MPD: Attempted child abduction investigated

By TOM BERRY
Staff Writer
The Murray Police Department is investigating a report of a suspicious man allegedly trying to get a Murray Middle School student walking home from classes to get into his car. The unidentified juvenile told police he was walking in the Poplar Street area between Eighth and Ninth streets when a man in a green, four-door sedan asked him to get in the vehicle. The student immediately ran away after being approached and went home, police said. However, he later described the suspicious person as a dark-skinned male with some facial hair who spoke with an

As part of a public celebration of the $1 million gift to Murray State University from BB&T, the university will host John A. Allison, chairman of the board of BB&T, as he presents a lecture on leadership on Monday, April 13. The lecture will take place in the Murray Room of the Regional Special Events Center at 4 p.m., and is open to the public.

Assembly ends on positive note

When the Kentucky House of Representatives adjourned sine die, we ended the 2009 legislative session with a sense of accomplishment and pride. In a matter of 29 days, we passed legislation that makes sweeping changes to our public school system's testing procedures, shores up our struggling economy, builds roads and improves infrastructure throughout the Commonwealth and creates hundreds of much needed jobs.

Kentucky's $3.7 billion road plan is a major economic stimulus package that infuses money into every county for bridge and road construction and repair.

The combination of federal funds, traditional state funds and the $438 million stimulus from the president makes this road plan unlike any other, as it will also create construction-related jobs in all corners of the state.

We passed legislation that will change the way we assess our schools and the students themselves.

The CATS tests that have essentially graded our elementary and secondary schools for the last decade are over, and will gradually be replaced by a newer system over the next several years.

This process will give parents and teachers alike a better idea of how individual students are doing. These tests will not take as long to give, and writing portfolios, while still in use, will no longer be part of the assessment.

Instead of resorting to further drastic cuts in essential state services like Medicaid, education, parks, law enforcement, we passed a revenue package that provides $52 million in the current budget and more than $158 million in the next full budget year.

This was, of course, anathema to smokers and drinkers, but this was the only revenue package that the Senate would consider, and it was either pass this or make drastic cuts to elementary and secondary education, as well as more cuts to higher education.

Education being the key to a better future for all our citizens, such cuts were simply not acceptable to anyone thinking about the future of Murray and Calloway County.

Many hours and late nights went into the passage of these historic bills and a spirit of bipartisanship between the House and Senate fueled the successful negotiations.

That same cooperation enabled us to pass bills that promote education, public safety and a better quality of life for Kentucky families and children. This legislation includes:

- a bill that will require high school coaches to be trained in CPR and in the use of automated external defibrillators
- a bill that prohibits registered sex offenders from being on school or daycare grounds without prior written approval from leaders of those institutions
- a bill that allows school districts to ask the state to waive up to 10 "disaster days" once all makeup days are used and lengthen school days to make up any days missed due to bad weather
- a bill that allows certain drug offenders to avoid incarceration by successfully completing drug treatment
- a bill that allows dentists and optometrists to provide charitable health care
- a bill that will restrict attendance of minors at concerts where alcoholic beverages are sold
- a bill that institutes a program to assist Kentucky National Guard members returning from deployment overseas with physical and mental conditions
- a bill that allows an insurer to waive a deductible in whole or in part for an insured who experiences food spoilage as the result of a natural disaster in a county declared to be a federal disaster area
- a bill that will give us better oversight of payday lending institutions by requiring that a state database be created by July 2010 for lenders to search for any outstanding loans a customer might have. It will also prohibit new payday loan stores from opening over the next 10 years.

It has been a good session and I am proud of all that we accomplished.

We worked through some very difficult issues and came to consensus that ultimately will serve Kentucky and our constituents well.

'Too big to fail' is right size to regulate Capitalism can't always be trusted. If you're too big to fail, you're too big to make all your own decisions, according to the emerging view in Washington.

Three decades after Ronald Reagan launched a determined campaign to ease government regulations on business, the pendulum is swinging the other way.

"Too big to fail" is the right size to regulate," declares Rep. Al Green, D-Texas.

