Retailers hope momentum from shopping start stays

By ANNE D'INNOCENZIO
 AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After what appeared to be a strong start to the 2006 holiday shopping season, the question is whether shoppers will have the same zeal for shopping between now and the end of the season when the discounts may not be as steep.

Stores and malls that opened as early as midnight on Thursday drew bigger-than-expected crowds for discounts on such items as flat-screen TVs and toys, and robust sales for the first day of the season offset slower business as the weekend wore on, according to early reports.

The biggest winners appeared to be electronics chains such as Best Buy Co. Inc. and popular-priced department stores including J.C. Penney Co., which pulled in shoppers with good deals. Yet Wal-Mart Stores Inc., which promised the most aggressive discounting ever, was an exception, announcing Saturday that same-store sales for the month would be weaker than expected. Wal-Mart has struggled for months to appeal to both higher-income shoppers and low-price fans.

"The hysteria has come down a bit, but it was a great start," said Bill Martin, co-founder of ShopperTrak RCT Corp., which tracks total sales at more than 45,000 mall-based retail outlets. But he said the true measure of the season is whether "retailers can sustain the loyalty and excitement" until the end. Shoppers were clearly looking for as big a discount as possible.

"I started Friday morning at 5 a.m.," said Kim Neuharth, shopping at the Jordan Creek Town Center in West Des Moines, Iowa. "At Kohl's and Target, we got good deals. I bought my stepdaughter a dress for the prom for like 50 bucks. It was originally something like $100 at Younkers. It was on sale and I had a coupon for 20 percent off."

Martin expects that total retail sales for the first weekend of the season will be higher than last year, boosted by Friday's better-than-expected business. Total sales rose 6 percent to $8.96 billion that day, compared to a year earlier, according to ShopperTrak. The company planned to report Saturday's results on Monday.

Retailers' strong performance was a direct result of their aggressive discounting and promotions, designed to get consumers to start shopping early. More stores and malls opened at midnight Friday, and Toys "R" Us Inc. and Sears Holdings Corp.'s Sears stores opened at 5 a.m., an hour earlier than in the past.

Jerry Storch, CEO and chairman of Toys "R" Us, said he was pleased with weekend results, noting that sales were strong across the board. In addition to Mattel Inc.'s Fisher-Price's T.M.X. Elmo, hot toys include Fisher-Price's Kids Tough Digital Camera, and some of the toy retailer's exclusives like VTech Holdings Ltd.'s pink Nitro Notebook, a laptop computer.

Gail Lavielle, spokeswoman at Sears Holdings, which also owns Kmart stores, said Sunday the stores were busy through Friday and Saturday. At Sears, flat-screen TVs, digital cameras and Craftsman tools were the hot items. At Kmart, holiday decor including Christmas trees, jewelry and toys were the most popular.

Meanwhile, online shopping was also strong on Friday. ComScore Networks, which tracks Internet spending, reported Sunday that online sales, excluding travel, auctions and corporate purchases, rose 42 percent to $434 million on the day after Thanksgiving, compared to the same day a year ago.

ComScore expects online sales of almost $600 million on Monday, known as "Cyber Monday," the kickoff to the shopping season for e-tailers. That would be a 24 percent increase from the $484 million in sales raked in on Cyber Monday last year.

Retailers were optimistic but also a little uneasy going into the season, concerned that economic factors like the slowing housing market might make shoppers more conservative. And many shoppers interviewed during the weekend said they were trying to be budget-conscious.

Hazel Commissioner-elect Karl Flood says he is looking forward to taking a seat on the council come January and wants to do all he can to bring residents together and make the city a better place to live. An artist, Flood also plans to paint a mural at Hazel City Hall depicting the city's history in art.

Write-In Winner Karl Flood earns write-in victory, seat on Hazel City Commission

By TOM BERRY
 Staff Writer

HAZEL, Ky. — Hazel City Commissioner-elect Karl Flood says he is looking forward to taking a seat on the council and doing what he can to bring Calloway County's second largest city back toward a better feeling of unity following a divisive effort to unincorporate the city.

Flood, who was elected to a first two-year term on the commission as a write-in candidate with two votes, will join commission incumbents Lori Charlton, Pat Latimer and Nancy Mieure when the newly-elected commission convenes its first meeting in Jan. 2007.

He and Mayor-elect Kerry Vasseur will be the new faces in Hazel city government for the next two years. Flood will take the seat previously occupied by out-going Commissioner Linda Harding. Although he had no previous intention of running for public office, Flood said he decided to put his name in the hat shortly before the October deadline with Harding's encouragement.

"She came and talked to me about it and asked me if I would run as a write-in because she was moving and was not going to run," he said. "She encouraged me to do it. I thought about it and decided to do it."

Another write-in candidate also received two votes in a run for the seat; however Calloway County Clerk Ray Coursey Jr. said the woman's votes were disqualified because candidacy paperwork was not completed in compliance with state statute.

Flood said he plans to work with Vasseur and fellow commissioners to help pull the town together following a vote to dissolve city government after 117 years. The measure was soundly defeated 138-21; however Flood said he would be willing to speak to those who voted to dissolve the city in an effort to deal with their concerns.

"I think it would help to see what their position is. What's bothering them?" he said. "I want to find out what they're disgruntled about and what we could possibly do to make things better for them."

Flood grew up in Calloway County; spending most of his life living in Murray and the New Concord area before moving to Colorado Springs, Colo., for eight years. However his father and grandfather spent most of their lives in the southern Calloway/Hazel area and moving back to town recently was sort of like coming back home.

Flood lives with his wife, Melissa, and their six children. He said he wants to do everything he can do to make his old/new home a better place to live.

"I didn't move back here to try to bring about any great changes, but it seems like a nice community and I just want to do my part to make it better," he said. "I like the town. I like the quietness and the people are friendly and it seems to be one of those places untouched by time. I like that."

Flood says he has no experience in government, but plans to apply a little common sense to city administration.

A former art teacher with the Murray Independent Board of Education, Flood is now working with both school districts on several projects.

However he is now working on painting a mural on the rear exterior wall at Hazel City Hall with a group of the city's youngsters. The work was partially designed by the youngsters who were asked for their ideas on how Hazel's history could be presented through art.

"It is definitely something that I have seen that the whole community is interested in and the kids are really excited about it," he said. "I also feel like, in light of this debate over incorporating the city, that it's something that can sort of smooth-over some of those feelings and bring us together."

Flood compiled several pieces of art submitted by youngsters and presented the design for approval from the Hazel City Commission in October. He hopes to get started on it as soon as paint, brushes and other the materials are available.

The commission has asked for donations from businesses in Murray and Hazel; however there has been little response, so far.

"But whether we go the route of donations or the city commission decides to pay for the materials to get it done, it will be done," he said.

The mural pictures the name "Hazel" in large letters and illustrated with several artistic scenes of its history including a train, Hazel churches, former and existing businesses, Hazel City Hall, the volunteer fire department, the watertower and Hazel High School Lions.

Flood wasn't the only write-in candidate to see some success during Election 2006. Across the state, some write-in candidates did very well taking some of the state's top city and county offices. According to an Associated Press report, John Mattingly won the Marion

Murray ICC helping with hovercraft business plan

HICKORY, Ky. (AP) — A western Kentucky businessman has patented a prototype flying fan and is hoping to market it to the military, law enforcement and emergency rescue units.

Steve Halsell, head of Mundus Environmental Products, has lined up funding for his Roadable Aircraft International business from a Murray-based business incubator and a consulting firm that markets technology to the Department of Defense.

Roadable Aircraft International holds the patent for an ultralight aircraft that takes off and lands vertically.

"When the Star Trek series was launched in the sixties, the viewing audience could barely conceive of, let alone imagine daily use of, handheld computer devices or equipment that could scan the internals of a body without conducting invasive surgery," Halsell said. "Thirty years later, we take these technologies for granted."

The Innovation and Commercialization Center in Murray is helping Halsell develop a business plan and raise the money for it through grants, venture capital and private equity investments.

The manned aircraft is shaped like a car tire with a fan inside. Halsell patented the idea in 2002 during a three-year research program with the U.S. Navy that ended in 2003. The company is pitching the craft as having no exposed propeller

Man dies after falling from ledge in cave

BURNSIDE, Ky. (AP) — An Ohio man died after falling from a ledge in a southeastern Kentucky cave.

Edward Martin, 40, of Cincinnati died Saturday as he was trying to climb out of a cave in the Sloans Valley system near Burnside in Pulaski County, said Jim McWhorter, the chief deputy coroner of Pulaski County. He fell about 20 to 30 feet, McWhorter said.

Martin was part of a group of seven people, McWhorter said. The group split up as it left the cave because some considered the exit Martin and three others took too dangerous.

"They could get out much quicker by using this exit, but three of the individuals didn't want to do it because it is extremely dangerous," he said.

Three cavers ahead of Martin made it out safely, but Martin slipped and fell, striking rocks on his way down, McWhorter said. The preliminary cause of death was blunt force trauma, he said.

Martin was an experienced caver who had explored the Sloans Valley Cave system before, McWhorter said.

Myanmar refugees find new home in Louisville

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Refugees from Myanmar have begun settling in Louisville with help from volunteers.

The city's two main refugee agencies, Catholic Charities and Kentucky Refugee Ministries, expect to help more than 200 refugees settle in Louisville by next year.

Kwee Paw, 26, who spent years in a Thai camp, working by day on farms and living among thousands of other refugees in cramped bamboo huts, was among the first to arrive with her husband, Beh Leh.

The two met in the refugee camp and are "happy" to be in Louisville, where "we can live without fear," Beh Leh said.

They are members of the Karen ethnic group, which for years has been persecuted by the military government of Myanmar, a regime widely criticized by the U.S. government and human-rights groups.

The State Department earlier this year cleared the way for thousands of Karens living in Thai refugee camps to come to the United States.

Girl stricken by E. coli bacteria is back home

RICHMOND, Ky. (AP) — A 5-year-old Richmond girl sickened by E. coli bacteria is back home and healthy after fighting for her life for over a month in hospitals.

Two weeks ago, Haley Caldwell was bedridden at the University of Kentucky Children's Hospital, a victim of hemolytic uremic syndrome, a potentially deadly set of medical problems most often caused by exposure to E. coli bacteria.

During the illness, she suffered from pancreatitis and colitis, developed problems with her blood, lost kidney function, went on dialysis, and was placed on a ventilator.

"The whole thing was a blur," her mother, Jaime Caldwell says. "It was surreal; it was unreal. It was like you were watching someone else's life on TV or something. It was a nightmare."

Medical officials don't know how Haley came in contact with E. coli. Her 19-month-old sister Emily also tested positive for the bacteria, but never developed symptoms as serious as Haley's.

