A record 27 ladies will participate this year in the Red Cross Volunteer Program at Murray-Calloway County Hospital, according to Jean Blankenship, executive secretary of Calloway County Chapter of American Red Cross, and Kathryn Glover, chairman of volunteers.

Serving as officers of Calloway County High School Chapter of Future Business Leaders of America are Russell Hopkins, Stanley Anderson, Glenda Roberts, Mary Beth Cavanaugh, Patsy Kirks, Patricia Barnett, Martha Outland, Shelia Downs and Paula Williams.

Jan Cooper and Ronald D. Taylor were married Aug. 18 at South Pleasant Grove United Methodist Church.

Thirty years ago

Douglas Shoemaker, Calloway County Court Clerk, said he will would keep his office open until 8 p.m. on Sept. 4 and 5 for the convenience of those persons who wish to register in order to be able to vote in the November General Election. The last day to register is Sept. 5.

Mr. and Mrs. Floy Jewel have been visiting their son, Stanley Jewel who is a midshipman at United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. E.L. (Ezra) Barnett will be married for 50 years and Mrs. Lonnie Brittain. Emmett Erwin was honored on his 82nd birthday with a family dinner at Murray City Park.

Sept. 6. Recent births reported at Murray Hospital include a girl to Mr.

Forty years ago Murray Training School will open for classes for Grades 1 through 12 on Sept. 8, according to Esco Gunter, school director. Murray City Schools will open for classes on Sept. 7, according to W.Z. Carter, superintendent of schools.

Dr. Walter Blackburn, head of Physical Science Department of Murray State College, spoke at a meeting of Murray Lions Club. He discussed the chemical and industrial development of Calvert

Ruth Ray Rowland and Rudy Roberts Holland were married Aug. 25 at First Methodist Church Chapel.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Adkinson and children of Charlotte, N.C., have been the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawton Alexander.

DEAR ABBY

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters from the early 1970s.)

DEAR ABBY: I am 39 and Edwin is 40. We've been married for 19 years, and I'm not saying our marriage has been a bed of roses, but then, whose has?

About a year ago, Edwin tried to run me down with his car, but I was too quick for him. Of course he denied it - said the brakes didn't hold, but he was lying.

A few months ago Edwin was on the roof fixing a leak, and I was down below turning on the garden hose when he tried to drop a heavy metal toolbox on my head. It missed me by a hair

I just don't know what he will pull next, Abby. I have heard rumors about him and a neighbor lady whose husband is gone for months at a time working on a ship. If Edwin wants to be rid of me why doesn't he say so? If I didn't have nine kids. I would leave him tomorrow. SUSPICIOUS

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: If you suspect Edwin is trying to get rid of you, beat him to the punch and get rid of him. If you can't afford a lawyer, see your local legal aid society. Better to be suspicious and alive, than the dead "victim" of an "accident." (P.S. If he asks you to go hunting, fishing, boating or mountain climbing with him, don't go.)

DEAR ABBY: Will you please settle an argument between my husband and me

We were invited to dinner at the nome of some new friends, and after dinner it was suggested that we play cards, which we did. After the game started, our hostess brought a book to the table and proceeded to read while playing cards. Most of the time she was so absorbed in the book she nearly forgot about the card game.

After we got home, my husband said she was the rudest woman he ever met — that she might just as well have told us to go home early the way she read that book in our faces all evening. He also said if they ever invite us back, he will refuse to go.

Abby, I agree she wasn't very polite, but I can understand how she could have started a book and become so fascinated with it she could hardly wait to get back to it, so I don't hold it against her.

Do you agree with my husband that we shouldn't go back there again? I really like this woman. OUTPLAYED IN DETROIT

DEAR OUTPLAYED: If you like her, see her on your own time. I agree with your husband.

DEAR ABBY: Have you ever picked up a women's magazine in the beauty parlor and started to read something very interesting, only to find that some stinker has torn a recipe out and left a big hole in the page? This infuriates me. Why are some people so selfish and inconsiderate? Please put this in your column. Some women need to learn that this little stunt is dishonest and irritating.

DEAR IRRITATED: I have been there, and I agree, it is irritating. Ladies and gentlemen, are you listening?

