Presidential search committee meets to outline candidate visitations

Plans will be made this weekend for bringing candidates for president of Murray State to campus, Richard Frymire, Madisonville, chairman of the Board of Regents, said Tuesday.

Frymire said the search committee is to meet Saturday to determine procedures that will be used when the candidates are brought to campus.

"We're working out ways to present the candidates to the faculty and students and vice versa," he said. "We're hoping for an opportunity for a dialogue between the groups and also to give the candidates a chance to meet with community leaders."

Frymire said he still hopes to start bringing candidates to campus by the latter part of February, but he said he could not give a definite date.

"It will be in the winter season," he said, "so the weather will be a part of it. We'll also have to plan out around the availability of the Regents, the candidates and the people on campus."

Frymire would not say how many candidates still are under consideration by the selection committee, but he said the remaining candidates "are a number of people that we consider to be very attractive."

"We've been in contact to look more in depth at them, their capabilities and how they relate to others," he said. "It's an ongoing process."

He said the search committee, at Saturday's meeting, hopes to reduce the remaining candidates to "a relatively small number."

"The people we're looking at—any one of them would fit well in the Murray community. The fact that they're under consideration means that their adaptability has been considered," he said.

Frymire said he is pleased with the search committee's work.

"Many of the candidates have been talked to on several occasions," he said. "I'm very pleased at this stage of the progress we're making. We're proceeding with deliberation and going at it in a careful manner."

Married-housing council formed

A council to aid communication between Murray State's housing department and residents of its married-housing complex, College Courts, is being formed, Chuck Hulick, director of housing, said.

Hulick said he hopes the council will keep the housing department informed about the opinions of married-housing residents. These include concerns about needs for improvements in the complex's facilities and interests in programs or services that could be offered by the housing department, he said.

Hulick also said that the council possibly could become a mediating board for disagreements between residents.

The College Courts Council will consist of 24 representatives chosen randomly from married-housing occupants, according to Terri McCullar, graduate assistant in communications at MSU and the housing department's representative from married housing.

Hulick said College Courts consists of 12 buildings housing 144 apartment units but he did not know the complex's population.

McCullar said the occupants of each building in the complex will have two representatives on the council who will be available for suggestions and complaints from other residents.

"It's like our own city council with representatives from each block," she said.

McCullar said the council will meet once or twice a semester to discuss opinions of the residents. She will inform the housing department of this information.

"I am a liaison between married housing and the housing department," she said.

"People will tell me things they would never tell Chuck (Hulick). People will tell their friends or representatives things they would never tell me. It's all about communication," McCullar said.

Hulick said that since he came to MSU in 1976, his department has made several attempts to form a married-housing council. Because of a general lack of interest by the residents, he said, none was permanently formed.

McCullar said the council will primarily focus on suggestions about activities and programs that will benefit married-housing occupants.

"When you act on these things, it'll make life back there a lot happier," she said.

The first meeting of the council will be at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Hart Hall coffeehouse, she said.

The primary purpose of the meeting is to construct a calendar of events for the spring semester, McCullar said. Suggested activities include a yard sale, a potluck picnic and various classes in crafts and activities.

The council also will discuss complaints from occupants that the laundry facilities in the complex are too expensive, she said.

Council defines new standards for membership

The Academic Council unanimously adopted a revision Jan. 20 of requirements necessary for graduate faculty membership.

The council defined associate and full membership in the revision. Associate membership applies to full-time faculty who are responsible for any part of MSU's graduate program and who do not have a terminal degree (one which is the highest in their field) but are otherwise qualified. This level also includes part-time faculty who teach graduate-level courses.

Full membership is defined as faculty members who have held associate membership for at least one year and who hold the terminal degree in their teaching field.

In other action, the council referred a proposed graduate course in the College of Business and Public Affairs to the Graduate Studies Committee for further study.

The assignment of course number 644 to Graduate Cooperative Education also was approved. Lynn Richard, coordinator of cooperative programs, had requested that the council assign one course number across campus that could be used in any department for the two-credit-hour program.

Curriculum up for approval; officials expect no problems

By JAMIE DOERGE
Editor in Chief

Editor's note: This is the second in a three-part series on the council on Higher Education's undergraduate curriculum requirements and how they will affect the state's universities and secondary schools.

Reaction of regional high-school officials to the undergraduate curriculum requirements recently adopted by the Council on Higher Education varied from complete approval to tenuous disapproval.