Haley started showing symptoms on Oct. 15, and spent three days at Richmond's Pattie A. Clay Hospital, but an initial stool test there was negative.

Man charged with murder in holiday shooting

PRINCETON, Ky. (AP) — Police have charged a western Kentucky man with murder for a fatal shooting on Thanksgiving.

Desmond J. Snorton, of Hopkinsville, is accused of killing Martin W. McKinney late that night.

Princeton police found McKinney dead from several gunshot wounds when they arrived at the home on Cooper Circle.

into Friday. Police Maj. R.L. Howton said Snorton was detained by authorities in Madisonville and jailed.

Police said Snorton entered the home and fired multiple shots, several of which hit McKinney.

Delivery drivers picket Louisville, Ky. Domino's

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — More than a dozen pizza delivery drivers who want their own union picketed a Domino's store Saturday.

Union organizers say a store employee was fired earlier this year because he complained about a 10-cent wage cut for drivers. A Domino's spokesman said Jim Sullivan was fired for being late to work.

About 15 people picketed the store for an hour, said Jim Pohle, president of the American Union of Pizza Delivery Drivers, which formed this summer.

"They're seeking fair compensation for gas mileage," said Pohle, a delivery driver from Pensacola, Fla. "Most people don't understand that the drivers do not get the (extra) delivery charge."

Several pizza chains, including stores owned by Domino's, Pizza Hut and Papa John's, have instituted a $1 fee per delivery because of rising gas and labor costs. Pohle said those fees cut into the amount that drivers are tipped.

Sullivan said he was fired from the store in October because he complained about management cutting 10 cents from the 90 cents the drivers received for each delivery.

"I feed five kids with that money," said Sullivan, 36, who joined the picketers.

Tim McIntyre, a spokesman for Ann Arbor, Mich.-based Domino's Pizza Inc., said Sullivan worked for an independent franchise owner and was fired because he repeatedly showed up to work late.

McIntyre said he doesn't see a need for unions at pizza delivery chains, because they would be hard to sustain with the job's high turnover rate. He added that the owner of the Louisville store told employees that the 90-cent gas reimbursement would fluctuate with gas prices.

Pohle said workers at the Louisville store scheduled a union vote for Dec. 1.

Sheriff's office arrests Murray man allegedly impersonating serviceman

The Mayfield Messenger
MAYFIELD, Ky. — The Graves County Sheriff's Office arrested a man for using a forged military identification last Monday.

Derek S. Hopkins, 28, of Murray, was charged with criminal possession of a forged instrument after an investigation revealed he had allegedly been using a military ID created with a computer in order to get military discounts at local stores.

Hopkins was also wearing a military uniform and allegedly telling people he would be deployed to Iraq in January.

The investigation was conducted by Sgt. Davant Ramage and Trooper Brett Miller.

County judge-executive's race by a landslide after an unconventional campaign that included teaching voters how to vote for a write-in. Mattingly will replace David Hourigan, who died in September.

Mattingly had previously lost his bid for the job to Hourigan during the May Primary. Gov. Ernie Fletcher was going to appoint Mattingly to serve out the remainder of Hourigan's term, but Mattingly declined.

Les Fugate, a spokesman for Secretary of State Trey Grayson's office, called

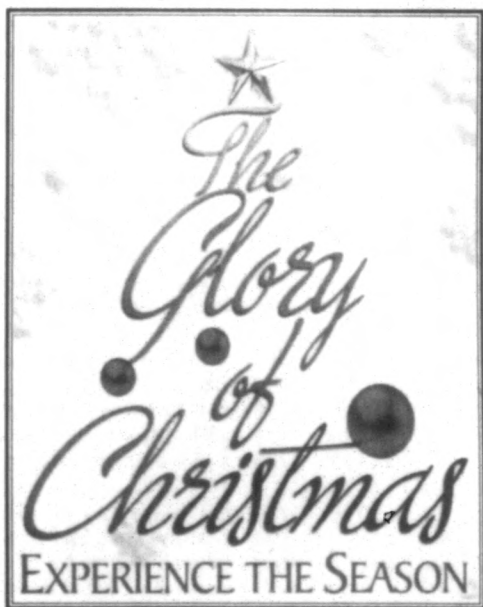

Mattingly's win "incredibly rare."

Elsewhere, Barlow mayoral candidate John Wood won election to office as a write-in candidate after mounting a door-to-door campaign that took nearly four days.

Wood, 65, who served a term as mayor in the 1990s, defeated incumbent Ruth Negley by 13 votes after not deciding to throw his hat into the ring until just a few weeks before the election. Wood had placed a large 9-by-5-foot sign in the center of the town and passed out fliers explaining the write-in process.

Halsell isn't alone in pitching the aircraft. Other firms have similar designs, but none are yet on the market.

Mundus wants to mass produce a smaller, unmanned, remote-control version 6 feet high and 7 feet in diameter with a 425-horsepower jet turbine engine outside the housing, driving a lightweight composite-metal fan inside the housing.

Plans call for the vehicle to be able to fly for as long as six hours, up to 300 miles per hour and as high as 18,000 feet.

It would be equipped with surveillance equipment and machine gun, and designed for launching from a Trident submarine missile tube or land trailer more than 100 miles from a target.

Other potential uses include air ambulance, firefighting, search and rescue, police rapid pursuit and observation and inspection of construction projects, Halsell said.

Agricultural Update

By Todd Powell
County Extension Agent for Agriculture/Natural Resources

Gillum honored by UK College of Agriculture

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Fred L. Gillum of Kirksey was recently honored with the Outstanding Achiever Award at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture 2006 Ag Roundup.

Gillum is a 1969 University of Kentucky graduate with a bachelors degree in animal sciences. While at UK, he served as vice president of Alpha Zeta, a Block and Bridle officer and was a member of the livestock judging team.

He worked 30 years in federal service, serving six years as an extension agent for 4-H youth development in Calloway County and 24 years with the Farm Service and Farmers Home Administration, serving as extension agent. He also worked as a farm loan specialist.

Gillum continues his agricultural involvement serving in roles of president and vice-president of the Kentucky Association of Credit Specialists, 4-H judging team coach, fair board member, and volunteer for the West Kentucky Junior Livestock Expo. He has received several awards, including County Supervisor of the Year.

He and his wife Barbara have six children.

Creep feeding beef calves can improve animal performance and is especially important in Kentucky's fall-born calving operations. Creep feeding is simply supplementing nursing calves feed supply without the cows also having access to it.

After a calf is 90 to 120 days old, the cow's milk can supply about half of the nutrients needed to maximize growth. The other nutrients have to come from elsewhere. In fall-calving herds, that period of time usually occurs in January, February and March when very little pasture is usually available.

High-quality pasture like winter annuals such as wheat, rye and ryegrass are usually the best supplement feed for calves but is not always available for creep grazing.

Each situation is unique but creep feeding generally is profitable for fall-born calves.

Getting calves to begin eating can sometimes be difficult. One way to aid in the process is to feed their mothers small amounts of ground feed for a few days prior to beginning to creep feed. The calves will learn to eat with their mothers and can soon be switched to the creep feeder.

Creep rations do not have to be complex, but they should be economical and palatable. If the animal will not eat it, then the ration is worthless. Wet molasses or dry distillers' grain can be used to enhance consumption. It is best to crack or grind grains when possible or if only grain is being fed, to roll it.

Byproduct feeds like soyhulls and corn gluten feed can also be used.

There are also commercial creep feeds available and some producers may find that purchasing these feeds is the best method for their operations.

Keeping calves growing during the winter months can be accomplished with a little extra feed. For more information on creep feeding calves or other aspects of beef cattle production, contact the Calloway County Cooperative Extension Service.

U.S. catfish farmers facing global competition

ATLANTA (AP) — They don't look too much like catfish. They don't taste like them, either — at least to catfish connoisseurs. But Vietnamese basa and tra fish often fool consumers in the U.S., where they're sometimes billed as Asian catfish. Sometimes they're even labeled Delta grown.

That's the Mekong Delta, not the Mississippi.

American-bred catfish — mostly farmed in the Southeast U.S. — dominate the world market, but the region's farmers are on the defensive against growing foreign competition of basa and tra, cheaper breeds that threaten U.S. catfish superiority.

Meeting recently in Atlanta to promote American-bred catfish, industry leaders voiced their frustration with how Chinese and Vietnamese farmers have been nibbling away at their customers with prices that are between 50 cents and a dollar per pound cheaper.

While the federal government predicts that 560 million pounds of American farmed-raised catfish will be processed this year, a drop of 15 percent from three years ago, foreign rivals are making up ground.

More than 24 million pounds of Vietnamese basa and tra have been shipped to the U.S. this year, doubling last year's total. And catfish imports from China have almost tripled, rising to 4.1 million pounds of frozen fillets, according to the National Marine Fisheries Service.

"It's been increasing," said Jimmy Avery, a Mississippi State University professor who leads the National Warmwater Aquaculture Center in Stoneville, Miss. "And that trend is troubling."

Another spike looms if the U.S. agrees to a pact that would permanently normalize trade relations with Vietnam, which President Bush discussed this week with Vietnamese executives during an eight-day trip to Asia. Although the two countries have a bilateral trade agreement, American companies cannot take full advantage of Vietnam's entry into the World Trade Organization unless the trade bill passes.

The agreement along with Vietnam's entry into the WTO would require the country to slash tariffs and trade barriers, making it easier for foreign companies to enter its market while opening up export opportunities for Vietnamese companies.

The plan is expected to pass Congress, although The Catfish Institute, a Jackson, Miss.-based group, has tried to stave off a deal by questioning the presence of banned chemicals in the foreign fish.

"While Asian seafood imports are growing rapidly, federal inspections and testing of this food remains inadequate, at best," said Roger Barlow, the institute's president, who is trying to build a "catfish caucus" in Congress to support his cause.

Catfish farmers have fought back before to protect their share of the nation's top aquaculture product, a resilient fish that spawns easily and can survive fairly drastic temperature swings.

Unfair trade complaints in 2003 led to antidumping restrictions that cut in half the number of basa and tra imports. The same year, Congress passed a law preventing the Vietnamese basa from being labeled "catfish."

More recently, Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama — where most catfish are farmed — have issued alerts that call for strict inspection of some catfish imports after antibiotics showed up in some samples. And a federal law passed that requires sellers to slap "made in" stickers that show where fish are caught.

Directors elected for Jackson Purchase ACA

Special to the Ledger

MAYFIELD, Ky. — The Jackson Purchase Agricultural Credit Association held its 2006 Annual Meeting Nov. 14 at Graves County High School with more than 1,000 borrowers in attendance. The association conducts an annual meeting each year with the primary objectives of electing directors, conducting the official business of the association and reviewing the financial condition with the membership.

