Students will feel budget crunch

By Kim Perkins
Editor in Chief

The California State University budget for 1991-92 will be cut severely and student fees will increase by 20 percent as a result of a decision made by the California State University Board of Trustees in early March. The 24-member board made this decision in reaction to Governor Pete Wilson's budget proposal of $1.65 billion. This $1.65 billion is $402 million short of the $2.1 billion requested by the board.

The Governor's proposed budget is smaller than the current budget and poses many problems for growing campuses. As a result, each of the 20 CSU campuses will have an effective student-enrollment reduction of 10 to 12 percent.

In his testimony to the Assembly Committee on Higher Education, Chancellor Ellis McCune stated, "...that just to maintain the status quo for the coming year, we would need an increase in our budget of about five percent, or approximately $113 million...but the $113 million that we need just to stay even is not in the budget, and unfortunately, we are not being asked to maintain the status quo. Instead, we will be asked to add approximately 8,000 new student next year - the equivalent of a campus the size of Sonoma State."

These students, as well as continuing students, will have a lot to think about. The 20 percent increase in fees will require them to pay an extra $325 a year (from $1,624 this year to $1,949). And non-resident students will have to pay $1,283 more than the current rate set at about $6,416. Non-resident graduate students will end up paying about $2,500 more than other institution's estimated fees. To make up for these increases, plans to increase financial aid are being considered.

On August 31, 1990, Governor Duekmajian signed a bill (Senate Bill 1645) to protect students from such atrocities. This bill, commonly known as the Dills Act, specifically addresses fee increases in chapter 3.5 of part 40 of the Education Code. A summary of the law follows:

...In the event that state revenues are substantially unbalanced due to factors unforeseen by the Governor and Legislature, fees may rise or fall by 10%...Fees may not increase or decrease by more than 10%...Fees may not increase or decrease by more than 10% in any single year...Students shall be provided with notice of at least 10 months in advance, in order to avoid disrupting family and student expectations and ongoing institutional problems...Fees charged to graduate students may not differ from those charged to undergraduates...

In order for the proposed increase to pass the student fee statute should have to be suspended by the Legislature.

Graduate students might not have to worry too much as the proposed plan has denied graduate en-

KSSB to broadcast on FM

After nearly three years of cablecasting, KSSB will soon be reaching listeners on the FM dial for the first time.

A recent ruling by the Federal Communication Commission, the national governing body of radio and television, allows organizations to broadcast at low wattage as long as it does not interfere with other radio stations.

Sunday, April 21, is the date set for KSSB's first stereo broadcast at 9 p.m. following a press conference/party for the staff. The station will still be at 106.3 FM. The addition of an FM frequency will be going through a two-month trial period.

Education, campus news and alternative varieties of music will be the key source of programming for the duration of the trial period.

The biggest emphasis, however, will be on education seeing as that KSSB broadcasts from an institution of higher learning.

The broadcast antenna resides on the roof of the Pfau Library and will have a one-mile radius around the campus reaching as far east as "H" Street, as far south as the intersection of Kendall and "E" Streets and west to the 215 freeway.

KSSB, which is carried by Chambers and Comcast cable systems throughout San Bernardino, Grand Terrace, Highland, and Fontana will still remain on cable.

Police honor student for stopping car thief

Steven Jennings
Photography Editor

Last quarter, a CSUSB student prevented an alleged burglar from stealing a fellow student's vehicle. For his efforts, he was awarded a certificate of appreciation by the Campus Police Department.

Michael Szarzynski noticed something peculiar about the black BMW driving through the Campus Dormitory Parking Lot. He continued to watch the driver as he drove throughout the parking lot. The burglary suspect was unaware of the alarm protecting his prey. Finally, the driver made his move. As the door opened, the alerting siren warned off the suspect and he drove away.

Szarzynski, unaware of the subject's intent, found it odd that this driver would activate an alarm and then flee. His suspicions were heightened and then confirmed when the suspect returned to the vehicle and again attempted forced entry.

After getting a good look at the suspect, Szarzynski went to the Student Union and phoned campus authorities. He related to them what he saw and a description of the suspect as well as the BMW's license number.

Campus police apprehended the suspect before he was able to again flee the scene of the crime.

Szarzynski's presence of mind and care for fellow student's property was instrumental in the capture of the burglary suspect. Szarzynski stated, "I think it is a civic duty...people need to watch out for each other."

Victim Jens Wacker expressed his happiness with his alarm and gratitude to Szarzynski. He stated, "I guess the alarm paid off. I am glad that another student cared enough to get involved. His efforts prevented the theft of my vehicle."

Faculty Senate puts ROTC future in jeopardy

The Reserve Officer's Training Corps discriminates against handicapped students, pregnant students, and homosexual students. So says some members of the Faculty Senate. And their decision could force the removal of the Army program.

