Grand jury makes history with inquiry

By STACEY CROOK
Staff Writer

A group of randomly selected residents have come together to make history in Calloway County.

A grand jury plans to investigate local crime and the state of the city and county's law enforcement agencies following a report from its predecessor.

Commonwealth's Attorney Mike Ward said that the grand jury is "just starting to scratch the surface" of local problems.

A special grand jury issued a report to the Ledger Friday morning which said: "We feel that the sheriff's department and the Murray Police Department are doing an excellent job with the resources and funding they have. But we are concerned the departments are underfunded, and will soon face officer retention problems, as well as equipment inadequacies."

Murray Police Department has already lost one officer, a five-year veteran with a college degree who left MPD and joined the forces of the Benton Police Department, which offers a higher salary.

Ward said this is the first time in his 14 years as a prosecutor that a grand jury has undertaken the task of investigating local affairs.

In fact, Ward said the event is even more noteworthy because the special grand jury (which was the regular grand jury seated in October) and the new grand jury (which was seated this month) joined together to discuss the problems of law enforcement, crime and funding dilemmas.

Ward said the grand juries have almost "unlimited" powers, especially in the realm of issuing subpoenas.

Douglas Tucker, foreman of the special grand jury, said members are concerned about the lack of an adequate jail and the crowded conditions, the lack of a juvenile detention facility, the salaries of police officers and deputies.

"We began to feel like something was radically wrong," Tucker said. "There is a law and order issue or problem in Calloway County."

Tucker said members of the special grand jury began discussing whether it should investigate local problems based on their own personal knowledge of issues, as well as the things they saw and heard during their terms of jury service.

Therefore, the group asked Circuit Judge David Buckingham to appoint them as a special grand jury so members could continue their work.

Then the special grand jury asked Murray Police Chief Larry Elkins and Sheriff Stan Scott to explain what problems may exist within their respective departments and how each agency operates.

"We learned that the county deputies have no medical insurance coverage and are required to buy their own patrol cars, their own weapons and even their own ammunition," the report said.

It added that the base deputy salary of $16,100 per year is "inadequate to attract, and more importantly, to retain professional personnel."

Furthermore, the special grand jury supports funding for two more full-time deputies in an effort to alleviate personnel constraints within the department.

The report stressed that "Calloway County deserves better" in the area of law enforcement.

Currently, the sheriff's department is financially unable to provide 24-hour patrol and the number of deputies, which includes three full-time and four part-time, is the same as it was 11 years ago.

The report also noted that while the Murray Police Department has a large staff, the beginning salary of an officer is $14,300.

The city, which has a 24-hour

Jones says regionalism took back seat

By CHARLES WOLFE
Associated Press Writer

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Gov. Brereton Jones said the General Assembly rose above "regionalism" in a special session that ended Friday.

The session's nine working days produced bills for tax cuts, construction projects and legal help for some county officials. Jones signed them Friday in a ceremony in the Capitol Rotunda.

Most attention was given to the projects — a state history museum in Frankfort, a new convention center in Covington and expansion of Commonwealth Convention Center in Louisville.

Chief beneficiaries were cities of the state's "golden triangle" — the Lexington area, Louisville and northern Kentucky. Legislators from eastern and western Kentucky complained they were slighted, but the projects never were in real jeopardy.

"We have taken a major step away from regionalism," Jones said. "When we help one part of Kentucky, we help all of Kentucky."

Jones proposed paying the state's share of the projects with $67.5 million in bonds. The Senate, however, attached an amendment to require cash payment of the history center's portion — $17.5 million.

The House, where the bill originated, refused to go along. The Senate backed down Friday morning, withdrawing the amendment and passing the bill to avoid having House and Senate conferees negotiate a compromise.

The Senate also went along with the House's amendment to a bill designed to give the University of Louisville a site for a football stadium. The bill mainly provides for an exchange of state land in eastern Jefferson County and $3.5 million in cash for a tract near the university campus owned by CSX Transportation.

In a complicated arrangement, the cash for CSX is to come through the university, but it is to be paid by the Kentucky Kingdom amusement park, which would benefit from the new stadium's parking area. The House amendment would require Kentucky Kingdom to post a performance bond or otherwise guarantee the money to protect the university.

Meanwhile, the House went along with Senate amendments to FAREWELL TO THE CHIEF: Larry Elkins shows off a replica of "Booger" during Friday's retirement dinner that was given to him by his high school principal. About 140 attended the event to honor the 22-year veteran of the Murray Police Department who had been chief since 1989. Elkins, whose last day will be Tuesday, announced plans for retirement in December. No announcement has been made regarding his replacement.

Candidates support balanced budget idea

By STEVE ROBRAHN
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Four gubernatorial candidates pledged to back Kentucky's ratification of a federal balanced budget amendment during a forum as each laid out their themes for the primary campaign.

But the candidates, Republican Larry Forgy and Democrats Paul Patton, Bob Babbage and Gatewood Galbraith, had little to say about the amendment's impact on Kentucky — which receives about $3.5 billion in federal funds each year.

"I'm not saying it won't be painless," Patton told the forum Friday at the Kentucky Press Association's winter convention.

"But I don't understand deficit spending — never have."

If the amendment requiring a balanced federal budget in 2002 clears the U.S. Senate, it likely would come before the Kentucky General Assembly as ratification is sought from three-fourths of the state legislatures before becoming part of the U.S. Constitution.

In opening statements to the statewide newspaper group, the candidates gave a preview of how they may sell themselves to voters during the campaign for the May 23 primary election.

Patton, now the lieutenant governor, painted himself as the only patrol, maintains a minimum of three officers per shift.

According to the report, Murray police opened between 1,500 and 2,000 criminal cases and investigated an equal number of traffic accidents.

Another concern of the special grand jury, according to Tucker, is the increasing amount of drug activity in Murray and Calloway County.

"I'll use Paducah as an example," he said, referring to a massive drug bust in McCracken County this week in which officers served about 100 warrants related to drug activity.

"But it can't be just Paducah," Tucker said of the drug problem. "It has to be located in Murray and Mayfield and other cities."

"There is no effective department within the sheriff's office to combat drugs," Ward said. "And Murray just has two officers."

Linda Graves, a member of the special grand jury, said she lives in the North Douglass community — an area she said is infested with drug dealers and users.

"I've lived there 26 years, and it has really gone down because of the drugs," she said. "Kids are coming in there and making a fortune. These kids are 12 and 13 years old."

Ward said he thinks many residents would be willing to pay higher taxes if they knew the money was going toward the fight against crime.

"But we don't know where it will go," said one new grand jury member.

Van Russell, foreman of the new grand jury, said he thinks some money that is currently in city and county coffers could be rechanneled.

"The central focus is credibility and accountability," Tucker said.

Russell said the new grand jury will begin its focus on those issues as it begins its investigation.

"We can stop this problem if we start now," another new grand juror said.

When asked how important the issue of crime and law enforcement support is to the members of the special grand jury, one member said: "We're back. That's how important we think it is."

Russell said he has even been out on patrol with a county deputy. "You wouldn't believe the things that happen out there," he said.

But the special grand jury believes Russell.

In the report, members said: "During our tenure, we have learned of criminal activity within the county that surprised us. We realize that the sale and use of drugs is not limited to metropolitan areas, but affects us, our children and our community."

"We urge all agencies, elected officials, the city council and the fiscal court to work together, and with our law enforcement agencies for the betterment of Calloway County."

Russell said the new grand jury will continue to meet and make reports on a regular basis.

bill that phase in a limited repeal of the state taxes on inheritances and pensions.

Jones wanted both taxes repealed entirely. Instead, "lineal descendants" — grandparents, parents, children and grandchildren — would be exempt from inheritance taxes after four years.