The ACA is a member-owned cooperative which provides short, intermediate and long term credit and credit-related services for the eight Purchase counties from branches at Mayfield, Bardwell, Clinton, Hickman, Kevel, Murray, Lone Oak and Marshall County.

Curtis Hancock, chairman of the board, presided over the meeting. The membership re-elected Curtis Hancock, Randall Heath and Allen Ross to serve as directors representing Hickman, Graves and Ballard/McCracken Counties, respectively. Also 2007 Nominating Committee members were elected. Those elected to serve on the 2007 Nominating Committee were Marty Moses, Graves County;

Brad Reddick, Carlisle County; Todd Harper, Hickman County; Walt Goodman, Fulton County; Tyler Powell, Ballard/McCracken counties; and Danny Cunningham, Calloway/Marshall counties. The Directors' Report reflected the continued success of the association and its commitment in "keeping the association financially sound, member owned and member operated."

Who will run for the Democrats?

FRANKFORT — A lot of Kentucky Democrats are spending worrisome days fretting over which of them will take on the wounded Gov. Ernie Fletcher in next year's gubernatorial election.

Sixth District Congressman Ben Chandler isn't making it any easier. Chandler first said he would decide one way or another about a rematch with Fletcher in 2007 by Thanksgiving, but backed off last week and was reported burning up phone lines talking to supporters. As this is written, he hasn't announced his plans.

Agree Or Not

Many Democrats are hoping Chandler will come home to take on the man who soundly trounced him in 2003.

With Louisville Mayor Jerry Abramson and State Auditor Crit Luallen rejecting a run for governor next year, Chandler remains the leading Democrat who would not carry into the race problems with political or personal baggage that could endanger the party's effort to regain the Governor's Mansion from Fletcher or any other Republican candidate.

Let's look at the available alternatives.

Former Gov. Brereton Jones: Jones

appears eager to get in the race if Chandler does not. Jones' 1991-95 term was the last without a major scandal associated with it. But Jones also was the architect of an entirely laudable effort to provide affordable health insurance to thousands of Kentuckians without coverage. It blew up in his face, state and university employees were caught in the explosion and it took years for the health insurance industry in Kentucky to recover.

And Jones is the highly visible leader of the horse industry push for expanded gambling at racetracks. Fletcher is personally opposed, so both the Democratic primary and, if Jones wins, the general election could become a referendum on expanded gambling at the expense of other, more important issues facing the state.

Attorney General Greg Stumbo: Stumbo, of course, led the investigation that brought about the indictment of Fletcher and most of Fletcher's top aides for violating state personnel laws. But Stumbo carries with him an ugly child paternity battle that certainly will make for some equally ugly negative ads in a heated campaign. Also, many state employees and Democrats believe Stumbo sold out in his plea agreement that saved Fletcher from standing trial, all for the purpose of being able to run for governor.

Former Lt. Gov. Steve Henry: Henry is the only lieutenant governor to have been nearly evicted from his state-provided home while in office. He played no important role in the eight years of the Patton administration, and he also has the very heavy burden of substantial Medicare over-billings he was charged with and made restitution for during his term.

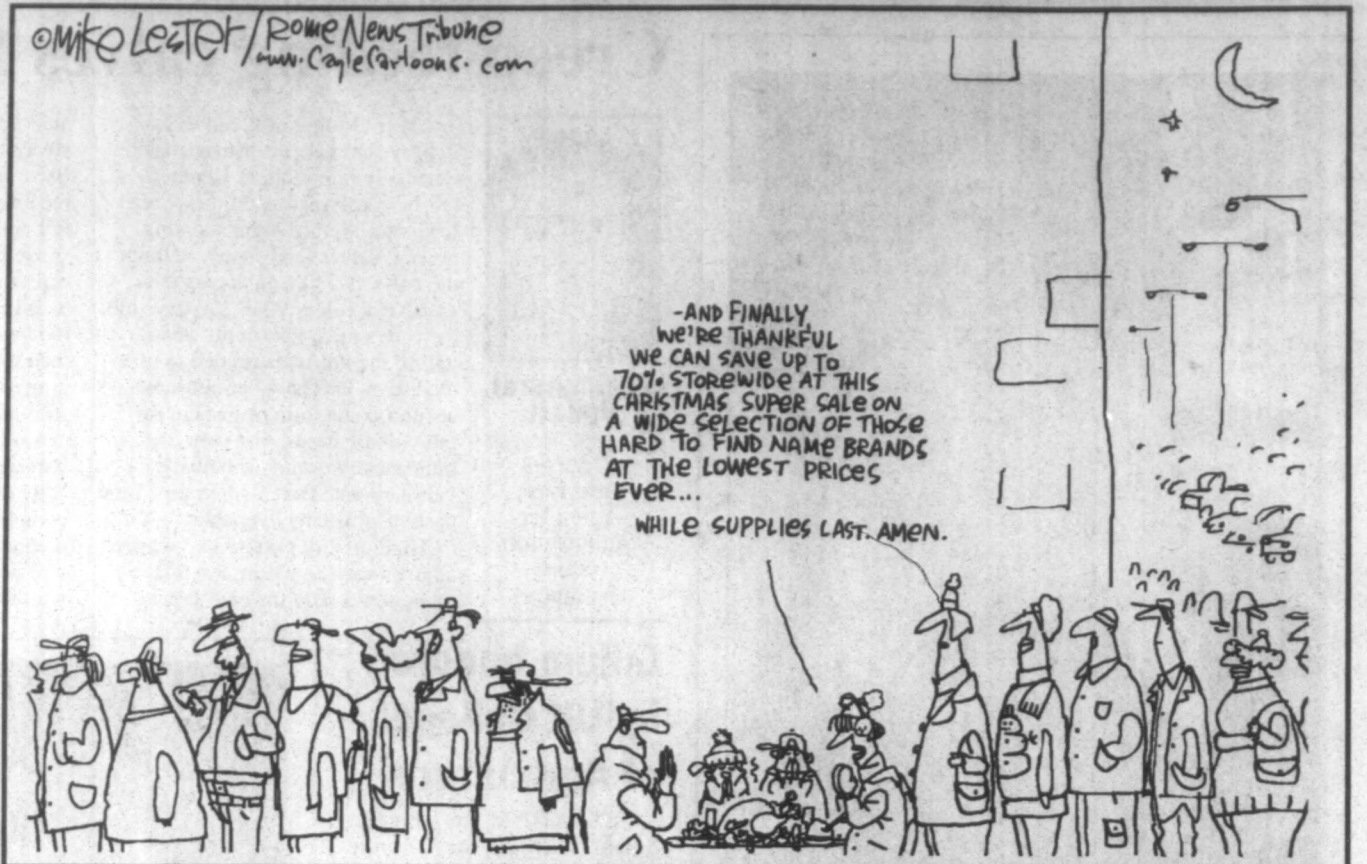

House Speaker Jody Richards: Richards lost the Democratic primary in 2003. He hardly stands out as head of the House of Representatives, nor has he been an effective antidote to the Republican-controlled Senate.

State Treasurer Jonathan Miller: Miller has won two statewide races, but for an office few Kentuckians are likely to be able to identify by name. He clearly has a future in Democratic politics, but would be seen as in need of more administrative experience.

Louisville attorney Jack Conway: Conway, like Miller, is key to the Democrats' future, but his only attempt at elective office was two years ago and he lost to Third District U.S. Rep. Anne Northup, who in turn lost this month to Democrat John Yarmuth.

There are, of course, others who may get into the race. Louisville businessman Charlie Owen could self-finance, but is becoming almost a caricature wannabe for elective office. Former Democratic Party Chairman Terry McBrayer lost a gubernatorial bid more than 20 years ago and has become one of the top lobbyists in Frankfort, hardly a resume to put before skeptical voters. Lexington attorney Gatewood Galbraith probably will run no matter what and, depending on how frustrated Democratic voters are at the primary candidates, Galbraith will get some votes.

All in all, then, it is understandable that Democrats are hoping to be able to welcome Ben Chandler back home with open arms and generous checkbooks.

OIL GUSHING

By JEFF DONN

Associated Press Writer

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — You'd think it was Texas. Dusty roads course the scrubland toward oil tanks and warehouses. Beefy men talk oil over burritos at lunch. Like grazing herds, oil wells dip nonstop amid the tumbleweed — or even into the asphalt of a parking lot.

That's why the rumor sounded so wrong here in California's lower San Joaquin Valley, where petroleum has gushed up more riches than the whole gold rush. Why would Shell Oil Co. simply close its Bakersfield refinery? Why scrap a profit maker?

The rumor seemed to make no sense. Yet it was true.

The company says it could make more money on other projects. It denies it intended to squeeze the market, as its critics would claim, to drive up gasoline profits at its other refineries in the region.

Whatever the truth in Bakersfield, an Associated Press analysis suggests that big oil companies have been crimping supplies in subtler ways across the country for years. And tighter supplies tend to drive up prices.

The analysis, based on data from the U.S. Energy Information Administration, indicates that the industry slacked off supplying oil and gasoline during the prolonged price boom between early 1999 and last summer, when prices began to fall.

The industry counters that it's been working hard to meet untiring demand. It faults output quotas set by Mideast oil powers, global competition for oil from booming economies like China's, and domestic challenges like depleting wells, clean-air rules, and hurricanes. They do make things harder.

Yet the AP analysis found evidence of at least an underwhelming industry performance in supplying the domestic market, when profits should have made investment capital plentiful:

—During the 1999-2006 price boom, the industry drilled an average of 7 percent fewer new wells monthly than in the seven preceding years of low, stable prices.

—The national supply of unrefined oil, including imports, grew an average of only 6 percent during the high-priced years, down from 14 percent during the previous span.

—The gasoline supply expanded by only 10 percent from 1999 to 2006, down from 15 percent in the earlier period.

The findings support a conclusion already reached by many motorists. Fifty-five percent of Americans believe gas prices are high because oil companies manipulate them, a Pew Research Center poll found in October.

Even in Bakersfield, which lives off oil, many suspect that the industry goes easy on supply for its own reasons. "They ain't trying; that's more money for them," snorted JaKayle Madden, a construction worker filling up his little sedan recently at a local Shell station.

This fast-growing city of 300,000 shuttered in November 2003, when Shell confirmed it would soon close its local refinery. Plant workers, consumer activists and public officials rose up in resistance, firing off letters and demanding meetings.

The 70-year-old refinery only produced 2 percent of California's gasoline and 6 percent of its diesel fuel. Yet opponents feared its demise would push up prices in the tight markets all along the West Coast.