Currently enrolled students would not be affected, but if the resolution is passed, no future student could participate.

Students were in front of Pfau Library on Wednesday, April 10, 1991 petitioning for signatures in support of removing the program. Student activist Chuck Reed said, "This is not just a gay issue, this is a discrimination issue."

The station was approved for broadcast on April 9 through the offices of Student Services after reviewing a proposal by Station Advisor Rob McKenzie and endorsed by the Media Commission. This followed nearly two months of hard work and research by McKenzie, Chief Engineer Tom Richards, Assistant Engineer Marc Westwood, and Station Manager Brian Murphy.

"Since I began as station manager, students have asked me 'why can't we become a real FM station?'" said Murphy. "Now we are going to be one serving the entire college community."

KSSB will have 15,000-20,000 potential new listeners in the north end of San Bernardino, including Serrano Village and the apartments surrounding CSUSB. Already, KSSB has 100,000 potential listeners on cable. Listeners may call in for requests or information at (714) 880-KSSB.

"I am so completely thrilled because students have been waiting a long time for this and they will be getting genuine practice of broadcasting skills that they wouldn't get at a purely cable station," said McKenzie.

CSUSB Women's Basketball

Players accuse coach of misconduct

By Richard Kontra
Staff Writer

Women's basketball coach Gary Schwartz may have thought his problems with the women's basketball team were over after a poor 10-16 record.

His problems may have just begun.

After a published story in The San Bernardino Sun Sunday, March 24th reporting the findings of an investigation conducted by The Sun, it appears Schwartz may have committed some serious violations against the NCAA's policy.

Athletic director David Suenram after being notified of the evidence said "It would appear there are some violations here..."

Five members of the basketball team have confirmed the following:

1. Prospective players not enrolled in the school practiced with the team before and during the 1990-91 season, often drilling and scrimmaging with team members.
2. Schwartz often was present during practices and pick-up games before the NCAA mandated first day of practice on Oct. 15, in some cases, deciding who would play on each team and offering coaching tips to players afterward.
3. Schwartz on two occasions had a prospective player not enrolled in the school travel in the team van to road games.

The five players who confirmed this information were team captain Laura Beeman, Sandrine Rocher, Kris Ballesteros, Veronica Cummings and Holly Wood. Wood quit in the middle of the season but the other four remained on the team throughout.

Schwartz said "They're basically grasping at straws here. I don't want my name and my program dragged through the mud without everyone knowing why."

President Anthony Evans said "I'm disappointed. It does appear, in at least one instance, there may have been bad judgement on the part of a coach."

Crime Watch

By Martin Hepp
Opinion Editor

Complacency and a false sense of security, these are two of the attitudes that create a problem for the Department of Public Safety here at CSUSB.

Despite the fact that the CSUSB police force is budgeted to employ eleven police officers and five dispatchers and administrators, their task is formidable. Not only are they responsible for the personal safety of a fluid population of nearly 12,000 persons, but also the safeguarding of their possessions and the safety and property of a multi-million dollar corporation and its employees. In addition, they are responsible for an area that extends for one mile outside the boundaries of CSUSB's 422-acre campus. Include their inherent responsibility to cooperate with neighboring law-enforcement agencies, and the task may seem nearly impossible.

But upon review of the crime statistics for this campus, it is evident that the Department of Public Safety is quite proficient in their undertaking of this challenge. However, with the increase in population and real-estate development that is taking place in the Inland Empire, and the anticipated soaring enrollment here at CSUSB in the next ten years, this task can only become more difficult.

The Department of Public Safety's Operations Analyst, Quentin Moses, remarks that the main crime threat comes not from students themselves, but rather, from persons with no campus affiliation. He added that students are the most victimized by crime, with larceny, auto burglary, and auto theft the most prevalent crimes on this campus.

The Director of Public Safety, Edward Harrison, has been a specialist in campus law-enforcement for 17 years, and worked at C.S.U. Long Beach before coming to CSUSB. He says that although campus police are doing an outstanding job here, he would like to see students become more involved in crime prevention.

Chief Harrison feels it is unfortunate that students have, "No time for crime..." until they are victimized themselves. And he points to the fact that this is the only campus in the area to offer a four-year degree in Criminal Justice, and it could only be beneficial for students to form some sort of "Campus-Watch" or "Campus-Safety" organization to become more involved with the Department of Public Safety and help reduce crime on campus.

Immediate steps in crime prevention that can be taken by students, faculty and visitors are: remember to lock your car when you leave it; don't leave valuables unattended-even briefly; report suspicious activity in the parking lot if you see it (this is where the greatest loss occurs.)

