Sen. Winters: Legislators mindful of storm victims

By TOM BERRY Staff Writer

First District Sen. Ken Winters said legislators returned to Frankfort this week to finish work during the final weeks of the 2012 biennial session with a heavy heart because they had the plight of Kentuckians affected by tornadoes that recently devastated the Commonwealth on their minds.

Despite the adversity, Winters (R-Murray) commended emergency responders and community volunteers that aided their neighbors.

"Our state has not faced a tornado outbreak of this magnitude for decades, but the response at the local, state and federal levels has been outstanding. The resiliency, courage, and unity of Kentuckians - well, even moreso," Winters said. "While we mourn the dead and deeply regret the loss of property, we celebrate the persevering spirit of the Commonwealth. While the recovery process will be long and hard for many, we have no doubt about our communities' abilities to survive. recover, and thrive.'

However legislators don't have much time left to finish work in Frankfort, including a lympic gold medalist Joanna Dove Hayes is this year's Giving Back Visiting Scholar and will be in Murray on March 28 to speak about her philanthropic efforts.

Dr. Bob Long, distinguished visiting professor of nonprofit leadership with Murray State University's College of Health Sciences and Human Services, said Hayes would be in town as part of the Giving Back Scholars Program event. The program involves Youth and Nonprofit Leadership students presenting local organizations with a total of $5,000 in grants. The program was created and is funded by Long and his wife, Patricia. The goal of the program is to advance the understanding, appreciation and application of Hayes the principles of generosity, caring and service to others among students, faculty and across the community,

According to Long, Hayes is a 2004 Athens Olympic gold medalist in the 100meter hurdles. She started as a 400-meter runner, winning a silver medal in the 1999 Summer Universiade in Spain and a gold medal in the 2003 Pan American Games in the Dominican Republic. At the 2004 World Indoor Championships, she finished fourth in the 100-meter hurdles, and went on to become the Olympic champion that August.

In addition to coaching track and field and cross country at Harvard-Westlake School in Los Angeles today, Hayes is committed to giving back to her community. In 2008, she established the Joanna Hayes Foundation. The Foundation was formed to help broaden the horizons of children living in challenging situations to House-approved budget plan that is now under consideration by Senate subcommittees, and got down to work that may last through the weekend.

" There will almost certainly be changes, the scope of them yet unknown, before the proposal clears the Senate and then the full General Assembly," Winters said. "Balancing the state's biennial budget is never easy. This year the job feels even more daunting as we continue our slow recovery from the recent recession."

Final details of the budget remain uncertain. What is certain is that state agencies will certainly see cuts.

"We do know that painful cuts to nearly every state agency are unavoidable," Winters said. "Still, our commitment to protecting necessary core services remains. We are working hard to ensure the final appropriations, and cuts, are made in the most effective and least painful way possible.'

Some Senate work has been completed and sent to House legislators for review. Among bills passed is Senate Bill 88, which makes allowance for Kentucky high school students earning Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship (KEES)

"Currently, students who transfer from an eligible to an ineligible high school in Kentucky or another state forfeit their KEES earnings," said Winters, chairman of the Senate Education Committee

"This bill would allow them to keep the KEES funds they earn while at the eligible school as long as they obtain a high school diploma or GED within two years of their presumed graduating class."

Winters said Senate Bill 143 would allow parents to enroll children in school districts other than the one in which they reside if the receiving district approves the transfer.

"The bill also prohibits schools from charging tuition for out-of-district students but makes a provision for a portion of the SEEK fund allocations to be made for the district the student actually attends," Winters

Winters, legislators... Winters said supporters of the measure say the legislation would help parents who would rather their children attend school in the same district in which they work, keeping them nearby during the day, as opposed to the district in which they live. Meanwhile Winters said Senate Bill 58 addresses an increase in hospital emergency room violence.

"Similar to the exception made for misdemeanor shoplifting and domestic-violence situations, the bill would allow police officers to make an arrest, based on probable cause alone, for misdemeanor assault occurring in an emergency room," Winters said. "Under current law, the police officer would have to witness the crime before being allowed to make an immediate arrest."

The Senate has also moved to give the Kentucky Agricultural Finance Corporation more lending power. Senate Bill 108 passes unanimously. If approved by the House and signed into law by Gov. Steve Beshear, the measure increases the maximum loan amount for established farmers, those who have owned a farm for at least a decade, from the current $1 million to $5 million.

Meanwhile, Senate Bill 131, affecting college and other postsecondary education, provides a mechanism for allocating the 18 advanced practice doctoral programs that were approved under earlier legislation among the Commonwealth's "comprehensive" universities.

"We hope that the measure will increase the number of quality advanced-degree programs offered in Commonwealth," he said. "Several other bills cleared the chamber, as well. Many more will be considered in these 16 final and busiest working days of the legislative session."

working in a local restaurant gave him the foundation he needed to continue in the industry, as he attended and graduated from the Culinary Institute of America, and established himself in the catering business in Lexington.