In these circumstances, surely the plant was worth something to someone, if not to Shell. After losing $57 million mostly in the aftermath of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, the refinery was making money again, Shell acknowledged.

Though set back temporarily by the attacks, the oil business has profited handsomely since then. For example, the biggest six refiners — Shell is only No. 12 nationally but powerful in California — rang up $400 billion in profits since 2001, according to the consumer group Public Citizen and corporate reports. Even compliance with complex clean-air rules hasn't spoiled business.

The industry also protected profits by not building any new refineries, instead expanding existing ones when it could.

Shell portrayed its Bakersfield refinery as old and unfit. One executive said there was "simply no longer an adequate supply of crude oil" nearby.

Drillers across the country complain of maturing wells that are slowly running low. Gas or liquid is sometimes injected into reservoirs at higher cost to keep up the flow.

"The industry is working very hard," says Joe Sparano, who heads the Western States Petroleum Association representing Shell and other drillers, refiners and marketers.

However, oil reserves are expected to last for decades around Bakersfield and elsewhere, according to industry and government estimates. Fresh national reserves are found each year. To make up for older wells, oil companies regularly drill new ones — about 9,800 last year. Underground discoveries and technological strides have kept domestic reserves at the same level as in 1999.

With demand growing, though, the United States has imported an expanding share of its oil from abroad — and quotas kept by Mideast nations do lift its price.

It's also true there's a new big buyer of oil: China, with its flourishing economy. Yet even China hasn't outstripped the world's capacity to deliver more oil, at least so far. Since 1999, world supplies grew four times more than China's imports, federal data show.

Imports were impractical at inland Bakersfield, Shell explained. Lynn Laverty Elsenhans, the head of Shell Oil Products US, said the refinery here just wasn't viable anymore.

"For this reason, we have not expended time or resources in an attempt to find a buyer and do not intend to do so," Elsenhans wrote to U.S. Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif.

Shell's blunt tone began to trouble opponents of the plan. Union officer Ed Huhn, a former refinery worker who was trying to keep the place open, began to wonder if it was folly. "They were trying to discourage anybody from buying it," he says.

Skeptics like U.S. Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., got more vocal. They began to suspect that Shell wanted to shut the refinery to sell pricier gas from its bigger refineries elsewhere in the region. By taking a hit at Bakersfield, maybe Shell could come out ahead.

"They were trying to squeeze the market in every possible way," Wyden insists. Shell spokesman Stan Mays denies that. He says it's "impossible to speculate" on whether Shell would have profited from closing the plant.

But he indirectly acknowledges that Shell didn't intend to make the refinery attractive for a competitor: "Who's going to want to buy it? We're not going to give crude supply with it."

It turns out that the industry exerts quite a bit of control over supply.

For one thing, it decides to invest in new wells and refining equipment — or not to. Though reserves have kept pretty steady, the oil industry taps those resources to varying degrees from year to year. The long price run-up first took off as the number of new wells abruptly dropped by a total of 59 percent in 1998-99, federal records show.

One consumer advocate, Mark Cooper, refers to industry-induced supply bottlenecks as "strategic underinvestment." He views references to "discipline" in annual corporate reports as a code word for going easy on supplies.

"Anytime someone talks about 'discipline,' this suggests to me that they have market power. They're choosing what investments to make," says Cooper, research director for Consumer Federation of America.

There's evidence he may be right. A 2001 study by the Federal Trade Commission reported that some firms were deciding to "maximize their profits" by crimping supply during a Midwestern gasoline price spike. One executive told regulators "he would rather sell less gasoline and earn a higher margin on each gallon sold."

This year, the FTC reported that some oil companies were storing oil, instead of selling it right away, to await higher prices anticipated in the future.

The industry has shelved an average of 21 percent more unrefined oil from the start of 2004 through last June, the AP analysis indicates. Last spring, stocks of shelved crude reached their highest level in eight years, despite the fabulous riches at hand in high prices then.

Such a strategy could conceivably extend to drilling too. "If you think prices 10 years from now are going to be $100 a barrel, you might not be that enthused about producing as much as you can now," suggests energy economist Allan Pulsipher at Louisiana State University.

However upsetting to drivers, such tactics are usually viewed as legal. "A decision to limit supply does not violate the antitrust laws, absent some agreement among firms," regulators wrote in one FTC report.

Also, individual companies are freer to bottle up supplies without fear of losing business to competition, because fewer companies now control a production choke point: refining. Thanks to mergers, the top 10 companies now control three-quarters of national refining capacity, up from half in the early 1990s.

"A handful of very large companies realize it's in their mutual interest to keep prices as high as possible," says Tyson Slocum, an energy expert at the consumer group Public Citizen, founded by Ralph Nader. "I don't think they're sitting around a table smoking cigars and price fixing, but I think there are sophisticated ways to manipulate the market."

In Bakersfield, government regulators eventually began to nose around, wondering if Shell hoped to game the market. But the company finally hired an investment banker to scout buyers. In January 2005, it announced a sale to truck-stop operator Flying J, of Ogden, Utah, which also runs a small refining business. The price was kept secret. Shell did nothing wrong, federal regulators later decided.

Since the sale, drillers and refiners have been making profits as never before.

The back-to-back hurricanes along the Gulf Coast in 2005 crippled about a third of the country's oil-output capacity and a fifth of its refining — but only temporarily. For all its talk of supply challenges, the industry quickly arranged for more imports and avoided outright national shortages. But prices jerked upward.

In Bakersfield, Flying J's 350 refinery workers now process 2.7 million gallons of oil a day — as much as Shell did — in the churning nest of boilers, piping and stacks venting six stories above the scrubland.

"It's still a good refinery, good people, a lot of money to be made in the long term," says Andy Wheeler, the engineering manager transplanted from Louisiana. "There's still plenty of oil locally to produce."

The new owner won't discuss current profits but acknowledges making money. With limited oil from Shell, Flying J has kept its boilers busy with crude from the wells, also right here in the valley.

In fact, the refinery is so full of promise that Flying J has decided to spend several hundred million dollars to nearly double its gasoline output. It hopes to make about $85 million more a year in profit.

"Shell, in the last few years of operation, didn't invest any money into the place," says Wheeler, tooling past its giant storage tanks in his shiny SUV.

But the refinery's new bosses, says manager Gene Cotten, are "comfortable enough with the long-term crude supply to make that investment."

U.S. Air Force jet crashes in Iraq

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — A U.S. Air Force jet with one pilot crashed in Iraq today, the military said.

The F-16CG was supporting coalition ground forces when it went down at about 1:35 p.m. in Anbar province, about 20 miles northwest of Baghdad, the military said in a brief statement.

The statement had no information about the suspected cause of the crash or the fate of the pilot.

Mohammed Al-Obeidi, who lives in the nearby town of Karmah, said by telephone that he saw the jet flying up and down erratically before it nosedived and exploded in a farm field.

He said other U.S. warplanes rushed to the crash site and were circling around it.

Officer injured while escorting president dies

HONOLULU (AP) — President Bush sent his condolences to the family of an officer who died less than a week after three police motorcycles crashed while escorting his motorcade.

Steve Favela, 30, and two other officers crashed as the motorcade traveled across Hickam Air Force Base to meet troops for breakfast early Tuesday. Light rain had been falling, and some roads on the base were slick.

Favela, who suffered internal injuries and had been in critical condition at The Queen's Medical Center, died Sunday. The other officers were treated at the medical center and released.

Bush said in a statement that he and the first lady were "deeply saddened" by the death, and sent their condolences.

"Officer Favela risked his life every day to protect the people of his community," Bush said. "In this time of great sadness, we give thanks for his life of service."

Officers across the state will place black bands across their badges in honor of Favela, an eight-year veteran of the Honolulu Police Department and father of four, Police Capt. Frank Fujii said.

"When I received the phone call that Steve had passed away, quite frankly my heart just sank to the guts of my stomach," Fujii said.

Members of the White House medical team — including an ambulance — were cut loose from the motorcade to help with the crash. Local ambulance and fire units also responded.

Foods Homemakers Club holds meeting

The Foods Homemakers Club of the Calloway County Extension Homemakers Association met for the first time on Nov. 13 at the extension office.

Wilda Jetton served as hostess and made Brushetta, Sweet Onion Tartlets and a Cheese Ball for all seven persons attending to sample.

The meeting was led by La Dawn Hale, Calloway County extension agent for Family & Consumer Sciences.

The club will meet again on Wednesday, Dec. 6, at 9 a.m. at the extension office. Officers will be selected, enrollment forms and dues will be collected, the club will be named and food will be sampled.

Jennifer Rister will be the hostess.

"Anyone who is interested is invited and encouraged to attend," Hale said. For more information call 73-1452.

MHS Speech Team places eighth in tournament

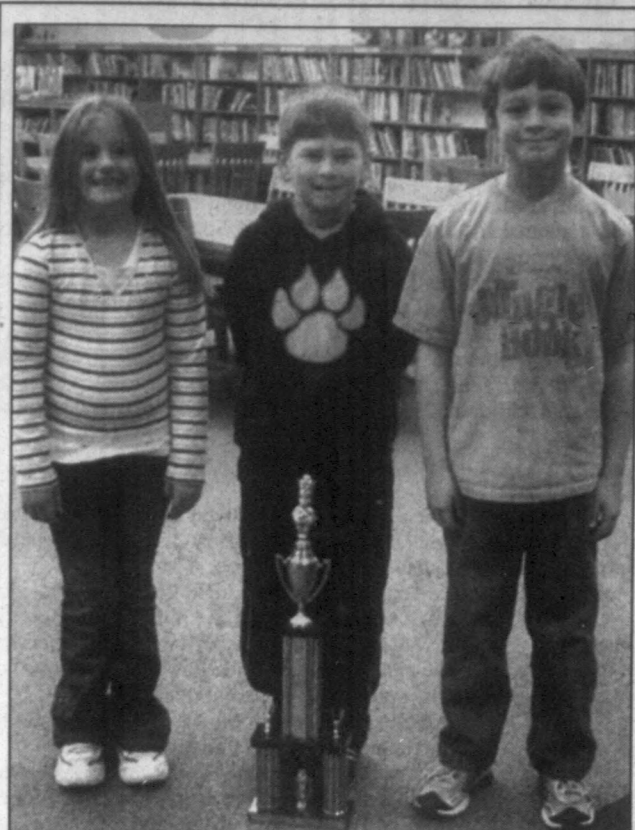

The Murray High School Speech Team captured eighth place this past weekend during the 13th Annual Danville Tournament of Firsts, held in Danville.

Sarah Hines, MHS senior, received first place in solo competition, defeating 54 other participants from 22 other Kentucky high schools.