If you have been the victim of theft, whether it be books, keys, clothing, car stereos, etc... ensure that you check with the lost and found section of the Department of Public Safety before you declare the item a total loss. There are lockers full of these items which have been recovered on campus, and the Department keeps them for only six months before they are given to charity.

Most importantly, become involved in crime prevention before you are a victim, don't wait until after it happens, because then it's too late.

rollment growth for the second year in a row. Still, enrollment is expected to increase at the undergraduate level. It is estimated that by the year 2005, growth will exceed 67,000. This expected growth may be stunted by limits placed on enrollment numbers; another option to help make up the deficit.

According to Vice President William B. Baker, the passage of Proposition 143 last November could have thwarted some of the sting by providing over $100 million in General Obligation bonds, yet it failed. A new proposal for General Obligation bonds is being introduced by Senator Hart for the ballot next year. But as of yet other action must take place.

And if everything goes as currently planned, students will suffer from fewer course options, larger classes, fewer student services, deficient equipment and so on. Other options include cutting the variety of courses offered to increase availability of core courses taught by individual teachers and affect the overall quality of their teaching.

The proposed budget cuts could also mean a lot to faculty, staff and those seeking jobs in the field. Normally, with the advent of enrollment growth additional staff is required, but no provisions are made for salary increases. Some 900 new positions are needed for the expected growth, but as McCune says, "...the fact is that there are so many unallocated reductions incorporated into the budget that it will be impossible for us to fill most of the positions. Indeed, it will not be possible for us to maintain our existing work force, let alone add new staff."

Baker is concerned with this fact stating, "The lack of salary increase funds weakens the University's competitive position — and in fact, weakens all level of State government in their ability to recruit and retain good employees... We know from past experience that we are less able to recruit good people when our salaries fall behind... As soon as our fiscal situation permits, our ability to compete effectively in the academic marketplace must be restored."

McCune agrees stating, "One of the things that has helped to make California such a vital and successful leader among our United States is the commitment which our residents have made to education... At the CSU we have tried to provide access to higher education to every qualified student who desired it... the future prosperity of our state rests in an educated work force... Our state's investment has paid off handsomely. It would be a tragic mistake at this point in time to turn away from our commitment to higher education. The proposed 1990-91 budget won't just hurt California's future prosperity. That's something none of us can afford."

The Chronicle welcomes new adviser, Eric Bishop

By Steven Jennings
Photography Editor

Eric Bishop is the new Chronicle adviser. He comes to CSUSB from the University of La Verne, where he was production and layout adviser for The Campus Times. Twenty-five years old and single he obtained his bachelor's degree in journalism and his masters in communications from the University of La Verne.

At California State University at San Bernardino, Bishop teaches COMM 242, Writing for Print Media, and its accompanying practicum.

He says CSUSB has friendly and he was pleasantly surprised by this. "When you go to a small, private school, there's a misconception about the public schools."

He is interested in "sports, dancing, (and) veging."

A California native, he has big plans for The Chronicle and its staff.

"I hope to bring to The Chronicle as high a level of professionalism as possible. I want the students to experience the responsibilities, duties and rewards of working for a newspaper," he said.

Rattlesnake Alert

It's rattlesnake season, and the campus police are warning people that rattlesnakes do inhabit our campus. Generally, 10 to 20 are seen per year. Students faculty and Staff should be especially careful around the trailer classrooms and the physical education building. If you see a snake, contact the campus police at ext. 5911 immediately. If the snake is a rattler, the police will shoot it and bury its head. If it is a gopher snake or garden snake, then they will leave it alone because they help keep the rattlesnakes away. There's never been a snake bite injury at CSUSB.

Career fair: Seniors don't miss this opportunity

By Renee Groese
Staff Writer

The Career Development Center will be sponsoring its annual Career Opportunities Fair on Wednesday, April 17, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the University Gymnasium.

According to Paul Esposito of the Career Development Center, "the fairs in the past years have been very successful, and it is anticipated that this year's fair will be successful also, with at least 65 employers expected to attend the fair."

The fair provides an opportunity to participants to talk with potential employers representing businesses in both the public and private sector. Esposito stated that, "the fair is open to ALL students, including freshman and graduate students, and alumni in all academic disciplines."

All students are encouraged to attend the fair, so that they can gather information and ask questions. A potential listing of employers who have confirmed their attendance include: Aetna Life and Casualty, California Highway Patrol, CSUSB Graduate Programs, Loma Linda Community Hospital, Peace Corps, The Sun, and TRW.

A series of four career related workshops will also be held during the fair starting at 11 a.m. in Room 129 of the Physical Education Building.

'Class Action' not a class act

By Mitchell Halbreich
Campus Life Editor

"Class Action" starring Gene Hackman and Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio recently hit the theaters here in Southern California. During the movie's first couple of weeks, it has had mixed responses by its viewers.