Riding a wave of public anger over Wall Street greed and government bailouts, the Obama administration on Thursday unveiled a far-reaching plan for "better, tougher, smarter" rules over big financial companies. The plan would crack down on major — but now lightly regulated — players such as hedge funds and traders of exotic financial products.

The administration is also pressing for closer international coordination. Allies want the U.S. to get tougher, and the new plan will give President Barack Obama something to show when he goes to London next week for an economic summit of 20 major and developing nations.

Much of the regulatory framework now in place dates back to the Great Depression, some back to just after the Civil War.

Most of what Obama is seeking, including a new regulator to oversee the entire financial system, will require legislation. With the level of angst in the country as high as it is, it seems likely he will get at least some of the changes through the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Even administration critics acknowledge there needs to be more financial regulation to avoid any repeat of the kind of meltdown that has plunged much of the globe into painful recession. Few would argue that it's a good idea to allow sprawling financial conglomerates to be able to shop for their own regulator — pretty much what bailed-out insurer American International Group did.

But there is also fear of going too far and suppressing the entrepreneurial spirit that is part of the nation's free-market heritage. The pendulum had been swinging against tough regulation until recently.

Although President Jimmy Carter began deregulation efforts in the late 1970s, focusing on airlines, trucking, railroads and natural gas, Reagan popularized the idea as a major government goal. He imposed a moratorium on all new federal regulation enforcement upon taking office.

Contending government was the problem, not the solution, to the nation's ills, he persuaded Congress to deregulate many businesses. He spoke of setting free the mighty engine of capitalism. Distinctions between commercial and savings banks were eliminated during his presidency.

President Bill Clinton continued the process, signing legislation ending the 1930s-era barrier between banks and investment and insurance companies, but without subjecting those nonbank institutions to the rules that apply to banks.

In the midst of the current crisis, Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H., still says the government needs to not overregulate "to the point where we wipe out one of our great advantages as a nation, which is that we had folks willing to put money up for people willing to take risk and try to create jobs."

Paul C. Light, a professor of public service at New York University, noted that complex investment products known as derivatives, including mortgage-backed securities, "were once seen as a great innovation and widely celebrated." Their implosion set off the global financial meltdown.

"We want more transparency but we want, at the same time, to protect innovative ideas. Everyone's so angry. What the public wants is a radical pendulum swing toward the tightest regulation. We just have to be careful that we don't overdo it," Light said.

In any event, said Light, "We're certainly done with the era of self-regulation. That's over."

Supporters of more regulation say they don't want to squelch American entrepreneurship. "Obviously, no system is going to prevent all failures, because it would then be too restrictive," said House Financial Services Committee Chairman Barney Frank, D-Mass. The goal is to minimize the likelihood that big financial entities will get so heavily indebted "that their lack of success threatens the whole system," he said.

Another part of the administration's financial-regulation overhaul, unveiled earlier in the week, would grant the government the power to seize any large failing financial company, a power it now holds only for banks. It also plans to send Congress legislation protecting consumers and eliminating flaws in existing regulations.

The proposals announced on Thursday, designed to limit risk-taking, are "a good start to a long process," said White House spokesman Robert Gibbs.

Still, Washington always addresses the sins of the past, tries to solve old problems and doesn't have a crystal ball to deal with the future.

Whatever the rules, someone tries to come up with ways to slip around them, sometimes with Washington's help.

Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil McLeod

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil McLeod of Murray are celebrating their 60th wedding anniversary today, April 8, 2009. They were married at Hopkinsville on that date in 1949.

Mrs. McLeod, the former JoAnn Holsapple of Kuttawa, is the daughter of the late George and Otis Holsapple of Kuttawa.

Mr. McLeod is the son of the late Joe and Claudie McLeod of Old Birmingham.

They are both retired from Fisher Price. Mrs. McLeod is now a door greeter at Murray Walmart and Mr. McLeod repairs small engines.

They have one son, Edward Eugene McLeod, and one daughter, Glenda (Pee Wee) Elkins and husband, Mickey, of Almo.