The MHS team ranked in the top ten division place winners that included Grant County High School, first place, Boone County High School, second place, and Assumption High School, third place.

Kara Byrn Dowdy is coach of the MHS Speech Team.

Hickory Woods Retirement Center HAPPENINGS
by Annita Peeler
We've spent the week focusing on how thankful we are for all the ways we've been blessed this year. We enjoyed our turkey and dressing with our families Thursday. Mr. Eugene Jones won the prize for the most guests for the Thanksgiving feast with sixteen. Many of our residents went to their family's homes for the day. We have truly enjoyed this Thanksgiving holiday but now we're ready to get in the Christmas spirit.
We started the day after Thanksgiving putting up our huge Christmas tree. Thank goodness Ethel had lots of help with Dorothy Mateja, Vivia Ellis, Pete Neale, Linda Whitlow, and others. We always wonder if it's worth all the work to do so much decorating. However, after we get it all up, we love it and admit it was worth it. Our employees are looking forward to their Christmas party at Patti's 1880's Restaurant and of course to their Christmas bonus checks! Our residents are looking forward to our resident/family Christmas dinner December 9th. We have so many events to look forward to over the next month. We'll have to keep a calendar close by so we can keep up with everything going on.
...Nothing else looks or feels like home but we come close

RACERS 53 | 50 PANTHERS

A Perfect Ten

KENNEDY GETS 10 GOOD MINUTES FROM RACERS IN HELPING FEND OFF EIU

By SCOTT NANNEY
Sports Editor

Billy Kennedy finally saw what he wanted his Murray State team to look like on Saturday night. The only problem was, it happen for only 10 minutes.

Mostly on the strength of a solid first 10 minutes, the Racers were able to get a leg up in the Ohio Valley Conference race with a 53-50 triumph over visiting Eastern Illinois in the earliest conference game in their history. It also marked the 100th MSU win at the 9-year-old Regional Special Events Center.

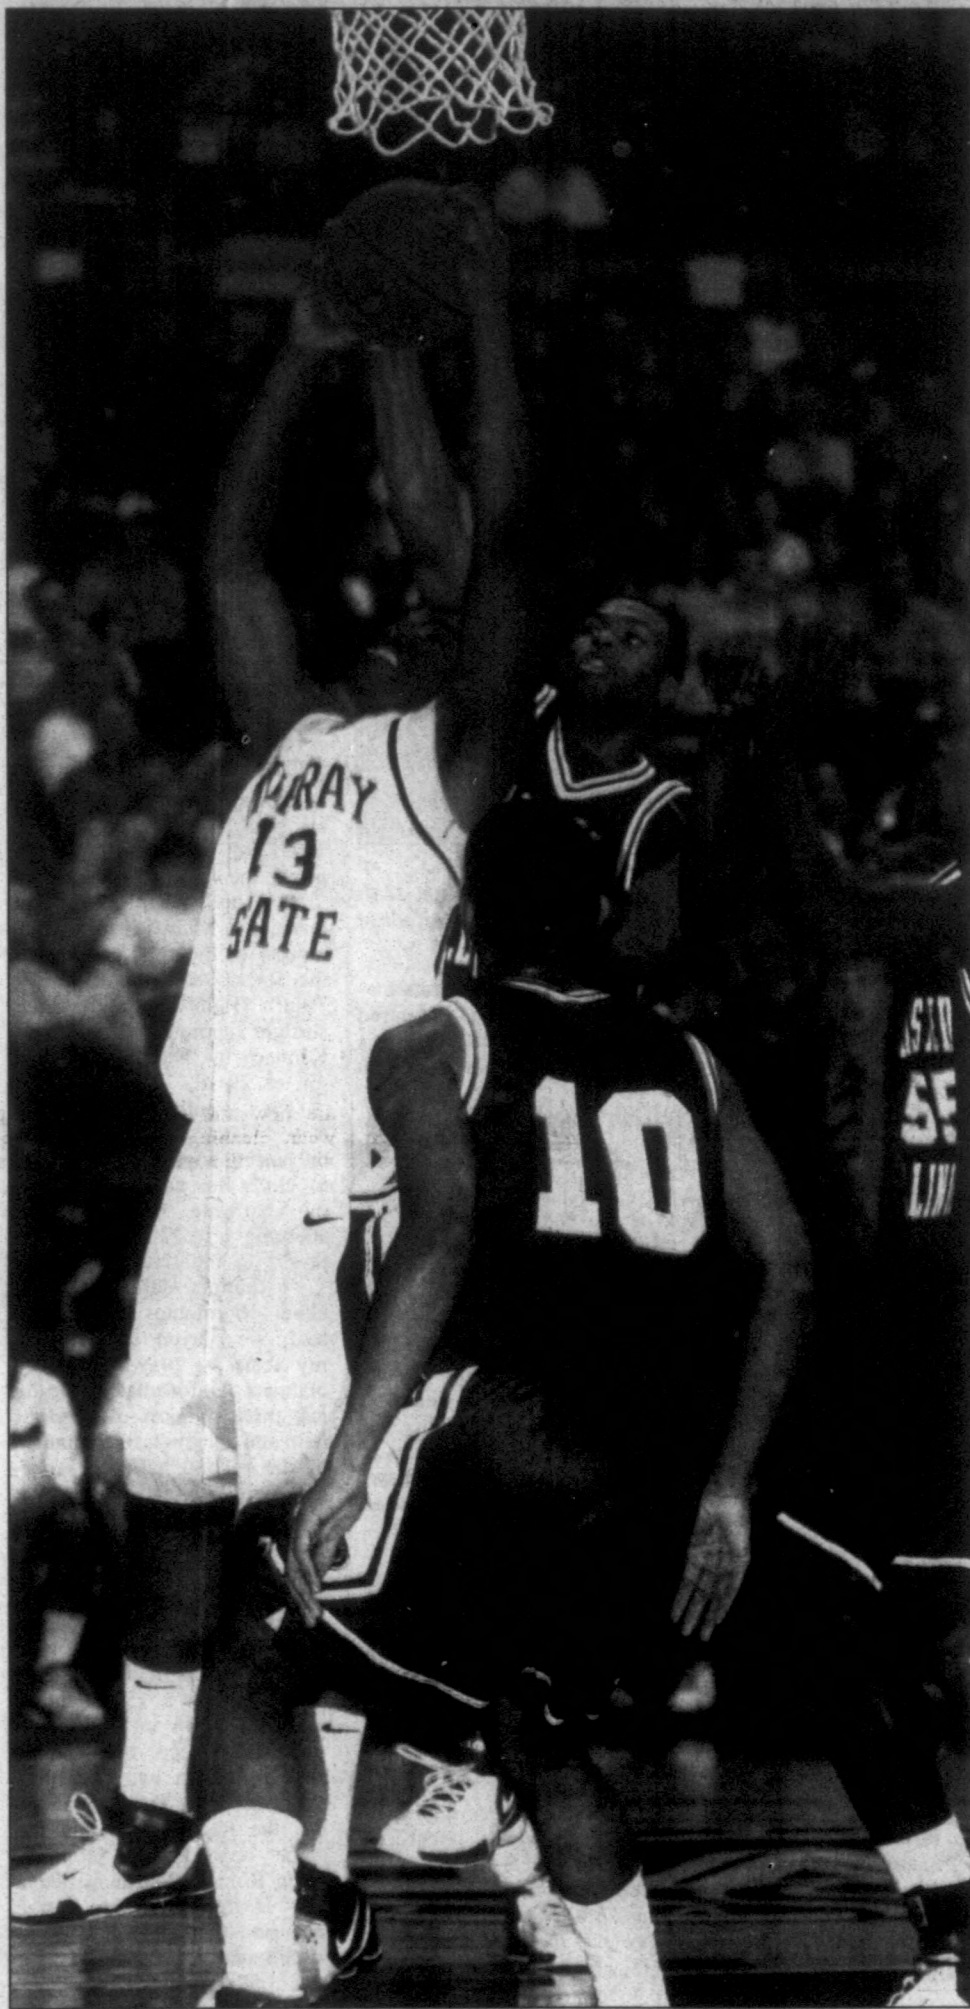

"I liked our effort for about 10 minutes," said Kennedy, who is now 2-4 in his first season on the Murray State bench. "Any time you can get a win with a young team, it's great confidence. But we've just got to be able to put 40 minutes together."

The Racers (2-4, 1-0 OVC) fit their pedigree as defending league champions early on, using a variety of defensive looks to keep the cold-shooting Panthers (2-5, 0-1) off-balance while also converting on the offensive end of the court.

A 3-pointer by Bobby Catchings put the visitors in front 8-4 at the 12:09 mark. But Murray countered with a 19-0 run that threatened to bury EIU.

Shawn Witherspoon, who finished with a team-high 11 rebounds while adding seven points, got the Racers started with a jumper.

But it was freshman guard Donero Thomas — making his first career start — who gave MSU its biggest lift, scoring each of his seven points on a tip-in, a layup and a 3-point-

'No interest' in Miami job, Nutt says

FORMER MURRAY STATE COACH NOT SEEKING HURRICANE POSITION

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas coach Houston Nutt says he is not seeking the open coaching position at Miami.

Nutt, whose No. 8 team is 10-2 and plays No. 4 Florida on Saturday in the Southeastern Conference championship game, says he is focused only on the Gators.

"When you experience the good times and then you've had a couple of rough years and come back like we have this year, it's a great feeling. You want to keep that going," said Nutt, whose team's winning streak ended at 10 with Friday's 31-26 loss to No. 5 LSU at Little Rock. Miami fired Larry Coker on Friday.

Nutt

His name appeared in a list in the Miami Herald of possible candidates for Coker's job.

"I'm not thinking about anything but Florida," Nutt said Saturday. "If anyone mentions my name (in connection with the) Miami job, that's just a rumor. I've got no interest in Miami."

Nutt's contract runs through the 2011 season and he said he intends to stay at Arkansas.

"I've given a lot here and invested a lot and (the Arkansas administration) has invested a lot in me, too," Nutt said. "I'm excited about how we're playing and how recruiting is going right now." Friday's loss dropped the Razorbacks to 7-1 in the league but Arkansas still won the SEC West outright. Last season, Arkansas finished 5-6 and a year before went 4-7. Nutt led the Razorbacks to bowl games in his first six seasons.

With a victory Saturday, the Razorbacks would be assured a BCS bowl berth, most likely the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans.

Nutt said he wants to stay at Arkansas and enjoy good times that he foresees.

"You see how close we came to playing for a national title this year, and that's with a lot of people getting hurt," Nutt said. "I think a year like this shows what were capable of doing in the future and that we're not that far away."