The Council on Higher Education is requiring, effective 1987, that high-school students take a 20-unit prescribed course of study for unconditional admission to the state's universities.

Most superintendents polled said the curriculum would not have a great effect on their school systems.

Don Poyner, assistant superintendent of Graves County schools, said he doesn't believe the requirements will affect his schools drastically. "It's no problem as far as the school system's concerned; it places us at no disadvantage. All of the required subjects are offered and have been for years," he said. "It's just a matter of getting the students to take the courses."

Dan Keck, superintendent of the Paducah Independent School District, said his schools' college-bound program almost equals or in some cases exceeds the council's requirements.

"Our academic-challenge program is for university-bound students," he said. "We require 20 credits and a foreign language in that program already. It pretty much fits the council's program and we could adjust it easily."

Robert Jeffries, superintendent of the Murray City schools, said the curriculum was sound. "It's good," he said. "Anytime you have a concept established to improve education, you can't disagree with that."

"There will not be many ramifications for us; we offer most of the courses already. Most of our kids already take more than 18 hours."

Two officials disapproved of the methods the CHE used to determine the curriculum, saying that not enough research was used.

Keck questioned the manner in which the courses were determined. "My concern is not so much with what they did but the way they did it. It's a matter of governance, of who's going to run the show."

Jack Rose, superintendent of Calloway County Schools, said that the curriculum poses no problem for his district but that he was concerned about the courses needed being derived at by "fireside chats."

"To the best I could determine," he said, "there was no study done by the council to collect data to find out what courses successful college students had. The requirements were not based on empirical data easy to obtain."

Rose said the council also showed a lack of concern for areas omitted from the curriculum, such as fine arts, computer literacy and foreign languages.

"It was a very poor attempt to come up with a set of standards that should be addressed to those areas. How they could have totally left them out, I don't know," he said.

Ron McAlister, superintendent of Fulton Independent Schools, said he felt the area excluded from the curriculum were logical omissions. "There's not any way they could include all of that, and they had to make a decision. They drew a line and stuck with the basics and strongly suggested students take others."

The superintendents said they were not surprised by the State Board of Education's 6-3 vote to endorse the curriculum despite its controversial nature.

Regents should pass staff congress

The proposal to establish a staff congress is a very progressive idea and should be approved by the Board of Regents.

The congress would be the counterpart of the Faculty Senate and Student Government Association. It would hear staff grievances, formulate staff policy and make recommendations to personnel director George Stockton.

At present, the non-academic staff is the only major group on campus not represented by a governing body. And since there are only approximately 500 faculty members with full representation, it would stand to reason that the 700 non-academic staff members merit equal representation.

The non-academic staff is just as valuable a part of the University as are the students and faculty. The University could not function without its secretaries, custodians, maintenance men and other support personnel that are so vital to its existence. They are a major part of the University and deserve to have an organization to serve and speak for them.

The formation of a staff congress also would help the staff members become a part of the University by allowing them to take an active role in the governing process. It would give them a central voice to speak for their concerns—a voice which they deserve in the University they are so much a part of.

SGA thanks students for help with research

To the editor:

On behalf of the Student Government Association, I would like to express my appreciation to Dr. Phil Niffenegger and the two groups in his marketing and research class for conducting a survey polling student interest in the installation of an on-campus carrier current radio station.

Tracy Thacker was chairman of the group, which included Ronnie Chancellor, Tom Harold, Keith Hayden and Pat Stier. Sam Wilson was chairman of another group, whose members were Susie Fulks, Mark Drysdale, Dennis Adams and Pat Stiney.

The two groups did an outstanding job in devising the survey, distributing it and tabulating the results. Initial plans for the radio station had been contemplated, but a final decision was awaiting the results of student opinion concerning the use of such a station.

We were pleased with the positive response and, on the basis of the information gathered by the two groups, equipment is now being purchased for the radio station. The projected broadcasting debut for the station is later this semester.

Again, thanks to Dr. Niffenegger and the two groups for an admirable job.

RHA book exchange draws 200 students

To the editor:

The Residence Hall Association would like to thank all the students who participated in the RHA Book Exchange Jan. 17-21.

Although this annual program has done well in the past, this year's book exchange was a tremendous success, handling more than $6,600 worth of books and selling 60 percent of the more than 800 books collected.

