Regents pass tuition increase

By EDWARD SHERIDAN
Staff Writer

Students returning to Murray State University for the fall 2002 semester will be facing yet another tuition increase.

The MSU Board of Regents voted Monday to approve an 8.8 percent tuition increase for the 2002-2003 academic year and a 7.5 percent increase for the 2003-2004 academic year. Both rate increases are for all students across the board.

Acting MSU President Dr. Kern Alexander said the tuition increase for next year was made in anticipation of a weak state budget, which could not only not provide the university with any extra funding, but could even detract from what it received this year.

Student regent Nikki Key was the only regent not to vote in favor of the tuition increases, stating that she believes the government is relying too heavily on student tuitions.

"Students understand that the economy is bad ... but it's also bad for families and students," she said. "I want to send a message to the state that something must be done. We can't keep forcing the students to support the university's budget."

The Kentucky Council on Postsecondary Education requires state universities to submit their tuition increases for a two-year biennium, meaning MSU had to cover through 2004. Alexander said the 7.5 percent figure, which is how much MSU raised its tuition last year, could be raised or lowered in the future.

Alexander pointed out that MSU will award $150,000 in additional student aid beginning next year. That money, he said, was provided by the interest from endowment funds the university has received.

And he also pointed out that MSU's increases are still not the highest in the state, with Western Kentucky University reporting a 9.7 percent increase in tuition.

"I don't want to recommend any increases to the board of regents," Alexander said. "It's necessary, though, for us to maintain the quality we've been referring to here today."

With the university's current enrollment figures at a record 9,647 students, Alexander said the 8.8 percent increase will bring in roughly $3 million in additional funds. He said that total, even without any additional state funding, would still be enough to offer the university's employees a 1.8 percent increase in salaries.

Students will also see an increase in their mandatory fees beginning in the fall 2002 semester, thanks to an effort to construct a new health and wellness center on the MSU campus.

The board voted to raise the fees by $3 per semester credit hour, from $17.50 to $20.50. According to Alexander, the revenue generated from the increase will go toward paying for the construction of a $15 million, 90,000-square-foot wellness and recreation facility. Dewey Yeatts, MSU associate vice president of facilities management, said the facility would include such features as a swimming pool and a climbing wall.

"It's sort of a one-stop recreational type facility," Yeatts said. "Not only is this good to show to students to up the enrollment, it also helps with (student) retention."

Alexander said $10 million for the project must come from the state's general fund, while the other $5 million will be generated by the student fees. The board passed a resolution that the increase in fees would not be used for any other purpose other than the facility's completion.

While Key conceded that there was student support for such a facility, she again objected of most of the funding responsibility falling to the students. In fact, the board, at Key's request, passed a resolution that any MSU faculty or staff member wishing to use the facility would have to pay a separate fee.

"The idea of a fitness center began last year as a student initiative," Key said. "Students don't want to foot the bill for this by themselves. We strongly challenge the state to match the efforts of the students."

FBI probing anthrax mystery

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of people arrested in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks rose to more than 600 people as the FBI investigated an anthrax contamination at a building in Florida that housed several tabloid newspapers.

Ashcroft

"We're counting on each American to help us defend our nation in this war," Attorney General John Ashcroft said Monday in announcing that investigators still were seeking 229 people who were either suspects in the attacks or were believed to have information important to the case.

Authorities have arrested or detained 614 people in the terrorism probe so far, Ashcroft said.

With other terrorist attacks viewed as more likely now that U.S. forces have begun bombing Afghanistan, the FBI has advised 18,000 local law enforcement agencies and 27,000 corporate security managers to be on high alert. Warnings also have been sent to telephone companies, electrical power companies, banks, oil and gas facilities, computer companies, water service providers and railroads.

Nuclear facilities are on the highest state of alert and are screening all employees and others who have access to plants.

"Our national law enforcement network ... will continue working around the clock to find the people who were involved in the attacks and to disrupt any future plans for terrorism in America," the attorney general said.

The FBI investigated whether the anthrax episode in Boca Raton, Fla., was a criminal act.

Bob Stevens, a photo editor at the Sun tabloid, died after apparently inhaling anthrax, and a mailroom employee in the same building, Ernesto Blanco, had anthrax bacteria in his nostrils. The deadly bacteria was found on a computer key-

Murray unit to provide airport security

By EDWARD SHERIDAN
Staff Writer

Members from the Murray unit of the Kentucky Army National Guard have become the latest military personnel called upon to provide additional airport security.

Approximately 30 men and women from the 130-member 438th Military Police Company in Murray left Sunday to receive training that will be used in providing additional security at Kentucky's airports, according to Sgt. Jimmy Tubbs.

Tubbs said the troops will attend a Federal Aviation Administration training school for approximately one week before being dispatched to the airports.

While Tubbs said the Murray troops will only be used in Kentucky airports, he could not say exactly which airports they would be used.

A state health official doubted there were innocent explanations.

"The chances are one in a billion" that two such cases would occur, said Dr. Landis Crockett, director of disease control for the Florida Department of Health.

"There then would be another explanation, and that would be that foul play would be suspected," Crockett added.

In Virginia, lab tests for anthrax performed on a patient with connect-

Henry's trek focuses on gun safety

By BRANDI WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

Lt. Gov. Steve Henry made an appearance at the Calloway County Sheriff's Office Monday night to distribute gun locks.