Arkansas athletic director Frank Broyles said he has not been contacted by anyone at Miami for permission to talk about the vacancy. He said he is "very happy" with Nutt.

TITANS 24, GIANTS 21

A Giant comeback

TENNESSEE RALLIES FROM 21 DOWN TO BEAT NEW YORK

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Adam "Pacman" Jones jumped up and down, waving his arms, encouraging the fans who stuck around to stand and cheer their Tennessee Titans.

He and Vince Young made it worth their while, too, delivering the biggest fourth-quarter comeback in franchise history with a stunning rally.

The Titans cornerback intercepted two passes and had a 23-yard punt return that revived his teammates in the fourth quarter. Then rookie quarterback Young finished off an improbable charge from a 21-point deficit to a 24-21 win over the New York Giants on Sunday.

"Wow," Titans coach Jeff Fisher said when it finally ended.

and threw for two more in the final 9:35 and finished with a career-high 249 yards passing. Rob Bironas kicked a 49-yard field goal with 6 seconds left to win it.

The final minutes felt like a flashback to the national championship game last January when Young led his Texas Longhorns past Southern California. It's the biggest fourth-quarter comeback by a rookie quarterback ever, topping John Elway's 19-point rally with Denver on Dec. 11, 1983 against Indianapolis for a 21-19 victory, according to Elias Sports Bureau.

LOUISVILLE BASKETBALL

Lady Cards lay it on Northern Colorado

UOFL LED BY MCCOUGHTRY'S 19 POINTS

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — Angel McCoughtry had 19 points, 12 rebounds and three steals, and Chauntise Wright added 20 points and nine rebounds off the bench to lead No. 24 Louisville past Northern Colorado 82-52 Sunday.

The Cardinals (6-0) controlled the game early and didn't let up, and the Bears couldn't match the strength of Louisville's bench. The Northern Colorado bench was outscored 44-9.

Kendra Lambrecht led Northern Colorado (1-5) with 12 points.

Tina Fox scored with 7:21 left in the first half to pull Northern Colorado to 23-11, but the Bears were scoreless over the next five minutes as Louisville pulled away for a 36-11 lead.

Louisville's lead never dropped below 20 points after that.

NFL ROUNDUP

Leaving their marks

YOUNG, LEINART HAVE GOOD DAYS SUNDAY

By The Associated Press

Vince Young and Matt Leinart showcased the skills that made them first-round draft picks after super college careers. Young even got a win — in record-setting fashion.

The third overall pick in this year's draft, Young rallied Tennessee (4-7) from a 21-point deficit in the final quarter Sunday for a 24-21 win over the New York Giants. It was the biggest fourth-quarter comeback by a rookie quarterback, topping John Elway's 19-point rally with Denver on Dec. 11, 1983, against Indianapolis.

"The legend of Vince Young began a long time ago," said Titans receiver Brandon Jones, who caught the TD pass that tied the game.

Young agreed. "It's a sneak peek of what's to happen not just for me, but this team in general," Young said of a club that has won four of its last six in matching last year's victory total with five games left.

Leinart wasn't so successful for Arizona. He completed 31 of 52 passes for a career-high 405 yards, but had two interceptions and only one TD — a 9-yard pass to Anquan Boldin with 39 seconds to play — in a 31-26 loss at Minnesota.

Larry Fitzgerald Jr. had 11 catches for 172 yards. Boldin made nine receptions for 136 yards for the Cardinals (2-9).

"This is the first time we've played pretty well on the road and had a chance to win at the end," Leinart said. "I thought we showed a lot of fight. ... All around I thought it was a great effort, we just ran out of time."

Elsewhere Sunday, it was New England 17, Chicago 13; Indianapolis 45, Philadelphia 21; Baltimore 27, Pittsburgh 0; Cincinnati 30, Cleveland 0; San Diego 21, Oakland 14; New Orleans 31, Atlanta 13; Washington 17, Carolina 13; Buffalo 27, Jacksonville 24; the New York Jets 26, Houston 11; and St. Louis 21, San Francisco 17.

On Monday night, Green Bay is at Seattle.

Vikings 31, Cardinals 26

At Minneapolis, Leinart wasn't the only effective QB. Brad Johnson threw for 271 yards and three touchdowns, while Chester Taylor added 136 yards rushing and a touchdown for the Vikings (5-6). Minnesota's defense forced five turnovers and allowed just 17 yards rushing to snap a four-game losing streak.

The Cardinals (2-9) got a 99-yard kick-off return for a touchdown by J.J. Arrington on the opening play of the game and a 99-yard fumble return for a score by Adrian Wilson in the fourth, but couldn't overcome turnovers, penalties and a suddenly productive Vikings offense. The two 99-yard returns were the first pair of such length since Dallas had a 101- and 100-yarder in 1962.

Patriots 17, Bears 13

Benjamin Watson hung onto Tom Brady's 2-yard pass in the end zone to win a sloppy game. Patriots cornerback Asante Samuel had three interceptions.

Playing on their new artificial turf, the Patriots (8-3) persevered against the Bears (9-2), who had allowed the fewest points in the league, 120. But New England was the second stingiest at 131.

The Bears had five takeaways, including Charles Tillman's second interception.

Colts 45, Eagles 21

At Indianapolis, Joseph Addai tied a franchise record with four touchdowns.

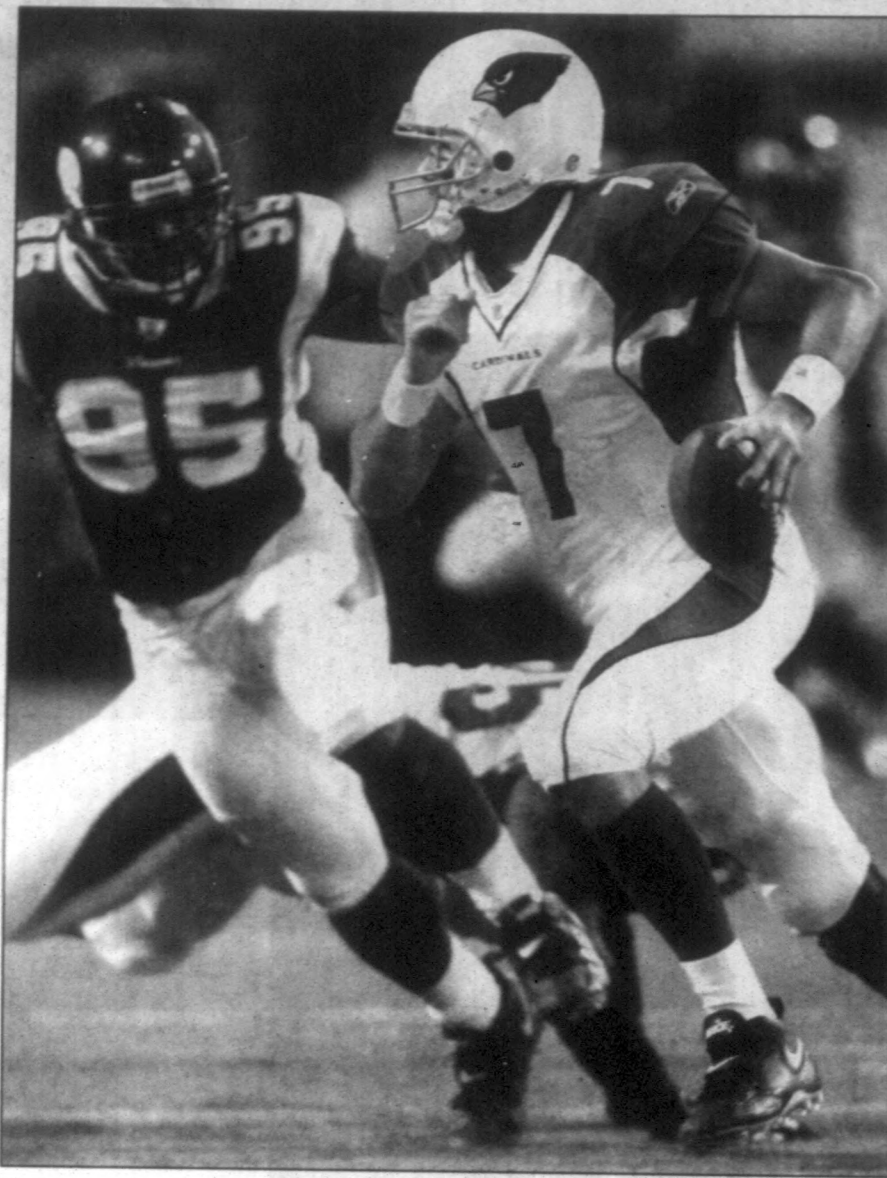

Addai opened the game by sandwiching a 10-yard score around two 15-yard runs to give Indy a 21-0 lead. He added a late 4-yard run. The rookie running back finished with 171 yards.

Lenny Moore, Lydell Mitchell and Eric Dickerson are the only other Colts players with four TDs in one game.

Ravens 27, Steelers 0

Any chance the Steelers had of returning to the Super Bowl might have been laid to rest by the Ravens.

The host Ravens sacked Ben Roethlisberger nine times and coasted to their fifth straight victory, dropping Pittsburgh to 4-7. Baltimore (9-2) limited the defending NFL champions to 36 yards in the decisive first half. The nine sacks totaled 73 yards and matched a Ravens franchise record.

Minnesota's Keneche Udeze, left, chases Arizona Cardinals quarterback Matt Leinart in fourth quarter of Sunday's game in Minneapolis. Leinart threw for 405 yards and one touchdown, but the Vikings won 31-26.

Bengals 30, Browns 0

At Cleveland, Cincinnati picked off Charlie Frye four times and Carson Palmer threw three touchdown passes. The shutout was the Bengals' first since Dec. 3, 1989, a span of 269 games.

Palmer finished 25-of-32 for 275 yards and connected with Chris Henry for two TD passes as the Bengals (6-5) stayed in the AFC playoff race by beating Cleveland for the fifth straight time.

Chargers 21, Raiders 14

At San Diego, LaDainian Tomlinson keyed yet another second-half rally to give the AFC West-leading Chargers (9-2) their fifth straight win.

Tomlinson, in the midst of an MVP-type season, rushed for two touchdowns and threw for another. He has 24 touchdowns this season, needing five in the last five games to break the NFL record of 28 set by Shaun Alexander during his MVP season of 2005.

Tomlinson threw a 19-yard touchdown pass to tight end Antonio Gates to tie the game at 14. Tomlinson threw his second TD pass of the season and the sixth of his career.

Saints 31, Falcons 13

At Atlanta, Drew Brees threw a 76-yard touchdown to Devery Henderson on the third play of the game, then lofted a 48-yarder to Terrance Copper on the final play of the first half. Brees completed 21-of-30 for 349 yards, his fifth straight 300-yard game.

