Ground breaks for new Weaks Center

By BRANDI WILLIAMS
 Staff Writer

The George Weaks Community Center's rebuilding is officially underway.

Local residents and state and local officials crowded the parking lot of the former center, located at the corner of 7th and Poplar Streets, on a brisk morning Thursday to celebrate the ground-breaking of the new George Weaks Community Center.

"I'm excited to get this going," Calloway County Judge-Executive Larry Elkins told the crowd.

The first center opened Dec. 15, 1990, with property purchased for $215,000, and was dedicated in honor of the county's Judge-Executive Weaks. His mission for the facility was to unite the community.

But the Weaks Community Center, which housed the Senior Citizens Center as well as several other community service offices such as Need Line, United Way of Murray and Calloway County, and Calloway County Chapter of the American Red Cross, was destroyed in a nighttime fire on Dec. 5, 2000.

Elkins recalled that not long after the fire, Weaks and his wife, Jo — not missing a beat — came to his office to begin planning the new center and made a personal donation to get the project off and running once again.

"It is a project that can not only benefit the agencies that will be housed in it, but also the community," Elkins said.

He said he has spoken with many from the Senior Citizens Center and they all seemed pleased with the building plans.

"They just want a place where they can go that's large enough and modern enough to house the activities they want to participate in," Elkins said.

He added that it was unfortunate that Weaks was not here to witness the groundbreaking, but asked Mrs. Weaks to speak in honor of her late husband.

"I know George would be proud of this occasion, and I am honored to be part of it," she said, recalling her husband who passed away April 9 of last year.

"I'm so pleased to see such a big crowd here for this dedication," Mrs. Weaks added.

State Sen. Bob Jackson said he was so proud of all the hard work that has gone into the project.

"Out of these ashes, a great project is going to occur," Jackson (D-Murray) said.

He said seniors need a place to go and be surrounded by other people. "There are so many that live alone and are shut-ins," he added.

State Rep. Buddy Buckingham (D-Murray) said it was easy to see how much the community supported the project. "It is obvious by the crowd there is a lot of self-inter-

Agencies see new center as 'blessing' to community

By EDWARD SHERIDAN
 Staff Writer

A case of the flu kept Tonia Casey from helping prepare Christmas care baskets for Need Line at the agency's office in Murray's George Weaks Community on the night of Dec. 5, 2000.

The next morning, Casey awoke to some devastating news — the building she was supposed to work in the night before had been gutted by a fire.

Casey, who at the time was working for another program based in the Need Line office, but who is now the agency's director, and the heads of 10 other community service organizations suddenly found themselves without offices — and with lots of questions.

"It was just a tragedy for everybody," Casey said. "It was just so devastating."

"Of course, it was a terrible night.

Nothing pleasant about it," said Eric Kelleher, director of the Calloway County Senior Citizens Center and Weaks Center building manager at the time of the fire.

Few hints of the apprehension that filled the air Dec. 5 were present, however, after ground was broken Thursday on a new Weaks Center facility, which will built on the ground that the old one previously occupied.

"Our people are so excited about the new building," Kelleher said. "They can't wait."

After the fire occurred, he recalled that each of the 10 agencies "found their own place." The Senior Citizens Center wound up utilizing facilities owned by St. Leo Catholic Church. The Calloway County Chapter of the American Red Cross utilized facilities owned by the Murray-Calloway County Hospital's Community Healthcare Foundation, and Need Line moved into Grace Baptist Church.

Of those 10 agencies, Kelleher said only two — the Calloway County Extension office, which now has its own building, and West Kentucky Assistive Technology Consortium — will not be returning to the new building. He also said that some new agencies, such as the Rape Crisis Center, will be coming on board.

Even though the new facilities made things uncomfortable at times for the displaced agencies, both Kelleher and Casey said the efforts made by the local community to find housing for them was truly a blessing. Casey even called Murray the "best place to live in the world."

"It's been a difficult year, but the community has just helped us out so much," Kelleher said. "We really haven't missed a beat."

Still, as Casey said, the excitement of getting a new facility is hard to deny. For one thing, she said, having all of the agencies, which work so closely together, so far apart makes collaboration difficult.

Another plus, she said, will be the additional space everyone will have in the new

Day care van crash kills 5

By WOODY BAIRD
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Four children died and two others were critically hurt when a day-care van drifted from the highway and crashed. The van's driver also died, leaving police with no immediate explanation for the accident.

Only the driver and his six young passengers were on the van when it crashed Thursday morning.

"One witness that we have says there was no indication there was anything out of the ordinary before the vehicle left the roadway," said Charles Cook, a deputy police chief.

The van was about four miles from Tippy Toes Learning Academy when it veered to the right of Interstate 240, which loops around Memphis, slid along a guard rail and smashed sideways into the supports of a highway overpass.

Killed were Cardarrus Bonner, 9; Tica Bonner, 6; Brayna Nicole Robinson, 6; Marquon McCray, 8; and the driver, Wesley Hudson, 28.

Jerry Louis McCray, 10, and Taurus DeMarta Showers, 11, were critically hurt.

The McCray children are the sons of Sandra Gordon, who owns Tippy Toes. She offered no statement Thursday, and police blocked reporters from entering the day-care center.

Vershell Curtis, an aunt of the Bonner and Showers children, said her family had been taking care of the youngsters because their mother is hospitalized with brain cancer.

"This morning when they got on the van they were waving and throwing kisses," Curtis said.

Tica was killed at the scene, but Cardarrus died at LeBonheur Children's Medical Center while members of their family gathered outside the hospital hugging and crying.

Curtis said the family came together to help the children after their mother, Tara Harwell, was hospitalized in January.

"Me, my sister, my mother, everybody was taking care of them," she said. "Everybody was working together."

Police said the van was going about 65 in a 55-mile-an-hour zone, but the roadway was dry and the weather was sunny and clear. There were no skid marks where the van left the highway.

Curtis and sister Veronica Brown said the family was unhappy with the day-care center because the van often was late picking up the children and early bringing them home. On its morning rounds, the van dropped off younger children at the day-care center and took older ones to school.

Curtis and Brown said the children told them that the driver sometimes smoked marijuana on the van.

"They'd get on the bus and it smelled like nothing but weed," Brown said.

Cook said investigators were looking into the driver's background, and an autopsy would include tests for drugs or alcohol. He said police had no evidence the driver used drugs or had a history of drug use.

The Commercial Appeal reported Hudson pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana in November 2000 and was fined $350. He got probation after he was charged in 1992 with aggravated burglary, according to the newspaper's check of criminal records.

It's almost time to 'Spring' forward as daylight savings time returns Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Break out the barbecue grill, daylight-saving time returns this weekend.

That means set the clocks ahead — spring forward, fall back — to gain an hour of light in the evening for warm summer evening recreation.

It's also a good time to replace batteries in smoke alarms, safety advocates urge.

Daylight-saving time lasts until Oct. 27.

Some parts of the country don't observe daylight-saving time. Those include Arizona, Hawaii, the part of Indiana located in the Eastern time zone, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and American Samoa.

MFD responds to false alarms at MSU

Staff Report
Murray Ledger & Times

The Murray Fire Department responded to two false alarms in dormitories at Murray State University Thursday evening.

At approximately 7:12 p.m. Thursday, three trucks and nine firefighters responded to a fire alarm at Hart College. Upon arrival, it was discovered that someone smoking on the third floor of the dormitory set off the alarm.

The second alarm occurred at approximately 9:46 p.m. in Hester College. Upon arrival, firefighters discovered that the alarm had been caused by someone smoking in an elevator lobby on the dormitory's fourth floor.

According to a MFD report, the cigarette in Hester had been put out on the floor and had burned a few small spots.

The report also stated that the state fire marshal was notified of the incident, in accordance with the Michael Minger Act.

Barn fire kills 18 horses at McCracken County farm

HENDRON, Ky. (AP) — A barn fire killed 18 horses at a McCracken County horse farm on Thursday, authorities said.

The blaze started just before 1 p.m. CST at Meadow Gold Farm, Hendron Fire Chief Phillip Walker said.

The fire started in an all-terrain vehicle parked behind the 2-year-old barn, Walker said. Flames instantly ignited several nearby bales of hay, and the fire rapidly spread to the barn's interior, he said.

Rick Gonzalez, who has owned the farm for two years, said 100 bales of hay were recently delivered to the barn, which he said had a wood frame surrounding by tin sheeting.

Walker said he lives near the farm and reached the scene within minutes of the 911 call placed at 12:55 p.m. by a woman riding a horse at the farm. When he arrived, Walker said, the barn was already engulfed in flames.

Gonzalez said the woman was Cathie Fergus, one of the lead trainers at the farm.

He said the barn's interior was 90 feet by 160 feet in total area and enclosed a 60-by-160-foot arena. Fergus was riding a horse in the arena when she heard the other horses making noise in their stalls, Gonzalez said.

When she discovered the burning ATV, she dismounted the horse she was on and went to call police. When she returned, the barn was consumed in fire and too hot to enter, Gonzalez said.

Firefighters extinguished the fire by 4 p.m. but couldn't save any of the horses, Walker said.

