REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS

February 10, 1927.

To the School Board and Citizens of Salisbury:

In connection with this report I am submitting the attendance table for the last school year. I note a gratifying increase in the per cent of attendance over the record for previous years. The tardiness record for South Road and Smith's Corner was very poor, but at Smith's Corner there has been great improvement during the current year both in attendance and in arriving at school on time.

For about two years now nothing has been expended for textbooks. While this may result in a temporary saving, it cannot be continued indefinitely without seriously affecting the work of the schools.

I assume that the loss of state aid has been an important factor in cutting off all expenditures for textbooks and in the too rigid economy in the purchase of scholars' supplies. The equalized valuation of the town for the coming two years will be so much less than it has been that we ought to receive considerable aid from the state in the future.

I hope that state aid will make it possible for us to pay better salaries to teachers and that we may be able to secure, and keep for some time, teachers well qualified both by training and by experience. The contract with Keene Normal School to furnish "Cadet Teachers" in two of our schools was entered into partly as a money-saving proposition. It was soon dropped at South Road, as the school seemed too difficult for a young, inexperienced teacher to manage. At the Heights this plan is succeeding in a way quite satisfactory to the Superintendent. Some parents, however, are not satisfied with the frequent changes in teachers, and that, of course, is a disadvantage of the system. I do not hesitate to recommend abandoning this plan at the end of the school year if Salisbury is ready to pay for something better.

The teachers, the schools, and the educational system are subject to a great deal of criticism. No doubt some of this criticism is entirely deserved; but a part of it, I feel sure, comes from a failure to understand how big a job the schools of today have to accomplish.

In "the Good Old Days" when our fathers were little boys, when families were larger and much of the work now done in factories was done in the farm home, it was the home, for the most part, that educated the children. They went to school for a short time to get, through constant drill, skill in a few simple processes, like spelling and elementary arithmetic. They also sharpened their wits on complicated problems which they were not likely to meet again after leaving school.

But all the progress of modern civilization is based on cooperation, which can result only from mutual understanding, faith in one another. The home today cannot give its lone child, or its two or three children, the early contacts needed to teach them how to work together for the common good. On the one-man farm the parents themselves are not often forced into those close contacts with neighbors which give them the point of view which their children must have in order to succeed in the middle of the twentieth century.

The school today must work of course, to give the skill which the olden-times school gave. But that is a small part of its job. It must undertake to teach the child how to work, to play, to study, how to live, as one of a group, as a citizen of a great republic in a time when there is as great a demand for strength and courage, for unselfishness and high ideals, as ever before in our history.

And this job is too big for any teacher working alone. For any real success all influences surrounding the child must be working in harmony. Parents, school officials, the community, must be working with the teacher and with one another, with mutual respect and confidence.

It is utterly useless to sit and wish that "The Good Old Days" might come back. There is only one way for us and that leads forward. The children we are dealing with are being prepared not for life yesterday but for living to-morrow.

The time is not far distant when our personal opinions will be forgotten, when you and I will be little more than a memory. The boys and girls now in school will be "in saddle" in Salisbury then.

And when they are in middle life, what are they going to be? Our Salisbury churches are closed; some of the influences of our dance halls are not helpful. It makes a big difference just how far our schools can help. If they are to rise to their opportunity everybody has got to ask not "How cheaply can they be run?" but "How good can they become?"

I don't suppose that all the teachers, and the superintendent, and the school board, and the parents, and the voters and taxpayers will ever agree, and no one of them will ever be entirely right in their opinions; but if we could all of us work together for the same big ends, with trust and confidence in one another, sharing together the faith that we have in our hands the making of the Salisbury of 1975, our small differences of opinion would be a help rather than a hindrance in our work.

It is my own belief, and I am going to hold to it till the weakness of second-childhood drives it out of me, that the rising generation are going to become brighter and better men and women than we have been. Whether they are going to do this because of our influence or in spite of us depends on us.

Respectfully,

GEORGE W. SUMNER.
