CENTRE FOR BANKING AND FINANCE CONFERENCE ON 'PERSPECTIVES AND CHALLENGES OF THE BANKING UNION'

The conference is promoted by the Italian Association of Scholars of Economics and Management of Financial Institutions and Markets (ADEIMF)

The Banking Union is probably the most significant innovation that is going to affect the European financial landscape. The recent financial crisis demonstrated that integrated banking systems need integrated prudential oversight, and the Banking Union represents a response to many issues.

Although the Single Supervisory Mechanism (SSM) is proceeding in harmonising supervisory practices within the euro area, the Single Resolution Mechanism (SRM) still manifests some controversial aspects and generate concerns about its actual effectiveness in the short and medium term. Also the implementation of a European network of deposit insurance schemes is far from being launched.

The Centre for Banking and Finance of Regent's University London is proud to contribute to the discussion on perspectives and challenges of the Banking Union by hosting a conference which brings together top regulators, academics and practitioners working on this important and controversial topic.