Dr. Mangold keeps students at the forefront of media

In a world where Facebook and MySpace rule the social media, Murray State University marketing professor Dr. Glynn Mangold is keeping students at the forefront of technology by instructing a marketing class focused on social media and promotional management. The course focuses on exploring new media's role in the promotion mix.

Considered a "non-traditional" course, this class can only be taken with permission of the instructor. Mangold speaks with students interested in the class to make sure they are ready to take on the challenge of a heavier-than-average course load.

This three-credit-hour course studies the relationship of promotional activities to other marketing activities of business and non-profit organizations. Emphasis is placed on the interrelationships and activities of promotional devices such as advertising, personal selling, publicity and sales promotion.

Students participate by working on interactive assignments, with only one hour of class time spent in lecture. With the rest of the time spent on various group projects, including the development of a promotional plan for an existing business or non-profit organization, students create podcasts, YouTube videos, team reports and more for a hands-on learning experience. "The point of this class is to work with social media in order to understand it," Mangold said.

One avenue of social media analyzed and used in this class is the website Twitter, where students practice "tweeting," a term coined by Mangold to describe the voicing of thoughts and ideas about issues and responding to the comments of others on the site. An up and coming medium, Mangold promotes the site as a good way to network. Through his own "tweeting," he has been able to make a connection with the CEO of the online accessory company Zappos, and some of his blog followers include higher ups at Ford and Proctor & Gamble. Other social media outlets studied and utilized in this class include Facebook, blogs, Linked-In and Wikipedia.

As another perk of a non-traditional class, students do not buy regular textbooks, but instead buy two "trade books" at prices a fraction of regular college textbooks. The books utilized in this class are Charlene Li and Josh Bernoff's book, Groundswell: Winning in a world transformed by social technologies, and Christopher Vollmer and Geoffrey Precourt's Always On: Advertising, Marketing and Media in an Era of Consumer Control.

For a grade, students put together a book report in the form of a podcast for the book Groundswell, and create a YouTube video version of a book report for Always On. Not only do students receive feedback from Mangold on these projects, but they also are given the opportunity to have Groundswell author Charlene Li view and give feedback via Facebook on their podcasts.

For more information about the Marketing 569 course, contact Mangold at (270) 809-6198 or at glynn.mangold@murraystate.edu

Horoscope
 by Jacqueline Bigar

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, April 9, 2009:
 This year, you think in new and even more practical ways. With the planet of luck cheering you on, you could hit several home runs in your life. Success comes from detachment. Learn to pull back and understand others better by not judging, but expressing your compassion. Imagine what it is like to walk in someone else's shoes. If you are single, you could meet someone quite different and unique who opens new doors. If you are attached, the two of you need not argue but simply respect your differences and learn from each other. SAGITTARIUS pushes doors open that you never knew existed.

where it hurts. Pull out all the stops when dealing with work and another issue around your personal life. You can choose to view this situation as black-or-white, or absorb another perspective. Tonight: Screen calls. Do for you.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
  You quickly discover that the true meaning or intent behind your words can be easily misread. How you deal with friends, neighbors and people in general impacts your day. Juggle your thoughts. You have a lot to accomplish. Tonight: Follow the music.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
  Curb wild spending if possible. Help a friend say no to an extravagance. Later, he or she will thank you for that extra support. Emotions and nervous energy will play out through your checkbook. If you can, pull back. Tonight: Think "moderation."
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
  You are all smiles and hard to contain. Others keep calling, asking and requesting your presence. Sort through what are must-dos and what you can and probably would be happiest postponing. You don't have to please everyone -- not that you could. Tonight: Say yes to a special invitation.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
  There are some matters you would prefer not to discuss. Conversations might seem awkward; your feelings could be hurt. Still, timing encourages reflection, compassion and understanding. Not everything is as it seems. Tonight: Head home pronto.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
 * Emphasize facts in a meeting and avoid any hearsay or wishful thinking. You come from a sound place and make a strong presentation for whatever remains key right now. Someone makes an indirect compliment about your focus. Tonight: The world is your oyster -- remember that and act like it.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
  You'll put in a performance few will forget if you are focused and willing to take on a responsibility. Evaluate and understand what your true potential might be if you pursue the present course. Do you want this? Is it right for you? Tonight: Burning the candle at both ends.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
  Let your intellect, vision and imagination meld. The possibilities multiply. Cease to judge, but do recognize a good idea by jotting it down. It is important to use all your imagination. Tonight: Try something new.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
  You recognize special moments that need to be spent with a special person. Even if it's just for business, honor your highly tuned sense of what is workable. Move forward, understand and possibly take a risk. Tonight: Togetherness works.