"The whole issue is not a gun issue. It is a safety issue."

— Lt. Gov. Steve Henry
Regarding gun safety locks

Henry is traveling all over the state discussing gun safety and handing out 100,000 gun locks as part of Project HomeSafe for the month of October. "The whole issue is not a gun issue. It is a safety issue," he said. Henry said he has seven guns in his own home. Having gun locks before had never been an issue, until the birth of his and wife Heather French Henry's baby this year.

"From now on, I'm going to have locked firearms in my home," he said.

Over 3,000 youths' lives are lost every year in the state of Kentucky in gun-related deaths. "We've lost a lot of teenagers in our state just because they didn't have the right knowledge or respect of firearms," Henry said.

He also said he has seen an increase in ammunition and gun sales since the tragedy of Sept. 11. "We want to make sure we stimulate discussion in homes," Henry said.

He said one of the reasons many people do not get locks for their guns is because it is too expensive. That's one of the reasons they are giving these locks away to the public.

"There is no reason for them to say no," Henry said. "Those reasons are no longer valid."

The Kentucky Sheriff's Association adopted this as their project, as well.

Capt. Dennis McDaniel demonstrated how the gun lock is operated on his own handgun. He said it takes 15 seconds to remove the lock.

"This is a very high quality lock," McDaniel said. "It would be very difficult for a child or a person to defeat without tools."

This lock can be used on pistols, revolvers, pump-action shotguns and rifles.

The gun locks can be picked up at the sheriff's office, located downtown.

Commission alleges charges vs. Marshall district judge

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The Judicial Conduct Commission has levied seven charges against Marshall County District Judge Don Thomas, including one that he asked exotic dancers who had cases in his court to give him a "private show."

Thomas denied any wrongdoing and said he expected to be exonerated.

The commission scheduled a hearing on the allegations for Dec. 10 in Paducah.

Created by the Kentucky Constitution, the commission acts independently. Its members include active judges, a lawyer and two gubernatorial appointees. Its proceedings are secret unless and until the commission decides to press formal charges.

The commission has the authority to impose a number of sanctions, up to removal from office. Until the hearing, Thomas can continue his duties on the bench.

Tubbs said he is not sure how long the troops will be used, but that it could be "up to six months." He said details have not fully been worked out because Kentucky is just beginning to implement the tighter airport security measures.

tions to the Sun have thus far been negative, Dr. Thomas Ryan of Price William Hospital in Manassas, Va., said Tuesday. "I just want to allay everybody's anxiety about this case because it just doesn't seem to fit the criteria," he said.

On Monday, the hospital had contacted Virginia's health department with a possible anthrax diagnosis, "one of several possible diagnoses" for the victim.

Bennet Bolton, a senior reporter for The National Enquirer, one of the tabloids housed with the Sun in the same building in Florida, described a "cryptic" e-mail sent to the staff in late August or early September by an intern who had worked in the newsroom during the summer.

"It intrigued us that he left such a cryptic farewell," Bolton said. "It was rather neutral and then he said, 'I left you a surprise for you to remember me by. Ha ha, just kidding.'"

Bolton said federal investigators were told about the e-mail.

Newsweek magazine reported on its Web site that the office received a "weird love letter to Jennifer Lopez" a week before the Sept. 11 attacks. Inside was what was described as a soapy, powdery substance and a Star of David charm.

The letter was handled by both Stevens and Blanco, according to unidentified workers cited by the magazine.

MSU insurance budget to see increase in 2002

By EDWARD SHERIDAN
Staff Writer

One year after shifting funds in an attempt to lower health insurance costs for its employees, Murray State University will permanently increase its insurance budget.

According to Joyce Gordon, MSU associate vice president of human resources, the university will up its annual employee health insurance budget by $325,000 beginning in January.

MSU increased its employee insurance budget by $85,000 for the current calendar year to keep premium costs down. Opt-out payments for those employees who chose to use insurance other than that provided by the university were eliminated as well.

The $325,000 increase will also come from within the university's budget, but Gordon is not sure about which sections the money will come from yet. Since the MSU budget operates on a fiscal year, there will be a few months lead time to figure that out, she said.

Gordon said the extra funding will be sorely needed when considering the rising cost of insurance for the university. "Our health care costs were projected to increase at such a high rate, we wanted to make it as affordable as we could from an employee standpoint," she said. "Our costs were projected to increase by $830,000. That's an amazingly large number."

Murray State currently uses a co-insurance model, where its employees are required to meet a deductible. Once that deductible is met, insurance will pick up 80 percent of the employee's cost, and they must pay the remaining 20 percent.

Gordon said this year, though, under preferred provider organization (PPO) plans, the university will shift to a co-pay model, where employees will pay one rate whether they meet their deductible or not.

Co-pay for an office visit will be $15 per visit. Emergency room co-pay will be $50 under the university's enhanced PPO plan, which features a lower deductible, and $75 for the standard PPO plan.

"You can manage your expense a whole lot better on a co-pay because you know what your exposure is going to be," Gordon said. "That's what we're finding is a very popular thing."

Payment for drugs will also switch to the co-pay system, with an $8 charge for generic drugs and $15 for brand drugs. Gordon said the university will use a formulary list, meaning there will be a list of drugs that are approved for insurance coverage. Drugs not on the formulary list will have a $40 co-pay.