He said retirees need places like the center to keep themselves occupied and provide opportunity to socialize.

"We have so many younger retirees today, and this is going to be a tremendous asset," Buckingham added.

Murray Mayor Fred Curd said he was extremely proud of the project and looks forward to the construction.

"I'm so thankful Grace Baptist has let us stay here, but we're running out of room," Casey said. "I'm so excited about the new building. I can't wait to get in."

Kelleher said the new senior citizens area of the building will feature 8,000-10,000 square feet of space that will be utilized for an exercise room, a billiards room, a 200-seat dining room and a half of a basketball court that can be used for a variety of activities.

With all the advantages that the new facility will offer, Kelleher said one could almost consider the fire a blessing in disguise.

"It made for a difficult year, but we may actually come out better for it in the long run," he said.

"It is a blessing to this community."

U.S. envoy meets with Palestinian leader in renewal of truce talks

RAMALLAH, West Bank (AP) — Renewing a truce mission, a U.S. mediator met with Yasser Arafat at the Palestinian leader's besieged headquarters today, as Israel's offensive against Palestinian militants entered its second week despite U.S. demands that troops withdraw from West Bank cities.

U.S. envoy Anthony Zinni became the first senior official in eight days to meet with Arafat, who has been confined by Israel to a few rooms in his West Bank headquarters since the start of "Operation Defensive Shield" last week.

The two talked about cease-fire efforts during the 90-minute meetings, said Arafat adviser Nabil Abu Rdeneh.

"We have agreed that there will be a number of meetings between the Palestinians and the Americans in the coming hours," Abu Rdeneh said, adding that Arafat would participate in those talks.

Israeli soldiers fired tear gas and stun grenades at journalists trying to cover the meeting. Soldiers surrounded the journalists, keeping them about 100 yards away from the compound. Around 30 tanks surrounded the building, and some pointed their barrels at the journalists.

Israel had initially turned down Zinni's request to see Arafat, but relented after President Bush delivered a tough speech Thursday, demanding that Israel halt its incursions and announcing he would send Secretary of State Colin Powell to the region next week. Bush also accused Arafat of not confronting terrorists, and said his difficult situation was largely of his own making.

Powell called Arafat early this morning, Rdeneh said. He said they discussed the Bush speech, and Arafat accepted Bush's proposals.

Israel was sending conflicting signals Friday. Permission for Arafat to see Zinni was a first sign that Israel might be easing its chokehold. However, Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said the military offensive would continue, and Israel Radio said Israeli forces were speeding up their occupation of West Bank cities, hoping to cover as much ground as possible before international pressure forces them to withdraw.

In Friday's fighting, Israeli forces battled gunmen and searched homes in the West Bank's largest city, Nablus, and the Jenin refugee camp. A standoff at the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem entered its fourth day, and protesters in the biblical city planned an anti-American demonstration later in the afternoon.

Three Palestinian gunmen were killed in the old city of Nablus, as Israeli helicopter gunships fired at armed Palestinians. Doctors opened a makeshift hospital in a mosque because ambulances could not enter, they said.

Israeli soldiers were unable to enter the old city or the nearby Balata and Askar refugee camps because of heavy Palestinian resistance, the witnesses said. The Israeli military said soldiers did not try to enter the three places.

Four Israeli soldiers were killed Thursday, three in intense fighting at the Jenin camp, a stronghold of militant militias, and another in Hebron during what Israeli military sources called a small, pinpoint operation that continued early Friday. Hebron and Jericho were the only main West Bank towns still under Palestinian control.

In a statement Friday, the Israeli military said it is holding 900 Palestinian prisoners and has confiscated 50 anti-tank grenades and two launchers, 26 machine guns, nine bombs, four belts for suicide bombers, dozens of boxes of ammunition, scores of pounds of explosives, more than 1,300 rifles and more than 670 pistols.

Pressure was building on the Israelis to end their operation. The U.N. Security Council passed a resolution late Thursday calling on Israel to withdraw "without delay."

Israeli officials and newspaper editorials noted that Bush did not demand an immediate withdrawal from the West Bank and did not provide a timeline.

IN PROTEST ... Israeli policeman detain an Arab Israeli protesting Israel's military offensive in the West Bank outside the U.S. Embassy in the northern Israeli city of Tel Aviv, Thursday. A week into Israel's largest military offensive in a generation, troops Thursday took over Nablus, the West Bank's largest city, fought intense battles with gunmen barricaded in nearby refugee camps and tightened a cordon around armed Palestinians holed up in Bethlehem's Church of the Nativity.

The Haaretz daily said in a front-page analysis that Bush "granted Israel a few more days' grace to complete" the offensive. The paper said the campaign could continue until Powell arrived.

Interior Minister Eli Shai, a member of Israel's security Cabinet, argued that the Americans are not facing a timeline in their war on terrorists and that the Israelis also shouldn't be forced to meet a deadline.

U.S. says it has received more 'credible threats' against allies

BAGRAM, Afghanistan (AP) — The U.S.-led coalition has received more "credible threats" of violence against its members and journalists in Afghanistan, a military spokesman said Friday, including pamphlets found in the east offering a reward for the capture or killing of members of the allied force.

Attacks could include rockets, mortars and car bombs, Maj. Bryan Hilferty said at Bagram air base, in central Afghanistan.

He provided few details, but said the leaflets were found last week in Paktia, the eastern province where much of the fighting has taken place. It wasn't immediately clear how much money the pamphlets offered.

Despite the recent success of Operation Anaconda against al-Qaida and Taliban fighters in the Shah-e-Kot mountains, U.S. officials have said the war in Afghanistan is far from over.

The latest reported attack on coalition forces came Wednesday, when a group of U.S. special forces and Afghan military troops said five rockets landed several miles from where they were in the Shah-e-Kot Valley.

Hilferty said the allied soldiers believed the attack was aimed at them, though they were continuing to analyze the rocket craters for more information.

He said the rockets didn't appear to be well-aimed.

"It seemed to be more in the line of Iraqi Scud attacks in Desert Storm. You just launch it and hope it kills someone," he said.

Coalition members have said they have cleared the Shah-e-Kot area, but Hilferty said: "If you get an attack from several kilometers away, that's not the same thing."

The Bagram base, to the north, is also "very well cleared," but coalition forces could "very well get rocketed here" too, he added.

Hilferty said a group of less than 100 U.S. special forces and hundreds of allied Afghan troops are still doing surveillance and reconnaissance in the Shah-e-Kot region.

At present, he said the allies are focusing their main efforts on eastern Afghanistan, on the Gardez and Khost areas.

Also Friday, a Norwegian mine clearer was badly injured when an anti-personnel device exploded as he was trying to clear an area just south of the airfield at Bagram, U.S. and Norwegian officials said.

In Our Opinion Foundation's goals with defibrillators a plus for community

Automated External Defibrillators have been the subject of a lot of talk with the Community Healthcare Foundation, and the Foundation's desire to get these portable machines out into the community is a noble goal.

The defibrillators, or AEDs as they are called which "shocks" the heart into a normal rhythm following a heart attack, can be stationed in health clubs or at sporting event stadiums such as the RSEC, or at golf courses, and used in the event of an emergency. And according to an Associated Press article, the need for accessible AEDs is growing.

Research shows the greatest risk for cardiac arrest are among men over 45 and women over 55 — a group which constitutes the majority of people wishing to get into shape. Health clubs or golf courses or walking tracks like that at RSEC can be equipped with an AED that could potentially save someone's life. The AP article states that if defibrillation is given within the first 60 seconds of cardiac arrest, the survival rate can be as high as 90 percent.

Defibrillators aren't cheap; running in the range of $2,200 not counting training and maintenance, but with training are safe to operate since a built-in computer initiates the shock or tells the user one is not needed. But Murray State University and a church in Marshall County have already shown interest, and with the nation's population continually aging, the potential to save lives is there.

The goal to save lives is one of the greatest. We commend the Foundation in striving to achieve that goal in our own community.

Last Push

In our last full week of work before closing out the 2002 legislative session, the Senate passed its version of the state budget and approved bills that would clean up illegal dumps and establish a unique new state park.

Legislative Update
By Sen. Bob Jackson
D-Murray

As usual, the days leading up to the end of the session were spent pushing scores of bills over the final hurdles of the legislative process.

Some of the session's highest-profile issues were under the spotlight as House and Senate members began conference committee meetings to work out differences on various bills.

One of the biggest issues we worked on was the budget. While many parts of the budget remain consistent with the version approved by the House, the Senate approved changes in a handful of significant areas.

Under the Senate plan, the practice of using public money to partially finance gubernatorial elections would end. Instead, the money would go toward raises for all school employees.

The Senate also deleted language from the House-approved budget that would have allowed counties to house youthful offenders in county jails rather than juvenile detention centers. We also added funding to train jailers on handling inmates with mental illnesses.

Other budget proposal highlights include funding to provide health coverage for low-income women diagnosed with breast or cervical cancer, the return of 50 percent of coal severance tax revenue to coal-producing counties, and continued funding for early childhood development initiatives.