Hackman and Mastrantonio play lawyers who happen to be father and daughter. In the film they come up against each other in a case.

The movie focuses on the father-daughter relationship. Which at first can be called strained at best. After seeing each other at work and regaining respect for each other the relationship is vastly improved by the end of the trial.

What carries "Class Action" is the strong acting by both Hackman and Mastrantonio. It was obvious that the two of them did the research necessary to play their parts.

A big problem with the movie is the weak story line. There are no surprises as you watch the movie. It is obvious to the viewer that the case that the father and daughter are working on will bring them together.

For Hackman fans, waiting for the video is the best way to watch this movie. It will cost you two dollars as opposed to six.

'Profile: The Ultimate Sparks Collection'

Mitchell Halberich
Campus Life Editor

"Profile: the Ultimate Sparks Collection" was released at the end of March by Rhino Records. For close to twenty dollars you can obtain these two compact discs that the top ten in England France and Germany and never cracked the top 100 here in the United States. This compact disc collection gives you a chance to hear some of these songs that were popular overseas.

Each of the two compact discs chronologically takes you through twenty years of Sparks music.

Sparks, a Los Angeles based band have produced the hits "Cool Places," "Upstairs," and "Music That You Can Dance To." The band has come out with many other songs known only to avid KROQ listeners.

contains a booklet which provides the lyrics for the songs and an interesting comment is made on each song by band member Ron Mael. These two booklets really give you the feeling of what the band has experienced during its history.

Anybody who has enjoyed Sparks over the last twenty years would enjoy this compact disc compilation. It will be great to see where the band decides to go when their sixteenth l.p. finally comes out.

This collection of Sparks songs has 40 cuts showing the band's progression and diversity over the years. Many of these songs for example, "Change" and "Modesty Plays" hit

Graffiti on the walls

By Stacy McClendon
Production Manager

Popular sentiment can be seen in many places: public opinion polls, bumper stickers, bathroom walls, etc.

Bathroom walls are definitely popular places for students to express their opinions. Besides items about the war, messages like "I love Chad" and "Victoria y Jackie" also showed up.

Greeks had their letters written on just about everything. People responded, "frats do it greek" and "be in a frat where the blind lead the blind."

There were several racially motivated slurs and even more against homosexuals. Politics was not given much space on the bathroom walls.

Philosophical sayings or somewhat philosophical sayings "I think therefore I am, I think" and "All things must come to an end including earth," were a common sight.

Library cubicles were also a place of desperation. "God help me on this test," one crammer wrote.

One person who obviously felt it was better to work within the system than against it wrote, "you people are stupid for writing on school property! Don't you have anything better to do?"

Apparently not, someone wrote back, "You are just as bad."

Circle K Club

By Stacy McClendon
Production Editor

"The Circle K Club at CSUSB is not a convenience store," says club president Les Dinerstein. Instead, they are here "to service you as a college student and the community (at large)."

Circle K is the college version of Kuwainis International. Key Club, which many students are familiar with from their high school days, is also a branch of Kuwainis. Dinerstein, a music education major, was involved in Key club, and "wanted to see the Key family continued at CSUSB."

Other students have tried from time to time to establish Circle K on campus, but until now, no one was successful. Dinerstein hopes to turn this trend around by having numerous activities, publicizing them well, and making an effort to have fun as well as serve.

This year, their theme is "Beep, beep. We're on the move," featuring the roadrunner. Recently, they attended a regional volleyball tournament where the price of admission was a bag of clothes. The clothes were donated to a Los Angeles County homeless-relief agency. At the end of this month, they are working at both the registration and check-in booths for the March of Dimes annual run.

"It makes you feel so good!" Emi Suzuki, club secretary said. She added that "it's so much fun."

Richelle Lyford, an active club member said that she joined because she "wanted to serve."

Dinerstein said that the club was "a good contact for business," but it is open to all full or half-time students who are in good standing with the school. They are actively recruiting new members. Meetings are on Thursdays at 4:30 in TC-13.

"We're not just a community service club," Dinerstein said. "We like to have fun too. The club is what we make of it, and who joins."

Students wanting more information about the club can leave their name, address, and phone number in campus box 57 in the Student Union. A Circle K member will contact you.

ΣΓΦ gets club status

By Stacy McClendon
Production Editor

"We wanted a fraternity that everyone could be a part of," and on that basis, Martin Hepp and 23 others founded Cal State's first co-ed fraternity, Sigma Gamma Phi. While the fraternity is not formalized, they are working with Greek adviser Rick Morat and hope to soon be recognized by both Interfraternity Council (IFC) and Pan-Hellenic Council. Right now, they have club status.

Their goals are threefold: social interaction, community service, and academic achievement.

