

7-1921

Correspondence: Claims for Refund of Tax on Stock Dividends

Robert H. Montgomery

Follow this and additional works at: <https://egrove.olemiss.edu/jofa>

Part of the Accounting Commons, and the Taxation Commons

Recommended Citation

Montgomery, Robert H. (1921) "Correspondence: Claims for Refund of Tax on Stock Dividends," Journal of Accountancy. Vol. 32: Iss. 1, Article 11.

Available at: <https://egrove.olemiss.edu/jofa/vol32/iss1/11>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Archival Digital Accounting Collection at eGrove. It has been accepted for inclusion in Journal of Accountancy by an authorized editor of eGrove. For more information, please contact egrove@olemiss.edu.

The set-up of type is very good, the entries being well differentiated and set apart by the use of bold-faced type, capitals, italics, etc. Capitalization has been reduced to a minimum, thus eliminating emphasis of the non-essentials, being restful to the eye and making for easy consultation.

Any review of the Index would be incomplete which fails to comment on the references to depreciation. This subject is generally recognized as having received more attention at the hands of writers than any other. Yet it is doubtful if any one without seeing the references brought together realizes the extent to which the treatment of this subject has gone. Three hundred and thirty-eight pages of the Index are required to list the references to depreciation, depletion and obsolescence.

This statement is, perhaps, subject to slight qualification, as the compilation goes further than the mere listing of titles and authors and gives the rates of depreciation for the various classes and items of physical property mentioned by the various authors. This, in itself, is a matter of great convenience and is only one more evidence of the many useful characteristics of the Index.

Words are inadequate to express the value which this volume holds for the accountancy profession. It is beyond the limit of the most profound imagination to conceive its full usefulness. Only by daily and intensive use will it be possible to realize what treasures of information the book contains.

The author of the Index has performed a great service. It should be officially recognized, not only by the American Institute of Accountants, but by the American Library Association, of which, no doubt, Miss Miltimore is a member. Hers is an achievement worthy of decoration.

JOHN RAYMOND WILDMAN.

Correspondence

Claims for Refund of Tax on Stock Dividends

Editor, The Journal of Accountancy:

SIR: I have read with interest Some Accounting Anomalies of Tax Laws by F. W. Thornton, appearing in the June issue. In discussing the question of tax on stock dividends Mr. Thornton says that "there seems to be some basis for a claim * * * although no such claim has been made within my knowledge." Many of your readers will be interested to know that such claims have been made and will be vigorously pressed. A full discussion of the matter and the proper method of making a claim appear on pages 604 and 605 of my 1921 Income-tax Procedure.

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT H. MONTGOMERY.

Marcus A. Muller announces the removal of his office to 217 Broadway, New York.