The budget also would continue directing half of our national tobacco settlement money toward efforts to diversify and promote the state's agricultural base.

In last week's Senate activity, we also addressed growing concerns about illegal dumps and abandoned landfills throughout Kentucky. More and more people have learned in recent years about the threats posed to our soil and water when garbage is tossed into illegal dumps.

Schoolchildren and others throughout the state also have drawn attention to the fact that these dumps blemish the natural beauty of our state.

We responded to such concerns by approving a plan to sell $45 million worth of bonds to jumpstart efforts to clean illegal dumps and close abandoned landfills.

House Bill 174 was amended by the Senate to remove a House-approved plan to impose a half-cent fee to the cost of drinks in disposable containers and fast food cups. The Senate plan keeps in place a proposal to charge a $1 per-ton fee on the cost of dumping garbage into landfills.

In last week's legislative action, we also passed legislation to create a unique state park in southeastern Kentucky. The Pine Mountain Trail State Park would stretch along a 120-mile trail along the rocky top of the Pine Mountain ridge.

This "linear" park would be as wide as 1,000 feet in some areas and as narrow as 100 feet in others. The trail would eventually connect with the Cumberland Trail and link to thousands of miles of some of the world's finest hiking trails.

Supporters of the legislation, HB 556, say it will substantially increase economic development and tourism in Kentucky by bringing more visitors into the state to enjoy the peacefulness and scenic wonders of the Appalachian mountains.

There are only a few days left in this legislative session, but I'm interested in hearing your thoughts about the issues confronting our state. I hope you'll take the time to share your comments with me through a letter, e-mail, or phone call.

A Diplomatic Predicament

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bloody Israeli-Palestinian stalemate has plunged President Bush into a diplomatic predicament. With no easy options, he has looked unusually indecisive and vulnerable to criticism that his actions — and inaction — have handicapped peacemaking efforts.

U.S. support for Israel is fanning anti-American sentiment across the Islamic world, causing demonstrations in several countries and clashes between security forces and thousands of Lebanese and Palestinians outside the U.S. Embassy in Beirut.

Moderate nations that Bush will need in any wider war on terrorism, such as Turkey, Egypt and Jordan, are questioning his motives, evidence that the crisis has complicated U.S. plans to widen the war on terrorism and move against Iraq's Saddam Hussein.

Even European allies seem increasingly unhappy with how the Bush administration has handled the crisis. The European Union suggested Wednesday that the United States should step aside and allow a new international alliance to mediate a cease-fire.

Washington Today

By Ron Fournier/AP White House Correspondent

Americans who strongly support Bush's anti-terror efforts are less sure about his moves in the Middle East.

In a CBS News poll, respondents were evenly split about whether Bush has enough experience to negotiate a settlement. Six in 10 Americans approve his handling of the Middle East crisis — a strong show of support but significantly less than his approval ratings for the war on terrorism.

Bush hopes to receive a needed boost this weekend when British Prime Minister Tony Blair visits the president's ranch in Crawford, Texas. Blair has been among Bush's strongest allies in the war on terrorism and is expected to back the president's efforts in the Middle East.

Before the meeting, Bush aides said the president inherited a complex situation in the Middle East and is doing everything he can to ease the crisis. They also hinted that a new initiative may be in the offing.

"The situation, as I think the American people recognize and understand, is deeply, deeply complicated," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said Wednesday.

U.S. officials said Bush is considering a wide range of options, including sending Secretary of State Colin Powell to the region to join forces with envoy Anthony Zinni. Fleischer would not comment on specifics, but said, "The president will always look for constructive ways to accomplish bringing peace to the Middle East."

Bush might have himself to blame for complicating the situation.

He alarmed Muslim nations and many allies by declaring that Iran, Iraq and North Korea were an "axis of evil" that needed to be dealt with. Since his State of the Union address, goodwill built up over the years with Arab leaders has begun drying up.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, a key U.S. ally in the region, urged Bush to take "immediate action" to end Israel's military campaign. His country announced Wednesday it would limit diplomatic contacts with Israel.

Bush painted himself into a diplomatic corner when he declared shortly after Sept. 11 attacks that a country that harbors terrorists would be dealt with as terrorists. As suicide bombers savaged Israel, Bush was forced to admit that his one-size-fits-all doctrine didn't fit Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

It's not the first time Bush's rhetoric has shifted.

He all but endorsed Israel's attacks in Palestinian cities, including Ramallah, on Saturday, even as the United States joined other U.N. Security Council members in calling on Israel to withdraw its troops.

Just two weeks ago, the Bush administration said Israel must withdraw all its troops and tanks from Ramallah and other Palestinian-controlled areas of the West Bank and Gaza. Bush himself said then Israel's actions were "not helpful."

Bush advisers say his position toward Israel softened as suicide bombers increased the nation's death toll. In addition, Israel released seized documents it said directly linked Arafat's office with terror attacks.

That and other developments leave Bush with precious few options, including:

—Give Israel his blessing to evict Arafat and dismantle the Palestinian Authority.

—Announce steps that both sides need to take to stop the violence or even suggest a settlement plan.

—Insist that political issues, such as carving up land, be dealt with at the same time as negotiating a truce and other security issues. For the first time, Fleischer said Wednesday that Bush was willing to embrace both goals at once.

—Wait patiently for both sides to realize that violence isn't the answer and embrace the U.S. call for a truce followed by political talks.

The first option is risky, the second unlikely to succeed, U.S. officials said. The third is only a slight variation of Bush's long-held view that only Israel and Palestinians can create a true peace.

"Bush is not being indecisive or inconsistent," said Jay Farrar, a military analyst for the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington. "Wrong or not, he has held to the same line: Until Palestinians renounce terrorism, the U.S. is going to stand on the sidelines and hope."

Asteroid could strike Earth ... in 878 years, give or take a month

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new look at an asteroid orbiting the sun shows it could possibly smash into the Earth with the explosive force of millions of tons of TNT. But experts say the potential impact is still 878 years away, time enough for the speeding space rock to alter its course.

Named 1950 DA, the asteroid — six-tenths of a mile wide — is the most threatening to the Earth of all of the known large asteroids, but the odds are only about one in 300 that it would impact the planet, researchers said Thursday in the journal Science.

"One in 300 is pretty long odds," said Jon D. Giorgini, a scientist at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., and the first author of the study. "I'm not personally going to worry about it. It is so far in the future that lots of things could change."

Tom Morgan, chief scientist of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's small planet program, said there are approximately 1,000 asteroids bigger than six-tenths of mile that can pass near the Earth in their orbit of the sun. About 580 have been found and their orbits plotted. Of these, only 1950 DA represents a possible threat, and that is centuries in the future. Morgan said NASA continues an effort to identify all the other large asteroids that pass near Earth.

"It is my great hope that we don't find any that are greater threats," Morgan said.

If 1950 DA did hit the Earth, said Giorgini, it would have planetwide effects, setting off fires, changing the weather and perhaps creating immense tidal waves. But it would not be a planet killer like the asteroid thought to have snuffed out the dinosaurs some 65 million years ago. That asteroid was about 16 times larger than 1950 DA, he said.

In any case, said Giorgini, if scientists determine in the coming centuries that 1950 DA does represent a threat, there'll be plenty of time to take action.

"This is not an urgent thing," said Giorgini.

"We can spend a century thinking about it, another century deciding who is going to do something and then another century figuring out what to do."

Three hundred years from now — we can't even imagine how they will handle the problem."

Asteroid 1950 DA was first discovered on Feb. 23, 1950, but then not noted in astronomy logs again for decades. It was rediscovered in 2000 and in March 2001 whizzed within about 77 million miles of Earth, giving astronomers a chance to gather visual and radar readings.

From that, the astronomers projected the orbital path 1950 DA would take on its next 15 near passes of the Earth — over a period covering nearly nine centuries.

For the 15th near pass, on March 16, 2880, the analysis showed it was mathematically possible, though unlikely, that the asteroid could hit the Earth.

"What we are predicting is like figuring out a 15-bank shot in a game of pool," said Giorgini. "We can predict the first 13 banks really well, but it is the last few that we need to know more about."

More observations and perhaps close-up views will improve the accuracy of the prediction.

"Once we know more about the physical properties of the asteroid — what it's made of and how it spins — then we can refine that 15th bounce. But it may take decades to get that kind of information," said Giorgini.

He said the highest probability is that the asteroid in the year 2880 will miss the Earth by about 180,000 miles — a distance closer than the 230,000-mile orbit of the Moon around the Earth.

But the range of mathematical probabilities also include a possible impact.

The asteroid's orbit carries it around the sun every 2.2 years. It passes within 77 million miles of the sun and then loops back into space, passing Mars' orbit and reaching a point some 241 million miles from the sun. In its endless wandering through space, it only infrequently passes near the Earth.

From Our Readers

Dear Editor:

I have been working as a mail carrier here in Murray since June of last year. I am almost daily amazed at the random acts of kindness shown to me by citizens of Murray.

I have received words of encouragement, friendly greetings, offers of water (on those scorching days of last summer), shelter from the storms, etc.

One day, a man on Sycamore stood in the pouring rain to flag me out of his driveway because visibility and traffic were so bad.