As a caterer, Stoddart said he has prepared everything from Kentucky hot brown box lunches to a traditional Russian din-

Ice sculpture has always interested Stoddart, but it was a seminar from the American Culinary Federation that sparked his development as a sculpture artist.

"They had power tools, and I thought, 'This is really cool,'"

Stoddart said his first attempts at carving suffered from "ugly swan syndrome," but it did not take long before he was placing in professional competitions.

This February Stoddart earned the title of U.S. 2012 Professional Ice Carving Champion at the National Ice Carving Association (NICA) championships in Branson, Mo.

Stoddart earned the title with accumulated points from three ice carving events. In one, he created a grasshopper perched on a twig using a raw 300pound block of ice. The sculpture took him under two hours.

Ice carving has made its way into Stoddart's catering business as well. He said one of his favorite event pieces was a large signature sculpture for a 1950s themed fundraiser party.

"We made a 1957 Chevy out of seven blocks of ice, and cut the window out of it, and used it to serve food out of," said Stoddart.

Stoddart said one of the reasons he enjoys working in ice is the fluidity of the medium. A sculpture will start out with one shape, and evolve as it melts, he

"A swan will have feathers and details on it when you first set it out, and as the night goes on it all melts, but it melts at the same rate. So, what you end up with is an abstract swan. It really looks pretty," Stoddart remarked.

lce sculpture is becoming a family affair in the Stoddart household. Stoddart's 15-yearold son has begun competitive ice carving, and has already won bronze in competitions against college-age carvers, Stoddart noted.

affordable to those who now struggle to find and keep coverage. Individual consumers and small businesses will be able to shop online for competitively priced coverage, and many will receive government subsidies to help pay premiums.

Experts say it's anybody's guess how the national rollout will go. If a state is not ready, the law requires the federal government to step in to run its exchange. But the Obama administration's request for $800 million to operate federal exchanges has gotten a frosty reception from congressional Republicans.

"At this point it's still an open question as to whether all the states will open up as of 1-1-2014," said Neil Trautwein of the National Retail Federation, a business group whose members will be heavily affected by the

The new markets are for individuals and small businesses. Most people who now have employer health insurance will not have to make changes. It's a design that works well in Massachusetts, where an exchange has been in place for several years.

Massachusetts achieved political consensus about its health care overhaul under former GOP Gov. Mitt Romney, who is now seeking his party's presidential nomination. That's far different from the enduring national divisions President Barack Obama's law, even though it used Romney's as a foundation.

Setting up 50 state exchanges wouldn't be easy even if the federal overhaul enjoyed widespread support.

For things to go smoothly, state and federal officials must work together to verify private personal and financial details for millions of people, make sure consumers are enrolled in the right health plan, and accurately calculate how much government aid, if any, each household is entitled to receive.

And with customer service the goal, consumers need to get answers in hours, not weeks.

Nearly 30 million people, about half of whom are currently uninsured, are eventually expected to get private health coverage through exchanges.

Another group of uninsured people — as many as 16 million low-income Americans expected to qualify for Medicaid could also enter the system through their exchanges.

Amish buggy bill could be nearing final passage

By ROGER ALFORD Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The Amish could forego a longstanding traffic safety measure in the name of religious freedom under a measure that could be near final passage in the Kentucky General Assembly.

The House Transportation Committee voted 25-1 on Tuesday to pass a Senate bill that would allow the Amish to use strips of reflective tape on the backs of their horse-drawn buggies rather than bright orange triangles some object to.

The Amish argue that God directs their safety, even on the roads. They say the bright color of the signs calls attention to them, which is against their religion, and the triangular shape represents the Trinity, which they're not allowed to flaunt.

The proposal now goes to the full House for consideration. If approved there, it would return to the Senate for final passage, which could happen within days. Gov. Steve Beshear has not said whether he favors the bill.

State Sen. Ken Winters, R-Murray, filed the legislation because several Amish men in his western Kentucky district were jailed for refusing to pay fines for not using the orange signs. They have appealed their convictions to the Kentucky Supreme Court, which is scheduled to hear oral arguments Thursday.

"This bill is important to all of us," Winters said. "If something is done to challenge my religious beliefs, I hope that somebody would come to my rescue or my people's rescue.

But beyond that, my motive is to assure that we have the safest possible environment for them while they're traveling our roads. But it's to protect others, too. You know, it's not just the people in that buggy who could get killed. It's the people in the car who might try to miss them and go into a ditch or hit them and ricochet into a tree."

The bill would allow the drab Amish buggies to be outlined with gray or silver reflective tape that makes them shine in the dark when they reflect car lights. Winters said tests have proven that the reflective tape makes the buggies visible up to 1,000 feet away.