There are four different coverage plans currently offered at MSU: employee only; employee and child(ren); employee and spouse; and employee and family. The monthly premiums on all four of those plans will increase slightly next year.

For those using the employee only option, the monthly premium payment will increase $2 under the standard PPO plan, $5 under the enhanced PPO plan, and $6 under the indemnity plan which is a plan that does not utilize MSU's Anthem Blue Cross/Blue Shield insurance network.

For the standard and enhanced PPO plans and the indemnity plan, rate increases under the employee and child(ren) option will be $7, $11 and $13, respectively; employee and spouse increases will be $7, $13 and $16, respectively; and employee and family increases will be $13, $20 and $23, respectively.

Gordon said Anthem is providing a significant change of its own this year by eliminating its networking boundaries and switching to a nationwide system, meaning those with Anthem insurance will be covered in-network anywhere in the country.

"Right now, Anthem's networks are basically Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio and some of the contiguous states around us," she said. "As of Jan. 1, they're going to a system where any state in the United States, if that's a Blue Cross and Blue Shield of that state, it's going to be accepted in network, which is just a tremendous increase in access for everyone."

Other changes of note will be:

- An increase in deductible and out-of-pocket limits.
- Raising the age limit of full-time student dependents from 23 to 24.
- Adding hospice care as an additional benefit.
- Lowering the limit of chiropractic visits per year from 26 to 20.
- Adding a mail order feature where an employee could purchase three months worth of a prescription for the price of two.
- Providing 100 percent coverage for one routine vision exam and one routine hearing test per year. Services such as routine physicals, immunizations and certain screenings will also be covered at 100 percent up to the plan option limits.

While Gordon said the changes will not be able to stop the rising costs of health insurance that universities across the nation are seeing, they will ease the burden for MSU employees.

"We've been able, with these plan design changes, to bring our projected cost increase down to about 11.7 percent, and that's a much more manageable figure than 20 percent," she said.

"We have stated publicly to anybody that would listen over the last few years that the university's goal is to continue to offer high quality health care at a cost that's affordable to everybody. There's no question in my mind that the new plan continues to meet that goal."

Open insurance enrollment dates for university employees will be Oct. 18-31. Training sessions began Monday and were to last through Wednesday.

Questions regarding the insurance changes can be e-mailed to human.resources@murraystate.edu. Addition information is available at the MSU Human Resources Web site at http://www.murraystate.edu/indir/hr/hlth\_faqs.htm.

Woman strangled before fall at Opryland

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Investigators believe a Kentucky man lost his balance and fell five stories to his death inside the Opryland Hotel as he threw his dead wife from the balcony, police said Monday.

The medical examiner concluded Misty Norman, 26, was strangled to death before her fall Friday night in the Cascade Conservatory of the 2,884-room luxury hotel. Investigators believe Torre Norman, 30, threw her body to the concrete sidewalk to make the murder appear as a suicide.

Investigators had theorized the man pushed the woman off the balcony and then jumped himself. They now are classifying Torre Norman's death as accidental, instead of a suicide.

The Hopkinsville, Ky., couple checked into the hotel Friday afternoon. The woman asked to change rooms twice, each time seeking accommodations on a higher floor.

Then, police said, just after 9 p.m. CDT the two got into an argument on the balcony of their room.

Relatives of the woman told police the couple had a history of domestic trouble.

Man threatens bus driver, no injuries

CINCINNATI (AP) — A man threatened to shoot a city bus driver and blow up the passengers Monday but was arrested after allowing the driver to radio for help, police said.

No one was injured in the incident, which lasted less than 10 minutes.

Police said Gregory Haugabrook, 50, of Cincinnati, did not have any weapons.

Despite the threats, Haugabrook allowed bus driver Catherine Roberts, 55, to make the regular stops along the commuter route near downtown and drop off passengers, police spokesman Lt. Kurt Byrd said. He did not allow the driver to leave the bus, Byrd said.

Haugabrook was charged with kidnapping, disrupting public services and inducing panic. He was jailed in the Hamilton County Justice Center.

The driver, a 25-year employee, kept calm and did what the passenger told her, said Sallie Hilvers, spokeswoman for the Metro bus agency.

Last week in Tennessee, a Greyhound bus driver was stabbed by a passenger who tried to take control of the bus, causing a crash that killed six people. Authorities determined the attacker was a "single deranged individual."

Calloway band qualifies for regionals

Special to the Ledger

The Calloway County High School Marching Band has qualified for the regional competition of the 2001 KMEA Kentucky Marching Band Championships.

She has a breathing problem and Holland Medical specializes in respiratory equipment like nebulizers and oxygen. So I just said, "Holland."

Holland Medical is on call twenty four hours a day, so I don't have to worry... And neither does she.

Take my advice, when the time comes, it makes sense to just say, "Holland."

How to secure a big, open country?

You are Tom Ridge. Your job is to ensure that our homeland is secure from terrorism.

This is what you must protect: Almost 600,000 bridges, 170,000 water systems, more than 2,800 power plants (104 of them nuclear), 190,000 miles of interstate pipelines for natural gas, 463 skyscrapers (each more than 500 feet tall), nearly 20,000 miles of border, airports, stadiums, train tracks, the food supply, schools, industry.

More than 285 million people, spread out over 3,717,792 square miles.