Just today, a man on Main Street handed me a snack as I gave him his mail. A nice lady on North 10th Street offered for me to come in and warm up. Last summer when Coldwater Road flooded, the lady at Horton Lock Shop invited me in as I was wading water up to me knees and lightning was flashing.

I wish I could specifically mention and thank all of the people who have been so hospitable and caring.

Carrying the mail has been quite a change from teaching elementary school for 25 years, and I really appreciate the folks of Murray making the transition easier.

EventReminders

The following is a reminder of an event for the week that have recently been published in the Murray Ledger & Times:

Sandra Odom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Callahan and the late Charles Odom of Hardin, and Barry Leidecker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Leidecker of Paducah, will be married Saturday, April 6, at 2 p.m. at Palma United Methodist Church in Palma.

CCMS student earns award

The United States Achievement Academy announced that Brandon Phillips from Hazel has been named a United States National Award Winner in English.

This award is a prestigious honor very few students can ever hope to attain. In fact, the Academy recognizes fewer than 10 percent of all American high school students.

Phillips, who attends Calloway County Middle School, was nominated for the national award by Jeanetta McCallon, a teacher at the school. He will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official Yearbook, which is published nationally.

Phillips is the son of Steve and Kim Phillips of Hazel and the grandson of Jerry Starks and the late Brenda Starks of Almond. Myrna Phillips of Murray and Jim Phillips of North Carolina.

Kiwanians learn about clothing

Members of the Murray Kiwanis Club were pleasantly surprised to learn that a significant garment manufacturing business exists in the community. Judy Mastera-Futrell spoke at last week's meeting and described her business, Shane Lee Clothing, which she started in 1982 and named for her two sons.

Mastera-Futrell was an art major at Murray State University and her designs all feature attractive artwork. Her fashions are aimed at the above-30 age group. She employs eight to 10 people full time in Murray and has a contract factory in Missouri as well.

Though the business has a small outlet store at 308 Main Street, the majority of sales are made wholesale and her clothing is then sold through catalogs and gift stores around the country. They are also displayed on a website, www.shanelee.com.

Kenlake ladies brave cold

Eleven of the Kenlake Ladies braved the cold north winds on Wednesday, April 3, a less than spring-like day.

The ladies divided into three teams for their game of the day, which ended in a tie between the Ina Horth, Delana McCuiston, Betty Cardwell and Joan Griesemer team and the Dotty Elliott, Jeanne Van, Freda Elkins and Becky Borton team with a score of 36 for the nine holes.

Other members present were Bobbe Manning, who had a chip in on the ninth hole, Mary Madajczyk and Hazel Hill.

New adult guide offers solutions for health

Two frequently overlooked health problems among older adults are the inadvertent misuse and abuse of alcohol and medications. Mental health problems — depression and anxiety — also are often overlooked among adults over age 65. The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) and the National Council on the Aging (NCOA) have teamed up to help respond to these issues by releasing a guide for community-based organizations that help seniors.

The new guide, Promoting Older Adult Health: Aging Network Partnerships to Address Medication, Alcohol and Mental Health Problems, provides concrete, practical guidance for mental health, substance abuse, primary care and aging services providers to help them join together to provide education, prevention, screening, referrals and treatment for seniors experiencing or at risk for substance abuse and mental health problems.

"As many as 17 percent of older adults are affected by alcohol and/or prescription drug misuse, and an estimated 20 percent of older adults experience mental disorders that are not a normal part of aging. Yet, older adults often are reluctant to seek help for these preventable and treatable problems," Charles Curie, SAMHSA administrator, said. "This new guide helps facilitate collaborations among mental health, substance abuse and aging services providers to the benefit of millions of older Americans."

"By providing these connections, we can more successfully identify older adults who are at risk for problems with alcohol, medication and mental health and connect them with the prevention education, outreach and treatment services that can dramatically improve their lives," James P. Firman, president and CEO of The National Council on the Aging, said. "There are innovative program models and creative funding strategies described in this book, however, the real success of this joint effort will be measured in the improved quality of life for countless millions of older Americans, both today and for decades to come."

The guide identifies programs across the country that are linking with community partners to provide seniors with needed support without requiring individual organizations to commit large amounts of staff time or money. It highlights how these programs operate and offers lessons from their successes. Finally, it shows how a direct approach to addressing medication, alcohol and mental health problems among older adults can enhance the capabilities of aging services and foster healthy aging in older adults.

The guide is based on findings of a national search by the NCOA to identify exemplary programs that make the needed service linkages. Fifteen programs are profiled in depth and an additional 25 noted. National and state contact information is provided to aid organizations, find resources and advice.

The publication is available free from SAMHSA's National Clearinghouse for Alcohol and Drug Information (NCADI). Call 1-800-729-6686 or 1-800-487-4889 TDD (for hearing impaired).

Program provides education on antiques and collectibles

BY LAURA SKILLMAN

PRINCETON, Ky. — Bobbi Jordan knew the brown vase had been in her family for three generations. But that was the extent of her information until she attended a program sponsored by the University of Kentucky County Extension Agents for Family and Consumer Science and the Pennyriple Area Extension Homemakers.

Jordan learned that the family heirloom which she brought with her to be appraised also was a highly desired collectible.

The program, Your Treasure Chest, Silver, Antiques and Collectibles, allowed participants to gain knowledge on glassware, silver, linens and dolls. In addition, they were invited to bring along something they would like to know more about.

Paducah TV station WPSD taped its "What's It Worth?" program at the event using items participants had brought with them to the UK Research and Education Center.

Laura Wilson, Lyon County Extension agent for family and consumer sciences, said the idea for the March 20 function came from a home furnishings in-service training she attended about a year ago.

Often agents discuss programs they have done at these trainings and Betty Overly, Bourbon County Extension Agent for family and consumer sciences, mentioned one she had done on silver. She is a longtime silver collector and Overly brought her expertise to the western part of the state last week.

"We like to have these seminars and they are pretty well known in the Pennyriple area," Wilson said. "I felt this was something we could build a wonderful program around so a committee of three agents and three homemakers began working on it back in June." When Overly agreed to come, Wilson said it provided the building block. Overly's presentation included all aspects of silver collecting from storing to cleaning to security. "If you are going to buy silver," Overly said, "learn as much about it as you can before you go to buy it. If not, someone else will teach you and it may be an expensive lesson." Some 200 people from the area attended the program.

"The response was so beyond our expectations," said Clara Lawrence, president of the Pennyriple Area Extension Homemakers Association.

The appraisal work for WPSD-TV is done by Jerry Snook, a Paducah dealer who has been in the business for 42 years. Snook looked over items the participants brought to the program and picked out about 30 to use on the show.

"Basically, I look for the most unusual and the rarest of items first," he said. "They are usually the ones that shock people.

"Everything is collectible," Snook said. "There isn't anything that people aren't collecting now. What I tell people is to collect things they like and as long as it is not real expensive they probably aren't going to get hurt. But when they start paying big dollars for anything then they better learn what they are collecting."

Reproductions and less-than-honorable sellers can make it expensive for those who are not well versed in what they are collecting. Snook and other dealers at the event noted.

Many people at the event got their start in collecting by inheriting something or being given a gift. That was the case for Carole Schafer of Trigg County. Schafer collected dolls as a young girl and brought four with her to the program.

The dolls are made of paper-mache and were given to her when she was in high school by a friend of her mother's who knew she collected dolls. They've been sitting in a box in recent years.

Mealtime prayers at U.S. Naval Academy may cease, depending on VMI appeal

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Mealtime prayers at the U.S. Naval Academy might cease if the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond upholds a lower court's ban on saying grace at Virginia Military Institute.

In light of the VMI case, Naval Academy officials are reviewing the legality of traditional prayers at lunch, which probably date from the school's founding 157 years ago.

The 4,000 midshipmen are required to be present at mealtime but praying is up to them, Navy officials said.

"It is made available as an option," said Cmdr. Bill Spann, academy spokesman. "The chaplain says, 'Let us pray,' and you do if you want to and don't if you don't."

A judge ruled in January that grace before meals at VMI is unconstitutional, supporting an American Civil Liberties Union claim based on separation of church and state.

The Virginia case could set a precedent covering religious practices at military schools and other public colleges.

In 1972, the U.S. Supreme Court allowed a lower court's decision that blocked academies from requiring students to attend chapel.

In another prayer issue, the Illinois House voted 95-0 Monday for a bill allowing "student-initiated prayer" in public school assemblies and other gatherings if there is no direction from school administrators. It now goes to the Illinois Senate.

Nebraska Court is asked to define what constitutes a church

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The Nebraska Supreme Court is being asked to decide what defines a church in a case stemming from a liquor license granted to an Omaha convenience store that was challenged by a nearby church.

The city denied the Kum & Go store a liquor license because it is within 150 feet of the House of Faith. The store then got the state Liquor Control Commission to grant the license on grounds that the House of Faith doesn't meet criteria for a church.

The commission says a church is "a building owned by a religious organization used primarily for religious purposes," but House of Faith rents space in its building.