The legislation would go into effect immediately if signed by Gov. Steve Beshear, who hasn't committed either way. If approved, it could make the Supreme Court case moot. Winters said he'd like to see the bill win final passage before Thursday's hearing. Winters said the Amish already have implemented the requirements of the bill by outlining the backs and sides of their buggies in the reflective tape, as well as putting the tape on the front left corners of the buggies. They've also adopted a provision of the bill that sets parameters for lanterns used on the buggies, requiring one on the left side to be a foot taller than the one on the right.

"There's no question in my mind that the bill would provide a much, much safer environment for the occupants of that buggies as well as those us who are traveling the roads with them," Winters said.

the driver's side of Largent's vehicle, Tidwell said.

Largent, her juvenile passenger and Breedlove were transported by Murray EMS to the Murray-Calloway Hospital emergency room. Emergency room director Jeanne Mathis reported they were all in stable condition as of 5 p.m. Tuesday.

BENTON, Ky. - Two Calloway County residents were arrested by Marshal County Deputy Sheriff Samantha Mighell Monday and charged with traffic and drug offenses.

According to a news release from the Marshal County Sheriff's Department, Mighell was notified by central dispatch that an off-duty Benton Police officer was following a vehicle that was reported stopped in the roadway on Main Street.

According to the release, Mighell got behind the vehicle as it came by the Sheriff's Office and reported observing it crossing the centerline. When parking at a Benton business parking lot, the officer reported the car was apparently put into park before coming to a complete stop.

When Mighell made contact with the occupants, the smell of alcoholic was allegedly present and the driver allegedly admitted to taking a controlled substance prior to driving.

Mighell arrested Stephanie O. Rogers, 30, of Murray, who was charged with operating a motor vehicle under the influence and not having registration plates. Also arrested and charged with public intoxication and possessing a drivers license when privileges have been revoked was Christopher L. Smith, 30, of Kirksey

Both Rogers and Smith were lodged in the Marshall County Detention Center, according to the report.

State House committee rejects bullying legislation

By RANDY PATRICK

Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) - A bill to protect students from bullying by their classmates died Tuesday in the House Education Committee because some lawmakers worried it would give 'special rights" to gay students.

The proposal by Rep. Mary Lou Marzian, a Louisville Democrat, failed to get the 15 votes it needed. The party-line vote was 13 in favor, 10 against and three abstentions.

Most of the Republicans who voted against the bill said a 2008 law sponsored by Rep. Mike Cherry, D-Princeton, is a national model and sufficient. But Marzian, who mentioned that Cherry was a sponsor of her bill, said hers was stronger because it identifies classes of students to be protected.

The bill mentioned abuse that is motivated "by a student's actual or perceived race; color: religion; national origin; ancestry or ethnicity; sexual orientation; physical, mental, emotional, or learning disability; gender; gender identity and expression; or other distinguishing personal characteristic.

Rep. Ben Waide, R-Madisonville, said he feared that any statute that did not protect a Christian student's First Amendment rights to disagree with a gay student about whether homosexuality is acceptable could subject the Christian student to punishment for harassment.

Waide said the issue was about equal protection, but that "you of being politicians." She called can't achieve equality by making some persons more equal than others."

The bill was a move in the right direction, but it didn't go far enough, said Rep. Ruth Ann Palumbo, D-Lexington.

"Some children need more protection than others," she said, adding that legislators must be "living in outer space" if they deny that.

Palumbo, who said she is a parent of a suicide victim, said the existing law is not a model and that she was embarrassed by her colleagues. She said that some gay and lesbian people are

"They do not choose their sexual orientation," she said.

The vote followed lengthy testimony by parents and other survivors of students who had committed suicide as a result of harassment and abuse by class-

Darryl Denham of Covington, whose son, Sam, killed himself Oct. 14, said he has since heard of other students in Sam's school who have been harassed, and that a survey found that 75 percent of the students in that school think bullying is a serious problem.

"The test of a moral society is what it does for our children."

Zoe Chin, a friend of Sam's, said after the vote that she thought the legislators should have considered how they would feel if their own children were victims of abuse "instead those who opposed the bill "homophobic."

Campbell Travis Hopkinsville said his daughter Miranda, who was "bisexual and unashamed of it," took her life Feb. 4 after being constantly harassed. Campbell said that one-third of homosexual, bisexual or transgender students attempt suicide.

Waide said he feared that any statute that did not protect a Christian student's First Amendment rights to disagree with a gay student about whether homosexuality acceptable could subject the Christian student to punishment for harassment.

Logan said Marzian's bill would not do that.

Palumbo, who said she is a parent of a suicide victim, said the existing law is not a model and that she was embarrassed by her colleagues. She said that some gay and lesbian people are Christians.

"They do not choose their sexual orientation," she said.