"If you start out defending the homeland with the premise that you're going to defend every high profile, highly vulnerable target — you lose," says Donald Hamilton, deputy director of the Memorial Institute for the Prevention of Terrorism, in Oklahoma City.

"If you can't fill a yellow legal pad with hard-to-defend targets in 30 minutes, you're not thinking very hard. Oil pipelines, the Holland and Lincoln tunnels, the food supply ... you could sink the whole national budget into trying to defend these things very quickly."

But this is not to say that Ridge — the former Pennsylvania governor who is the first head of the Office of Homeland Security — is on a fool's errand.

Experts on terrorism and on domestic security say the new department can accomplish a lot. It can coordinate the agencies already at work against terrorism; it can focus public attention on what needs to be done.

And most likely, it will lead the way to a less defensive approach to protecting Americans on these shores.

This will not be the old idea of civil defense — the one that sent New York Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia running around the country, warning of air raids in the days before World War II; the one that featured an animated creature, Burt the Turtle, telling children to "duck and cover" in the event of nuclear attack in 1950.

Nor are we likely to hear instructions on how to dig our way to safety from nuclear attack, as we did early in the Reagan administration. "Everybody's going to make it if there are enough shovels to go around ... Dig a hole, cover it with a couple of doors and then throw three feet of dirt on top. It's the dirt that does it," said T.K. Jones, deputy undersecretary of defense, in 1981.

There has been a surge of interest in civil defense. The Starke, Fla.-based American Civil Defense Association, an advocacy and resource group, had seen its membership drop below 1,000 in recent years, but its rolls have increased 30 percent since Sept. 11, says executive director Kathy Eiland.

"They're wanting to do something," Eiland says.

The fact is, much has been done already. Michael Greenberger, a law professor at the University of Maryland, was principal associate deputy attorney general from 1999 to 2001; he planned a simulation in which top cabinet and government officials responded to a crisis in three cities.

This was a full dress rehearsal, with actors hired to play roles in all three cities, and a mock television network set up to cover the "emergency." Obviously, it did nothing to prevent the events of Sept. 11, but Greenberger says the terrorist attacks "put in motion" a lot of security plans that had been at the ready.

"Everybody is playing a harder, tougher game right now," he says. He uses a baseball metaphor: Before Sept. 11, the United States was playing in the minors, somewhere between A and AA ball, "and now we find out this is a major league sport we're in."

Ridge's most important role, Greenberger says, is to coordinate the activities of 40 federal agencies devoted to public security. In the past, they've often been competitors. "Somebody has to play the referee, somebody has to be the mediator, somebody has to be the coach," he says.

He likens Ridge's position to that of Condoleezza Rice, the president's chief national security adviser. He will get things done because he has the president's ear, Greenberger says. A Homeland Security bureaucracy, he says, "would just waste a lot of valuable time."

Ridge can be an advocate for the funds and resources needed to face the threat. The FBI has long sought more translators; now, the urgency is apparent. Ridge can help recruit the brainpower needed to make America secure, perhaps turning to a technology industry that has been ravaged by the downturn, Greenberger says.

There are overlaps to eliminate, gaps to fill. There are cultural differences to transcend.

"Different agencies go about their tasks very differently," says Ric Stoll, a political science professor at Rice University in Houston.

He recalls that during riots in Los Angeles, the National Guard was called in to help police. At one point, police asked the guardsmen to cover them as they went in for an arrest; they were surprised when the guard raked the area with gunfire.

To the police, "cover" meant "watch our backs." To the soldiers, it meant "lay down fire."

The police are trained to make arrests after a crime has been committed and investigated; the military is trained to act against a perceived threat — a useful mindset when the object is to thwart terrorists, but a controversial inclination in terms of civil liberties.

The very origins of the phrase "homeland security" are a clue to the road we are following. William Martel, a professor of national security affairs at the Naval War College in Newport, R.I., says "homeland defense" was a concept that was often used in recent years by the military in connection with the missile defense system supported by the Bush administration.

Martel says the first reaction to the Sept. 11 attacks is defensive, to ratchet up security wherever we are vulnerable.

This is what has happened — as National Guard troops have patrolled airports, backpacks have been forbidden at football games, drivers who transport hazardous materials have undergone background checks, more surveillance cameras have been posted on rail platforms, campers and mobile homes were detoured from places like the Hoover Dam.

Martel says the second reaction, a prime responsibility of the Office of Homeland Security, is offensive. The job will be to marshal every tool available — legal, financial, diplomatic, military, and especially intelligence — to thwart terrorists before they can strike.

"They have to be much more proactive to stop the threat from coming to this country," says Bronius Cikotas, a former nuclear weapons designer who is a member of the board of the American Civil Defense Association.

But some of the methods that might be used are anathema to civil libertarians. "We're going to have to have a national debate, and people are going to have to decide" whether these are steps that must be taken, says Donald Hamilton, the former adviser to the National Commission on Terrorism who now works for the anti-terrorism institute in Oklahoma City.

Hamilton thinks that this, too, will be an aspect of Ridge's job — framing and fostering the debate on civil liberties.

For example, he cites proposals for a national identification card. He likes the idea: "People are going to discover the ancillary benefits real quickly. Hey, this is a wonderful tool for tracking deadbeat dads." And yet he recognizes we would be giving up something that is "almost palpable — the ability to leave, go elsewhere, start over."