KBC schedules Senior Adult Celebration here

The Kentucky Baptist Convention's 2002 Senior Adult Celebration, which is a contemporary praise and worship service, will be Tuesday, April 16, from 9:15 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. at First Baptist Church.

Senior Adult Celebrations are a great time of fellowship, renewal and spiritual growth. Senior adults will enjoy worship and celebration that is especially designed for them, as well as special interest conferences.

To register, call FBC's office at 753-1854. The cost is $10 per person. Also, a special birthday celebration will be held in honor of all participants. Attendees are to bring a personal hygiene item - shampoo, toothpaste, soap, etc. These gifts will be donated to Kentucky Mountain Missions.

Graves Church of Christ plans Ladies Day

SEDALIA, Ky. — Lebanon Church of Christ, located at the junction of Highways 303 and 339 in Sedalia, will be hosting a Ladies Day on Saturday, April 13. Registration will be from 8:30 a.m. until 9:15 a.m. Lunch will be at 11 a.m.

During the event, guest speaker Cathy Dublin Powell, Jackson, Tenn. formerly of Mayfield, will speak on "Showers of Blessings."

Everyone is invited to attend and bring a friend along to the first annual Ladies Day at the church. The lesson to be discussed at the event is suitable for women of all ages.

Tigers rip Hickman in All 'A' opener

Staff Report
Murray Ledger & Times

The Murray High baseball team used a three-run fourth inning and a seven-run fifth to churn out an 11-1 win over Hickman County Thursday at Ty Holland Field, likely setting up the Tigers for a berth in Saturday's semifinals of the All 'A' Invitational.

Starting pitcher Brandon Thurmond and reliever Blake Rayburn (1-0) combined on a one-hitter in a contest that was halted with two outs in the bottom of the fifth via the 10-run rule.

"We started putting the ball in play in the third inning, and we had good pitching from Thurmond and Rayburn," said MHS head coach Cary Miller after his squad gathered its first win of the year. "I was very pleased with the job they did."

Rayburn earned the win for Murray (1-1) after striking out two Falcon batters and walking one in two innings of work.

Thurmond allowed Nathan Behrens' game-tying RBI single in the third before finishing the day with four strikeouts and two

All 'A' Invitational

Listed are scores from Thursday's action in the All 'A' Invitational tournament, being held this week at Murray's Ty Holland Field.

Murray High 11, Hickman Co. 1
Hickman Co. 8, Todd Co. Central 7.
(8 innings)
McClean Co. 4, St. Mary 1 (9 innings)
Heath 5, St. Mary 3

walks in three frames on the mound.

Kyle Erwin went 2-for-4 at the plate to power the Tigers' eight-hit attack, bolstered by three Hickman County errors.

Matt Kelleher put MHS on the board in the bottom of the second after reaching on a throwing error, stealing second base and advancing on a fielder's choice before charging home on a wild pitch.

Ed Baust's RBI single in the fourth pushed Kelleher across with the go-ahead run, and the Tigers pulled ahead 4-1 on Austin Swain's bases-loaded walk and Dylan Volp's fielder's choice.

Walks to Kelleher and Baust to open the fifth set up Ryan Cobb's RBI single before knocks from Swain, Volp (two RBIs), Erwin and a two-run pinch-hit single by Taylor Houston put the game on ice.

Murray can clinch the Pool 'A' title outright with a win over Todd County Central today at 1:30 p.m.

A Tiger loss would put MHS in a three-way tie with Hickman and Todd at 1-1, with tiebreakers based on runs allowed, hits and then errors committed over the first two games to determine Saturday's qualifiers.

Hickman beat Todd 8-7 in eight innings Thursday, a contest that likely puts Murray in good position in case a tiebreaker is needed. Still, Miller doesn't want his club to relax.

"All of (Thursday's) games were pretty close — a couple of games went into extra innings," Miller said. "There are some quality teams here like McLean County and Heath, so we need to come ready to play."

The top two teams in each pool will advance to the semifinals Saturday at 11 a.m. and 1:30 p.m., with the championship game set for 4 p.m.

Lakers fall to Heath

Staff Report
Murray Ledger & Times

Lance Simmons proved to be the difference for the Heath Pirates during Thursday afternoon's high school baseball showdown against Calloway County.

Simmons was the winning pitcher in Heath's 8-7 victory over the Lakers and also provided the winning hit while going 2-for-3 at the plate.

Calloway (2-3) trailed 7-2 after three innings of play, but rallied for five runs in the bottom of the fourth to tie the game at 7-7.

However, the Pirates (3-0) would thwart the Lakers' comeback attempt in the top of the seventh as Mike Brawner singled and then got into scoring position by stealing second base. Simmons followed with a base hit to drive in Brawner for the winning run.

Heath pounded out 13 hits while holding CCHS to seven. Simmons paced the Pirate offense, which featured five players with two hits apiece.

Senior Brian Asher went 2-for-3 at the plate to pace the Calloway offense, but suffered the pitching loss. Sophomore Tyler Boggess was 2-for-2.

Calloway coach Steve Smith was unavailable for comment.

The Lakers return to action on Monday, completing a four-game homestand by hosting Hopkinsville at 5:30 p.m. before traveling to Paris, Tenn. to face Henry County Tuesday at 6:30 p.m.

Romar named Huskies' coach

SEATTLE (AP) — New Washington basketball coach Lorenzo Romar hardly recognized the place, with the shiny new floors and upgraded interior.

No matter, Hec Edmundson Pavilion is his home again.

Romar was officially introduced as the Huskies' coach Thursday, leaving Saint Louis University to take over at his alma mater.

"I never knew I'd be this fortunate to come back and run the program I was part of," Romar said. "If you'd have told me this was going to happen 20 years ago, I don't think I would have believed it."

The 43-year-old coach agreed to a six-year contract. He'll receive a $700,000 annual package, with the opportunity for an additional $100,000 in annual incentives, depending on the team's academic and postseason success.

Romar's welcoming ceremony was filled with fanfare. The pep band played, cheerleaders danced and many in the stands sported T-shirts reading "Romar Returns."

Two black-and-white photos of a younger Romar playing basketball for the Huskies took him back to this same gymnasium before its $39 million facelift.

"There are so many differences with the new facilities," said Romar, who was greeted by former teammates and the coach who recruited him to Washington, Marv Harshman. Romar played at Washington from 1978-80.

He met with his new team Thursday and individually with leading scorer Doug Wrenn, who said he will decide by Monday whether to stay for his junior season or try his chances in the NBA draft.

"I really want to play for coach Romar and see what he does," said Wrenn.

Thomson silences Cardinals' bats

ST. LOUIS (AP) — So far, the St. Louis Cardinals' comeback kids are 0-2.

John Thomson worked seven strong innings as the Colorado Rockies got to Andy Benes in a 6-1 victory on Thursday.

Benes, who wasn't used in the final month last year and was left off the Cardinals' playoff roster because of a 7.38 ERA, struggled just as Garrett Stephenson had a night earlier.

"When you have the ball, it's up to you to get the guy out," Benes said. "I'm disappointed with the result. I'm sure I'll do better next time."

Benes, slowed by a knee problem last year, made his first start since Aug. 3 and first appearance since Aug. 30. He lasted four innings, giving up five runs — four earned — on four hits.

Juan Uribe and Benny Agbayani homered for the Rockies, who took two of three in the season-opening series. Last year, the Rockies swept the Cardinals in Denver to start the year.

"We did a lot of good things the last few days," manager Buddy Bell said. "We didn't swing the bats all that well last night or even today, but we did some situational stuff we really need to do. It shows the kind of guys we have."

Thomson allowed a run on seven hits, striking out three and walking none, and induced 14 pop-ups. The Cardinals scored in the first on Fernando Vina's leadoff single, stolen base and a sacrifice fly by J.D. Drew, but didn't get a runner past second the rest of the way.

Thomson, who has a 21-35 career record, allowed three runs in his last 16 spring training innings. He's also been on the comeback trail since undergoing shoulder surgery after the 1999 season, and gave the Rockies encouragement when he finished 4-2 with a 3.63 ERA in his last 11 starts last year.

"I got probably to the top of the hill last year in July, I guess," Thomson said. "I talked to Mike Hampton and he said 'You finally figured it out, you don't have to throw 95 mph to get guys out.'"

St. Louis, the NL wild card winner last year, battered Hampton in a 10-2 opening-day victory. The Cardinals totaled four runs against Thomson and Denny Neagle the last two games of the series.

"Neagle and Thomson have really done a great job considering the lineup they've got to face," Bell said. "I think that should give us a little optimism going further into the season."

National champs' playbook winds up on Internet

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — The Miami Hurricanes police their playbooks.

They carry the little green binders almost everywhere: to meeting rooms, classrooms, home and back — always keeping tight control on the team's formations, plays and terminology.

If a player shows up without his, he knows the penalty: running laps after practice. That rarely happens, though, because players guard the 150-page playbooks as if they were the football equivalent of atomic secrets.

Confidential. Covert. Clandestine.

Not anymore.

The national champions' two playbooks, one offensive and one defensive, were stolen last month and parts of them were posted on the Internet. Coral Gables police said someone took the playbooks and returned them March 28 in manila envelopes.

