Abstract

The Bruchinae (Coleoptera: Chrysomelidae) fauna of Turkey is reviewed and an annotated checklist is presented, along with the taxa distribution by the country's provinces. In total, 122 species arranged in 14 genera are listed as the seed beetle fauna of Turkey, which constitutes approximately 25% of the Palaearctic Bruchinae fauna. Additionally, the questionable or problematic records of 11 species are evaluated separately.

KEY WORDS: Chrysomelidae, Bruchinae, Seed beetles, Checklist, Turkey

Introduction

Bruchinae or seed beetles are economically important because their larvae generally feed on seeds. Additionally, some seed-beetle species are significant pests of stored products of humans (Southgate, 1979). Bruchinae were treated as a family until recently, but now they represent one of 13 subfamilies of Chrysomelidae (Bouchard et al., 2011).

The first and sole comprehensive contribution to the Bruchinae of Turkey was performed by Decelle and Lodos (1989), who reported 106 seed-beetle species in the country. Recently, Ekiz et al. (2013) presented a checklist of Turkish Chrysomelidae excluding Bruchinae. They listed 776 species and provided data on the distribution by Turkish provinces. However, the list of Chrysomelidae remained incomplete as the data on Bruchinae are missing. The aim of the present paper was to present an annotated checklist of Turkish seed beetles, along with data on the distribution by Turkish provinces.

Materials and Methods

This checklist is the consequence of careful reviews of the available literature on Turkish Bruchinae. The tribes, subtribes, genera and species of seed beetles are listed alphabetically according to Anton (2010). The valid name, junior synonyms (if any), and distribution by the provinces of Turkey are provided for each listed species. Informative remarks are given for certain species. A map showing the administrative provinces of Turkey is provided (Fig. 1).

Remarks: A synonym of B. calabrensis, Bruchidius varipictus (Motschulsky, 1873) (Yus Ramos, 2010), appeared separately in Anton (2010: p. 347). In fact, Anton has already given this synonymy in the “New acts and comments” section (p. 63) of the Catalogue of Palaearctic Coleoptera (Löbl & Smetana, 2010), but this was skipped in the Bruchinae part. In this case, Bruchidius stylophorus (K. Daniel, 1904) appeared as a synonym of two species (Anton, 2010: p. 342 and 347). Thus, all the data relevant to these three species from the literature were combined and attributed to B. calabrensis.

Seed-beetle species with doubtful presence in Turkey

Bruchidius astragali* (Boheman, 1829): This species is reported from Ağrı, Bitlis, Gümüşhane, Kars, Konya, Kütahya and Sivas Provinces of Turkey (Zampetti, 1984; Decelle & Lodos, 1989; Borowiec & Anton, 1993). However, according to Decelle and Lodos (1989), the species is very variable and probably confused with other similar species. Anton (2010) did not list Turkey as part of the distribution range of the species.

Bruchidius incarnatus* (Boheman, 1833): The only record of this species from Turkey is from Ankara by Alkan (1966), who sent the specimens to the Natural History Museum in London, where they were identified as B. incarnatus. There is no other record of the species from Turkey. The current distribution range of the species includes southwestern Europe and northern Africa (Anton, 2010). Decelle and Lodos (1989) commented that the species was introduced to Turkey, but not successfully established.

Bruchidius incipiens* Kolenati, 1858: This species is reported from Turkey by several authors (Lukjanovitch & Ter-Minassian, 1957; Borowiec, 1987; Decelle & Lodos, 1989), but with no exact locality provided.

According to Anton (2010), the original description of this species lacks characters that are necessary for accurate identification and the type material is unavailable, thus the species is considered incertae sedis.

Bruchidius kurdicus* Decelle, 1989: This species was first recorded from Ankara, Bilecik, Bitlis, Diyarbakır, Giresun, Hakkari, Hatay, Mardin and Uşak (erroneously written as Afyon-Banaz) provinces of Turkey by Decelle and Lodos (1989), and later from Kütahya, Mardin, Mersin and Tunceli provinces by Borowiec and Anton (1993), with the note that their specimens were identified by J. Decelle. The formal description of this species was never published; thus, it is a nomen nudum according to the ICZN (Art. 13.1.1).