The same goes for tougher immigration policies and more scrutiny of communications. The easy part of homeland security, Hamilton says, might be instituting these changes; the hard part might be arriving at a national consensus so they can go forward.

'Blessed are the Caregivers'

With a doctoral degree and years of experience in the field of social work, Rose Bogal-Albritten was more prepared than most of us for taking on the challenge of caring for elderly parents and in-laws. "But no matter how much you think you know," she admitted, "when you are in the situation yourself, you find out how much you don't know."

When she was confronted with the problem herself, Bogal-Albritten found comfort and assistance from her husband and daughter. She found she wasn't alone, either.

As she listened to others in the congregation of her church, St. John's Episcopal, she saw many grappling with various dimensions of the same issue. As a result, St. John's founded a caregivers' group that meets regularly for lunch and mutual moral support.

"And recently," Bogal-Albritten explained, "we formed a caregiving team so people can be cared for by members of the congregation."

Still, it is not enough. On Thursday, Oct. 18, from 7-9 p.m., St. John's is taking the first step in finding ways the community can help caregivers by hosting a forum entitled, "Blessed are the Caregivers."

The evening will feature a panel of caregivers who represent different situations. One couple has been caring for an elderly parent for 10 years; another has a parent in long-term care; and a third is trying to meet the needs of an aging loved one who lives 1,000 miles away.

Those who attend the forum will also be invited to share their experiences as caregivers with the rest of the group. "We want to look at the needs, services and service gaps for caregivers of aging and dying family members," Bogal-Albritten explained, "and we are interested in hearing from anyone who has cared for an aging or dying family member in the past, or who anticipates being a caregiver in the future."

An attorney, a hospice administrator, a nursing home professional, and a representative from the Purchase Area Development District (PADD) will be on hand to provide vital information that caregivers need to know.

"There are a lot of good programs and a lot of information available," she declared, "but you need to know what each of them offers."

The purpose of the forum is to help identify the range caregivers' needs, and then devise ways the community might work together to fill in the gaps.

"The needs are diverse," Bogal-Albritten said. "They go beyond physical, medical, financial, emotional and social, to include the spiritual."

St. John's pastor Carolyn West invites everyone from the community who has an interest in caregiving to attend the Oct. 18 session. Participants of all ages and denominations are welcome.

St. John's is located at 1620 W. Main St., Murray. For additional information, contact the church at 270-753-6908.

From Our Readers

To the Editor,

This is a time for patriotic Americans to support our public officials and pray for their divine guidance.

Whenever government fails, they blame us and then tell us it will take more of our money and giving up more of our freedom to solve the problem. It is sad that we let them get away with that. Our lives were not always imperiled by terrorist attack and our freedoms threatened by a war on terrorism.

What happened? The more wise and effective leaders of the past constructed multiple layers of protection for our homeland. There was the House Internal Security Subcommittee, the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, and the Internal Security Division of the Justice Department, the Attorney General's List of Subversive Organizations, and the Subversives Control Board.

These measures worked and that is why anti-American liberals and radicals insisted that they be dismantled. Patriots objected but foolish members of Congress quietly went along and we are, predictably, at great risk to aggression.

First, we should demand that they restore these protections. Second, congress has steadfastly refused to secure our borders and this has to change and quickly!

After the terrorist attack on the Pentagon one military officer was reported by the news media as asking, "Where is our air cover?" Unfortunately, it was in a foreign country most likely protecting the empire of a foreign ruler.

Our military is spread all over the world in more than 100 foreign conflicts while America is naked to terrorist aggression. With the exception of a congressional declaration of war we should insist that they be utilized in the only way authorized by our constitution, to guard our homeland? If you agree let your members of congress know.

Kevin Ray, son of Kay Ray and the late Rob Ray of Murray, is an outstanding tennis player, and Brandon, 15, a Vanguard standout for his 4.0 men's tennis squad led his team to the North Florida regional championships in Tallahassee recently.

The Ocalans defeated Panama City, Tallahassee and Jacksonville, winning six third-set super tiebreakers along the way. Congratulations go to Brandon.

Hal Riddle has returned to Murray State this week for a fun time celebrating "Homecoming 2001."

Ann McDade Hunt, an old friend of mine, and an old friend of Hal's reminded me that Hal grew up in Fulton, Ky., and lived around the corner from the McDade family.

Hal's father, Forest Riddle, was the manager for the telephone company in Fulton, then moved to Mayfield and Murray to manage the phone company.

Hal has been a very successful character actor for many years. He just lost one of his best friends recently when Jack Lemmon died. He also counts Kevin Spacey and Michael Douglas friends.

He has never forgotten his roots and always loves to return to Murray State.

You readers will get a chance to visit with him at "Tent City" during homecoming festivities.

Mark your calendars. The annual Christmas bazaar for First Christian Church is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 3, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the church. The bake sale and annual luncheon are planned.

To the last person, they all thanked us for coming, were so kind and courteous, it brought tears to our eyes.

Cabs were plentiful, no long lines and short waits at restaurants were the special of the days.

Racers still on course for OVC title

ON A MISSION...The Racers will have to have more pursuits like this one from senior defensive end Ed Johnson if they are to stay alive in the Ohio Valley Conference race. Murray will host rival Eastern Kentucky in the annual Homecoming game on Saturday.

By SCOTT NANNEY
Sports Editor

The Murray State Racers are still on course to achieve their ultimate goal of an Ohio Valley Conference championship.