But the Hurricanes downplayed the theft, saying they aren't worried that their Xs and Os reached cyberspace — and possible their opponents.

"It doesn't even matter," running back Jarrett Payton said. "Even if you know what's coming, it's another thing to stop it."

Team officials only learned of the theft when they got the playbooks back. Police and FBI officials are involved in the case but have no suspects, Sgt. Ed Hudak said Thursday.

"We haven't ruled out anybody," Hudak said. "The focus of our investigation is twofold: how it got stolen and how it got disseminated through the Internet."

According to a police report, two manila envelopes arrived by mail at the university's Hecht Athletic Center on March 28. Each envelope was postmarked Tampa on March 22 and had no return address.

Senior guard Justin Burdine and sophomore forward Cuthbert Victor shared Most Valuable Player honors Thursday night at the annual men's basketball awards reception, held in the Currier Center ballroom.

Murray State, which finished 19-13 in 2001-02, advanced to the NCAA Tournament after rallying from a 9-11 hole in late January. The Racers fell to Georgia 85-68 in the first round of the NAAs.

Burdine led the team in scoring at 20.4 points per game while Victor was among the team leaders in most statistical categories, averaging 11.7 points, 7.3 rebounds and 1.4 blocked shots per outing.

Burdine picked up the Jeff Martin Senior Award, along with fellow senior Rod Thomas, who was also presented the Tom Moran Most Courageous Award.

Victor also received the Athletic Director's Character Award and the Most Steals Award after picking up 50 on the season.

Junior forward Antione Whelchel took home the Garrett Beshear Defensive Award and junior guard Kevin Paschel earned the Bennie Purcell Assist Award after handing out a team-high 124 assists on the season.

James Singleton, a junior, won the Dick Cunningham Rebound Award for leading the squad with 10.1 boards per contest. The first player at MSU since Popeye Jones to average double figures in rebounding and scoring, Singleton also won the team's Field Goal Percentage Award for shooting 59.7 percent from the field.

Junior guard Antonio Henderson shot 88.1 percent from the charity stripe to earn the Howard Crittenden Free Throw Award, and junior Nathan Akin rounded out the awards by claiming the Rex Alexander Scholar Athlete Award.

ACC dominates McDonald's game

UConn recruits star in women's contest

NEW YORK (AP) — The McDonald's All-American games provided great news for ACC men's basketball fans and those who root for Connecticut's women's program.

J.J. Redick, a member of Duke's heralded recruiting class, scored 26 points, and Rashad McCants, part of North Carolina's strong freshman class, added 22 to lead the East to the most-lopsided victory ever in the 25th annual boys game, 138-107 on Thursday night at Madison Square Garden.

Redick, who was 10-for-15 from the field, including 5-for-6 on 3-pointers, and had four assists was chosen the MVP, while McCants was 9-for-12 from the field and grabbed six rebounds.

Duke and North Carolina were the only schools represented by more than one recruit. The Blue Devils, who were ranked No. 1 for most of the season as they tried to defend the title, had four players — Redick of Roanoke, Va.; Shavlik Randolph of Raleigh, N.C.; Sean Dockery of Chicago; and Michael Thompson of New Lenox, Ill.

The Tar Heels, coming off the worst season in school history, had three players: McCants, of New Hampton, N.H.; Raymond Felton of Latta, S.C.; and Sean May, of Bloomington, Ind., the son of former Indiana star Scott May.

Redick said the future ACC opponents had fun this week in New York.

"There was some friendly trash-talking, nothing serious," Redick said. "The Duke guys know Carolina will be back again and they know Duke will be good again next year. The rivalry resumes next year."

The first-ever McDonald's girls game featured the five-person class that will try and follow the four starters who graduated after leading Connecticut to an undefeated season and its second national championship in three years.

Ann Strother of Highlands Ranch, Colo., led the West to the 94-85 victory with 21 points and was selected co-MVP.

MHS nearly stuns Lone Oak

Staff Report

Murray Ledger & Times

LONE OAK, Ky. — In Lone Oak's first home twilight softball game, the Murray High Lady Tigers almost stole the spotlight.

Ashley Patterson's RBI triple, followed by Lacey Latimer's run-scoring single, gave MHS a 7-5 lead over the host Lady Flash going into the bottom of the seventh inning Thursday.

But Sarah McGregor's two-run home run, Katelyn Buchanan's double and Ashley Montgomery's game-winning RBI single through a drawn-in infield — all with no outs — prevented the Lady Tigers (0-2) from springing the upset.

"It was Lone Oak's first game under the lights, and it was a very exciting game; the crowd was very into it," said Murray head coach Dave Carr.

"We've got to learn how to close the big ones out, but the kids are very pleased with the way they played and they're gaining some confidence. I think we're going to surprise some people this year."

The Lady Flash (2-1) was certainly in for a shock from the beginning as MHS seized a 3-0 edge in the top of the first.

Shae Burgess struck out yet reached base on a passed ball, and singles from Patterson and Latimer brought Burgess around before Emily Seay smacked a two-run double.

But McGregor (2-0), the Lone Oak pitcher, would get some support from her offense, which responded with two runs in the bottom half of the first and two more in the fourth for a 4-3 advantage.

However, the Lady Tigers struck back with two in the fifth as Shaina Marinoff singled and pinch runner Kelli Voorhies stole second base.

Burgess' fielder's choice produced a run as Voorhies scored on the play at the plate when the Lady Flash catcher dropped the ball, and Patterson (3-for-4) followed with an RBI single.

Lone Oak knotted the contest with a run in the bottom of the fifth against Murray hurler Kaci Carpenter (0-2), who struck out four batters in going the distance. Carpenter allowed five earned runs on 11 hits and four walks.

The second RBI of the afternoon for both Patterson and Latimer (2-for-4) put the Lady Tigers back on top.

But with runners at the corners in the home half of the seventh, Murray was forced to bring the defense in to prevent Buchanan from scoring on a ground ball or a sacrifice fly.

"We had everybody in, but McGregor came through and hit the ball through the infield," Carr said.

The Lady Tigers will return to the diamond today when they visit Fulton City at 4:30 p.m. Today's contest was rescheduled after wet ground cancelled Monday's originally-scheduled game in Fulton.

Arkansas assistant named UAB coach

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Mike Anderson, who took over the Arkansas men's basketball program after Nolan Richardson's stormy departure, was named Alabama-Birmingham's head coach Thursday.

Anderson replaces Murry Bartow, who resigned last month after failing to lead the Blazers to the postseason for the third straight year, the program's longest drought.

Anderson, a Birmingham native who played basketball at Jefferson State Junior College before transferring to Tulsa, joined the coaching staff at Tulsa in 1982 and then went to Arkansas as an assistant in 1985.

"My dream was to come here and play here at UAB," Anderson said. "Now I guess my dream is to coach at UAB."

Bartow, who succeeded father Gene Bartow as head coach at UAB, had a 103-83 record in six years.

UAB is coming off the worst season in its 24-year history, going 13-17 and losing in the first round of the Conference USA tournament. It was only the second losing season for the Blazers.

Gene Bartow became the program's first coach and the school's first athletic director in 1977, leaving UCLA to guide the Blazers to seven straight NCAA tournaments in his first nine years.

He handed the program off to his son and assistant coach in 1996, and Murry Bartow returned the Blazers to the NCAA tournament in 1999 after back-to-back NIT appearances.

Anderson, 42, worked under Richardson for more than 20 years and served as interim head coach after the university decided to buy out the remaining six years of Richardson's contract.

Anderson led Arkansas to a win over Vanderbilt to end the regular season but lost to Tennessee in the first round of the Southeastern Conference tournament.

Anderson interviewed for the Arkansas job but the school hired Stan Heath, who took Kent State to the finals of the NCAA South Regional in his first year.

Protect yourself: Center offers advice to prevent sexual assault

BY MISTY REID
Rape Crisis Center
Community Educator

Rape is one of the most serious, frightening and violent of all crimes against women.

However, rape is not a crime that only happens to women. It is a crime that is non-discriminatory. It is a crime that can happen to anyone.

The month of April is Sexual Assault Prevention and Awareness Month and Child Abuse Prevention and Awareness Month. This makes the month of April dedicated to promoting and creating awareness and prevention of sexual assault and abuse.

By the age of 18, one in four girls and one in seven boys will be sexually assaulted.

This is a startling statistic that grows with each passing year, making rape the most common of the five major felonies in a category that includes murder and aggravated assault.

Sexual assault is difficult for many people to discuss, read about or even think about. However, because acquaintance rape is more common than left-handedness, alcoholism and heart attacks, sexual assault must be acknowledged.

Everyone needs to be aware of it because sexual assault cuts across age, race, gender and economic status.

It is important to understand that rape is not a sexual experience for either the rapist or the victim. Rape is an act of violence, emotional and physical domination and control.

It is an expression of hostility of contempt toward another human being.

Rape is a crime of opportunity. If the opportunity can be eliminated, the chances of becoming a victim will decrease.