Rep. Addia Wuchner, R-Burlington, said her husband is a school resource counselor.

"I know about harassment. I hear about it at night," she said, but "adding more verbiage" to statutory law would not strengthen it. School administrators already have the authority they need, she said.

Marzian said she had a similar bill last year that passed out of committee by a vote of 21-1, but was not voted on in the House. She said this year it didn't get as much support because it's an election year. But she said that she has no opposition in her district, and that she will be bringing the bill before the legislature

Ky. House panel votes to impose public smoking ban

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — One of the nation's top tobacco-producing states would ban residents from smoking cigarettes in public places under a bill that cleared its first legislative hurdle on

The House Health and Welfare Committee voted 10-2 to protect people from second-hand smoke inside workplaces, jails, bars, restaurants and even private homes if those residences are used for child care or adult daycare.

The outcome was far different than when Chairman Tom Burch, D-Louisville, first proposed a statewide smoking ban in Kentucky some three decades ago. The Louisville Democrat said when he stepped forward to present his bill, every lawmaker on the committee lit

"I have a right also to breathe clean fresh air, and when somebody blows cigarette smoke in your face that takes that right away," Burch said.

Votes on the measure had been postponed twice in the past week because key supporters had been unavailable for meetings, causing conhave been in trouble.

State Rep. Ben Waide, one of the two Republicans who voted against the measure, said he considers the proposed smoking ban an overreach by state government.

"We all have personal rights, and I think that includes the right to purchase a business and operate a business within reasonable boundaries," Waide said. "And I think that this piece of legislation takes government into an area where government should not be. Takes it just one step too far. Even though the legislation is well meaning and will probably have a good effect on the health issue that it addresses, it is not the role of government to go this far. There are property rights here that are being trampled."

Such a measure has been discussed in Kentucky for years, but lawmakers in what is a major burley tobacco growing state have been reluctant to tackle the

Rep. Susan Westrom, D-Lexington, said she isn't sure when, or if, the measure will be presented for a floor vote in the House.

Senior and All-OVC big man Ivan Aska walked out of the CFSB Center with two pair of basketball shoes - one in each hand - squinted as the sun beamed down on his 6-foot-7 frame, then ducked in through the Junior guard Isaiah Canaan walked to the entrance of the bus, placed his right hand inside a cooler just outside the door, and picked up two bottles of Gatorade.

Tigers drop season opener

MURRAY ONLY PICKS UP ONE HIT AGAINST HENRY COUNTY.

Staff Report

Taking to the road for the first game of the 2012 campaign, the Murray High Tigers walked away with their first loss of the season after nearly being no hit by Henry County.

That said, things looked promising early for the Tigers as leadoff man Sawyer Lawson drew a walk in the season's first at-bat, to bring freshman Zack Grogan to the dish.

Grogan wouldn't get the chance to drive Lawson in, however, as the shortstop would get picked off trying to steal second base. He would add his team's only hit on the next pitch though, roping a ball to center field for a single.

That would be all she wrote for the Tigers as Henry County would add a run in the bottom half of the inning, tack on four more in the third to push the lead to five and pick up a final five in the sixth to end the game.

Overall though, hitting wouldn't be the only facet Murray would struggle in in the opener though as Tigers' ace John Lollar would take the loss after allowing six hits and four earned runs in four innings of work.

That said, the defense behind him didn't help much as Murray would wrack up three errors on the day, one of those leading to a

BOTH TEAMS FALL 9-0 AT HOME TO TALENTED BLUE TORNADO SQUAD MONDAY NIGHT

Staff Report

Monday was a rough day for the Calloway County tennis team as the Lakers were upended by Paducah Tilghman in a 9-0 drubbing on both boys' and girls' teams.

Matt McReynolds dropped the first match on the boys' side 2-8 before Zack Fortenberry (3-8), Nick Holt (3-8), Corey Evans (0-8), Bailey Futrell (1-8) and Zack Holt (1-8) were sat down in order.

Fortenberry and Nick Holt would get the closest on the day, putting up a fight in doubles' action before falling 4-8.

On the girls side, things weren't much better as Audra Hopkins was knocked out 2-8 followed by Katlyn Cook (1-8), Laken Balmer (3-8), Malen Dolcet (0-8), Anna Neirmeyer (0-8) and Tori Hahs (0-8).

In doubles' action, Cook and Balmer got things started on a positive note but fell 3-8 to Tilghman pair Grace Cappock and Katie Paxton with Dolcet/Neirmeyer (0-8) and Kopkins/ Orduna (2-8) following suit shortly thereafter.

Murray State spent Wednesday morning taking care of media obligations, and will then hit the practice court at 1:30 p.m. EDT for a 50-minute, open practice.

From there, the Racers will spend the rest of tonight relaxing and preparing for a Colorado State team that mirrors Murray State in several ways.