Public employees, whose pensions now are tax-exempt, would have to pay tax on pension income greater than $35,000 and earned after Jan. 1, 1998. An exemption for private pensions would be phased in, reaching $35,000 in four years.

The inheritance-tax bill nearly ran aground in the House. A Senate amendment to have the bill cover half-brothers and half-sisters was rejected in the House on a 48-48 tie vote.

House Democratic leaders had to maneuver to get the vote rescinded, then try again. The roll call was stuck again on 48-48 when Majority Leader Greg Stumbo of Prestonsburg warned that refusing to concur with the Senate would kill the bill. The roll call suddenly went to 51-47, and the amendment was secured.

The Senate went along with two House amendments to a bill that would repeal a forfeiture-of-office penalty under an obscure law that requires some elected county officials to post performance bonds before taking office.

The law was used to force the removal of a judge-executive in Breathitt County and a clerk in Powell County.

One amendment would let an officer who was ousted before the change petition a circuit court for the right to run again. The former officeholder would not be reinstated, however. The other amendment would set a $1,000 fine — not forfeiture of office — for future violations.

Female athletes to be recognized

Olympic volleyball great Flo Hyman was a leader among athletes who worked for equality for women's sports. When she died suddenly while playing in Japan on Jan. 24, 1986, the world lost a tremendous athlete who was committed to excellence on and off the court. Her spirit is commemorated each year on National Girls and Women in Sports Day.

The Women's Sports Foundation organized the first National Girls and Women in Sports Day to remember and honor Hyman. Representative Olympia Snowe (R-ME) and Senator Robert Packwood (R-OR) introduced the commemorative bills declaring Feb. 4, 1987 as the first National Women in Sport Day. ("Girls" was added to the title of the day in 1988.) The date chosen was the first open day on the legislative calendar after the anniversary of Hyman's death.

Since the first year, four major organizations have joined together to coordinate the day nationally. They are Girls Incorporated, the National Association for Girls and Women in Sport (NAGWS), the Women's Sports Foundation and the YWCA of the U.S.A. In 1994, these organizations were joined by the Girl Scouts of the U.S.A.

Each year a ceremony is held on Capitol Hill marking the day. Senators Ted Stevens, Ted Kennedy and Bill Bradley attend each year, as do many other members of Congress. The event provides an opportunity to raise major issues for women in sport with our country's leaders. Similar efforts take place at state and local levels.

At the ceremony, the winner of the Women's Sports Foundation Flo Hyman Memorial Award, given to an athlete who captures Flo Hyman's "dignity, spirit and commitment to excellence" is announced. This award has been presented by the President or First Lady at the White House every year. The first winner was tennis star Martina Navratilova. Other winners have been track stars Jackie Joyner-Kersey in 1988 and Evelyn Ashford in 1989, tennis legend Chris Evert in 1990, world disabled ski champion Diana Golden in 1991, golf champion Nancy Lopez in 1992, basketball star Lynette Woodard in 1993 and Hall of Fame golfer Patty Sheehan in 1994.

The day is a nationwide event with celebrations in all 50 states. NAGWS coordinates community based events, which honor the achievements of girls and women in sports.

Several states now have annual statewide awards dinners or luncheons that recognize their athletes, coaches and contributors to women's sports. YWCA Centers, Girl Scouts Councils, Girls Incorporated Centers and other youth-serving groups often provide special girls' sports programming around the day. Schools have classroom activities and honor their female athletes.

Last year, National Girls and Women in Sports Day was held on Feb. 3. The 1995 day will take place on Feb. 2. The day traditionally takes place on the first Thursday in February.

Howard Coy, owner of Murray Appliance in Murray for 23 years, was given the GE Distinguished Dealer Award for 1994 for his dedicated service and a great year. It was presented to him by Bobby Darden, GE area sales manager from Nashville and the Atlanta southeast region, and Harry Buntyn, Atlanta region manager. Coy would like to thank GE, Calloway County and surrounding counties for a great year. He is looking forward to serving them in the future.

Sale of fragrance successful

Avon's first global fragrance, Far Away, launched only 10 weeks ago, has netted sales of $30 million to date, the company recently announced.

"A typical retail fragrance launch might net $15 to $20 million in an entire year," said Andrea Jung, president of Avon's product marketing group. "Far Away has already generated exceptional sales in just 10 weeks. Given this early success, we expect that within a year, Far Away will become one of the top, if not the top, fragrance in the world."

According to the company, the success of Far Away can be attributed to a global marketing strategy and a contemporary fragrance positioning that taps into the needs of women around the world. The scent -- a complex floral oriental -- capitalizes on some of the hottest fragrance trends.

Far Away was launched simultaneously in September in 10 markets, including parts of Europe and South America and throughout Canada and the United States. By the end of next year, Avon plans to introduce the fragrance in approximately 100 markets.

Avon is the world's leading direct seller and marketer of beauty and related products with $3.8 billion in annual revenues. Avon markets its products to women in 120 countries through 1.7 million independent representatives. For Avon, call your local Avon representative or 1-800-FOR-AVON.

McNutt receives consecutive honor

Frankie McNutt has been named 1994 Kopperud Realtor of the Year. She is a broker-associate with Kopperud Realty and has received this honor for ten successive years.

During 1994, she closed over $4 million in listing and sales production, making her the first and only realtor in the Murray-Calloway County Board of Realtor history to attain this level in one year and also to attain this level two successive years, 1993 and 1994. She has totaled over $32 million in production during her 13 year career in real estate.

McNutt credits her high level of sales production to a very professional, competent cooperative principal broker, associates and staff, and loyal clients and customers for whom she is very appreciative. Her working philosophy is that to be truly successful, you must constantly strive to surpass yourself, not the competition.

"Frankie has attained some truly outstanding accomplishments during 1994, and also for her entire real estate career," stated broker Bill Kopperud. "As a repeat $4 million dollar producer in 1994, and a ten time realtor of the year designee, she has reached goals never before attained in our market area. Our entire office staff wishes Frankie a hearty congratulations in recognition of her most recent accomplishment."

McNutt, a former teacher and magna cum laude graduate of Murray State University, also holds the real estate designation of GRI, Graduate Realtor Institute, and CRS, Certified Residential Specialist. Less than three percent of realtors nationwide have earned the CRS designation. She is also a graduate of the 1993-94 class of Leadership Murray.

McNutt is an active member of the Murray Calloway County Board of Realtors and the First United Methodist Church, where she serves on the board of trustees and the administrative board.

Frankie is the daughter of Leila E. Erwin and the late Stark Erwin and is married to Dan McNutt, co-owner of Purdom, Thurman & McNutt Insurance. They have two sons, Greg, co-owner of Purdom, Thurman & McNutt Insurance, wife, Kathy, daughter, Sarah of Murray, and Brad, who lives in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Frank adds wit, bite to arguments

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's been 40 years since House Democrats have been reduced to backbench sniping at a Republican majority, but they've quickly found a chief sniper who's a master at the fine art of making opponents wince.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., has long been famed for his quick wit and debating skills. So he was a natural when Democrats set out to show that the new Republican agenda should be treated with a good deal of skepticism, and a dash of humor.

"When you are in the majority, sometimes inevitably you've got to defend some dumb things," Frank, a liberal whose views have not always coincided with the Democratic mainstream, told Republicans on the opening day of the new session. "But in one day, you have been dumber than we were in two years."

Frank was the point man for testy Democrats as Republicans kept them on the floor until well past midnight, voting on a host of measures to change the way the House does business.

"You told us you would be family-friendly," Frank said. "You forgot to tell us it would be the Addams Family that would be friendly, because we will be doing it at 3 o'clock in the morning."