While many fraternities and sororities have similar objectives, there is something different about being in a coed fraternity. Hepp said he thought all male and all female groups become too "cliquey." Additionally, when men and women from fraternities and sororities socialize, it tends to be mostly on a dating basis, Hepp observed. ΣΓΦ works on "brother-sister interaction," and Hepp said they are "totally candid."

Lead by president Tony Baumgautner and vice president Carrienne Franceze, the fraternity has many social activities planned for the remainder of the school year including a luau, a yacht party in Marina del Rey, and to cap off the year, a big trip to the river.

To achieve their community service goal, they are taking children from an abused children's center to Magic Mountain. Each fraternity member will spend the entire day with a child one on one.

The fraternity also acts as an academic support group. Often members tutor each other.

Member Gi Gi Tolentino joined the group because she liked the thought of belonging to a local fraternity, and says the thing she likes most about it is that "there's no discrimination against men and women."

ΣΓΦ Rush is April 15-19. There are 24 active members, and they would like to have 50-60 in the future. Because they are not a national fraternity, they do not have to support a national bureaucracy, and therefore dues are inexpensive.

Sigma Chi: Teeters into spring

By
Greek Editor

The first two weeks of the spring quarter have proven to be very busy for the men of Sigma Chi.

The first event was their annual 48-hour teeter totter marathon.

The event ran from noon on Wednesday, April 3 until noon on Friday, April 5.

The men took two-hour shifts teetering to raise money for the Cleo Wallace Childrens Center, which gives treatment and rehabilitation for children who are learning disabled or emotionally disturbed.

Their goal was to raise $1,500 by the end of the event through either obtaining sponsors for each hour of teetering they completed, or collecting donations from spectators.

Active member Michael Spalding said, "we had support from the sororities. They brought us pizza and doughnuts and would also take turns teetering."

The weather was cooperative on Wednesday night, but on Thursday night it got so cold the men gathered around a barbecue to keep warm.

Their second event of the quarter ran from last Monday until today.

The current Sigma Chi pledge class was selling barbecued hamburgers and sodas to help cover costs of various activities they have planned for the future.

Between the two activities, the men of Sigma Chi said they have tried to help their community and better their chapter.

Greek Week competition fierce

By Charlene S. Hurley
Greek Editor

Tomorrow night at 6:30 room 157 in the Creative Arts building will harbor the final event of the Greek Week competitions.

The fraternities and sororities will perform a lipsync in hopes of gathering some last precious points in a frenzy of competition.

The annual events began when a group of greek students gathered at the Student Health Center on Tuesday at noon.

Each of the four fraternities: Delta Sigma Phi, Sigma Nu, Sigma Chi and Tau Kappa Epsilon had participated in all of the games.

The three sororities: Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Phi, and Kappa Delta competed against each other as well.

The competition is expected to be fierce this year as TKE attempts to pull a "three-peat," and Alpha Delta Pi strives to win it's fourth consecutive title.

Mike Donnelly, activities director for the InterFraternity Council, and Deena White, activities director for Panhellenic scheduled many activities which kept the competition exciting.

The participants were run ragged during events such as: the jelly bean pie relay, "going batty" relay, a canoe relay, the chariot race, and the wheelbarrow race.

Jon Farthing, an active member of Tau Kappa Epsilon, competed in both the obstacle course, called the "Coyote Crusher", and the triathlon. He decided these were the two toughest events of the week.

Maura Smithhammer, active member of Alpha Delta Pi said,

"The competition is good, because if you're losing you unite in your sisterhood to work harder and win".

Aside from all of the competition, greek bonding, and fun, greek week contributes to the community every year. This year one of the events is a recycling race. Who ever earns the most money by recycling wins the event, and the money gets distributed to the houses individual charities. Not only does it raise money, it is also an environmentally conscious endeavor.

Money collected through sponsor sheet donations is being given to the Childrens' Center on this campus.

The public is invited to come and watch the lip sync tomorrow and find out who the 1991 Greek Week champions are.

Sigma Nu fraternity receives its charter

By Brian R. Murphy
Managing Editor

Another chapter has been entered into the ever growing book of Greek life at California State University, San Bernardino.

Sigma Nu Fraternity installed its Lambda-Chi chapter on February 23, 1991 making it the fourth social fraternity represented by a national backer in the InterFraternity Council.

Other fraternities are Delta Sigma Phi, Sigma Chi and Tau Kappa Epsilon.

The ceremony was held at the Holiday Inn in Riverside and featured an elegant display of decoration and fine cuisine. President Jason Horton, also known as Eminent Commander, was the master of ceremonies which also featured David Ruegg, the Regent Elect (vice-president) of Sigma Nu's National Headquarters.