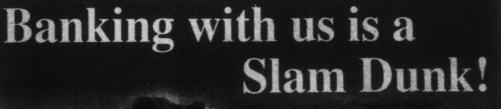

Not only are the Rams one of the top three-point shooting teams in the country, they are very active on the boards, despite boasting a smaller than average front line.

Dorian Green and Wes Eikmeier are one of the best guard tandems in the Mountain West Conference, and Prohm said his team will need to be focused in order to advance to Saturday's third round.

"We have to make sure we pay attention to detail," Prohm said. "We have to crash the boards and close out our defensive assignments, then it's all about protecting the basketball and just playing our game.

"We are a very simple team. That won't change just because we are in the NCAA Tournament."

Murray State is looking for its third NCAA Tournament victory in program history on Thursday, and is looking to match is farthest run eyer, which came in 2010.

Hilltoppers rally for win

T.J. PRICE PICKS UP THREE POINT PLAY Hilloppers worth a buck. WITH 33 SECONDS LEFT . McDonald was fired, replaced by only team with a losing record in the NCAA tournament got it started with a classic March come-

In front of a presidential audience, no less.

T.J. Price's three-point play with 33 seconds left completed a furious rally from a 16-point deficit, and Western Kentucky held on for a 59-58 victory over Mississippi Valley State on Tuesday night. President Barack Obama and British Prime Minister David Cameron had front-row seats to see the tournament open with a ragged game that had an engrossing finish.

The Hilltoppers (16-18) are the longest of long shots, the only squad in the 68-team field with a losing record. They turned up the full-court pressure in the last 5 minutes, overcoming a 16-point deficit with a comeback that won over the crowd at University of Dayton Arena.

After the buzzer sounded, Obama and Cameron headed out, fans still buzzing over what had just happened. Somehow, the Hilltoppers won despite shooting DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — The 30 percent from the field and turning it over 28 times. Madness indeed.

Western Kentucky moves on to play Kentucky — the top seed in the South Regional - on Thursday in Louisville, an all-Bluegrass game for the second round.

MVSU (21-13) caught the president's eye while pulling ahead, but couldn't close it out. Kevin Burwell scored 20 points and locked eyes with the president after swishing a 3-pointer while the Delta Devils built their big lead. Obama smiled back.

Obama — a huge basketball fan who fills out an NCAA bracket each year - spent a lot of time explaining the nuances of the game to Cameron. Obama has picked Kentucky as one of his Final Four teams.

A smaller school from a corner of the commonwealth became the star of the First Four. The Hilltoppers were the losers' favorite in the bracket - the first team since Coppin State in 2009 to make it to the tournament with a losing record.

And that didn't even begin to tell their story.

A team featuring seven freshmen lost 11 of its first 16 games. The low point came on Jan. 5, when Louisiana-Lafayette somehow managed to get six players on the floor for the winning shot in overtime. And that wasn't the worst indignity that day. Only 2,137 fans took advantage of a $1 ticket promotion, showing that few considered the assistant Ray Harper. The Hilltoppers responded by losing their next three games.

Slowly, they grew form a young, bad team into one that found its stride at tournament time. They won four games in four days for the Sun Belt Conference title and its automatic pertn.

And here they were on Tuesday, opening the NCAA tournament before a presidential audience that seemed to add to both teams' jitters at the outset.

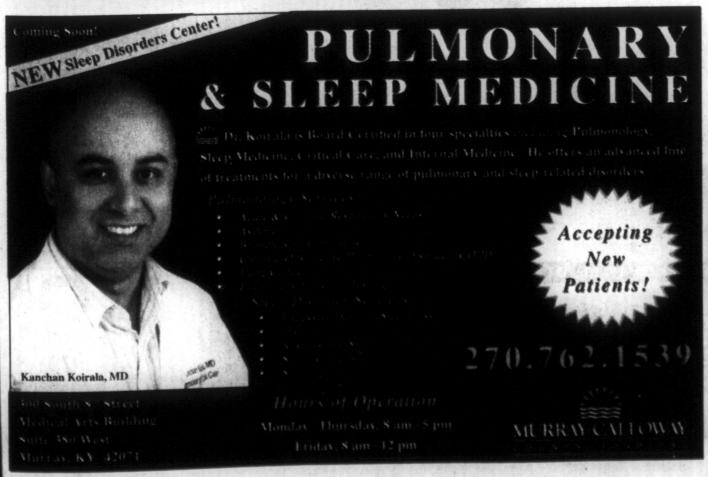

There was no avoiding the enormity. During the first timeout, photographers from the White House press corps went on the court to snap photos. The two referees on that side of the court shook the president's hand.

At one point, Obama explained a goaltending call to the prime minister — the only really good play in the sloppy opening minutes. Western Kentucky missed 11 of its first 13 shots and had five turnovers, helping the Delta Devils pull ahead 11-5.