Last year's Republican minority also had its floor watchdogs, such as Reps. Bob Walker of Pennsylvania or Dan Burton of Indiana who badgered Democrats with questions and challenges. But Frank has the ability both to irritate and amuse.

"Parliamentary inquiry," Frank called out shortly after midnight during the marathon opening session. "Will the speaker tell me if it is his ruling that it is still Wednesday?"

"I just want to know what day this is. I was told we have to do this on the first day," he said, referring to the Republican promise to pass a host of reforms on the first day.

Even Republicans voiced their admiration. Rep. Matt Salmon, a freshman from Arizona, praised Frank's eloquence: "I am impressed. You are even better in person than you are on C-Span."

Frank, 54, has gained a reputation during his 14 years in Congress as a champion of liberal causes and a supporter of deep defense cuts.

In an interview, Frank said Democratic Whip Dave Bonior of Michigan had asked him and Rep. Robert Wise of West Virginia to be in charge of about a dozen Democrats assigned to keep Republicans on their toes during floor debate.

Their job, he said, will be to point out the "weaknesses, flaws and hypocrisies" of the opposition. It's a task that is less satisfying than writing legislation but also more fun, he said. Humor "both lightens and sharpens" the political battle, he added.

Despite pledges of bipartisan cooperation, new Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., is a "most thoroughly confrontational guy," Frank said, and there are bound to be disputes as the session progresses.

He gave a preview of that when he chided Republicans for their post-midnight vote on a bill forcing members of Congress to abide by the same worker protection laws as other employers, a bill supported by Democrats but blocked by Senate Republicans last year.

Republicans are lucky the bill does not apply to copyright laws, he said, "because if it did, this example of intellectual theft and attempted partisan piracy would be ruled illegal."

FROM OUR READERS

Not in favor of public broadcasting

Dear Editor:

Recently, as the freshman Congressmen have begun debate on the possibility of a Balanced Budget Amendment, we have been hearing cries throughout the public sector supporting the "need" for certain government services.

One cry I've heard is about the Public Broadcasting Service which produces such programs as Sesame Street. I believe it's time to get rid of public broadcasting except in the case of national emergencies, even if it hampers the efforts of our local MSU radio station because:

- (1) We don't have the funds. Is it too much to ask our government to discipline itself the same way we as individuals discipline ourselves?
- (2) Unlike 30 years ago when our populace generally believed in the same basic things (i.e. the earth was created by God a few thousand years ago and homosexuality was wrong), such divergent views are found in our nation today that public expenditures to air one view over another simply forces us to support through taxes oftentimes repulsive ideas.

My family once supported KET financially until we realized that such programs as "Nature" readily accepted and promoted by inference the "theory" of evolution (and it is still just a "theory," even though some might suggest otherwise) while we believed, considering then current scientific evidences, in the biblical account of creation. I simply can't imagine how many people can view without some degree of protest, programs that I understand are aired by KET today promoting the "acceptance" of homosexuality as an alternate lifestyle while knowing that their tax dollars are paying for it. We can live without "public" broadcasting. We'll simply find other ways to get our information. Oh, for the days when we weren't so divergent.

Erasing an old image

PERSPECTIVE ON POLITICS

Jill Lawrence
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — He was Cher's scorned ex, a '60s has-been, a political lightweight. But this week the insider crowd was laughing with Sonny Bono, not at him, and his image may never be the same.

The idea of Bono in Congress has always been strange, and he didn't make it seem any more natural after he won a House seat in November.

"The last thing in the world I thought I would be is a U.S. congressman, given all the bobcat vests and Eskimo boots I used to wear," he said.

Still, when the 104th Congress convened, there he was — such an anomaly that Time magazine began a weekly feature called "Sonny Bono: The First Hundred Days."

His was a pretty humdrum existence until a black-tie Washington dinner on Wednesday night. Bono was the clear standout, convulsing a hard-boiled audience of politicians and journalists with a rambling commentary that captured their workaday world in all of its surrealism.

Only C-Span televised the late-night dinner remarks, and there was a run on the cable network Thursday to view the tape. Bono was showered with congratulations from colleagues on the House floor and in the adjoining Speaker's Lobby.

"I have never laughed so hard," said freshman Rep. Joe Scarborough, R-Fla.

Other reviews were more circumspect. "Interesting commentary on the times we live in," said White House press secretary Mike McCurry. "A sort of performance art," said Rep. Barney

Frank, D-Mass.

A star is born, or in this case, perhaps reborn.

"I'm overwhelmed at the impact it had," Bono said Thursday. "It's definitely the buzz."

Bono, a California Republican, said his one fear had been that "the other side would take it the wrong way." But a prime target of his speech was another Republican, Bob Dornan, who had gotten himself gagged earlier Wednesday for saying something particularly harsh about President Clinton on the House floor.

Bono made numerous cracks about Dornan's lack of focus during a purported conversation the two were having, and his instant "forget it, I'm outta here" reaction when the House parliamentarian ruled he'd been out of line.

"I said, 'Bob, why did you DO that?'" Bono said. "Bob says,

'I'll be on C-Span every hour. Who cares?'"

"So I love this game," Bono continued seamlessly. "I am so pleased that we are all so dedicated to mankind — unlike show business where, there you have egomaniacs and you have power-mongers and you have elitists."

On the morning after, Dornan was nothing if not congenial. He clasped Bono's shoulders, invited him to breakfast and pledged to focus on him like a laser beam in future conversations.

"Bob, you got a minute?" Dornan asked himself, pretending to be Bono.

"Sonny, I got 30," he answered himself and waved to an imaginary secretary. "Cancel everything on my schedule."

"You're a good sport," Bono said.

Among the confidences Bono imparted on Wednesday night: —He really wanted to be a senator because "it appeared like they could tell anyone to go to hell and they would say, 'Yessir. Thank you and God bless you.'"

—He's still trying to determine what Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, meant when he told an audience that "you can't eat corn if you ain't a pig."

—He loves "political lingo" and can't wait to learn it.

Bono, who became a restaurant owner and then Palm Springs mayor en route to Congress, came to town knowing full well he was not perceived as a brilliant player.

"I feel fine about it, answering questions about my ability," he told The Washington Post. "I am a very thick-skinned person."

That image was good, however, for a couple of jokes at the dinner. The organizers, he said, had ordered him to be funny — and it saddened him greatly.

"Evidently none of you know what I've gone through to be serious," he said. "Look back a little bit. Remember the other woman, of course. She wasn't easy to shake when I wanted to pursue this career."

Cher wasn't easy to shake even after he got his career.

"Politicians are one step below used car salesmen," she said after he won. She further predicted Sonny would be "perfectly at home" in his new milieu.

On that second point, she turned out to be right. For better or for worse.

Teaching's loss

SOUTHERN SEEN

Larry McGehee
Syndicated columnist

A year after learning he had incurable pancreatic cancer, Douglas Paschall died. He had just turned 50. It was three days before Christmas.

The only thing that makes sense of Douglas's senseless death is his life. He lived a terrific one, much fuller and richer than most.

The obituaries for him were many and unusually long, and the eulogies at standing-room-only memorial services in Nashville and Sewanee were simple and dignified.

They all paid tribute to the bare facts of his life: rural west Tennessee high school valedictorian, Mid-South spelling bee champion, University of the South honors graduate and football captain, Rhodes Scholar and classmate at Oxford of Bill Clinton, recipient of a Ph.D. in English and of an honorary doctorate from Sewanee, headmaster of Montgomery Bell Academy author, organizer of the Southern Literary Festival, grandson and son and nephew of educators, beloved husband and father.

By all accounts, Douglas was that rarity: a Renaissance man. That he was, indeed — and much more: the personification of the inquisitive and achieving scholar-athlete-gentleman he wanted each MBA student to be.