"The charter party was a huge success and the chartering of

This week in TEKE

By Brian R. Murphy
Managing Editor

This Week in Teke held quite a few milestones for Tau Kappa Epsilon.

Chapter Advisor Brent M. Johnson, a CSUSB alumni, married Charis Faulkner in San Bernardino on April 6. Johnson is a founding father of Sigma-Eta chapter which was chartered in 1989.

In sports, TKE Red defended its hockey title with a 6-5 overtime victory over the 12oz. Slammers on Lambda Chi chapter signified the beginning of our long and prosperous history as a chapter at Cal State," said chapter vice-president Marc Leinbach.

Thirty-two men were formally initiated during the afternoon before the banquet. For some, they were more than happy to finally wear the Sigma Nu badge after nearly two years of waiting.

"The feeling of finally being an initiated member of Sigma Nu after waiting for so long and going through so much hard work," said Leinbach.

The installation into the "Legion of Honor" is the culmination of 18 months of hard work for the members. Sigma Nu appeared as a colony in January of 1990.

Sigma Nu is already carving its niche into the Greek community athletically by placing second in 1990's Greek Week, and academically by placing first among the four fraternities for chapter grade point average during the fall quarter of 1990.

Steve Gesner scored from half court just moments into the overtime period to give TKE its second consecutive hockey championship.

The volleyball team of "Teke & Co." kept its four-year stronghold on the championship trophy with a three-set victory.

A new president for TKE was elected. Russel Phelps III has been with Tau Kappa Epsilon for three years and served as an executive council member for two terms as vice-president and historian

Beware Tanning Pills

They are sometimes advertised on late-night television and in the backs of magazines. So-called "tanning pills" carry claims that they can provide a safe, sunless, painless glow. Now, according to Healthwatch newsletter, there is evidence that taking these pills is not safe and could be life threatening. Renata Bluhm, M.D., Ph.D., Assistant Professor of Internal Medicine at Vanderbilt University said, "We believe that canthaxanthin (a major ingredient in most tanning pills) is a total body dye; not only does the skin appear orange, but inside, the liver, intestines, even the blood are also being dyed." Bluhm added that she believes canthaxanthin causes bone marrow toxicity, reducing the number of red blood cells and the amount of oxygen that reached cells."

Snow Burn

Most people associate sunburn with summer activities, but as skiers frequently find out and Kaiser Permanente reported, snow reflects 85 percent of the sun's ultraviolet rays, even on an overcast day. Eyes are particularly vulnerable to these rays and cases of sun cataracts are not uncommon, according to Jeanne Killeen, MD, Chief of Ophthalmology at Kaiser Permanente's Fontana Medical Center. It is just as important to wear sunglasses in the winter as it is in the summer. When selecting sunglasses, choose one that screens out the ultraviolet rays, and if you are a skier, look for glasses that also screen out infrared rays.

ROTC-YES

By Martin Hepp
Opinion Editor

What's all this rigmarole about gays and ROTC? It seems that the homosexual faction is up in arms about the refusal of the military to allow homosexuals entry. To me, this is a serious non-issue. I have no qualms about homosexuals per se, as far as I am concerned, people should be allowed to pursue the lifestyle they most desire. This is America, isn't it? What I do object to, however, is the tendency for the Gay community to constantly bombard me with their cries of discrimination and injustice. Aren't these the same people who call for "privacy in the bedroom" in instances such as the Georgia Sodomy Law? Well, if the activities in the bedroom are so private, why do I constantly hear about them?

I admit that homosexuality is not fully accepted (or understood) in our society, but I don't remember filling out an application for a job that asked me for my sexual orientation, except when I joined the Army. But the Army is not retail, it is not sales, and it sure isn't flippin' hamburgers. The Army is life and death. Because of the inherent danger involved in such a job description, the hierarchy that decides whether or not to risk soldiers lives must consider every factor that could effect those soldiers adversely.

One of these considerations is morale. Morale is an abstraction, and as such cannot be measured with scales and gauges. It can be studied and analyzed, and taking this information the decision-makers can arrive at conclusions they find reasonable. Studies like this have been done and I read media reports about them when I was in the Army. They stated that under the sociological conditions that existed at the time, an American military force which openly accepted homosexuals would be subject to severe morale problems. A resulting consequence would be reduced combat effectiveness, which is anathema to any military force.

So, what bearing does this have on the ROTC/Gay conflict? I feel the Gay community needs to look at the big picture, and at least listen to the military's reasons before they blindly reject them as unfair. The Military has better things to do than formulate vendettas against any one group, and their policies are dictated by the civilian leadership anyway. The students and instructors who gain benefits from ROTC should not be penalized because the Legislature has let us down (again.) Instead, the Gay community should deal with the greater problem of society's uneasiness with their lifestyle, and not choose sensationalism and short-term cathartic exercises which can only serve to embitter those who disagree with them.