Bruchidius martinezii* (Allard, 1868): This species was recorded from Adiyaman, Antalya, Bolu and İzmir provinces of Turkey by several authors (Borowiec, 1984; Zampetti, 1984; Decelle & Lodos, 1989; Borowiec & Anton, 1993). However, according to Anton (2001), B. martinezii is a southwest Mediterranean species distributed from northern Africa to southern France, Sardinia and Sicily. He suggests that the records from areas other than the southwest Mediterranean can be referred to B. cf. varius, as both species are strongly similar.

Bruchidius nudus* (Allard, 1868): Schilsky (1905) first reported this species from Turkey with no exact location provided and this was repeated later in several papers (Borowiec, 1983, 1984, 1987; Campobasso et al., 1999). Decelle and Lodos (1989) and Borowiec and Anton (1993) commented that the specimens from Turkey probably belong to Bruchidius parumpunctatus (Baudi de Selve, 1886) as B. nudus is distributed in the western and central Mediterranean.

Bruchidius pauper* (Bohemian, 1829): This species is reported from Mardin Province by Borowiec and Anton (1993) as a new record for Turkey. However, according to Anton (2010), the original description of this species lacks characters that are necessary for accurate identification and the type material is unavailable, thus the species is considered incertae sedis.

Bruchus perezi* Kraatz, 1868: This species is reported from Turkey by several authors with no exact locality provided, so these records need confirmation (Borowiec, 1987; Decelle & Lodos, 1989; Borowiec & Anton, 1993).

Caryedon akdamaricus* Decelle & Lodos, 1979: This species was reported from Van Province (Akdamar Island) of Turkey by Decelle and Lodos (1989). However, its description has not been published so far. Therefore, it is a nomen nudum and not available (Johnson et al., 2004).

Caryedon pallidus* (Olivier, 1790): Baudi de Selve (1886) reported this species from Turkey. However, according to Johnson et al. (2004), the records of C. pallidus from the literature must be carefully evaluated. Anton (2010) did not list Turkey as part of the distribution range of this species.

Spermophagus variolosopunctatus* Gyllenhal, 1833: This species was first reported from Turkey by Schilsky (1905) and later it was found in the country by several authors (Zampetti, 1981; Borowiec, 1984, 1985a). Although Borowiec (1986) attributed these records to S. confusus, Mergen (2000) reported it again from inner Anatolia and the Mediterranean region of Turkey. In fact, S. variolosopunctatus is distributed in several provinces of China, some parts of India and Nepal, and it was introduced to Ukraine (Anton 2010).

Discussion

Turkey has a remarkable diversity of species because of its geographic position. This also applies to the diversity of Bruchinae in Turkey. The fauna of Bruchinae of Turkey, containing 122 species, is compared with the faunas of neighboring countries in Fig. 2. The numbers of species in Fig. 2 are taken from Ghahari and Borowiec (2017) (for Iran) and Anton (2010) (for the remaining countries). Only the southern European part of Russia is considered in this study. Of these 14 countries, Turkey is the most diverse in terms of Bruchinae, followed by Iran with 117 seed-beetle species. New faunistic surveys from various areas and habitats of Turkey are expected to reveal new species to science and new records for the fauna of the country, resulting in an increase in the total number of the Bruchinae species. I hope that the checklist will be a guiding reference to the biodiversity, conservation and knowledge of Turkish Bruchinae.

Извод

Урађена је ревизија фауне подфамилије Bruchinae (Coleoptera: Chrysomelidae) Турске и представљена је чеклиста са коментарима, као и дистрибуција таксона по провинцијама. Представљене су укупно 122 врсте жижака из 14 родова за фауну Турске, што представља приближно 25% фауне жижака у Палеарктику. Поред тога, сумњиви или проблематични подаци за 11 врста су представљени одвојено.