Yet, if pressed to select one word to describe himself and how he would like to be remembered, he would have quickly chosen "teacher."

We shared a common geography of Henry County, Tenn., origins, and a deep affection for his father. I saw him as a youngster, tagging along with his father to farm field baseball games when his father was still pitching in his forties, and I had two lengthy conversations with him in his adult days, once over dinner and into the evening at his father's house and years afterwards when he brought a van of students to visit our Wofford campus in South Carolina.

There was some correspondence in between talks. He was close enough to call friend and near-kin.

If one thinks back through those conversations and then scans closely his installation and valedictory addresses at MBA, and some interviews in between, the evidence of Douglas's commitment to teaching is overwhelming.

He taught at the college level for 18 years and at the prep school nearly seven; together, half of his life. Even in his final illness, after having given up his headmastership, he continued to teach.

"I can't remember ever seriously thinking of being anything else" than a teacher, he told a Nashville reporter a year ago, when the MBA fine arts center he had built was named in his honor.

"I taught a little bit of everything, a Shakespeare class for majors, critical theory, modern drama, Renaissance poetry. I love being in the classroom."

At a father-son banquet in 1988, Douglas encouraged his MBA students "to begin to think like a teacher."

His own mother had begun teaching at 19, and continued until her death 35 years later.

His father began at age 26, after five years in the armed forces and World War II, and taught for over 30 years.

His father's mother began teaching in a one-room schoolhouse in 1905, at the age of 16. Eight of her 12 children became teachers.

Douglas met his wife at Sewanee Academy, where she taught art.

From that background came "the sense I had from my family that teaching was the most interesting, most challenging, and most noble of all the pursuits open to bright young people," he said.

"My parents and relatives never bothered to debate whether learning or teaching were valuable, but only how they might be done better; and they conveyed to me, from my earliest recollections, the excitement and intrinsic regards of life as a teacher."

His credo was simply stated, but difficult to achieve: "The greatest thing a school can do is to provide students a base of factual knowledge, certain practices, but flexible skills, and above all, the range of specific learning experiences, both within and without the classroom, that will insure their ability to go on learning for the rest of their lives."

And not only to insure this ability in terms of acquired skills and powers, but also to instill in students the habits of curiosity and skepticism, so that they will always be ill-content with the easy answer; and likewise to enforce the childlike instincts of wonder and fascination that will invite them to watch and respond to a world with a special quality of alertness, concentration and finally, love."

At the end, he ran toward teaching, not from it.

"I am exactly where I want to be," he said last summer. "To head off somewhere would be a punishment. I would rather go to English class every morning. If you're doing what you love, you're situated where you belong."

At the Commercial Bank over in Henry County, the soil from which this Antaeus sprang, a Douglas Duane Paschall Scholarship receiving fund has been set up for the local high school. Graduates going on to study English as Douglas did will be competing for scholarships bearing his name and legacy. He'll be a hard act to follow.

Shakespeare, whom Douglas relished and knew by heart, wrote, in "Romeo and Juliet":

"When he shall die,
"Take him and cut him out in little stars,
"And he will make the face of heaven so fine
"That all the world will be in love with night,
"And pay no worship to the garish sun."

Henry County High School students reaching for the stars will find one brightly twinkling out there, beckoning them on in joyful welcome to the universe. With that honing beacon and a little luck, maybe — just maybe — the best will take up teaching, too.

Angry champs wait for Wildcats

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said Friday he had not seen Kentucky play and would not watch film of the fifth-ranked Wildcats.

"I don't want to see them," he said. "I know what they are doing. They are a good team. They shoot 3s and are a good defensive team."

The ninth-ranked Razorbacks, the defending national champions, face Kentucky on Sunday.

Arkansas has lost two of its last four, including 88-70 to Alabama on Tuesday night. Alabama made 33-of-62; Arkansas hit 25-of-70. That was the Razorbacks' first loss at their home Walton Arena since last season.

"There are better days ahead," Richardson said. "They didn't come back with the intensity or the right frame of mind to defend anything."

He said the Razorbacks were injury-free last year and that has been different this year. "It's a mental game for us," he said. "We are trying to correct it."

"We are not the aggressive team that we were a year ago," he said. "When you start out with (Corey) Beck and (Clint) McDaniel with two or three fouls in the first half, you've got problems."

His players are gun shy, Richardson said.

"You get soft. That's not my style. We work hard and I expect them to play hard. We want to, we just can't. We are trying to get back to that. Whether you foul out or not, just do it," he said.

He said he told his team that the season is not over.

"We don't care about the conference," he said. "We have enough conference and division titles already. Let someone else win that. We are concerned about what we do in the NCAA tournament."

"Let's get to where when March rolls around, we are ready to play basketball. We are 15-4 and we have just piddled around. Most teams can't piddle around and go 15-4."

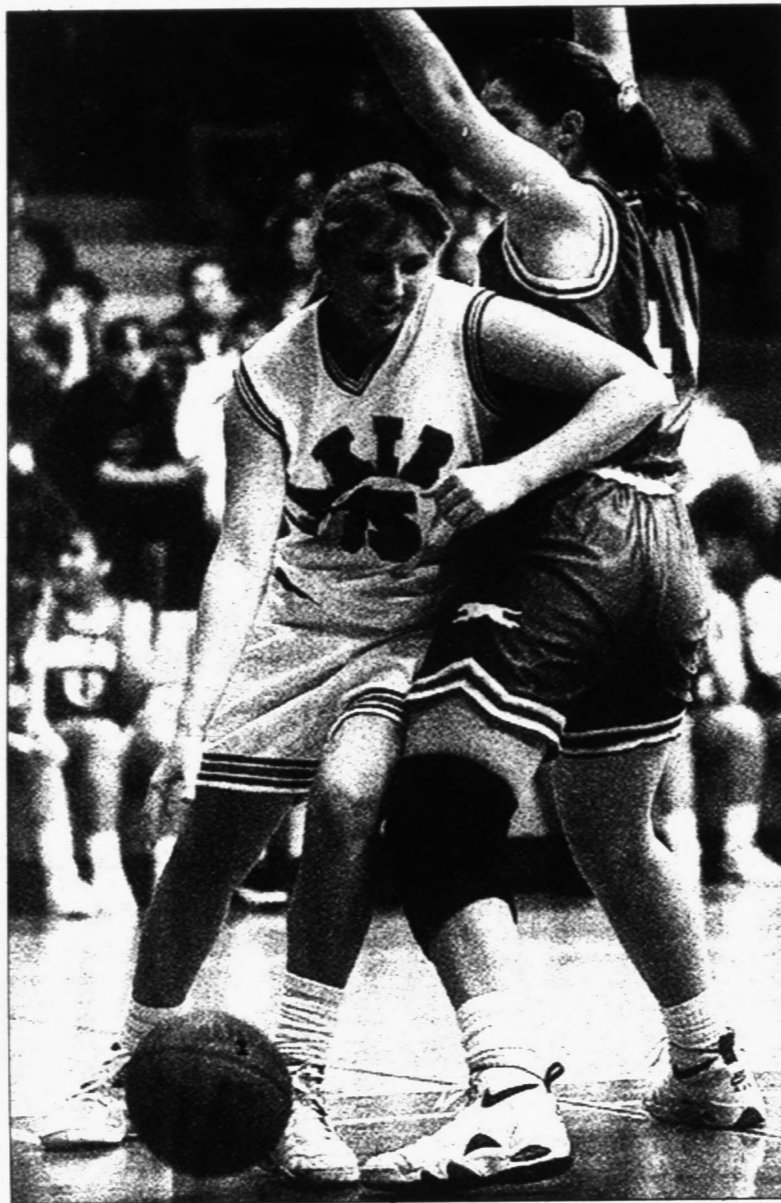

Arkansas is 4-3 in the Western Division of the Southeastern Conference. Kentucky (13-2) is 7-0 in the Eastern Division.