Animal rights

By Renee Bowman

Words cannot describe the undecipherable, and for this reason animal experimentation labs are protected from public notice, while atrocities are being committed behind locked laboratory doors.

From government institutes, to hospitals, to college campuses, we abuse the animals we profess to love by blinding them, addicting them to drugs, and testing them for new and improved products. We feel that dominion over another species is our right, and that cruelty inflicted is the price for the knowledge learned.

In this day and age, with new technological advances making animal experimentation all but obsolete, why are so many unnecessary experiments performed?

while we are taught as children that inflicting pain or killing is wrong, we find this does not apply to animals for research purposes. They are lab tools. We learn that killing is acceptable if it benefits humans.

The biomedical community would have us believe that the animals are necessary to ensure the safety of the drugs we consume. The physicians desk reference shows that some drugs which were fatal to laboratory animals are still produced and sold.

We need to realize that all living things have rights. Consideration of those rights is essential. It is our duty as humans, to stop the persecution of innocent animals.

A FINANCIAL AID NIGHTMARE
one man's journey into fear

By Steven Jennings
Photography Editor

Recently, I have had some ridiculous problems with obtaining my financial aid, a Cal Grant B. Last year I completed the proper forms (red tape) as directed. This year I had my Cal Grant cancelled because SAC (the Student Aid Commission) was unable to verify my high school grades.

According to proper bureaucratic dictate, I have been shuttling between various CSUSB offices for the past five months. I obtain this document here and take it to so & so there, moving one more rung up on a seemingly endless ladder. Occasionally, I come across a kind soul that expresses concern for my predicament, but is utterly powerless in assisting me in my quest to receive state funding.

Eventually, I became educated about the system and I called SAC headquarters in, the California "Mecca" of bureaucracy, Sacramento (of course, this was a toll call - the old adage of spending money to get money - and being that SAC's hours are 8am to 4 pm, we're talking prime time rates).

I decided to get some tangible evidence of my full compliance with SAC protocol. After trailblazing a path through the inhuman automated receptionist "phone tree" maze, I took my cue from film hero James Bond (well, maybe Maxwell Smart). I carried out this covert operation by tape-recording the conversation (which, from my current understanding of the law, is not illegal if one party is aware of the recording).

I had the pleasure of conversing with a financial aid advisor. She felt that it was her duty to talk down to me... a sniveling, groveling, good for nothing leech of a student. I especially enjoyed hearing this immensely helpful individual tell me that I was "lucky" they had confirmed my GPA before my transcripts arrived.

For you financial aid non-specialists (the few of you that there are), receipt of transcripts AUTOMATICALLY CANCELS YOUR ELGIBILITY for financial aid disbursements from SAC. I had placed my trust in the financial aid system and they had steered me wrong. It is disturbing that information given to me by those who supposedly "know" was, in fact, inaccurate.

For several minutes, I persisted to interject what I thought to be harmless questions. Yet, she seemed to take them as insults on a personal level, as if it was her money that I was trying to get.

Ultimately, I became weary of this persons tirade and I hung up. My quest continues and there is a light at the end of the tunnel, faint as it may be.

Without griping and failing to "be part of the solution", I have a suggestion for the financial aid system (however, we must keep in mind that CSUSB's severely cramped and understaffed financial aid office is doing their best to cope with over 12,000 students). SAC needs to focus on HELPING students, not suspiciously thwarting their every good-willed attempt at accessing governmental assistance for their education.

After all, no-one likes to snivel and grovel, especially someone you can't reach out and choke.

Students revolt against fee increase

Governor Pete Wilson's proposed budget plan has left the California State University system holding the bag. As presented, his budget will cause the CSU system to operate on $96.6 million less than the budget this year. This gap doesn't account for the funds required to accommodate the estimated 8,000 incoming students for the 1991-92 academic year. As a result, funds are being pinched and scrounged on each of the 20 CSU campuses.

With this development, it has been proposed that student fees be increased by 20 percent. This means that students will have to come up with an extra $325.00. That is a lot of money, especially for a system that has boasted that it caters education to "every qualified student who desires it."

Students have a right to be outraged. Governor Ducekmejian signed a bill in August 1990, to protect students from such atrocities. This bill (Senate Bill 1645, also known as the Dill's Act) stated that fees could not increase in excess of 10 percent each year, except in case of emergency. A three percent increase is prescribed for each year. It also requires that a 10-month notice be given to students in advance. Yet, if everything goes as planned, students will receive only a seven-month notification.

In order for his budget plan to be approved, Governor Wilson must get someone in the legislature to suspend the Dill's Act. He has ignored the very law that was made to protect us from people like him. It is the government's fault that there is a deficit. The government overspent, not the students. They should be held accountable.