Approximately 200 students brought their books in to be sold, allowing countless others to purchase their books at lower prices and making this year's book exchange as big as those of the two previous years put together.

RHA is proud that this event, offered solely as a service to students, is used to its full advantage. We ask that students watch for more of our programs throughout the se-semester, such as the Spring Extravaganza in April, which will include the second annual MSU Talent Show, RHA movies, and numerous other events in the planning. We hope that all of our programs receive the wonderful response that our book exchange enjoyed.

Student protests destruction of trees

To the editor:

Where are the trees that were in front of the Fine Arts building? One day I'm admiring the hollyberries and the next day they're pulled out by the roots.

All that was left of the shrubbery out there was a displaced nest. I'm tired of seeing the trees and shrubs and bushes around campus dug up, torn out, and ripped apart! Let's plant, not tear up! Where are the trees? Please bring them back.

30 arrested in roadblock

Henry County and Tennessee state authorities arrested 30 people on alcohol related charges during a saturation operation of county nightclubs.

Henry county Sheriff Wac Cole said a saturation is a county-state coordinated operation in which road blocks are set up near nightclubs in order to reduce the number of drunken drivers on the highways. Saturations are standard operations done periodically, he said.

Of those arrested in last Friday's operation, 28 were charged with public drunkenness and two were charged with driving while intoxicated.

Some of the arrests were made at establishments on Highway 641, the major route from Calloway County to Henry County, Tenn. Cole said he did not know how many were arrested at establishments on 641. Eight other road blocks were set up on major county roads.

Whether some of those arrested at the 641 road block were MSU students is not known.

Checks arrive on time

Aid level will stay constant

There were no major problems with financial aid checks arriving in time for this semester, Johnny McDougal, director of student financial aid, said.

Sixty-one percent of all students enrolled at Murray State receive some type of financial aid, he said.

McDougal said that funding for 1983-84 would continue at approximately the same level as 1982-83 on a national basis; however whether Murray State will receive the same amount of funds is not known.

The funding for all general financial aid, except for Pell Grants and Guaranteed Student Loans, is determined by a formula, he said.

The federal government allots a specific amount for financial aid that is divided among the states. Each state then determines how much will be given to each institution, based on reports sent in by the colleges and universities. Influencing factors include enrollment and cost of attendance, he said.

In 1981-82, Murray State received over $10 million in grants, student employment and loans.

However, the economic condition of the country has affected financial aid, he said.

"I think what we're seeing are more students becoming more concerned about applying for financial aid. It will also impress upon students the need to pursue and apply for financial aid on a timely basis."

McDougal said there was a great deal of publicity last spring about federal proposals to cut financial aid. The Task Force on Student Financial Aid was formed as a result.

"We asked, 'What can Murray State University do that would be unique? What could we do that would be innovative in terms of student financing?'"

The answer was 50 recommendations that were submitted to Dr. Frank Julian, vice president for student development. The recommendations are currently being considered by President Constantine W. Curris.

Student financial aid applications and the financial aid form should be filed by April 1 for students wanting aid for next year. This includes the Pell Grant, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant, KHEAA Grant, National Direct Student Loan, Nursing Student Loan, University Student Employment and the Federal Work-Study Program.

Eddyville offers associate's degree

Inmates attend 'prison university'

By HOLLY LAMASTUS
Staff Writer

It is the first day of class and there is the usual confusion. The books have not arrived at the bookstore "I don't know what my major is," and "I don't know what my classification is," is heard murmured sporadically as the teacher asks for names, hometowns and majors.

This particular first day of class was Jan. 24, 1983 at Kentucky State Penitentiary at Eddyville.

The instructor was Dr. Adam Lanning, MSU professor of sociology. The class consisted of 20 men from ages 20-35. They sat around the perimeter of the classroom which was almost perfectly square with three windowed walls and one devoted to a blackboard. The library could be seen on one side, where men came and went, checking out books or just talking. The opposite windows were curtained and the third set showed a concrete wall and steps.

Lanning has been teaching at the penitentiary in Eddyville since 1972, when he taught the first college course there.

A two-year associate of arts degree has been offered by Murray State since 1975, Barry Banister, director of education at Eddyville, said.

Bannister said of the 800 or so men at Eddyville, only 20-25 participate in the college program because Eddyville is a maximum security prison, and many men have sentences so long they will not come before the parole board for 10 more years.