Richardson said the Razorbacks are on the verge of being a good team.

"When we get the minds of our young individuals on the same page and our bodies back in tune to doing the things we want to do, we will become a better basketball team," he said.

Holland drops bomb on Reidland

Laker guard sets 3-point mark

Stephanie Holland missed her first three-point shot Friday night, but not much else.

After misfiring on her first long-range attempt against Reidland at home, the Calloway junior went on to hit a school-record nine threes, leading the Lady Lakers to an 86-66 homecoming victory, their fifth in six games, lifting their record to 8-7.

Following the early miss, Holland drilled three straight treys as Calloway opened a 9-2 lead and never trailed.

Holland made a total of four triples in the first quarter, one in both the second and third periods and finished off the night with three more in the fourth, breaking the record on a shot that hit the rim, bounced up and fell in with under 10 seconds remaining.

"I didn't know how many (threes) I had; coach didn't tell me, I guess he thought it would make me nervous," said Holland, who bested the previous record of eight threes, set last year by Vanessa Bucy. "Coach O'Rourke just told me to keep shooting."

"Stephanie can hit the threes when she wants to," Calloway coach Peter O'Rourke said. "We want her to shoot the ball, but we really want her to play defense."

Holland was a part of an offensive clinic put on by the Lady Lakers. Linda Stubblefield had 18 points on the night while Molly Wisehart and Kylie Johnson both had nine. The Lady Lakers were

And then there was Farrah Beach.

Beach, after being crowned homecoming queen earlier in the evening, proved that there's more to her than her dress and high heels might have shown. After changing into her white leather high-tops, Beach came out and recorded a triple-double, netting 15 points, handing out 19 assists and grabbing 10 rebounds, along with four steals.

"Farrah did an excellent job of running the show," O'Rourke said.

Calloway owned a 43-18 edge on the boards, but O'Rourke was less than happy about the 66 points the Lady Lakers surrendered Friday, especially since powerful Marshall County visits Jeffrey Gymnasium Tuesday.

"We knew that Reidland couldn't handle pressure, but they handled ours like it didn't exist," O'Rourke said. "Our press wasn't there tonight. We forced them into 11 turnovers but we had 18, so I call that reverse psychology, because we wanted them to turn it over but we did instead."

"We've got to score a lot of points because we don't play defense," he said. "We don't work hard on defense, but as soon as we learn to play defense, we'll be in good shape. It's a little late in the season to look for the ability to play defense, though."

Calloway's offense clicked from the start as the Lady Lakers raced to a 24-13 edge after one quarter, and extended the margin to 44-31 by halftime.

Each team then scored 20 points in the third frame, capped off by a half-court bomb by Reidland's Brittany Bishop at the buzzer, making the score 64-51.

After Reidland made it 64-53 early in the fourth, Calloway put the game away with eight straight points, the last six by Stubblefield, to make it 72-53.

That's when Holland started to heat up again, canning her seventh and eighth threes in the next few minutes to tie the record.

At that point, Holland's teammates looked for her every trip down the floor, but the slender junior's shots were missing the mark, and it looked as if Holland would have to settle for a tie with Bucy for the record.

But with time running down, Holland took the ball at the right wing and fired one last three. The ball hit the rim, bounced straight up and fell cleanly through the net to establish the record.

Los Angeles Raiders owner Al Davis says, "Just win baby." Al Davis has never coached high school basketball.

After consecutive three- and two-point wins since losing to Murray High in overtime on Jan. 13, Calloway County finally got more than just a win.

Tyler Bohannon put up a double-double as the Lakers dispatched Reidland 89-43 in Friday's annual Homecoming game in Jeffrey Gymnasium.

A blowout was just what the guy in the red sweater needed.

"I can't remember the last time we won by a good margin," said a relieved Laker coach Ron Greene. "I don't know if the team needed it but I needed it. Those one-, two- and three-point games take it out of you."

Friday's game was only a two- or three-point game for five minutes.

Tied at 8-8, Calloway got consecutive baskets from Bohannon to push the lead to 12-8 with 2:00 to play in the first quarter. Calloway took control in the second quarter with a 12-2 run and finished the job in an all-Laker second half.

"All in all, it was good to see,"

Greene said of the blowout. "Plus, it rewards the guys that practice everyday but don't get a lot of minutes in the games."

Ten Lakers scored in Friday's game, led by Bohannon's 21 points. The 6-3 senior center also pulled down a game-high 12 rebounds.

"Tyler had a good week of practice and he played like he'd been practicing," Greene said. "I think that was his best game of the year, not because of the points, but because of his aggressiveness on the boards."