However, the Racers' course got a little more challenging with last weekend's 15-12 league-opening loss at Tennessee Tech, putting Murray (2-2, 0-1 OVC) in a precarious position with the rest of the conference contenders waiting in the wings.

"I think for us to win this thing now, we have to win the rest of our OVC games," said second-year MSU head coach Joe Pannunzio. "And we definitely have our work cut out for us."

That would be a vast understatement, considering the Racers begin an already difficult task with perhaps their biggest challenge of the season this Saturday — old rival Eastern Kentucky in the annual Homecoming game.

Pannunzio hopes by then that his squad will have figured out how to put the ball in the end zone after struggling to score touchdowns at Cookeville, Tenn.

On three separate first-half possessions against the Golden Eagles, Murray had a first-and-goal inside the Tech 10-yard line, but had to settle for three field goal attempts from kicker Shane Andrus.

Andrus connected on two of the kicks, but missed the other one when holder Brian Bivens fumbled the snap from center. The Racers managed one touchdown — a 3-yard run from Garner Byars was a poor call on my part, and then Stewart made a couple of decisions that he wished he had back ... It's just frustrating to move the ball the way we did and not score."

According to Pannunzio, the Racers will have to show some improvement in order to compensate for a strong EKV defense, which allowed its last opponent — Glenville State — only seven first downs in a 60-7 rout.

"They have one of the best defenses I've seen since I've been in the league," he said. "They're quick and athletic, and they blitz you a lot. They're going to make it tough on us."

The Racers must also contend with a Colonel offense that's on a roll after piling up over 500 yards against Glenville State — 455 of which came on the ground.

Eastern is led by freshman sensation C.J. Hudson, who continued a remarkable start to his collegiate career with his fifth straight 100-plus yard rushing game — totaling 159 yards and scoring one touchdown.

Hudson, who earned OVC Newcomer of the Week honors for the fourth time in five games, has 777 yards in 102 carries and has scored 10 touchdowns.

"(Hudson) is doing a great job for them," Pannunzio said. "He reminds me a lot of (Corey) Crum ... When you see the (offensive) numbers like their putting up, then you can't afford to get in a scoring match with them. They definitely pose some problems for us."

in the third quarter — for the remainder of the contest, despite gaining 430 yards in total offense.

The low point total ruined a solid effort from the MSU defense, who collected five Tech turnovers — three of which were interceptions of Golden Eagle quarterback Grant Swallows.

"Our defense did a great job of keeping us in the ball game," Pannunzio noted. "When you hold a team like that to 15 points and you cause five turnovers, then you're going to win most of the time."

Sophomore quarterback Stewart Childress appeared ready to return to the form of his redshirt freshman season by throwing for 262 yards on 30-of-47 passing. But the former Caldwell County standout failed to help the Racers find the end zone.

"What happens when you get down in that area is that the safeties will crowd the line of scrimmage, and you don't have to account for that most of the time," Pannunzio explained.

Morris, Schilling get Game 1 calls for Cards, Diamondbacks

PHOENIX (AP) — Matt Morris won just as many games as Curt Schilling did this season — 22 — with a lot less fanfare.

Now Morris goes fastball-to-fastball Tuesday night against Schilling and the Arizona Diamondbacks in Game 1 of the best-of-five National League division series.

"Matt Morris is a guy that hitters know is going to have real good stuff," St. Louis manager Tony La Russa said. "He's been locating great. He competes."

"It reminds you a lot of Curt Schilling and the other left-hander, Mr. Johnson, the complete package."

That's the double-whammy facing the Cardinals. First they have to deal with Schilling (22-6), then they go against Randy Johnson (21-6) on Wednesday.

"That's why we like this matchup," Arizona's Luis Gonzalez said. "We have two premiere pitchers in baseball on our side, and good pitching usually neutralizes good hitting."

Morris, who made a remarkable comeback after "Tommy John" elbow surgery forced him to miss the entire 1999 season, doesn't mind that his accomplishments have been overshadowed by those of Schilling and Johnson.

"It doesn't bother me at all," Morris (22-8) said. "I think longevity has a lot to do with it. They've been doing it year in and year out. I've had a good year, and to be even put in a class with them or have as many wins or even more than those guys is unbelievable."

In a matchup of the two pitchers with the most wins in baseball this season, a victory for Morris would give him all the attention he could want.

"They're two workhorses that are going to go out there and try to put up zeros," Morris said of Schilling and Johnson, "but I can slip in there and do the same thing."

On Wednesday, the Cardinals starter will be Woody Williams (15-9), who lost twice to Arizona when he was with San Diego but is 7-1 with a 2.28 ERA since he was traded to the Cardinals.

La Russa said he hasn't decided whether to start ailing, slumping Mark McGwire or Craig Paquette at first base in Game 1.

"It's a tough call," La Russa said. "Everybody knows what Mark is capable of doing and what Paquette has come in and given us. But it's a can't lose situation, whatever way we go we're going to have a real good lineup to go up there."

The teams haven't faced each other since April 48, so St. Louis' 4-2 victory in the season series is virtually meaningless.

Schilling hasn't faced the Cardinals at all. Morris lost to Arizona 2-1.

Both teams played well down the stretch, although the Cardinals lost their last two at home against Houston, defeats that deprived St. Louis of the NL Central title and sent them to Arizona as the Wild Card representative.