Bannister said he feels education is rehabilitative at Eddyville only in selected cases because many of the inmates are repeat offenders and have already been in other prisons.

Lanning, on the other hand, said his informal observation is that among men who go to college the rate of return to prison has been about one-half that of those who did not attend school.

Dennis Gilliam, an inmate working towards an A.A. degree said he does not think inmates should expect to receive parole just because they are trying to further their education. He said, "The A.A. degree doesn't wipe out the charge. I'm doing it for myself, not the parole board."

When asked why he was going to school, Rick Courtney said, with a grin "Because I've got parole."

Robert Boyd said, "When I get out I'll have something to occupy my time — some discipline." Both men plan to continue their education after they leave Eddyville.

All the men agree they have more time to study than the students in "free society," but the inmates with television said they sometimes have to force themselves to study.

Lanning said there is "more heartfelt appreciation" among his students at Eddyville than at Murray State. He said there "is a sense of comradeship" and "lots of satisfaction."

"They really want to know something. They really light up," Lanning said.

Silver Show features national talent

By MIKE MCCOY
Photography Editor

The eighth annual Magic Silver Show, featuring more than 120 diverse exhibits of photography by nationwide talent, is worth taking a look at.

The show is on display now in the Clara M. Eagle Gallery in the Price Doyle Fine Arts Center and will continue until Thursday.

The show was judged by Dick Stevens, a photography educator from the University of Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind. There were 650 applicants to the competition, of which 95 made the show. Twelve of the finalists were Murray State students.

Virtually every type of technique of the photographic process—at the moment anyway—is at the show for viewing.

The sizes of the graphic works range from three inches by three inches—one of the prize winners—to 16 by 20 inches.

The interesting aspect of the Silver Show is not the quantity of the works on display nor the quantity of techniques employed in those displays. Rather, the interesting thing about the Magic Silver Show is the quality of the works on display. And each person may be his own judge as to exactly what that is.

The selections were based on the levels of craft and expression. The technical quality of the printing is, as would be expected, good.

As far as levels of expression can be judged, the entries are good as well. In numerous cases, however, it is difficult to tell what is being expressed.

Many of the works are dreamlike while others are very descriptive and photojournalistic in nature. Some works are mundane while others are fanciful; some are humorous and others eerie or sad. Some works are delicate and beautiful while others are rude and blatant.

Many of the entries are just downright strange.

Adjectives describing the Magic Silver show can be thought of all day, but the best description is interesting.

The Magic Silver Show is very interesting, whether one is a photography student, a hobbyist or just someone who likes to look at pictures every once in a while.

Eddyville

This semester Lanning is teaching a course in the sociology of deviant behavior. He said "I'll teach all possible reasons for deviant behavior (15 theories). It's the most interesting subject to them. They'll learn a lot."

Lanning uses the same notes at Eddyville he used for his lectures on campus last semester. So sometimes he refers to the prisoners at Eddyville as "they" and everyone smiles.

"In my classroom, they are at Murray State. I don't tolerate interference from prison officials just as I wouldn't tolerate interference from MSU authorities in my classroom."

As for the men at Eddyville, Lanning said "they're the nicest guys in the world. It's like going to a foreign country—like taking a vacation."

"Sure, he said, "they've done a bad number on someone, maybe many, but I see them as victims of a bad social system. Most are from places like the slums of Louisville. But, I don't condone what they've done."

Lanning said college education is a better rehabilitative technique than vocational education because it helps change basic attitudes; attitudes acquired from a "bad social system."

In a publication at Eddyville, the August and September issue of "The Castle," Bill Coley, an inmate, said in an editorial, "It is completely unrealistic to think you can take humans and store them in warehouses called prisons and expect to take them out of storage in "x" numbers of years and say, 'Go forth, you are now ready for society.'"

Lanning said if he did not feel education helped rehabilitate prisoners in some way, he probably would not teach at Eddyville.

Chilikas leaves Farrah for MSU teaching job

By LEANN STEPHENSON
Staff Writer

After working in advertising for 20 years at Wella Balsam, Tom Chilikas has moved from New Jersey to teach courses in advertising at Murray State University.

While working as advertising director in charge of advertising and marketing at the company, he hired such celebrities as Farrah Fawcett, Jaclyn Smith, Kate Jackson, Cheryl Ladd and Brooke Shields to serve as spokespeople for Wella Balsam products.