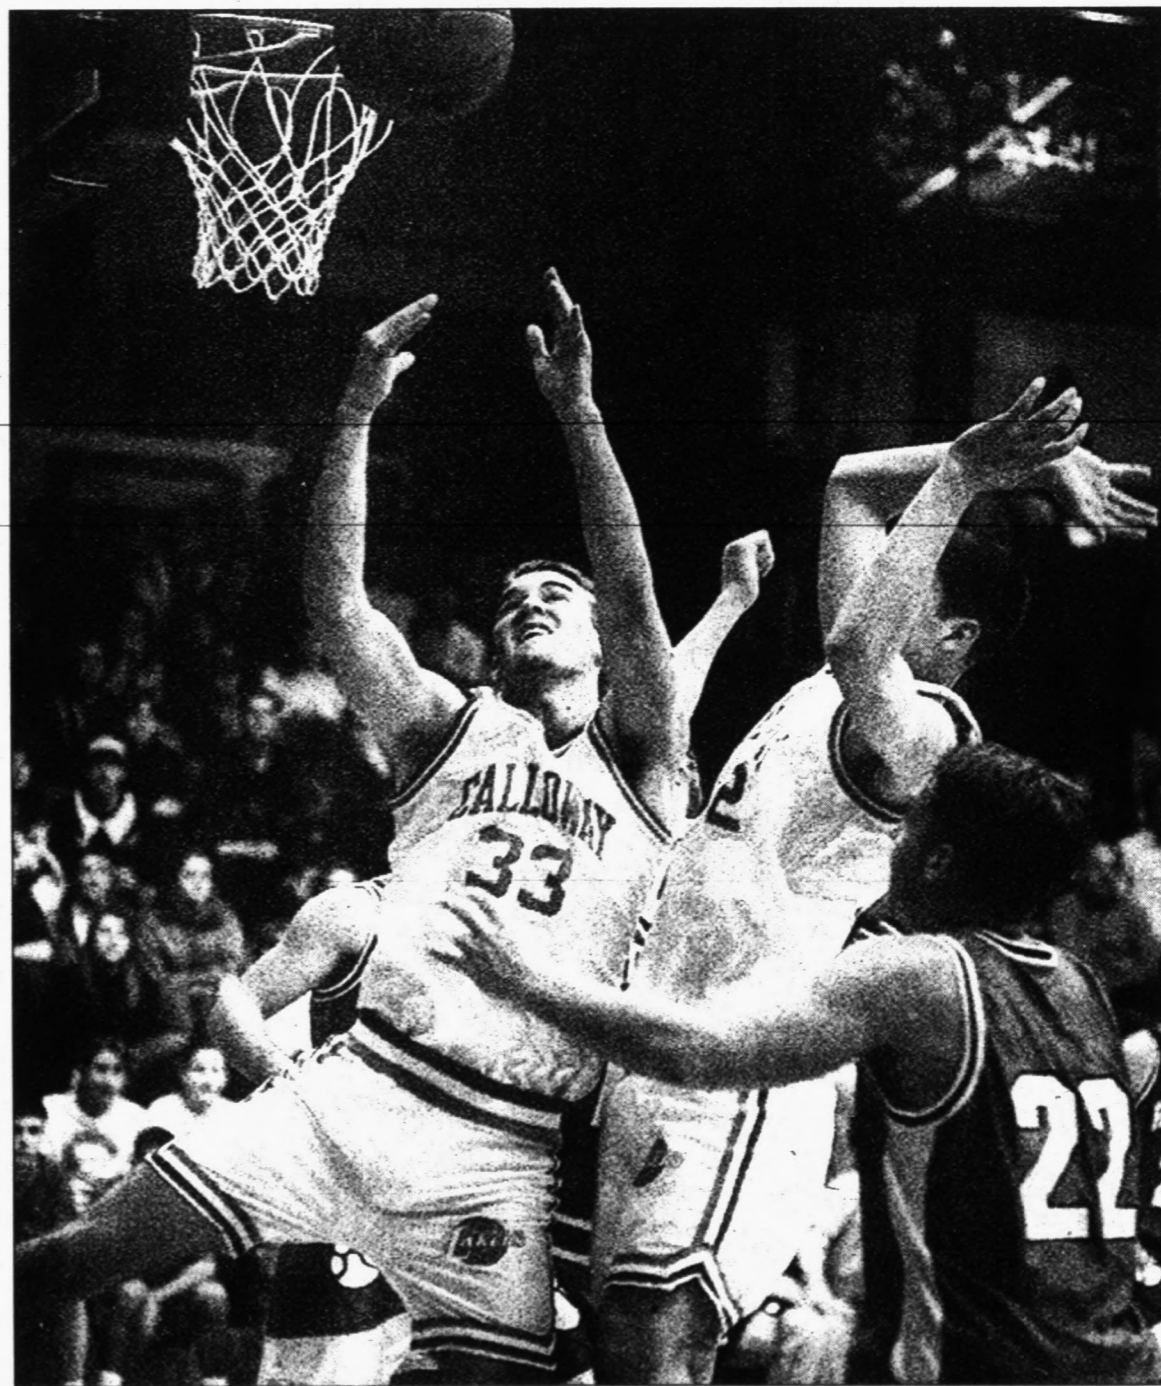

Bohannon, who averages 7.2 points per game in the Lakers' perimeter-dominated offense, capitalized on Reidland's small frontline.

"We did get the points inside, which is a plus," Greene noted, "and we had a size advantage, which is rare."

Calloway moved to 13-4 with the win while the young Greyhounds dropped to 2-14.

"I knew coming down it was my last chance," Holland said of the final shot. "I'm really excited about this, and now I guess I'll try to get 10."

Calloway was 31 of 68 from the field and 13 of 22 at the free throw line to go along with its 50 percent showing from beyond the three-point arc.

Joni Hyde led Reidland with 16 points while Bishop added 14, Lorelei Clabaugh had 11 and Cathi Spear scored 10. The Lady Greyhounds were 24 of 62 from the field, four of 12 from three-point range and 14 of 21 at the free throw stripe.

"Defense breeds offense, and I was disappointed with our press tonight because Reidland was getting the ball in bounds before we were even set," O'Rourke said. "But the girls had a good time and I was proud of the way we played."

"Calloway took a 49-45 overtime win in the junior varsity game. Cassie Maness led the Lady Lakers with 20 points while Patricia Greer added 15.

three practices this week with mono-like symptoms. Greene said, had 17 points. David Greene finished with 13.

Senior point guard Thomas Hornbuckle had 12 points, eight assists and seven steals in what has become a usual line for the four-year starter.

"Everybody played good tonight," said Hornbuckle. "All cylinders were working perfectly."

Coming into the game with a 46-43 win over Mayfield and a 43-41 win over Carlisle County in the books from the last two outings, the Lakers were ready to get back to the high-scoring attack which led to so much success earlier in the year.

"We all wanted to blow them out," said Hornbuckle, whom Greene calls the team's most consistent performer in recent weeks. "We deserved one."

Calloway shot 50 percent (37-of-74) from the field, including 8-for-24 from three-point, but struggled again from the free throw line (7-of-18).

Defensively, Calloway harassed and assaulted Reidland all evening. Using a variety of looks, Calloway forced Reidland into 20 turnovers while grabbing 13 steals and limited the 'Hounds to just 37 shots.

"Our defense has been good to us all year, until we find our shooting rhythm," said Greene, whose Lakers are limiting opponents to 45 percent shooting on the season.

Calloway's defense had to step early in Friday's game, as the Lakers went through an 0-for-7 skid and allowed Reidland to tie the game at 8-8 in the first.

Calloway took the lead for good on Bohannon's basket and led 20-13 after one quarter on a Cleaver 3-pointer with time running down.

Calloway pushed the lead to 32-15 four minutes into the second half. In all, Calloway outscored Reidland 19-7 to take a 39-20 lead into halftime.

Calloway claimed a 66-34 lead going into the fourth quarter, which was dominated by reserves. Adam Seiber led Calloway's bench brigade with eight points.

Calloway will look for its first Fourth District win of the season on Tuesday night when they host Marshall County in a boys'/girls' doubleheader.

"We get to enjoy this Saturday and get back to work on Sunday and get ready for Marshall," said Greene, who'll take any kind of win against the Marshals.

Conditions are not too bad at this time, and the elevation of both of our lakes is under control and on the way down.
 The opening of the gates on both dams turned the big rockfish strippers into feeding machines for several days, and the bank fishermen really did have some fun. There is no telling how many were caught this week, but most everyone I talked to said that it didn't take over an hour to catch a limit of three. They were weighing between eight and twelve pounds as a rule.
 A few nice white stripes came up to feed as well, and there were also anglers who took them. The large shad population has kept the predator fish fat and sassy. The small kill we had didn't even put a dent in them.
 I hope we can keep a large number for spawning this year. This really helps to bring the striper crappie and bass population up and keep them growing fast.
 Many of you remember the times when there were schools of shad that reached across the lake from side to side, and almost as far as you could see to the north or south.
 We also had schools of stripers

FISHING LINE
 Jerry Maupin
 Ledger Outdoor Columnist

that would stay on the surface for six to eight hours a day and eat those shad.
 The water temperature on both lakes is in the mid-forties and this is good. As soon as the gates are closed, the sauger will move back towards the dams and feed there until spawning time.
 The clarity isn't as important in the winter months to some, but others want a little stain so they can fish their spider rigs directly over them. We are selling a lot more jigs now, and folks are reporting good catches of crappie on the green/black, green/white, orange/chartreuse, chart/gold glitter and pink.
 The first few days when there was ice forming around the shorelines, anglers were catching crappie by casting jigs from the bank.
 I was tickled at one stately couple who said they only caught 18 that morning. The gentleman said they had had a lot more hooked, but lost them when the fish flopped around on the ice and broke through, pulling the hook out. The wife caught the most!
 Some of the schools of crappie suspended when the cold front hit. They would move to a ledge or brushpile to feed, but shortly after, they scooted out to 15-16 feet and sat there.
 When you find a school doing this, set your minnows or jigs one to two feet above them and see if you can trigger a feeding spree this way.

If not, move to another location and try them. Sometimes they just hang suspended waiting for a school of baitfish to come along, so you just might hit the right one and take a limit.
 A few anglers have found crappie in numbers this winter, but most are only seeing small groups. This could be from the large shad populations being spread out of because the water hasn't been cold enough to make the crappie form the huge schools we used to see. The other possibility is one we don't like to think about, but it could be the reason, and that is we don't have the numbers of crappie we used to have.
 Many crappie are still taken illegally about six months out of both lakes. It is only a matter of time before a lake this size is crippled forever if the violations continue. If you see it, report it!
 Bass anglers are still taking few largemouth and smallmouth, but the action is slow.
 Most guys and gals are getting new tackle and cleaning the old stuff to be ready for warmer weather.
 There is a lot of new tackle in the stores, so break loose and stock up for '95! Happy fishing!