At that point, it might have reminded the president of some of those pick-up games he plays for fun in Washington.

Burwell took the game into his hands at the start of the second half. He made sure he got the president's attention after hitting a 3 in front of him, turning to make an eye connection.

He had a chance to tie the game in the closing seconds, shooting another 3 in front of Obama. It missed and Cor-J Cox had a putback at the buzzer that left the Delta Devils a point short.

Racers take aim at No. 11 Colorado State

The Murray State men's basketball poses after winning the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament Championship on Saturday, March 3 in Nashville, Tenn. With the win, the Racers earned an automatic bid into the NCAA Tournament, picking up a No. 6 seed in the West Regional, and now prepare to travel to Louisville for a second round game against No. 11 seed Colorado State on Thursday.

By RICKY MARTIN, Sports Editor

n Tuesday afternoon, Murray State head coach Steve Prohm said he felt his Racers had a productive week of preparation in their off-week leading up to this week's NCAA

One of the more useful things might have been what Prohm had his team doing on Saturday morning.

Exactly a week to the day after defeating Tennessee State in the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament championship, Prohm had his Racers scrimmaging each other Saturday in an exhibition open to the public.

Ironically enough, that might have provided Murray State with an excellent look into the future, as the Racers now prepare for Colorado State in the second round of the NCAA Tournament a team that, on paper anyway, looks eerily similar to nation's No. 9 ranked team.

"(Colorado State has) a great group of guards, that really shoot the ball well," Prohm said. "They don't put a guy out there that can't knock down shots, and they really get after you.

"Their 'bigs' aren't necessarily big but they are very athletic and really just have a nose for the basketball."

Sound familiar?

Murray State is looking for its third NCAA Tournament victory in school history this week, but it may have to come against a team built very similar to themselves

Statistically, the Racers and Rams are nearly identical in field goal percentage and three-point field goal percentage, and average close to the same amount of points per contest

The difference for Murray State on Thursday may come where it has all year long — on the defensive end.

While the Rams shoot 40.5 percent from beyond the arc, compared to a 40.6 clip from the Racers, Colorado State doesn't defend the arc particular ly well, holding opponents to 35.7 percent shooting from three-point range.

The Racers, on the other hand, defend the perimeter as well as anyone in the country, and have allowed opponents to shoot just 29.5 percent from distance on the season.

"We defend the perimeter well," Prohm said. "We have to make sure we do that against Colorado State,

Racers rely on rare college basketball luxury: seniors

By RICKY MARTIN

Sports Editor Murray State has something not a lot of other NCAA Tournament teams possess.

Seniors

That, and experience. The Racers have relied on a five-man battalion of talent and leadership this season, something very few top-tier or potential Final Four teams

Looking at the field of 68, the Racers are one of the more veteran clubs in the tournament, which says a lot since the Racers missed out on last year's Big Dance. While No. seeds Kentucky, North Carolina, and Syracuse Michigan State rely on several underclassmen to carry the load for their national title hopes, Murray State — as well as a handful of other mid-major schools — boast some of the most experienced and talented players in the country.

> With the new brand of college basketball, spearheaded by the "one-anddone" generation, the bottom of the NCAA Tournament's participants has come up, while the top has come down to some degree. BCS mediocrity isn't being rewarded the same as it was even five years ago, giving a 25-7 program like Iona an opportunity to go dancing this year, despite falling in its own conference tournabecause they will take some shots and make some shots if we aren't locked in on the defensive end."

While the Racers hold a clear advantage defending the arc, Murray State has also boasted — statistically — a better defensive unit as a whole.

The Rams have given up an average of 68.4 points per game this season, while the Murray State defense has limited its opponents to just 61.2.

Colorado State is led by a duo of guards, in juniors Wes Eikmeier and Dorian Eikmeier, an Iowa State transfer, paces the Rams with 15.6 points per game, while Green is the team's top three-point threat, shooting over 43 percent from distance to contribute to his 13.5 points per game.

While Eikmeier and Green are talented, the Racers may also have their hands full with a front line that matches up as well with them as any they've seen this season.

Pierce Hornung leads the Rams in rebounding, despite being listed at just 6-

Hornung averages almost four offensive rebounds per contest, and Prohm said the Racers will have to stay focused closing out defensive possessions in order to keep that from happening against them

"We have to make sure that we crash the boards, and use our athleticism and quickness to limit what they do on the offensive glass," Prohm said.

While Murray State's road won't come easy, starting Thursday against Colorado State, several in the national media have already selected the Racers are their midmajor darling for the Big Dance.

Senior Donte Poole said the Racers have to just take things one game at a time.

"All year long we have just focused on what was right in front of us, never looking ahead," Poole said. "That was perfect for the situation we are in now, because you can't look past anyone.