Chilikas joined the company when it was small and watched it grow into the firm it is known as today. During his time there, he said, he "enjoyed a large measure of success."

After being in a company that started out small and watching it grow into the size that Wella Balsam is now, Chilikas said, he felt "a sense of pride." Business-wise, he said that his time with Wella Balsam was "the best 20 years of my life."

Chilikas said he left the company because he thought it was time to start life over. "I thought that I should get a pick-up truck and load up my stuff and head South or West," he said.

After thinking through several choices of what he would like to do next, he "felt like it might not be a bad idea to try my hand at teaching."

Chilikas said that teaching was something which had always fascinated him. When Wella Balsam was chosen by the American Advertising Foundation to be used as a case study, he worked with students and universities.

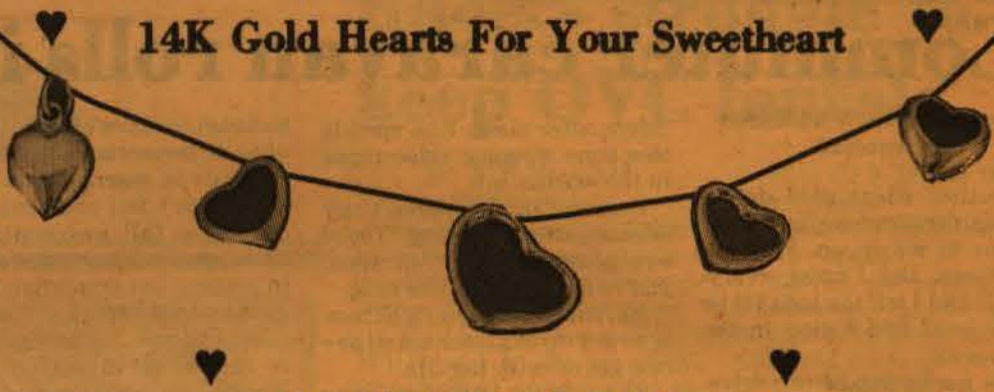

About teaching, Chilikas said, "I think I'm more conscientious about it than I should be." He said he spends about two hours preparing for each hour of class he teaches. He said he finds teaching "interesting and challenging. I hope everyone learns what they are supposed to."

Chilikas said he would like to change one of the classes to make it "more like working in the field." He would also like to see an advertising campaign class developed, focusing on how to run a national advertising campaign.

"I think doing something on that level is important," he said. He said he believes students find it more interesting to focus on national brands and that by doing this, they can learn the principles of advertising. "Once you learn the principles, you can apply them to anything," he said.

When he isn't teaching, Chilikas likes to jog, which he said he tries to do three or four times a week. He said he enjoys all sports and would like to have time to read more. During the summer, he said, he hopes to improve his golf game.

Staying for Mom's cooking

Commuter caravan rolls in

By CONNIE WATKINS
Reporter

Another silent cold dawn. She shivers and waits for the engine to warm up. Fleeting questions. Did I bring everything? Did I tell the kids I'll be home late? Did I plug in the crock pot?

She backs out of the driveway to join the rest of the commuter caravan descending on Murray State.

Some do not mind the journey. Others dread it. They come from McCracken, Ballard, Marshall, Carlisle, Hickman, Trigg counties and beyond.

Some must make the trip every day. Many were able to work out a less demanding schedule.

Barb Palmer, a senior in Pre-med, must drive from Paducah daily. She cites loss of time and the cost of gasoline as major disadvantages. Gas prices are "eating me up," she complains. Palmer also must get up a little earlier to take her 5-year-old daughter to a day care center before leaving for Murray.

Between classes she goes to Granny's Porch to enjoy a cup of coffee and to read.

Some days Palmer carools and must wait for her ride or riders after class. She spends this time viewing video tapes in the science lab.

Palmer said there aren't any advantages to commuting. "You're out money, you're out time, you're out energy," she said.

Her main concern right now is to get through school so she can get on with her life.

She admits to feeling very fortunate having a husband who is supportive and who helps out at home.

Randy Doores, a senior majoring in Construction Technology from Paducah, is a second-year commuter. He also attends classes every day.

Doores said he feels he's missing out on a full university experience by not living in Murray but said he wouldn't want to live in a dorm. He says dorm life is too hectic. At home he sleeps better (no noise) and has the added bonus of "Mom's cooking."