A rapist can be just about anyone, and statistics prove that 80 percent of all sexual assaults occur between people who know one another. So, it is important to be able to recognize potentially dangerous situations.

Because acquaintance rape is the most common sexual assault crime, it is important to know how to protect yourself. Ten guidelines on how to be safe with acquaintances are as follows:

1. Trust your gut. If you don't feel comfortable in a situation, leave it.
2. Take care of yourself. Do not put yourself in a situation where other people may have to take care of you, because they might not be there.
3. Be careful when inviting someone into your home, or going into someone else's home. These places are where most acquaintance rapes occur.
4. Communicate with your partner. Be firm. Do not send mixed messages. Be clear with your partner about what you are comfortable doing.

5. Be aware and independent on dates. Have opinions on what you will do; pay your own way and provide your own transportation.

6. Be aware of alcohol and drugs. They can compromise your judgment and the judgment of your partner.

7. If things start to get out of hand, leave and protest loudly. Do not wait for someone else to help. If things begin to feel uncomfortable, leave.

8. When going out with someone new, don't feel you have to go alone. Go on a group date, go out and meet a group of friends, or meet in a public place.

9. Socialize with people who share your values. When you are with someone who is more sexually permissive than yourself, that person might perceive you as sharing those values.

10. Avoid falling for lines such as "If you loved me..." If your partner loved you, he or she would respect your feelings and wait until you are ready.

Sexual assault cannot be predicted, so there are no rules that are ideal for every situation. Only you can judge what will work best. Here are some options you can choose to protect yourself:

1. Run — Running will only work if you are sure you can get to a safe place.
2. Scream — Screaming may scare the attacker off, but it may also make him or her more violent. If you are sure help is within hearing distance, scream loud and long.

3. Stall — If you think you can buy some time to think, stalling may be a good tactic. Try and get the attacker to talk. Get him or her to see you as a real person, not just a target. You can even tell him or her you have a sexually transmitted disease.

4. Struggle — Struggling may scare the attacker off, but it may also work against you by wearing you out or arousing your attacker.

Struggling may make sense, but only if you are sure he or she is alone and has no weapons. Be sure you are prepared to really hurt him if you decide to fight.

There are also several things that caring community members and ordinary citizens can do to help combat sexual crimes.

First, be aware. Realize that everyone is a potential victim and some are potential perpetrators. Work to educate yourself, your children, friends and family members.

Second, realize that attitude affects reality. Do not participate in derogatory jokes, or stereotype women and men. Display an attitude that helps promote healthy views of sexuality and one another.

Third, be supportive and non-judgmental. Whether a victim is a friend, family member or someone you read about in the paper, realize that rape is never the victim's fault. In some cases the victim may be guilty of making a poor decision, but no one asks to be raped.

For more information, to schedule a program or seek help for yourself or a friend, call the Rape Crisis Center toll free at 1-800-928-7273.

The Rape Crisis Center provides services for all nine counties of western Kentucky with offices in Murray (753-5777), Paducah (270-534-4422), Mayfield (270-251-2060) and Benton (270-527-1414). All services are free and confidential.

Red cross offers pet first aid class

The Calloway County Chapter of the American Red Cross will offer a new class in April. Pet First Aid will teach participants basic information on how to recognize illnesses and injuries in cats and dogs.

Instruction will cover immediate attention for common emergencies, and each individual will also be guided through pet CPR training. Shawn Maxwell, who is a certified Red Cross instructor with an extensive background in the animal welfare field, will teach this course.

Pet First Aid will be offered April 20 from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the Calloway County Public Library in the meeting room. The cost is $15 which includes the Pet First Aid book and other supplies.

Preregistration is required at the Red Cross office at 1003 Poplar St. in Murray by April 18. For more information, call 753-1421. All participants are asked to bring a four-legged stuffed animal for demonstration purposes.

National Weather Service offers spotter training program

There will be a Severe Weather Spotting training program put on by the National Weather Service April 8 beginning at 6:30 p.m. in the Freed Curd Auditorium located in the Collins Center on the Murray State University campus.

The program will be presented by meteorologist from the National Weather Service out of the Paducah weather station. The program features lots of graphics and pictures of severe weather, including many pictures from local storms.

Individuals who work outside, play outdoor sports, enjoy water recreation, or would be interested in becoming weather spotters are welcome to attend. There is no charge for the program, which lasts about two-and-a-half hours. For additional information, call Jeff Steen at 762-0023.

DR. GOTT

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is the cause, the symptoms and the treatment for abdominal adhesions?

DEAR READER: Inflammation and injury almost always lead to the formation of scar tissue. Surgery, being an injury in the most fundamental sense, is no exception. Operations, especially in the abdomen, usually heal uneventfully but, during the healing process, strands or webs of scar tissue may form. These filmy scars are called "adhesions" because they adhere to various abdominal organs. No one knows why some people are particularly prone to adhesions and others are not; this biological tendency is unpredictable.

Although many post-operative patients develop adhesions, this tissue does not ordinarily lead to symptoms or health consequences. Nevertheless, in some people, the strands of scar may interfere with intestinal movement by wrapping around portions of bowel or otherwise obstructing the passage of intestinal contents. This causes partial or complete blockage, leading to severe abdominal pain, fever, vomiting, and intestinal swelling; in short, what surgeons term "an acute abdomen." Under these circumstances, further abdominal surgery is necessary to lyse (break up) the adhesions and relieve the obstruction.

Adhesions can cause unexpected symptoms many years after the original operation or infection. Because there are no tests to distinguish intestinal blockage due to adhesions from other, dangerous causes (such as abscesses or kinking), surgery is usually necessary to establish the diagnosis and treat the condition. To my knowledge, there is no non-surgical therapy, diet, exercise or medicine to prevent or treat adhesions.

PETER GOTT, M.D.

A NOTE TO READERS: For an updated and revised Health Report on "Losing Weight" (formerly "Winning the Battle of the Bulge") that includes my No Flour, No Sugar diet send $2 to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. Be sure to mention the article. Also, be on the lookout for more updated Health Reports.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a 44-year-old overweight woman who had two heart attacks and was left with aneurysms of my coronary arteries. I spent five days on life support. During my hospitalization, the cardiologist asked if I had suffered pink eye before my heart problems. I hadn't but had shared my Visine eye drops with a nephew who had. I was eventually diagnosed with Kawasaki syndrome. What on earth is this strange disease?

DEAR READER: First described in Japan in the late 1960s, the syndrome has occurred worldwide, almost always in children. The cause is unknown but believed to be an infection.

The illness tends to progress in stages, starting with fever, irritability and abdominal pain. The second stage consists of rash, swollen glands and conjunctivitis ("pink eye"). Then the involved skin peels off. At this point the complications become evident: arthritis, diarrhea, meningitis and gallbladder disease.

The most serious consequence of Kawasaki syndrome is inflammation of arterial linings, especially of the coronary arteries, leading to serious afflictions, such as heart attack, cardiac inflammation, aneurysms and other complications.

The diagnosis is based on a set of special criteria; there is no single diagnostic test. Treatment includes aspirin and intravenous gamma globulin.

Your cardiologist is to be congratulated on his superior diagnostic skills. Without his expertise, your outcome could have been a disaster. I do not know how you contracted Kawasaki syndrome; certainly you could have caught it from your nephew, but if that were the case, he, too, would have become ill.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I have a 12-year-old son who is academically gifted. He understands, speaks and reads on a much higher level than the sixth-grade program he is in. Unfortunately, the schools in our area are limited in their ability to deal with gifted students.

One teacher told me that the gifted program my son is currently in is not challenging him, while another teacher has suggested he bring down his level of speech, reading, etc., to the level of the other students in his class so that he can fit in more easily.

My concern is that my son will become bored with school and quit, or get so depressed about not fitting in that he may get himself into trouble.

What can I do to foster his intelligence, Abby? Emotionally he is a 12-year-old, but his intellectual capacity is so far advanced, it's becoming difficult to strike the right balance.

All this boy wants is to communicate with kids his own age who have the same abilities and interests that he has. Any suggestions would be appreciated.

SOUTH CAROLINA MOM

DEAR MOM: Consider hiring a college student to tutor your son — and perhaps mentor him. He needs contact with people on his intellectual level. He should feel comfortable with who he is — and he is an academic high achiever who grasps concepts above his grade level. At the same time, encourage him to go out for team sports or join special-interest groups with kids his own age.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is in the military, requiring us to move every two to three years. We are blessed to have family and friends scattered all over the United States. After eight years of trying, we are finally expecting our first child.

Is it proper to send baby shower invitations to out-of-town family and friends even though I know they will be unable to attend?

BURSTING WITH JOY IN SAN ANTONIO

DEAR BURSTING: No. A better way would be to write your family and friends and share your good news now. Send a birth announcement after the baby arrives.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you're not sick of "grandmother stories," because I've got a sweet one.

My grandmother, May, was the "Big Hershey Bar Grandma." She did not approve of smoking, and my father did not approve of giving candy to us kids.

After dinner at Grandma's house, Dad would go outside to smoke and she'd go into her kitchen. Then she would call out, "Come on, kids!" She'd reach into her freezer to break off pieces of a big Hershey bar and give us each a piece.