"If you look past someone, you'll be watching them play the next round from your couch.'

Seniors

are beginning to make names for themselves in college basketball's premier event.

Virginia Commonwealth and Butler each made improbable runs to the Final Four a year ago, and many believe Murray State could be the next name etched into mid-major lore.

Most of that has to do with three players in particular Seniors Ivan Aska, Jewuan Long and Donte Poole make up the winningest senior class in Murray State's 87-year history.

Most schools around the nation will never see that record eclipsed within their own program, because athletes simply aren't sticking around for two years, much less four.

Mid-major programs are getting the talent, and they're holding onto them for four years, or at least three.

Then, once the smaller school kids meet up with the big-time names, fear is all but alleviated, because every one of those kids has already played in a big-time college basketball game, most likely for a conference championship.

Those smaller school kids from Murray State have the opportu-

Entering the fournament as a No. 6 seed in the West Regional on the shoulders of Aska, Long and Poole, the Racers have a chance to expand on something that has practically become a tournament norm over the past five years — walk into the room full of Sweet 16 giants, knowing fully well that David wins in the end

If any group of seniors in the country can do that this year, Murray State head coach Steve Prohm thinks it's his.

"We have three seniors that I wouldn't trade for anything," Prohm said. "Not only are they unbelievable basketball players, but they truly embody what Murray State basketball is all about.

"All three have great character and great toughness, and have been such an important part in what we have done here at Murray State over the past few seasons."

These group of seniors still have plenty left to prove, however: Not only can the triumverate walk away from Murray State as the winningest group of seniors in history, they can also walk away as the only players in Racer history to win two NCAA Tournament games in their career.

That alone, Poole said, is something to keep their minds clear and eyes focused.

"It's important to us to finish out this season as strong as we possibly can." Poole said. "We aren't just content getting into the tournament, we want so much more than what we've already accomplished.

"We want to win games and ride this thing as long as we can, and we think that's a long way."

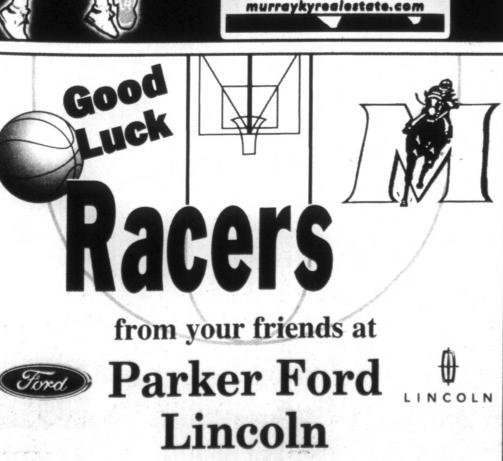

So do the rest of us, Donte. So do the rest of us.

Overall: 2-15 Last Win: 2010 vs. Vanderbilt 66-65 in San Jose Calif. in first round. Last Loss: 2010 vs. Butler 54-52 in San Jose,

Meet The

The 11th-seeded Rams, who have not played in the Big Dance since 2003, will play No. 6 seed Murray State on Thursday in a second-round game at the KFC Yum! Center in Louisville, Ky. Colorado State (20-11) and 10th-ranked Murray State (30-1) have never before played. Despite knocking off three top-25 teams during the regular season, the Rams entered the NCAA Tournament's Selection Sunday process hoping for an at-large bid, one they finally received some thirty minutes after the bracket began to take shape.

Colorado State was 3-6 vs. the RPI Top 50 this season, with wins over San Diego State, New Mexico and UNLV. The Rams also picked up a victory over in-state rival Colorado during their 2011-2012 season. Colorado State's best finish in the NCAA Tournament came in 1969, when the Rams stormed to the Elite Eight.

Most recently, the Rams were bounced in the first round in 2003. Colorado State head coach Tim Miles is making his first appearance in the NCAA Tournament, but Miles does have a Division-II Elite Eight appearance in his resume, which came in 2001.

The Rams boast a 3-9 record all time in the NCAA Tournament, and are looking to get the program's fourth win against the Racers on Thursday in Louisville

RECRUITING CHARACTER

Steve Prohm walked up to senior guard Donte Poole late Sunday afternoon and shook his head. It was ironic the Racers drew Colorado State, as the Rams were one of Poole's top suitors coming out of prep school. Pooles chose Murray State, obviously, but Prohm said on Tuesday afternoon if Colorado State head coach Tim Miles recruits guys like Donte Poole, he knows they have a very good basketball team. "Donte Poole represents everything we are about," Prohm said. "If those are the kind of high-quality kids that coach Miles recruits, then he's doing it the right way."

BALANCE

Similar to the Murray State team two years ago, the Rams have a very balanced core of scorers.

Wes Eikmeier leads the Rams in scoring at nearly 16 points per game, but Colorado State has seven players that average five or more points

Dorian Green is the No. 2 punch to Eikmeier's lead, as the junior pours in over 13 points per contest for the Rams.