Occasionally he has trouble adjusting to an instructor's schedule, and it's hard to find someone for car pooling, but he has no intention of giving up commuter life.

Tana Wyatt is a freshman in the nursing program. Commuting doesn't bother her at all. She uses the driving time to listen to tapes of her classes or to do memorization work.

Wyatt is married and says she doesn't feel she's missing out on a full university experience. She's more interested in getting her education than in the social aspect.

Sophomore Lavonda Elrod is majoring in Safety and Health engineering. She feels fortunate to have a close friend with the same classes and hours she has. They commute four days a week.

Except for rising early and the long drive she says she finds no problems with commuting. She likes being able to study at home where it's quiet.

Most of the commuters interviewed cited some inconvenience associated with their travel.

A few of them, though, are like Political Science major Lana Grandon, Hayes.

She has two friends to carpool with her. She doesn't mind the long drive and can think of no disadvantages in commuting. Her class schedule worked out to suit her and she enjoys having the free time between classes to socialize with friends.

No hassles, no problems, no complaints.

Pool master may come back for command performance

By DAN DIPIAZZO
Assistant Campus Life Editor

One of Murray State's guest instructors next year may be a man who holds five honorary degrees, including three doctorates.

He has been requested to appear at the White House seven times and has done a command performance for the Queen of England.

He has been a guest on "The Tonight Show," "The Merv Griffin Show" and other national television programs.

And what will he teach at MSU? Why, pool, of course.

Jack White, pocket-billiards and trick-shot artist, appeared Jan. 27 in the University Center game room and said the University has asked him to conduct a class in pocket billiards next year.

White, who said he has beaten well-known billiards champs Minnesota Fats and Willie Mosconi, performed trick shots and challenged members of the audience in games of eight-ball.

White said he was first introduced to pocket billiards at the age of 8 by his father and his uncle, Bill Clearwater, who was the world's champion in billiards from 1895 to 1907. "I was fascinated by the colored balls rolling around and disappearing into the holes," he remembered.

One year later he started hustling pool for money. White said he played for 15 cents a game and one day came home with a pocket full of change.

"My mom asked me where I got all the money," he said, "and when I told her, she beat my butt."

When he was 19 years old, White said, he won the most money he ever got for a single game: $27,000.

Part of his success, White said, came from putting in long hours of practice. "When I was young," White recalled, "I practiced eight hours a day, seven days a week, for three years."

After hustling pool for 20 years, White said his wife convinced him to take another direction with his skills.

"She saw how the guys I played tried to insult me," he said, "and saw that I could always come back at them, and she convinced me to package it into an act." He followed his wife's suggestion and made his first appearance at the University of California at Los Angeles.

In the 20 years since that first performance, White has toured throughout the United States and 123 other countries, performing at colleges and universities, at military installations and for dignitaries in the U.S. and abroad.

This year, White will tour for seven months and go to 47 states and seven foreign countries. Murray State was one of 200 universities he will visit.

White said he is the only billiards player to be invited to the White House, and his personal experiences with several presidents have given him some very definite opinions.

White said he liked Presidents Kennedy and Ford but didn't think too highly of Nixon and Reagan.

"With Nixon you could just pick your nose because he couldn't care less about you," White said, "and Reagan—the lights are on, but nobody's home."

However, White said that without a doubt Lyndon Johnson was his favorite. "He took me up in Air Force One for lunch one time," he said, "and when I came off the plane all the press people were saying 'Who the hell is that with the president?'"

White has received five honorary degrees, including a "Doctor of Poolology" degree from Notre Dame, a "Master of Billiard Science" degree from the University of Alabama and a "Bachelor of Billiards" degree from Utah State.

After performing at the Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary, White said that the inmates even made him an "honorary inmate."

White, who claims to speak 12 languages, "including basketball and football," said that when he isn't shooting pool he likes to swim, and he does 100 laps a day when he is home in California.

White said he has a commitment to his audience, especially the students.

"Money is no longer the reason I come to the schools," White said. "I like the kids, and whatever I do, I want them to know that I care."

Racers struggle to keep OVC laurels

By TIM BLAND
Sports Editor

Lately, the basketball Racers have been involved in quite a bit of target practice. The problem is that they're the target.

Coach Ron Greene said that MSU's spot at the top of the Ohio Valley Conference standings—the team is 7-0 in the league—is what is making conference games so tough. For example, it took a mighty comeback effort for the Racers to top Austin Peay State University 81-77 at home Saturday night.