New Orleans bounced back from losing three of four, boosted its playoff hopes and delivered a crushing blow to its NFC South rival. The Saints (7-4) won without rookie star Marques Colston, who didn't play because of a sprained ankle.

Redskins 17, Panthers 13

Chris Cooley's 66-yard touchdown reception won it. Cooley broke several tackles with 4:26 to play to break a two-game losing streak for the Redskins (4-7) and give quarterback Jason Campbell his first win in his second NFL start.

Ladell Betts, the Redskins' featured running back now that Clinton Portis is out for the year, ran for 104 yards on 24 carries.

The Redskins defense held the Panthers (6-5) to 264 total yards. Steve Smith gave the Panthers a 13-10 lead with 7:55 to play with a spectacular 8-yard catch in the back of the end zone.

Bills 27, Jaguars 24

J.P. Losman hit Roscoe Parrish for a 30-yard completion to set up Rian Lindell's 42-yard field goal as time ran out. The Bills (5-6) scored 28 seconds after the Jaguars tied it when David Garrard hit Matt Jones for a 3-yard touchdown.

Bills running back Willis McGahee had 63 yards rushing and two touchdowns in his first game after missing the past two with broken ribs. Parrish also scored on an 82-yard punt return.

Jets 26, Texans 11

Chad Pennington had his finest passing day in weeks, throwing for 286 yards and a touchdown. Pennington, who left briefly in the third quarter after an injury scare, finished 24-of-31. He connected with Laveranues Coles nine times for 111 yards, including a 12-yard touchdown in the third quarter. Jericho Cotchery had seven catches for 110 yards.

Mike Nugent tied a career high with four field goals, including a career-long 54-yarder for the host Jets (6-5).

Rams 20, 49ers 17

At St. Louis, Marc Bulger threw a 5-yard touchdown pass to Kevin Curtis with 27 seconds to go and the Rams (5-6) snapped a five-game skid. Stymied much of the game, Bulger was 9-for-9 for 66 yards during a 12-play, 80-yard drive for the winning score. He finished 23-for-34 for 201 yards with one touchdown and one interception.

After being limited to 27 yards last week, Steven Jackson had 121 yards on 23 carries, with a 36-yard scoring run in the first half. He also made nine receptions for 71 yards.

Frank Gore had 134 yards on 21 carries for the 49ers (5-6).

er during the run as the Racers built what looked to be a safe 23-8 lead with 6:16 to go in the half.

Jon'Tee Willhite finally broke the Murray run with a jumper at the 5:34 mark. But the Racers added a triple by Tyler Holloway and three straight points from Rob Kennedy to extend the margin to 29-10.

The Panthers, however, stayed within striking distance by putting together an 8-2 run to close the gap to 31-18 at the halftime break despite shooting just 22.2 percent (6-of-27) in the first half.

"I thought defensively for about 10 minutes in the first half, we played like I want my team to play," Kennedy claimed. "Unfortunately, for the last three minutes of the first half and the first five minutes of the second half, our energy level wasn't there. We looked like a tired team."

Early in the second half, Eastern Illinois established that it would be a factor down the stretch by slicing its double-digit deficit to just five (38-33) on a Justin Brock free throw, ending a 15-7 Panther run with 11:46 to play.

MSU pushed the margin back to 10 on two occasions over the next three minutes. But the Racers' lead and the game appeared in jeopardy when Romain Martin nailed a pair of free throws to cap a 7-0 run that pulled EIU to within one point (45-44) with just 3:59 remaining.

"We didn't come out (in the second half) as excited as we were in the first half," said Rob Kennedy, who tied freshman Bruce Carter for team scoring honors with nine points. "We kind of let up on them. We can't do that. We've got to keep going until the buzzer goes off."

Martin, who tallied a game-high 21 points on 8-of-13 shooting, was a key factor in the Panthers' comeback, scoring 16 of his points in the final 20 minutes.

"We did a good job on the two guys we wanted to limit — Catchings and (Mike Robinson)," Billy Kennedy said. "But we gave Romain Martin free reign in the second half. That was the reason it was a close game."

Martin's layup kept it a one-point game (51-50) with 35 seconds left. But Carter banged home two clutch free throws with 10 ticks to go, and the Racers sweated out Catchings game-tying 3-point attempt as the buzzer sounded.

Murray shot 41.7 percent from the floor in the first half, but cooled off to a 33.3-percent clip in the second half to finish at 37.3 percent (19-of-51) for the contest. That total included a paltry 4-of-16 from 3-point range. MSU was also just 11-of-20 from the free throw line.

After their dismal shooting effort in the first half, the Panthers rebounded to knock down 50 percent (12-of-24) of their attempts in the final 20 minutes to finish at 35.3 (18-of-51).

The Racers threw many defensive looks at EIU in the first half, switching from a straight man-to-man look to a zone while also using some full-court pressure. That defensive strategy seemed to work for a while, but Murray was unable to sustain its intensity for the entire night.

"We can't, for whatever reason, play man-to-man like I want to play for 40 minutes," Billy Kennedy noted. "We've got to hide our weaknesses on the defensive end in the post. We also have to hide our weaknesses when we get tired and our effort drops off. ... We're definitely going to have to play more zone defense."

The Racers will step back out of conference play on Tuesday, when they face Illinois-Chicago at 7 p.m. in the Windy City. After that contest, Murray will travel to Southeastern Conference foe Tennessee for a matchup with the Volunteers on Friday at Thompson-Bowling Arena in Knoxville, Tenn.

MSU hires Dantonio as new coach

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Mark Dantonio is leaving the University of Cincinnati to become the new coach at Michigan State.

The Michigan State Board of Trustees, in a special meeting Monday morning, unanimously approved a recommendation to hire Dantonio. The five-year contract guarantees Dantonio about $1.1 million a year. It also has a $200,000 signing bonus and incentives that could boost his income.

In Remembrance of Jimmie McKinney

---who lived life on his own terms!

Jimmie was fortunate enough to buy the land of his dreams and build a cabin home at the village site of Native American people who he so revered.

Family, friends and acquaintances know how Jimmie loved hiking and sharing his knowledge and appreciation for the Indians who lived on this land before us. Most of his artistic creations were inspired by and honored the Native American culture.

Jimmie was a "man of many talents" and a "jack of all trades"! Good with his hands from bodywork on cars and bikes - he tried his hand at carving, sculpting, leatherwork and painting.

His skills at wine-making were always well received.

He always had an "eye to the future" with his many, many projects. he could never pass up a challenge but he could never, ever finish them all if he lived to be a hundred.

He loved his red Camaro and brought it back to life to "cruise" again. After riding on his Dad's Harley as a kid to riding his own Sportster in his early years - then his old faithful "Knuckle" to his FXR --- Jimmie was truly "Born to Ride"!

JIMMIE'S SPIRIT IS "FOREVER IN THE WIND"!

Jimmie believed God & nature went "hand in hand" - and he was a true nature lover. Wildflowers were a passion and wildlife became a pleasure to watch. His animals were his buddies, his best friends - Chain & Smoke, Harley & Grover and Sully.

Whether it was hiking, or riding a horse or a Harley-Davidson, Jimmie took joy in giving kids and adults alike a great adventure.

All types of music put his mind at ease especially on rainy days; from gentle ballads to rockin' and rappin'. Pink Floyd, Led Zeppelin, ZZ Top, the Beatles, the Eagles and the Rollin Stones; Heart, Eva Cassidy, Cheryl Crow, Toni Braxton & Stevie Nicks - Leon Russell to Kid Rock. Robert Mirabal's modern style Native American songs and music inspired him.

Jimmie was always out for a "new" adventure - planning on traveling to places he had never been.

This "trip" was unforeseen but one we all will take - and as he would say his Son & Dad just went before him where he was to follow!

No one ever seems to know how much one is cared for and loved until something like this accident happens. The concern and support of everyone was overwhelming and truly needed at such a hard time.

Family & Friends - Thank you all so much for everything - for all the thoughts & prayers. Please know that the "short and simple" services were as close to Jimmie's wishes as possible. "Unconventional" as it was "it was Jimmie"! It was understandable if someone wasn't able to attend. You may not always see good friends but you know they're always there.

I need to express my sincere appreciation for the expert care my husband received - first by Dr. Craig Dowdy, the Murray Calloway Co. EMS and Murray Calloway County Hospital. Thank you is not enough. The doctors and nurses at Vanderbilt University MC Trauma & Step Down Unit worked so great together and gave their all for so long to save Jimmie's life. The entire hospital support staff, especially the trauma floor desk workers and counselors also went that extra mile to help.

I salute you all and may God bless you and keep you in all that you do!

JIMMIE - I AM SO SORRY TO SEE YOU GO AND WILL FOREVER MISS YOU - MAY YOUR SOUL BE AT PEACE - LOVE SHERRY

Toy safety tips given

Toys have changed over the years and the assortment can be astounding, particularly to those who haven't toy-shopped in awhile. Child safety, however, never goes out of style. It is something grandparents and other family members should always keep in mind when selecting gifts for youngsters.
 The Better Business Bureau joins with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission to offer toy shoppers the following tips to help keep kids happy and safe this holiday season and beyond:
 - Select toys that fit the child's age, interests and skill level.
 - Read and follow the age recommendation listed on the package or toy. If a toy is not recommended for children under the age of three, do not purchase it for a toddler or an infant.
 - Look for safety labels. If you are purchasing a fabric product, look for a "flame retardant/flame resistant" label. If it is a stuffed toy or doll that you seek, look for a label that states it is made of "washable/hygienic materials."
 - For children under age three, avoid toys with small parts, which can cause choking.
 - Toys with cords or strings may also be dangerous for infants and very young children, as they pose a strangling hazard.

 - Rattles, squeeze toys and the like should be large enough so that they cannot be swallowed and become lodged in an infant's throat.
 - For children under age eight, avoid toys with sharp edges and electric toys with parts that "heat up."
 - Toys that produce loud noises can damage hearing. They can also hinder household harmony!
 - Remember that siblings share toys. If you buy the six-year-old a toy with small parts and he has a three-year-old sibling, that could pose a safety hazard for the younger child.
 - Look for quality design and good construction. Toys that break easily can mean trouble as sharp edges, dangerous prongs or electrical wires may become exposed.
 - Make sure all directions or instructions are clear and easy-to-understand, for both the parent and the child.
 - If the toy requires batteries, provide them with the gift. That will make the parent's job easier!
 - Ask about the retailer's return policy and request a gift receipt. This will assist parents if they have to return the toy, because of safety or other concerns.