The Diamondbacks won eight of nine to clinch the NL West title on Friday.

Reedy, Cappa earn conference honors

Staff Report
Murray Ledger & Times

BRENTWOOD, Tenn. — Murray State freshman forward Theresa Reedy was named the Ohio Valley Conference Women's Soccer Player of the Week Monday by the league office for the week ending Sunday.

Reedy picked up six points during the Racers' two games last week, scoring the game-winning goal and recording two assists in the Oct. 4 home win over Louisville and adding a goal in Sunday's victory over Lipscomb, also at Cutchin Field.

The native of St. Ann, Mo. leads MSU with six goals and five assists, having played in all 12 of Murray's matches and starting in nine of those contests.

Reedy is the first Racer to earn the honor this season and first MSU player to win the award outright.

After a three-game winless skid, Murray State (6-5-1) will take a two-game winning streak into its OVC opener versus defending conference champion Eastern Illinois (8-2-0, 0-1-0) Friday at 3 p.m. in Charleston.

Women's Volleyball

BRENTWOOD, Tenn. — Murray State freshman outside hitter Kim Cappa was named the OVC's Freshman Women's Volleyball Player of the Week Monday.

Cappa earned the honor after averaging 4.12 kills and 2.88 digs per game in helping the Racers (2-14 overall, 1-5 OVC) end a nine-match losing string with a 3-1 win at OVC foe Tennessee Tech Sunday in Cookeville.

The native of Lafayette, Ind. is the only OVC player this season to notch 30 kills with 33 against preseason OVC favorite Tennessee-Martin and is tied for third on the NCAA Division I 30-kills list this season.

Cappa is third in the conference with 4.32 kills per game, while senior middle hitter Trena Fish is seventh with 3.46. Other MSU leaders include: junior setter Chrissy Dabbert, who is eighth in assists with 8.67 per game; senior outside hitter Jessica Wood, who is seventh in aces with 0.44 per game; and junior outside hitter Kristen Jones, who is 10th in digs with 2.93 per game.

The Racers host OVC foe Tennessee State (3-9, 0-5) today at 7 p.m. at Racer Arena before visiting Tennessee-Martin (13-6, 4-2) Friday at 7 p.m.

Horoscopes

BY JACQUELINE BIGAR
HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Oct. 10, 2001:
 Family and personal life challenge your focus. You want to do your best in the professional realm. The good-luck planet in your career sector encourages expansion and success. Yet friends and loved ones clearly let you know how much they miss you. Consider ways of effectively juggling the two. You also might tend to swallow your feelings as a result. Don't. The ramifications in the long run could be difficult. If you are single, carefully check out a love interest before you hook up. You might not read this person clearly. If attached, you might seek time alone to recycle.
 The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult
ARIES (March 21-April 19)
 *** Anger or grumpiness greets you in the morning. You can clear your mood if you process it. What is at the bottom of this feeling? Do something nice for your co-workers. Stop and buy doughnuts on the way in. Confusion surrounds you. Verify messages and appointments. Tonight: Nap and then decide.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 ***** You wake up like a jack-in-the-box. A dream or early-morning call energizes you. Happily, your efforts pay off with a child or loved one. Clear out a mixed message at work. Verify and confirm facts and messages. Tonight: Make it an early night.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 *** You cannot be too careful with financial agreements. Clearly someone doesn't understand your limits. As a result, this person tests your financial boundaries. Learn to say "enough" in a way that another can hear. Creativity leads you astray! Tonight: You don't have to do anything.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 ***** Someone flares this morning. You might opt to duck rather than absorb the negative energy. Your words help others relax. Don't get locked into details. A boss's instructions need to be followed explicitly. You can't fudge here. Tonight: Once you get started, you might not want to stop!
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 *** Take your time getting to places and dealing with those in your day-to-day life. You could easily lose your temper or get upset by events around you. Stop and buy yourself something that makes you happy. Relax. Clear out confusion. Tonight: Early to bed.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

DR. GOTT

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there any way to correct anemia without taking iron pills? I was born with a heart murmur and tend to be anemic, following valve replacement.

DEAR READER: Anemia, a low red blood cell count, has three general causes.

First, the body may not produce enough normal hemoglobin, the red-dish protein in the blood cells that carries oxygen. Vitamin deficiencies and congenital abnormalities, such as sickle cell disease, are common factors in this type of anemia.

Second, the body may lose blood, either from hemorrhage following an injury or chronically from a bleeding point in the intestinal tract. This form of anemia requires iron replacement to enable the bone marrow to produce more red blood cells. However, unless the source of bleeding can be identified and treated, the iron therapy is only a temporary step. Excessive menstrual blood loss and hidden intestinal bleeding are two exceedingly common causes of iron deficiency anemia.

Third, the body may make enough blood but, for one reason or another, the immune system destroys these blood cells. Called hemolytic anemia, this disorder is part and parcel of a wide variety of immune disorders, including lupus. Once the basic disease is brought under control, the anemia resolves.

Therefore, in answer to your question, anemia can be a challenging problem for both doctor and patient. Iron therapy is useful for certain anemias — but not all. In your case, I suspect that your prosthetic heart valve may be to blame. Certain kinds of artificial valves are stiff. When the blood is propelled through them by the heart's contractions, the blood cells may break open (a form of hemolytic anemia). This can be diagnosed by blood tests.