Greene said that OVC teams tend to play harder against MSU because the Racers are at the top. And that could be one of the biggest problems when MSU takes a road trip this weekend.

The Racers are at Youngstown State University tonight and face the University of Akron Saturday night. "Both the teams are fairly even" in ability, Greene said, and both are looking for a spot in the OVC tournament.

How does MSU stand against the two teams?

"I think we have an excellent chance," Greene said. "We have to play improved basketball and have better consistency. Hopefully, we can take charge in the first part of the game and set the tempo."

That is exactly what the Racers did not do against Austin Peay. Even so, Greene said he was pleased with the win.

"I was delighted. I was happy we were able to find a way to win," he said.

Although MSU's play has been comparatively sluggish lately, Greene attributed MSU's struggle to win Saturday not to problems on the Racers' part but to a good performance by Austin Peay, particularly on long shots.

He said the Racers were able to come back simply because "I just don't think they wanted to lose."

racer recap Jan. 29—Game 17

17 AUSTIN PEAY AT MSU: Roaring Back

A screaming, often angry crowd in a packed Racer Arena helped push the Racers to a narrow 81-77 comeback win Saturday over Austin Peay State University.

The Governors were up by 10 at halftime after a blistering 20 minutes in which they hit 10 of 21 three-point attempts.

The Racers, though, began trimming the deficit early in the second half. At the 1:45 mark, two foul shots by Racer forward Sammy Curran, won when APSU's Greg Andrews fouled out, tied the game and then put the Racers ahead for the first time since halfway through the first half. MSU hung on for the win.

Murray State's Glen Green led all scoring with 26 points. The Racers' top rebounder was Ricky Hood with 10.

Tennis team opens season

The MSU men's tennis team opens its 1983 home indoor season today with a triangle match against Mississippi State and Austin Peay State universities.

Mississippi State and Austin Peay open the action at noon at the Kenlake tennis courts. Following that match the Racers will square off against Mississippi State and then will play Austin Peay.

Rifle team places in meet

The MSU rifle team placed second in a weekend meet at Tennessee Tech University and will host an invitational meet this weekend.

Murray finished second to the hosts Saturday. The competition consisted of representatives of seven universities.

Rifle team coach Sgt. Elvis Green expects about 50 competitors for this weekend's match.

Pikes slate wrestling bout

Championship wrestling is coming to Murray State on Feb. 17 at the West Kentucky Livestock and Exposition Center.

The event is being sponsored by the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity and promotions chairman Steve Priest, who is coordinating the matches through Jarrett-Welch Wrestling of Nashville, Tenn.

Tickets will be sold Saturday at Dennison-Hunt Sporting Goods in Murray, starting at 10 a.m. on a first-come, first-served basis. Prices are $5 for general admission and $6 for inside.

Racer Open begins tonight

Ninety players will begin competing tonight in the third annual Racer Open Racquetball Tournament, according to Lee Barron, director of intramurals.

Barron said he has received more entries than ever before for this year's tournament, which will run through Sunday in the Carr Health Bldg.

The players will compete in advanced, intermediate and novice divisions for both men and women.

Tracksters fare well in Louisville, Illinois

The Murray State University men's track team was on the road again last Friday and Saturday, spread between two different meets—the Mason-Dixon Games and the University of Illinois Invitational.

At the Mason-Dixon Games—a prestigious track and field meet held in Louisville—Ernie Patterson fared well in the high jump, taking third with a jump of 6-11. Gary Ribbons captured sixth in the mile at 4:07.6.

Two assistant coaches for the track team, Dan Siewert and Andy Vince, did well in separate Mason-Dixon shot put events. Siewert grabbed fourth in the open shot put with 50-1, while Vince bagged fourth in the invitational shot put with a personal best of 58-7.

Meanwhile, at the University of Illinois Invitational in Champaign, Ill., Daren Pahl took first in the pole vault, establishing a new meet record with a jump of 16-4.

Coach Jay Flanagan said he was also "very pleased" with Will Jordan who anchored the second-place distance medley relay team, placed second in the 1000-meters with a time of

Lady Racers enter tourney after two wins

With a 2-9 record last week, the Murray State Lady Racers proved that most events occur in cycles, winning both of their games, 69-64 over the Mississippi University for Women and 81-72 over Austin Peay State University.