Horoscope by Jacqueline Bigar

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Nov. 28, 2006:
 You will be more concerned with your domestic life than in the past. Allow greater flourish and high energy, and willingly say goodbye to the tried-and-true. Investments that impact your security and well-being need to be scrutinized. You will be able to express yourself with greater creativity if you flow. If you are single, opportunities will knock on your door. Be open to possibilities. If you are attached, your relationship needs to become an even higher priority. Re-create the former specialness of this bond. You have what it takes to rekindle the spark. PISCES can hold you back, if you allow him or her to.

happening. Tonight: Say yes. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
 ★★★ Get plenty of R and R: Your imagination takes you where you might be too tired to go. Do accomplish what you must, but don't take on anything else. You could be tired and drawn, especially when dealing with someone close. Tonight: Easy does it. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
 ★★★★★ Let your imagination come forth. You might find that you have an unusual reservoir of creativity and thought. Understand what needs to happen within your immediate circle. Add new direction and focus to an adventure. Tonight: Don't restrain your mind -- but perhaps your actions. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
 ★★★ You might want to anchor in and find answers. Understand that it is OK to be tired. You need to head in a new direction. Listen to others and find out what might be motivating them. Tonight: Revise certain perspectives. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 ★★★★★ Speak your mind and get to the bottom of a problem. Your inner dialogue could change considerably. Work with a partner directly, even if you find that this person is negative. Allow more feedback in a meeting. Tonight: Hang out. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
 ★★★★★ Expenses could set you back on your haunches, which actually might be the best place to be right now. Someone might be more difficult than necessary. New beginnings come through honest reflection and re-evaluation. Tonight: Take a hard look at your spending. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
 ★★★★★ The Moon in your sign empowers you. Consider your options, because you might be upset by someone else's demands. Know when to say "enough." Others bend to your requests more easily right now. Timing, my Fish, use timing. Tonight: What would make you happy?

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
 ★★★★★ Take your time moving past an issue, especially as you keep getting new insights. Reach out for others at a distance. Friends mean well but could add to the confusion. Listen more. Tonight: Take your time. Remember, you don't have to do anything.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 ★★★★★ Understand more of what you need. You seem happier and more in touch with your feelings than in the past. Deal with others more directly, and let them have more insight. Tonight: Where your friends are.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 ★★★★★ You take a stand and move forward in your life. Think positively. You might want to work through a problematic issue that means a lot to you. Evaluate and head in a new direction. Your fiery side comes through in a dynamic manner. Tonight: Easy does it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 ★★★★★ You might want to think in terms of growth and new beginnings. Your ability to read between the lines needs to emerge. For some, you might need to go in a new direction. New perspectives open doors and allow new beginnings. Tonight: Take in a movie.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 ★★★★★ A partner will take you in a new direction if you are willing to revise your thinking and attitude. What do you really have to lose? Consider options that surround a particular flow, but tame ideas with worthwhile feedback. Tonight: Say yes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 ★★★★★ Pressure could build. You might be tired and withdrawn from recent personal events. You might have revised your perspective or actually made a physical change on the home front. Understand what is

Cell phone battleground pits mom against teens

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to a wonderful man for two years. We both have daughters the same age, born the same year. They will be 17 next March.

My husband works all day and I stay home and take care of the kids. (I also have two other girls, both under 10.) My problem is the 16-year-olds sneak around and do things behind my back when they are told they cannot do them.

One big issue is that although my ex has custody of my daughter, she stays with me because she cannot be trusted alone at his house. My husband and I bought the older girls cell phones to keep tabs on them when they are not at home. But the cell phones have caused so much arguing in the house that it's unreal.

Both girls have been told they cannot talk after midnight, but every time I get the bill, there are calls after midnight. I'm talking about 1 a.m., 2 a.m. -- even 4 a.m. They say I am wrong not to let them talk after 12 because they are adults, I am a mean mother, and I just want to prevent them from having a life. Now my daughter is saying that as soon as she's 17, she is moving out because she cannot stand it here. What should

I do? -- STRESSED MOTHER IN MICHIGAN DEAR STRESSED MOTHER: Confiscate the cell phones at bedtime. Your daughter may be 16, but she's acting like a 10-year-old. The person who pays for the cell phone makes the rules. It's up to you to enforce them.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 13-year-old girl in the eighth grade. I get treated like a slut every day. Boys keep coming up to me asking me to have sex with them and be their little slave girl. I say no, but they won't stop!

About five months ago I almost committed suicide. I try to ignore them, really I do. Abby, could you please help me? Please! -- NOT A SLUT IN S. CAROLINA DEAR NOT: There's a name what these boys are doing -- it's called sexual harassment. It is very important that you tell a teacher what has been going on, because by law, the school administration can -- and must -- put a stop to it.

DEAR ABBY: I have lost three friends, and I'm hoping you can tell me where I went wrong. If this had happened just once, I would suspect that I was overly sensitive. But three times?

These three friends are now widows. When they lost their husbands, my husband and I sent condolences, attended the funerals and attempted to be supportive. Since losing their husbands, Friend No. 1 has been exceptionally cool, Friend No. 2 left me abruptly in the middle of a sentence, and Friend No. 3 snipes at me at what seems every opportunity. What is wrong? -- PUZZLED IN WISCONSIN

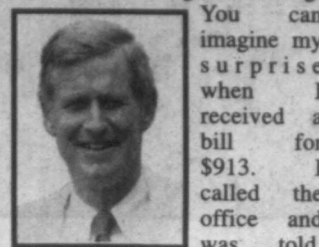

DEAR PUZZLED: Your friends may simply be grieving, or they may be envious that you still have your husband. Or each could have a different reason. I don't know these women.

Frankly, your letter is unusual, given the fact that more often I hear from widows who tell me they are sad because the couples with whom they used to socialize have now "dropped" THEM.

Make another attempt to include these friends in a social outing or invite each over for a home-cooked meal. If they refuse -- or accept, yet still seem cool or unfriendly -- then leave them alone, and rest assured that you made the effort to reach out to them.

You heard right: $913 for earwax removal

DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently read the letter regarding "wrong coding" on medical-insurance claims. In June 2004, my husband went to a local ENT to remove earwax that was affecting his hearing.

Dr. Gott By Dr. Peter Gott

You can imagine my surprise when I received a bill for $913. I called the office and was told, "Because the instrument used in the cleaning process is considered a surgical instrument, the procedure is considered to be surgery."

The insurance company paid nothing, and I had to pay $223. Even that amount is ridiculous for removing earwax. Why do insurance companies allow such practices? I don't consider this a rip-off. I think it is outright thievery. Shame on those unethical doctors!

DEAR READER: I am 100 percent behind you. Thievery is a modest description of this rip-off, which might be better termed inordinate greed.

You were billed more than $900 for a simple procedure for which I ordinarily charge $60. This is not to say that every physician would charge no more than $60, but your doctor's fee is excessive.

Before my mailbox sags with red-hot letters from angry doctors, let me assure you physicians that I am well aware of the current reimbursement schedules, malpractice issues, etc., after having had a solo medical practice for more than 40 years. Believe me, I've been there, done that.

Yet I agree with the writer and confirm that this lady has every right to complain. We should be ashamed, fellow physicians, for disregarding common-sense issues.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Regarding the no-flour, no-sugar diet, which we have used many times since first reading about it, is there any chance of your devoting a column or newsletter to the various menus/substitutes/food ideas readers have used or can contribute? This might be an additional and invaluable aid. (For instance, in place of rice/potatoes/pasta, we often substitute bulgur wheat in several forms and with several sauces; spaghetti squash in place of spaghetti, etc.) Sugar and sweet ideas might be especially useful.

And last, as to the cake of soap in bed: Yes! It does work. Why, I have no idea. Since using the suggestion, I very rarely have cramps, and when I do, they are very minor.

Again, thank you for your contribution to making life better.

DEAR READER: Many of your diet questions may have been answered in my recent book "Dr. Gott's No Flour, No Sugar Diet," which is now on The New York Times best-seller list and is available at most bookstores (independent and chain). Or order directly from the publisher online at www.quilldriverbooks.com or by phone at 800-605-7176.

Today in History

By The Associated Press Today is Monday, Nov. 27, the 331st day of 2006. There are 34 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Nov. 27, 1978, San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and City Supervisor Harvey Milk, a gay-rights activist, were shot to death inside City Hall by former supervisor Dan White.

On this date: In 1701, astronomer Anders Celsius, inventor of the Celsius temperature scale, was born in Uppsala, Sweden.

In 1901, the U.S. Army War College was established in Washington.

In 1910, the Pennsylvania Railroad began service at New York's Pennsylvania Station.

In 1942, during World War II, the French navy at Toulon scuttled its ships and submarines to keep them out of the hands of the Nazis.

In 1945, Gen. George C. Marshall was named special U.S. envoy to China to try to end hostilities between the Nationalists and the Communists.

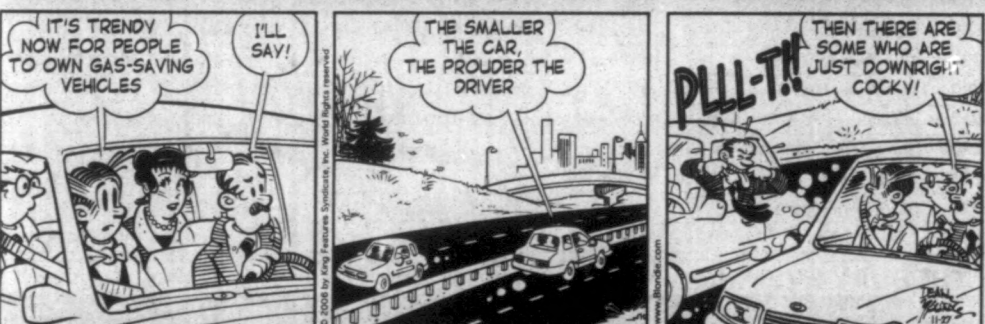

In 1970, Pope Paul VI, visiting the Philippines, was slightly wounded at the Manila airport by a dagger-wielding Bolivian painter disguised as a priest.

In 1973, the Senate voted 92-3 to confirm Gerald R. Ford as vice president, succeeding Spiro T. Agnew, who'd resigned.

The bidding: East South West North Pass 1♥ 1♠ 2♥ 2♣ 4♥ 4♣ Dble Pass 5♥ Pass Pass Dble Opening lead -- queen of spades.

The margin between victory and defeat in a given hand is often razor-thin. For example, take this deal played in the 1983 Vanderbilt Team Championship.

When Norman Kay and Edgar Kaplan held the North-South cards, they wound up in five hearts doubled on the sequence shown, and West led the queen of spades, ruffed by declarer.