Now, 45 years later, my husband and I keep assorted bite-size chocolates in a drawer of our entertainment center just below the Disney videos. Our grandson knows the little Hershey's are his, and the bite-size Snickers are my husband's.

I can no longer eat chocolate, and my beloved grandma — the only one I knew — passed on in 1971. But whenever I'm in a store and see those large Hershey bars, I smile, remembering the ones in the small freezer of Grandma's old-fashioned fridge.

DONNA IN PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR DONNA: Although you cannot eat chocolate now, the memory is delicious. Thanks for sharing it.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, April 6, 2002:

Think in terms of gain and growth. You routinely pull white rabbits out of black hats, surprising and delighting many, including you! Allow your creativity to emerge while seeking out your goals. Friends surround you; however, some might be unusually flaky this year. Go with the flow, depending on your immediate circle as well as your own abilities. If you are single, a relationship will appear this coming fall or winter that could evolve into something very special. If you're attached, your relationship will pinnacle to a new level. Focus on your home life together. You add something very special to your life together in the fall of 2002. AQUARIUS proves to be a friend.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

 A friendship inspires you to do something quite different, even if you feel a bit awkward. You make anything possible in this frame of mind. Try a new sport or perfect your abilities in a present one. When you both relax, you can have a "serious" talk. Tonight: The party could go on and on.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

 Tension builds only because you dream of fun and frolic, and someone has plans that are less than jovial for you. Clear out what you must. Another might not want to understand your "excuses." He or she simply wants you! Tonight: Accept a compliment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

 If you can remember last night's dream, you will get a clue about what you need to do today. Something you have been wanting to do or say should not be postponed any longer. Another clearly is receptive to your feedback. Tonight: Listen to the music.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

 What might seem to be an extravagant offer from a friend might be a way of asking for more of a relationship. Be sensitive to this person's dance, knowing what is going on. Decide what you want before anything significant occurs. Tonight: Have an open discussion.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

 It's your pleasure to have your plans confused and changed by a certain "someone." A friend could be depressed by your reversal. Your creativity comes out in a discussion. Think twice about a wild idea before you launch into it. Tonight: Let someone into your world.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

 Has there been something you have been considering doing? Instead of postponing it one more time, do it now. You'll feel a lot better about yourself as a result. Walk through a door and take a risk with a close associate. Tonight: Make it an early night.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

 You're full of fun and games, as if you were a kid again. Enjoy your day with a loved one, even if it means postponing a trip! You can't do everything all at once, though you frequently try to! Maintain your balance through humor. Tonight: Be with the one you love.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

 Center on home and family. By indulging those who make up a substantial part of your life, you add more comfort and ease. Consider a long-desired purchase, anywhere from a swimming pool to perhaps painting a room. Tonight: You don't need to go far.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

 Trust your sixth sense, it will lead you down the correct path. You naturally seem in tune to delighting others. A partner or associate might need more attention than you're giving him or her. Express your caring to those close to you. Tonight: Gab away with favorite people at a favorite spot.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

 What you see as a sure bet, someone else views as a walking disaster. Stop and take in other points of view. Test out your ideas; be willing to solidify them. Take a nap if need be later in the day. Fatigue can even hit the Goat! Tonight: Order in.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

 Sometimes others find you to be inspired and able to think outside the box. Congratulate yourself on your fast thinking and your ability to break through restrictions. Visualize what you want from others, with full expectations of receiving in return. Tonight: Deal with a touchy family member.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

 Don't feel as if you always have to be active and in tune to the moment. Take a day or two off. Slow down, knowing your innate limits and needs. Others can cover for you right now. Turn on a favorite piece of music. Read a book.

Powell brings talents to table

By NANCY BENAC

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a military man, Colin Powell was known for his insistence on setting clear goals, then using decisive force to achieve them. That doctrine won't do him much good now.

In Powell's greatest test yet as secretary of state, President Bush is dispatching him to the Middle East to try to halt escalating violence and steer the Palestinians and Israelis toward peace.

"There's no doubt I sent a great man to go accomplish that mission," Bush said Thursday.

Analysis

Powell has the personal stature, presidential authority and political savvy to rise to a diplomatic challenge.

But the enormity of the task gives pause.

"If it were only a matter of saying the right things, knowing what a sensible solution would be and getting the two parties to agree, Powell is the person you want going in there," said Gideon Rose, managing editor of Foreign Affairs magazine and a former foreign policy adviser to President Clinton.

The problem, say Rose and others, is Powell's own diplomatic and persuasive abilities are secondary to the larger questions of whether the Arabs and Israelis are ready to pull back from the brink of open war and how much U.S. pressure Bush wants to apply.

"It sounds like a job for Superman," said Ed Abington, the Palestinians' top lobbyist in Washington and a former U.S. ambassador in the region. He said Powell is the right person at least to try.

Brookings Institution analyst Ivo Daalder, a "big Powell fan," had this pessimistic view: "Even if Colin Powell were the greatest secretary of state this country has ever seen, I don't think he's going to solve this problem."

Powell, who turns 65 Friday, came into his job bearing the luster of a military career that included leadership of the Persian Gulf War during his tenure as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"It sounds like a job for Superman."

— Ed Abington
Former U.S. ambassador in Middle East

He is still hugely popular at home and abroad, but his foreign policy views are often at odds — and overshadowed — by those in the Bush administration with more hard-line, America-can-go-it-alone positions, such as Vice President Dick Cheney and Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld.

"The ideological balance in this administration is tilted against him," Daalder said. "Powell is a much more moderate, much more cautious, much more multilaterally inclined person."

Powell, for example, tried unsuccessfully to find a way to carry out missile defense testing under the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. Instead, Bush decided to withdraw from the pact to clear the way for development of a national missile defense, to the dismay of many allies.

Powell also is believed to be more reluctant for the United States to go up against Iraq militarily than are others in the administration, although in recent days he has toughened his rhetoric against President Saddam Hussein's government.

Not that Powell's voice isn't heard or that he loses every battle.

He was influential, for example, in getting Bush to modify his position and declare that the Geneva Convention's protections applied to Taliban prisoners, although not to captured members of the al-Qaida terror network.

He also helped ease tensions between the United States and China after the collision of an American spy plane and a Chinese jet fighter last year.

Richard Fairbanks, a foreign policy expert at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, said Powell has dispelled early doubts that he was too cautious, his military background too narrow, for the job of secretary of state.

DIPLOMATIC SKILLS ... Secretary of State Colin Powell, who will travel to the Middle East next week, looks on as President Bush makes a statement in the Rose Garden of the White House, Thursday. In a new push for peace, Bush demanded that Israel pull back its troops from Palestinian cities it occupied in recent days and called on Arab nations to do more to crack down on terrorists. Bush dispatched Powell to the region to deliver the message.

"He has weathered those storms," said Fairbanks. "He is seen as a person of wisdom and probity."

But some critics of U.S. policy on the Mideast say Powell, who hasn't been to the region for almost a year, must share blame for the Bush administration's failure to take a more hands-on approach sooner.

"There's no indication that he wants to do bold stuff and new thinking," Daalder said. "I think he took on board the advice of every other secretary of state, which is don't get involved in the Middle East, because it's a quagmire and you'll never get out."

Abington said Powell's last visit to the region, during which he sent mixed signals on whether he supported truce monitors and endorsed a seven-day period of complete calm that never happened, shows the intricacies of Middle East diplomacy.

"He endorsed positions that I think in retrospect didn't achieve what he was trying to achieve," Abington said. "He's got to be very careful in picking his way through the minefields."

House, Senate balk at series of amendments

By MARK R. CHELLGREN

Associated Press Writer

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Constitutional amendments to give the General Assembly more latitude to set business rules and overturn administrative regulations may be caught up in the legislature's own power struggle.

The House and Senate have long had an informal arrangement to approve the amendments proposed by the other chamber and put them on the ballot for voter consideration.

But when the session broke for its veto recess on Tuesday, a House amendment was bottled up in the Senate and the Senate's proposal was hanging in limbo in the House.

"I'm not interested in linkage here," said Sen. Charlie Borders, R-Russell, sponsor of the Senate proposal to repeal numerous sections of the Kentucky Constitution that relate to business regulation.

But Borders also acknowledged that the fate of his amendment may be inextricably intertwined with a House proposal that would give the legislature an effective veto of regulations.

Rep. Bob Heleringer, R-Louisville, the original sponsor of the regulations amendment, said his idea has already been hijacked and he has lost interest in it.

Heleringer said he wanted to give the legislature more power to review and reject contracts, bonding and regulations emerging from the executive branch. The bill pending in the Senate has only a vague outline of legislative authority to set up a review process for regulations.

The courts have repeatedly ruled that the legislature has limited authority over administrative regulations, except when it is in session. In 1990, voters rejected another proposed amendment that would have given the legislature more power over regulations.

The business amendment would delete several sections of the 1891 constitution that impose broad rules on companies doing business in Kentucky. Some of them seem as old as the constitution — Section 208, for example, says the word "corporation" includes joint stock companies and associations. Others targeted for repeal, though, appear still relevant.