The Lady Racers will take their two-game winning streak into the prestigious Arkansas Invitational Tournament, today and Saturday, where they will compete with the University of Arkansas, Mississippi State and Middle Tennessee State universities.

Even though the team's leading scorer, Mina Todd, is out for the season with an illness, the Lady Racers are having a remarkable season, depending on such players as Diane Oakley. Oakley, in the game at MUW scored her 1000th career point and after the Austin Peay game had a total of 1,026 points to her credit.

Another player who has come through for the Lady Racers this past week is Jennie Redwine, who scored 26 points in the Austin Peay game.

The Lady Racers have struggled to a 4-9 record through the first half of the season, playing without pre-season all OVC pick Todd and playing eight of their first thirteen games on the road.

The Lady Racers return home Feb. 11 to face conference rival Tennessee Tech University.

Women's track season begins today

By THEDA SIMS
Staff Writer

The Murray State women's track team, the defending Ohio Valley Conference champion, will begin its indoor season at Indiana University Feb. 4-5.

The team consists of 28 members, including 11 freshmen. The freshmen are Mary Anderson, Radcliff; Erlinthia Miller and Maxine Best of St. George, Barbados, West Indies; Lynn Girdlestone, Blasdel, New York; Jamie Ahrens, Cape Girardeau, Mo.; Mindy Coffey, Clay; Kay Holt, East Alton, Fla.; Jeannette Smith, Elkton; Molly Gholson, Harrisburg, Ill.; Linda Cooper, Memphis, Tenn.; and Tammy Hess, Washington, Ind.

Returning this season are Janet Harper in the javelin throw and Alsinia Ervin in the long jump, both of whom won at the OVC meet last year.

Commenting on the team, Coach Margaret Simmons said, "I think we should be strong in sprints and in distance races we shouldn't be too bad off. The only area we may be weak in is the 800-yard dash and the 15-yard dash. If we can get some people going in that we may be fairly decent all around."

Simmons said some of the strong points of the team are the 3,000- and 5,000-meter relays.

On being OVC champion and how it could affect the team's egos Simmons said, "When you're the one who's won it, they're out to beat you. Eastern Kentucky and Austin Peay State universities are gonna really be trying to beat us."

Simmons said that the team does not have the chance to have the big head as other sport teams do because the team members know they have only one meet to prove themselves in, as opposed to several games in a season.

"If you don't do good after one chance you've had it," Simmons said.

Simmons also said she is proud to have an assistant coach this year. Terry Murphy is the first assistant coach Simmons has had in her 15-year career at MSU.

Murphy received her undergraduate degree at East Stroudsburg State University in Pennsylvania. She received her master's degree and served as women's athletic trainer at Indiana State University and gained three years of experience at Carthage College in Kenosha, Wisconsin.

Racers, Lady Raiders still lead OVC races

As the 1982-83 OVC basketball season heads into the second half of the season, Murray State is still on top of the men's race and Middle Tennessee State University leads the women's race.

Murray State, 7-0 in men's conference play, holds a two-game lead over second-place Eastern Kentucky University, 5-2. The University of Akron, Morehead State University and Tennessee Tech University are tied for third at 4-3. Youngstown State is sixth at 2-5 while Austin Peay State University and Middle Tennessee are tied for last at 1-6.

In the women's race, Middle Tennessee is in the top spot with a 5-0 mark. Morehead State is second at 4-1; followed by Tennessee Tech, 3-2; Eastern Kentucky, 2-3; Murray State, 1-4; and Austin Peay, 0-5.

This Friday and Saturday MSU will be at the Indiana University Relays, "a very competitive meet and a good opportunity for us to see how we fit in with top-flight competition," Flanagan said.

was the Women's Rookie of the Week in the OVC last week. Ottinger had 18 points, 16 rebounds and 11 steals in the Lady Racers' two victories.

The OVC Women's Player of the Week was MTSU's Holly Hoover. In three games last week, Hoover scored 51 points, grabbed 31 rebounds, blocked 15 shots and made six steals.

The OVC Men's Player of the Week was Jimmy Stepp of Eastern Kentucky. In two games, Stepp totaled 42 points.

Tennessee Tech's Stephen Kite took Men's Rookie of the Week honors. In two games for the Golden Eagles, Kite had 32 points, 14 rebounds and 8 steals.