Cold weather doesn't stop crappie

By Todd Contri
 As most hunting seasons are coming to a close, outdoorsmen are turning their focus to fishing. Crappie fishermen are usually the first ones to hit the water. During the colder months of January and February, crappie can be found in large schools along the drop-offs and deeper water brushpiles. Over the past ten days, crappie fishermen have had some success.
 Crappie are being taken in 14 to 16 feet of water along the creek channels toward the mouths of the bays. Water color seems to be stained to clear in these areas and color selection has been important. Fishermen are using orange and chartreuse or black and chartreuse in the stained water, and blue and white and red and white in clearer water. The size of fish has been good with a lot of fish in the pound-and-a-half to two pound class. Fishermen have also reported a big portion of crappie under legal size, which is a great sign for years to come.

 During these winter crappie fishing trips, anglers have reported that the fish are moving a lot during the day. Early in the morning, fish are being caught toward the deeper water along the ledges, but as the daylight increases, fish are moving up toward the top of the ledge. Its not uncommon for crappie to move up around eight feet during the middle of the day.
 Once crappie are found, it is important to fish slowly and fish the area thoroughly before moving to another location. This time of year, fish are slow to bite, so one must fish slowly to be successful. When locating a school of fish, make sure to keep trying different colors and different depths. This will cover all combinations that will let you put more fish in the freezer.
 There have been a few bass fishermen that have already taken to the water, and their success is limited, but they have taken home some trophies. People who fish for bass this time of year must fish very slowly, trying to cover every inch of shoreline. Bass will not chase anything very far, and the angler must present the bait right in front of the fish's nose. Slow moving baits such as suspending roughs and jig and pork combinations are a good choice when fishing in cold water.
 Banks that drop off into deep water are places in which the fishermen can be successful. These areas will hold bait fish, and during the day, shad will move up into shallower water; this will allow the bass to feed. Don't expect to catch a boatload of bass this time of year--a big bass can be caught. Over the past two years, anglers have found out that live bait is the easiest way to catch a bass in the winter. By placing a BB-size shot 12 to 16 inches above a number one-size hook, bass can be taken along the same deeper banks. The big plus about fishing live fishing bait is that big smallmouth are not uncommon.

 When fishing this time of year, make sure to fish with someone and bring an extra change of clothes. These simple steps can save you if you happened to fall in. It is never a good thing to take off your life jacket even while fishing. Cold water is dangerous and by being sensible, simple steps can save your life.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Please alert your readers to a kitchen hazard that never would have occurred to me until this happened:

I purchased a unique, hand-crafted oven mitt that was a real complement to my kitchen decor. There was no fabric label on it.

I recently used it to remove an extremely hot cast-iron pan from the oven, and the oven mitt stuck to the pan! In my panic, I yanked the pan all over the oven and almost spilled the contents on myself.

When I was able to remove the pan from the oven and free my hand, I realized that my beautiful new oven mitt was made of a synthetic material that had melted from the heat and had become welded to the pan!

The pan will never be the same, but it's a small price to pay for the lesson. It isn't necessary for an oven mitt to be a conversation piece, but it should be made of cotton or some other heat-resistant material.

In examining a number of oven mitts and pot holders in my kitchen, I couldn't find the fiber content on any of them. Is this something for the Department of Consumer Affairs to look into?

ANN SHERMAN JAMES, LOS ANGELES

DEAR ANN SHERMAN JAMES: Yes, and after reading your letter, I examined my oven mitts. A few had labels, but most did not.

Readers, if you have had a fire or been burned while using an oven mitt, alert the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. The 24-hour toll-free hotline number is 1-800-638-2772.

DEAR ABBY: My son and his wife sent a box of fruit to me for Christmas. It contained pears that looked pretty good on the outside, but were mushy and rotten on the inside.

I am in a quandary as to whether to tell them the truth or not. They might be hurt, or think I was being overly critical, but believe me, this fruit was not fit to eat — so we threw it all out.

We hate to tell them they spent good money for nothing. Please advise us.

M.K. TUCSON, ARIZ.

DEAR M.K.: Tell them the truth — you will be doing them a favor.

They can then notify the people from whom they ordered the fruit, who will also appreciate being informed and will undoubtedly replace it with fresh, edible pears. Trust me.

The bidding:
East South West North

Opening lead — queen of spades.

Assume you're in three notrump and West leads the spade queen. You hold your ace until the third round of spades, of course, but then you must find the best way to try to bring home at least four club tricks.

How would you play the suit? When the deal occurred, South crossed to the club king at trick four and returned a club to the ace to guard against the possibility of losing to the doubleton queen. He then led a third club, hoping East would win the trick. But West took the queen, cashed two spades, and South went down one. Declarer was certainly right to worry about losing the lead to West, but his safety measure did not go quite far enough. Since he was willing to concede one club trick, he should have tried harder to lose it to East.

South's best method of play is to cash the club ace at trick four and then lead low towards dummy's K 9. If West follows low, the nine is played, losing to East's ten but guaranteeing the contract. An alternative approach is to lead a low club to the eight at trick four, producing the same result as the cards lie.

Note that both approaches also overcome Q-10-x-x in the East hand. After West shows out on the second club lead, declarer can hold himself to one club loser by leading toward his jack.

Note also that leading the ace followed by the jack, though it succeeds on the actual layout, is not the correct play, since declarer would have to lose two club tricks if East started with Q-10-x-x.

Finally, it should be mentioned that the recommended line of play will not succeed if West has the Q-10-x of clubs and five spades, but in that case declarer cannot prevent West from gaining the lead with a club no matter how he attacks the suit.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 45 and had my nails done with acrylic for seven years. About a year ago, one nail lifted from the bed. The nail doesn't hurt, but is very white. Numerous fungus treatments have been unsuccessful. Now two more nails are affected. Do I have a yeast infection or a vitamin deficiency?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Without examining your nails, I cannot diagnose the cause of your problem. Nonetheless, two possibilities come to mind.

Fungus infection may cause the nails to become discolored (white or yellow) and to retract from the nailbeds. Such an infection can readily be diagnosed by scraping material from under the nails, examining it under a microscope, and identifying the typical appearance of the fungus.

On the other hand (forgive the pun), the acrylic material you have used to build up your nails could be the culprit. This substance can be absorbed into the nails themselves, giving a white, opalescent appearance.

Worse, the acrylic may affect the growing portion of the nail and interfere with normal nail development. As a consequence, the nail may become brittle and can split, crack or pull away from the nailbed.

To get to the bottom of your problem, see a dermatologist. In the meantime, eschew any further nail treatments.

Vitamin deficiencies may lead to nail softening and disfiguring, but do not usually cause it to lift from the nailbed.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am 13 years old, and I have two brothers who are 10 and 8 years old.

Our mother died three years ago, and Dad married a very nice lady last Christmas. What should we call her?

I don't think I could call her "Mom" or "Mother," and calling her by her first name sounds rude or disrespectful.

Maybe some of your readers who have had this problem would write in with suggestions. Thank you.

THREE KIDS IN BALTIMORE

DEAR KIDS: I'm open for suggestions. Meanwhile, why don't you ask the nice lady what she prefers to be called?

Employment services offered

The Career Services Office at Murray State University will open the door to employment opportunities by hosting the annual Summer Job Fair on Monday, Feb. 6, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Curris Center ballroom.