DR. GOTT

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My nephew has been diagnosed with porphyria. What

DEAR READER: Porphyria is an inherited defect in certain of the body's enzymes, causing either extreme sensitivity to light or nerve damage.

In the first instance, sun-damaged skin is paramount, whereas in the second, more serious symptoms appear. These include periodic attacks of abdominal pain, disordered digestion, paralysis, hypertension, respiratory failure, and others.

In most cases, porphyria is diagnosed by a special analysis of the urine; blood testing may be necessary.

The treatment includes avoidance of alcohol and other drugs that may worsen symptoms, prompt therapy for infections, transfusions, surgery to remove the spleen, and other techniques.

Although patients with this disorder cannot be cured, much can be done to prevent attacks and relieve symptoms. Patients with porphyria should be under the care of gastroenterologists or hematologists. DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been suffering from hypo-manic episodes for the past 15 years. Can you suggest something that will make the affliction more bearable?

DEAR READER: "Hypo-mania" is a psychiatric term indicating that you have recurring episodes of inappropriate elation and high energy that may cause people around you to say that you are "wired." Hypo-mania is not as serious as full-blown manic-depression, which causes marked excitability and agitation and is associated with rebound periods of numbing depression and helplessness.

Like its more serious cousin, hypomania is often successfully treated with lithium, a prescription drug that, in my opinion, should be administered by a psychiatrist. Therefore, if your hypo-manic episodes disrupt your normal life and cause you distress, you should be examined by a psychiatrist, who may choose to prescribe lithium

Disco shuts down

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese disco that set off a craze for dirty dancing closed its doors Wednesday, less than a year after authorities stripped it of its claim to

Three years ago, Juliana's disco began admitting sexily clad women for free, and gave them an elevated stage to dance on.

Soon, hundreds of young Japanese women with boring, dead-end office jobs were spending their nights gyrating in Gstrings and miniskirts — before a crowd of men who paid a $55 cover charge to take it all in.

Last November, though, police, pressured the disco to ban the Gstrings and stage dancing. They claimed some women were using the fire escape to change from street clothes into their skimpy

The club's owners, Juliana Tokyo Ltd., spent $500,000 remodeling to attract a different type of crowd, one used to the more common, staid nightclubs where hostesses and karaoke sing-alongs are the norm.

It didn't work. Attendance dropped to 250 a night and the owners announced plans to close.

In its final week, the disco offered free admission and put on a male striptease show. On Tuesday night, more than 6,000 people showed up.

In Juliana's heyday, up to 3,000 people a night would pack the club, many of them middleaged men, according to Shinji Koyama, a spokesman for the disco. The dirty-dancing trend helped popularize terms like "Tbakku," describing the view of a G-string from behind, and "bodikon," denoting skintight sheath dresses.

The Juliana's craze also set off debate over whether the young women were allowing themselves to be used as sex objects — or exercising a rare bit of power over men in male-dominated

"I was on the stage once and I noticed this guy down there who looked like my boss, but his expression was just like a little boy," Reiko Omori shouted over the blaring house music Tuesday night. "That was fun."

Others said the trend served to underscore the limited options available to young women in

"They're basically weak people, and feel they have nothing better than flesh to offer the world," said Hiroyoshi Ishikawa, a professor of social psychology at Seicho University. At Juliana's, men mourned the end of an era as they got a final

"They're great to watch," said disco-goer Ken Higa.

Employees get back pay

MADISONVILLE, Ky. (AP) - Employees at Lockheed Support Systems Inc. in Madisonville will receive more than $270,000 in back pay, plant officials said.

The money comes from a $2.20-per-hour raise for workers in the Madisonville plant and some former employees, including part-time summer help, plant manager Jim Mitchell said

The raise is retroactive to May

Lockheed employees at other remote mail barcoding sites have already received their promised raises, which came following arbitration between the U.S. Postal Service and postal workers

The postal service will take control of the Lockheed barcoding operation in Madisonville in

The Madisonville raises were held up because the contract cycle' began June 4 instead of May 29, as it did at other sites, Mitchell said. He said some employees will be entitled to about $1,000 before tax deductions.

'Lockheed has about 110 fulltime and about 180 part-time employees on its hourly payroll.