Jones, LaBelle to be honored at The Apollo

NEW YORK (AP) — The Apollo turns 75 this year and to celebrate its anniversary, the legendary Harlem theater is inducting Quincy Jones and Patti LaBelle into its Hall of Fame.

The Harlem theater also will present its arts and humanitarian award to Bill Cosby and his wife, Camille, at the June 8 anniversary gala benefit concert.

Previous recipients have included Denzel Washington and his wife, Pauletta, and Spike Lee and Tonya Lewis Lee.

The lineup of performers for the evening include actor/comedian Jamie Foxx, singers Mariah Carey and Anita Baker, and the R&B group O'Jays.

The Apollo has been a pioneer for aspiring black performers who were routinely turned away at other venues in the 1930s. Through its legendary Amateur Night, the Apollo is famous for propelling the careers of Ella Fitzgerald, Billie Holiday, Stevie Wonder, James Brown and others.

A host of special performances and programs are planned for the 1,500-seat theater in celebration of its opening in 1934. Among the highlights is a new production of the hit musical, "Dreamgirls." Loosely based on the Supremes, the opening number takes place on the Apollo stage. After a limited engagement from Nov. 7 to Dec. 5, the show is scheduled to go on a national tour.

The Apollo also has collaborated with the Smithsonian Institution on an exhibition drawn on its archives that explores the Apollo's impact on music around the world. The show will open in April 2010 at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C.

MSU ROUNDUP

Racers, Carrico take second at Big Blue Intercollegiate

By MSU Sports Information
NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The Murray State men's golf team gained a shot on leader Belmont in the final round of the Tennessee State Big Blue Intercollegiate Tuesday, but couldn't take the lead and settled for a second place finish in the 14-team field at the Hermitage GC General's Retreat course in Nashville, Tenn.

behind Middle Tennessee's Hunter Green who won the event as an individual with scores of 68-69-68=205.
MSU's Nick Newcomb placed seventh after rounds of 72-73-70=215, while Mitchell Moore had rounds of 71-74-73=218 to take 15th place. Jared Wolfe finished 22nd after scores of 75-74-70=219. Chris Griffin placed 36th in the field of 70 players with rounds of 74-74-74=222.

of 280-288-288=856. Tennessee Tech (870) was third with UT Martin (870), Evansville (878), Cumberland (884), John A. Logan (886), Lipscomb (886), SIU Edwardsville (887), and Morehead State (889) rounding out the top-10.
Still the Racers 2008-09 season has been impressive.
In 10 events, MSU has scored five wins and four runner-up showings and has loads of confidence going into the final two events of the season.
Friday, MSU begins play at the UK Bluegrass Invitational at the University Club in Lexington, Ky. The Racers finished second last season in the event.

Tigers

Johnson wasn't overly concerned about the righthander's pitch count, saying he needed the work after a long layoff.
Kelly may get the starting nod again in Thursday's semi-final, but Johnson could elect to go with either Downey or Sweeney, all of whom got at least an inning of experience Tuesday night.
"I tried to get everybody a shot out there that I thought might be throwing this weekend," said Johnson. "Neither one of them has pitched here

CCHS

Calloway County tacked one more run on in the sixth inning when Taylor Futrell scored on an error after reaching on a single with one out in the inning.
Ashton Futrell picked up the victory, going seven innings and allowing no runs on just two hits and striking out four.
The Lady Lakers return to the diamond Friday night at the Marshall County Slug Fest. CCHS will play Martin Westview at 5:30 p.m. and then play Carbondale, Ill., at 8:30 p.m.