After appropriate testing, your doctor should be able to shed some light on your situation.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Blood: Donations and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 53-year-old diabetic whose blood sugar has been satisfactorily controlled with Glucophage twice a day. For reasons that elude me, my doctor decided to stop this medicine and begin Avandia once a day. Within 24 hours, my sugars escalated into the 300 to 400 range and I felt awful.

DR. GOTT

When I called him, my doctor said to "hang in there." So I phoned the diabetes clinic at our local hospital and was told that I should have stayed on the Glucophage for about two weeks while the Avandia achieved maximal effect. So I went back on it. And I feel much better.

What is your opinion about this incident?

DEAR READER: Your doctor either miscommunicated or made an error. Unlike traditional anti-diabetes medicines, which stimulate the pancreas to produce more insulin, Avandia (and other drugs like it) improves the efficiency with which your body uses what insulin it has. It takes several days for this effect to "kick in." During this period, it's wise to continue the Glucophage until the benefits of Avandia can be documented by lower blood sugar levels.

Although you suffered no long-term consequences of this "glitch," I recommend that you pursue this issue with your doctor, who should revise his strategy. If he doesn't, join the diabetes clinic.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am in my mid-20s and have found the perfect man. We are very much in love and have discussed marriage. We are sexually active and responsible about using birth control.

A week and a half ago, my period was noticeably late. I voiced my concerns to "Bob." He assured me everything would be fine and tried to console me; however, he never said anything about marrying me if I was pregnant. It turned out to be a false alarm.

Last night, Bob told me he needed "space"; that there are things he needs to accomplish in life before getting married. He said his decision had nothing to do with me and that he still loves me very much. I find it too coincidental that this change came about only a week after my possible pregnancy. We talked it over and ended our relationship.

Abby, I couldn't bear the thought of being with a man who is capable of running away from his responsibility. I, too, have things I'd like to accomplish in life, but I would have liked to achieve them with Bob by my side. Do you think I made the right decision to end it, or did I overreact?

AT A LOSS IN ATLANTA

DEAR AT A LOSS: Overreact? Not at all. Your false alarm made your "perfect man" show his true colors.

DEAR ABBY: I am a teen-age girl in middle school. I had this boyfriend, "Bud." We were really close and were friends long before we became girlfriend and boyfriend. There was also this other boy, "Burke," who is very good-looking. We called each other a few times and just "clicked."

Some friends told me if I wanted things to spark with Burke, I would have to break up with Bud. I was in love with Bud and didn't want to break up with him — but I wanted "sparks to fly" with Burke and me, so I broke up with Bud. He was very hurt.

Later that night, Burke didn't call me, and I found out he didn't want to be my boyfriend. I immediately called Bud, crying, and asked him to take me back. He said no!

Abby, I can't eat or sleep and I don't go out with my friends anymore. Now Bud likes another girl, and I can't stand her! Please tell me what to do.

DEPRESSED AND CONFUSED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR DEPRESSED: You've learned a valuable lesson at a young age: A Bud in the hand is worth two Burkes in the bush. Treasure what you have and learn from your mistakes.

DEAR ABBY: You might like to share my method of updating an address book: Last year I tore all the little return address labels from the holiday cards I received and pasted them in my address book.

It makes for a much neater look and guarantees the addresses are correct. It also eliminates scratch-outs and messy handwriting, because if an address changes, I simply paste the new label over the old.

Since I never miss your column and learn much from your readers, I thought I would return the favor.

MARY FOLDEN, NAPERVILLE, ILL.

DEAR MARY: It's a clever idea — and with the holidays approaching, certainly worth trying. Thanks for the suggestion.

Dear Abby is written by Pauline Phillips and daughter Jeanne Phillips.

Abby shares more than 100 of her favorite recipes in two booklets: "Abby's Favorite Recipes" and "More Favorite Recipes by Dear Abby." Send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $10 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby — Cookbooklet Set, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. TODAY IN HISTORY

By The Associated Press Today is Tuesday, Oct. 9, the 282nd day of 2001. There are 83 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: Three hundred years ago, on Oct. 9, 1701, the Collegiate School of Connecticut — later Yale University — was chartered.

In 1635, religious dissident Roger Williams was banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony. (He became a founder of Rhode Island.) In 1776, a group of Spanish missionaries settled in present-day San Francisco.

In 1888, the public was first admitted to the Washington Monument.

In 1930, Laura Ingalls became the first woman to fly across the United States as she completed a nine-stop journey from Roosevelt Field in New York to Glendale, Calif.

In 1936, the first generator at Boulder (later Hoover) Dam began transmitting electricity to Los Angeles.

Five years ago: Vice President Al Gore and Jack Kemp debated in St. Petersburg, Fla. Two Americans and a Briton shared the Nobel Prize in chemistry while three Americans won the physics prize. In the opening game of the American League Championship series, 12-year-old Jeffrey Maier turned a probable fly out into a game-tying home run by reaching over the right-field wall at Yankee Stadium and sweeping the ball into the stands with his baseball glove.

The holdup play, whether it is used by declarer or a defender, is one of the most effective plays in bridge. It comes in a variety of forms and, properly applied, can completely alter the outcome of a deal.

Today's hand, from a national team championship, provides an unusual example of the holdup play. At both tables, declarer wound up in four spades, and both Wests led a club.