The Summer Job Fair, open to all Murray State students regardless of status, allows students to seek summer employment in various summer camps across the country and on the Murray State campus. Students will have the opportunity to meet with approximately 30 representatives from Kentucky, Indiana, North Carolina, Missouri, New York, Illinois, Michigan, Tennessee and Ohio. These representatives will provide students with information on summer employment, as well as internships.

Martha Pitman of the Career Services Office said the fair is set in an informal manner in order to provide students with a relaxed atmosphere. Positions are available for students to work as counselors, program directors, nurses, health supervisors, business managers, kitchen help, ranger staff, or work in crafts, nature, waterfront and equestrian, she said.

Students will have opportunities to work at 4-H camps, private camps and camps for children with special needs. In addition, representatives from the National Scouting Museum and Murray State Housing Office will also be present.

For more information on the Summer Job Fair, contact Martha Pitman at (502) 762-3735.

Candidates...

candidate who has the experience in government to warrant being hired by voters to run the state for the next four years.

He said it was time to crack down on juvenile crime and for the governor to provide a leading, although limited, role in promoting education in Kentucky.

Babbage, currently secretary of state, painted himself as a workaholic who will stand up to special interests and press for fully funding education programs. He also disputed Patton's contention that the governor's role in education is limited.

"Kentucky has had its millionaire governors," Babbage said, apparently taking a jab at Patton, who made his fortune as a coal operator. "How about a working governor. That's what I've been since high school — hard at work."

Galbraith, a Lexington lawyer who has backed marijuana legalization, said the biggest challenge the next governor will face will be a global one.

He said the state's ability to carry out economic development initiatives would be jeopardized by American participation in the new GATT world trade agreement.

Forgy said the state is at a watershed and needed integrity in government, an apparent reference to the federal investigation of state government corruption since 1992.

"This great commonwealth's government is danger of losing the consent of the governed," he said.

Forgy said he demanded "absolute integrity in the conduct of the affairs of this commonwealth with no excuses."

"That dark oak office ought to be a bully pulpit, but it also should be the place where basic values of government emanate from... where the values of government begin and are set."

All four candidates pledged to release their daily schedules if they are elected. The KPA, The Courier-Journal, the Lexington Herald-Leader, The Kentucky Post and The Associated Press has filed suit to gain access to Gov. Brereton Jones' schedules.

Party differences emerged on the subject of cutting pension and inheritance taxes during the current special legislative session. Forgy took credit for raising the issue in November and defended the cuts, saying they would not substantially reduce state revenue.

Patton said the cuts should have been considered in a broader overhaul of state taxes while Babbage and Galbraith warned that the cuts would be a key budget problem for the next governor.

All the candidates supported welfare-reform efforts.

But Babbage said a key element of his plan would be sex-education programs in schools beginning in the seventh grade to help prevent teen-age girls from becoming unwed mothers and going on the welfare rolls.

Trip set for British Isles

A summer tour of the British Isles, specially designed for Murray State University alumni and friends, is scheduled for May 27 through June 11. The trip is sponsored by the MSU Center for Continuing Education and Academic Outreach, the Center for International Programs and the Alumni Affairs Office, in association with the Cooperative Center for Study in Britain.

Cost of the trip is $2,495 per person, which includes double-occupancy accommodations at three- and four-star hotels, round-trip airfare from Nashville, coach transportation with tour guides, entrance fees to selected attractions, portage and local service charges and taxes.

A $100 deposit is due when participants sign up for the trip; however, if it has not yet been made, participants should make the payment as soon as possible. On March 1, a $1,000 deposit is due, with the remaining $1,395 to be paid by April 3. The tour will be limited to 30 participants. A few openings still remain.

The two-week tour will begin in Ireland where the group will be based in Dublin for six days.

During this time, coach trips are planned to Galway, Kilkenny and the Boyne Valley. Participants will visit St. Patrick's Cathedral, Book of Kells, Kilkenny Castle and St. Canice's Cathedral.

After departing Ireland, the group will spend three days traveling by coach through northern Wales and the Lake District of England on the way to Scotland. Participants will visit Caernarfon Castle, Portmeirion Village, Betws-y-Coed, Dove Cottage and Wordsworth Museum.

In Scotland, the group will be based in Edinburgh where participants will have ample time to shop and sightsee, as well as visit Edinburgh Castle. A full-day coach trip to St. Andrew's will also be included. Finally, the group will stay overnight in Harrogate, England, before boarding a return flight in Manchester.

Celia Wall of the department of journalism and radio-television and coordinator of the trip, said the tour has been designed for participants to visit many locations, but at a fairly leisure pace to "allow participants to pursue their own interests" whether they be shopping, taking photos or sightseeing.

"Since many of us have roots in the British Isles, we feel that this tour with visits to Ireland, Wales, Scotland and England will be of particular interest," Wall said. "The historical and educational value of this experience will appeal to a broad audience."

This is the third alumni tour to great Britain sponsored by Murray State. Like the previous trips, this tour will be conducted by Viola Miller of the Center for Continuing Education and Wall.

Anyone interested in more information on the trip should contact Wall at (502) 762-3171.

TIPS

By Walt Wheat

When winter comes to Kentucky we have to realize the inevitability of frozen pipes. The only sound way to prevent freeze-ups in an unheated house is drain the entire plumbing system, but since most of us live in heated houses it is nice to know that there are several methods in which to avoid this disaster.

If power is available, plug in an electric heater or heat lamp, or hang a 100-watt bulb near vulnerable pipes. Keep a door ajar between a heated room and an unheated room with pipes so that the unprotected area will receive heat.

Set an electric fan on your furnace to blow warm air over basement pipes and insulate exposed pipes. At Treas Lumber you will find, in addition to the thermostatic heating tape, several wrap-on and snap on varieties of pipe insulation that will retard freezing.

If no commercial insulation is at hand and pipes must be protected immediately, wrap several layers of newspaper loosely around the pipes and tie with string.

If the temperature suddenly drops and you have no time to install insulation, one of my favorite suggestions is to turn faucets on to a trickle. This will keep your water system moving all night long and will prevent your pipes from freezing.

During cold weather we simply need to prepare for disaster in order to prevent it, and this is certainly true with our home plumbing systems. We have the products here at Treas Lumber and, as always, welcome you to visit us for any of your home improvement needs.

KET to air All 'A' Classic statewide

For the second straight year, KET will be broadcasting the finals of the high school boys' "A" basketball tournament from McBrayer Arena on the Eastern Kentucky University campus in Richmond. The Kentucky All "A" Boys' Classic airs on a tape-delayed basis on KET at 11/10 p.m. CT Sunday, Feb. 5. The Kentucky All "A" Girls' Classic airs for the first time on KET, on a tape-delayed basis, at 11/10 p.m. CT on Sunday, Feb. 12.

"The All "A" Classic," now in its sixth year, provides more than just a championship game. It provides students from small schools throughout Kentucky with an opportunity to participate in a variety of events and activities which showcase their talents and spirit. These activities include a statewide academic scholarship competition, two different cheerleading competitions, and the organizer of a statewide Fellowship Youth Rally featuring inspirational and motivational speaker Meadowlark Lemon, a former Harlem Globetrotter great.

"I am delighted that KET is her to provide the means to show the entire state some of the many positive and encouraging things that Kentucky's youth are doing," said Virginia G. Fox, KET executive director and CEO. "The Kentucky All "A" Classic is a great event, one that I am sure all Kentuckians would be proud of."

"The response from last year's telecast on KET was tremendous. The statewide exposure it provided to the athletes from smaller schools and smaller communities was extremely positive," said Stan Steidel, All "A" Classic Chairman. "We're pleased that KET and the All "A" Classic will again be able to provide this opportunity to these students."

The Kentucky All "A" Boys' Classic and The Kentucky All "A" Girls' Classic were produced by WKYT-TV/Lexington.