Lax

Unique has been a staple at Kentucky in terms of media guides for Lax and her crew. The UK hoops' media guide has been judged in the nation's top 10 four consecutive seasons, including "Second in the Nation" in 2006 and 2007.
"Each year we strive to add more 'recruiting flavor' to our guide which means more pictures and information our recruits would want to know about UK," she said. "We have a lot to offer at UK with a lot of resources so it's not that hard to sell.
"I think the judges liked our guide and design because we carried our 'championship mode' theme throughout the guide and it was clear and easy to read. We put all of our recruiting pages in the front of the book so to 'wow' the reader from the start. The judges seemed to like it."

Lax admits, however, that it's not uncommon for her to draw inspiration from other publications, although for Lax, sometimes it comes in the most obscure of places.
"I'm always looking at magazines, advertisements, and other people's books to draw inspiration," she said. "We might even have an idea for next year because of a design I saw on the back of someone's cell phone. I don't like to do cheesy themes on my media guide but I do like it to be different and something a recruit can look at and say 'Wow, that media guide is cool and different.'
Lax also splits her time at UK as an assistant football coach, meaning the fall season is jam-packed with Lax pulling double-duty with women's basketball as well.
"After the season is over in the spring I start updating the records portion of the media guide and then I really begin writing the meat of the guide which includes player bios, coaches bios, a season review, the upcoming season outlook and recruiting material during the summer and fall," she said. "It has to be totally completed, to the printer and back in hand by the end of October. August and September are crazy months for me because I'm slammed with football duties as well."

Lax jokes that UK head coach Matthew Mitchell expects nothing less than "Best in the Nation" every year, but for this year in particular, Lax is content and satisfied with the finished product.
"Seeing the finished product... It takes months to put together and it's a big stress for me every year but after it's finished I know the media and our coaches and players really enjoy using it and they appreciate it. It's worth it in the end."

MCCH marks occupational therapy month

Occupational therapy enables people of all ages to live life to its fullest by helping them promote health, prevent – or live better with – injury, illness or disability. It is a practice deeply rooted in science and is evidence-based, meaning that the plan designed for each individual is supported by data, experience and “best practices” that have been developed and proven over time.

“My experiences as an occupational therapist have been extraordinarily fulfilling and have made me who I am today,” said Clay Chapman, director of Rehab Services at Murray-Calloway County Hospital. “Through occupational therapy I have been given the opportunity to ease the suffering of people of all ages and backgrounds who have been sick, afraid and in pain. It is a wonderful profession that allows me to learn something new every day while helping others regain their lives.”

Occupational therapists and occupational therapy assistants focus on “doing” whatever occupations or activities are meaningful to the individual. It is occupational therapy’s purpose to get beyond problems to the solutions that assure living life to its fullest. These solutions may be adaptations for how to do a task, changes to the surroundings, or helping individuals to alter their own behaviors.

When working with an occupational therapist, strategies and modifications are customized for each individual to resolve problems, improve function and support everyday living activities. The goal is to maximize potential. Through these therapeutic approaches, occupational therapy helps individuals design their lives, develop needed skills, adjust their environments (e.g., home, school, or work) and build health-promoting habits and routines that will allow them to thrive.

Murray-Calloway County Hospital will host a celebration for the Occupational Therapists in recognition of Occupational Therapy Month. MCCH recognizes the following occupational therapists at MCCH for their hard work and dedication: Mary Burditt, Erica Cowan, Tina Green, Jeni Harrison, Kim Grogan, and Clayton Chapman.

Founded in 1917, the American Occupational Therapy Association (AOTA) represents the interests and concerns of more than 140,000 occupational therapists, assistants and students nationwide. AOTA’s major programs and activities are directed toward promoting the professional development of its members and assuring consumer access to quality services so patients can maximize their individual potential. For more information, go to www.aota.org.