COMMON THREAD

Colorado State and Murray State have played one common opponent this season — Southern Mississippi. The Racers defeated Southern Miss in double-overtime of the Great Alaska Shootout by a final of 90-81 Southern Mississippi defeated the Rams in Ft. Collins, Colo. by a score of 79-58 on Nov. 19, 2011.

Teen's free place to live comes with a painful cost

DEAR ABBY: I am 19 and having an affair with a married man twice my age, but I am an unwilling participant. You see, I grew up with "Jasmine," and over the years her family has become mine. I was going through a rough time, and when her family offered me a place to stay, I accepted. They treat

I tell myself I do it "for a place to stay." Is there forgiveness for me? Please help. -- DISTRAUGHT DEAR DISTRAUGHT: It appears you ARE "doing it for a place to stay," and for your own well-being you need to make other living arrangements and get out of there. You have been betrayed, and your feelings are valid. You are not being treated like a daughter; you are being coerced by a man with no conscience or compassion. Of course there is forgiveness for you -- but first you

I want to say something about our plans, but Ross says he's too nervous and is afraid my parents will be angry. I am 23 and unemployed. Ross is 24 and has had bad luck with a bunch of jobs. Our 2-year-old and I live with my parents. Ross is currently staying with his grandparents.

I don't want a big wedding and I'm afraid my parents will be mad if Ross and I start planning ours. How can we break the news to them? -- TIMID

DEAR TIMID: If Your boyfriend is too nervous to tell anyone about the engagement, face it -- you're kind of NOT engaged. If I were you, I'd hold off making any announcements to your folks until you have the answers ready to some questions first, like where you and Ross plan to live after the wedding. With your parents? His grandparents? Who do you expect will be paying for the wedding you're planning?

"Everyone" may have ignored the significance of the ring you're wearing because neither of you is ready for marriage.

DEAR ABBY: When buying gift for someone and it arrives with a mail-in rebate, what do you do? If you give the person the rebate, he or she will know how much you paid for the gift. If you remove the UPC code, it looks like you regifted. How should this be handled? -- HAVEN'T A

DEAR HAVEN'T A CLUE: Many people regift, and as long as the item is well-chosen for the recipient and is in mint condition, there's nothing wrong with the practice. How much was paid for the item is beside the point. When a gift is given, the price tag is removed.

People with hypomania have activity levels off the charts

DEAR DOCTOR K: I like to paint in my free time. Recently I've been staying up until 3 or 4 in the morning to work on my paintings. I know I should feel tired, but I don't. One of my friends said that I might be hypomanic. What is that?

DEAR READER: Hypomania is an elevated mood or energy level -- one higher than your normal state. The need for sleep

one of the

hypomania.

Some people who are hypo-

manic sleep

describe

Dr. Komaroff only a few By hours a day. But despite Dr. Anthony this, they say Komaroff they feel rested from such little sleep.

On the flip side, many creative people like you are naturally energetic when working on their art. This is especially true when a creative person is in the "flow."

According to the diagnostic manual used by mental-health professionals, the "DSM-IV," a person has to have at least three of the following symptoms for at least four days to be considered hypomanic:

Inflated self-esteem or grandiosity;

- -- Decreased need for sleep;
- -- Increased talkativeness; -- Racing thoughts or ideas;
- -- Marked distractibility; -- Agitation or increased activ-

Excessive participation in activities that are pleasurable but invite personal or fiscal harm (shopping sprees, sexual indiscretions, impulsive business investments and the like).

Do you have any of the symptoms described above? Some of these can be observed by others. When I'm concerned that one of my patients may be hypomanic, I ask her if I may talk to someone who knows her well, like a spouse. Does the spouse think the patient has inflated self-esteem? In your case, does your spouse say you've been comparing your art to Picasso's?

The other question I ask the spouse about each of these features of hypomania is whether it is unusual. Does the spouse say, "He's just not himself recently"? Full hypomania is rarely a constant state; it's episodic.

Someone may have always been energetic and talkative. That's still true, but now it's as if she can't ever be still. It's hard to understand what she's saying. She makes extremely risky decisions that she never would have made before. She's just not herself. If that's what others say, it's possible the person is suffering from hypoma-

Another thing I try to assess is whether a person's possible hypomania is seriously affecting his or her life at home or at work. Finally, I look for thinking that is clearly psychotic. He doesn't just think his art is the equal of Picasso's: Picasso himself said he was his equal just last week. Serious problems at home or at work due to this new behavior, or frankly psychotic thinking, indicate the person may have fullblown bipolar disorder (or manic depressive disorder).

The odds are that you're just a very energetic and creative person and don't have hypomania or full-blown mania. But if any of the features of hypomania I've described might fit, talk to your