Write your government officials, let them know how you feel. Encourage them to support the Dill's Act and keep politicians from breaking the very laws that they are supposed to uphold!

Use this list of officials to contact your legislators and tell them how you feel. Do not delay! With 368,000 students (most of whom are of voting age - hint, hint) on the 20 CSU campuses we could have a great impact! The California State Student Association believes that student pressure on state legislators could yield positive results.

The Chronicle has joined with the newspapers of other CSU campuses in a campaign against fee increases. The campaign is headed by Leslie Weiss, Opinion Editor of The Lumberjack at Humboldt State University and Dag Macleod of The Daily Aztec at San Diego State University. We will keep you updated on the latest "budget news."

HE/SHE/IT

by Martin Hepp

He: "What... You've slept with someone before me?!"

She: "Well... yes, but that was before I met you."

He: "I just can't believe you'd do something like that. I mean, geez, what do you expect me to think of you?"

She: "But what about all those other girls you brag about to your friends?"

He: "Yeah, well, what do you expect, I'M A GUY!!"

How many of us have heard of, over heard, or more than likely, taken part in a conversation like this? Sadly, I am sure there are more who have than have not.

Why do conversations like this take place? How can the people who say they love us react in such a manner when we open up to them and let them know our innermost secrets?

From my personal experience, it is primarily the guy who takes a hostile attitude towards the revelation of previous sexual encounters by his girlfriend/significant-other/mate (but I won't claim that women never react in this way.) So, why do guys take it so badly?

Easy, "The Double Standard", that ever-present, immutable defense that serves us in instances when thinking equitably and objectively just won't do. Where did we learn such a thing? Our parents, of course. Guys, don't say you don't recall those times when you got to stay out all night and your older sister had to be home by such-and-such a time. Or girls, when your brother had his first "real" date in the seventh grade, but you had to wait until you were sixteen. Somehow, Dad's rationalization that "Johnny can't get pregnant" wore thin quite soon.

Is it that parents inherently distrust daughters? Do they have such little faith in their methods of child-rearing that they feel their "little-girls" will fall prey to the first smooth-talking wolf that comes along? Unfortunately, our parents (or most probably, our fathers) did think this way and it has been passed on, more certain that heredity, to taint relationships even in this enlightened age. But why does this have to be the case?

Unfortunately, it is too often immaturity, plain and simple. It is a fact that people these days are engaging in regular sexual activity at a much younger age than ever before. And it is also generally accepted that females develop emotional maturity sooner than do we men. A by-product of these facts is that the persons who are engaging in such activity are not prepared either emotionally or psychologically (arguably the same thing) for such activity, and as such, they continue to carry the feelings and reactions they experienced in their early experimentation with them as they grow older.

So, the unfortunate girl in the above exchange, while believing she was dealing with a sensitive, caring man of however many years, is actually dealing with a petulant adolescent who can't comprehend the fact that there is a world beyond his personal experience. How can we, as men, avoid acting this way? And how should a woman in the above situation react?

First, guys, don't ever say the words you see there. There is no better way to display your selfishness and insensitivity than by playing Inquisitor. Rather, your should appreciate that you are being made privy to memories that are private and inviolate. Welcome the expression of such trust, and only love her more. If you truly love her like you say you do, how else can you show you really care?

Ladies, don't react angrily, but pity the poor soul who has made this regrettable utterance. Avoid a confrontation, for by showing him that you understand he doesn't really have any control over what he is saying, you will truly express your love. Then, after his initial consternation and bewildered anger passes, rest assured that by having failed to meet his childish provocation your relationship can only get better.

Unless, of course, he persists on tormenting you with the part of you that you wished to share- THEN GET OUT! It's not your problem, and will only cause you pain if you linger. (Remember: sometimes friends are right.)

ROTC -NO

Dear Editor,

We, the members of the Gay and Lesbian Union at CSUSB, extend our arms in deepest gratitude to all the returning troops from the Gulf, and our sincerest sorrows to the families and friends of those who fell for freedom. We especially reach out to our military Gay and Lesbian brothers and sisters, who gave and risked their lives for the human and democratic liberties that they are still denied.

It is in their names, and for all those who continue to serve and sacrifice for another's freedom, that we urge the U.S. armed forces to terminate [their] discriminatory policy against homosexuals. As CSUSB approaches a decision regarding the reprimand or removal of ROTC, on grounds of violating state civil rights law, we encourage all citizens to take a stand for freedom. If our Gay and lesbian soldiers are free enough to give their lives, won't you give them the freedom to love without fear?

Rugby: A difficult birth

By Martin Hepp
Opinion Editor

Ruck. Maul. Scrum. Try. Hooker. What do these words all have in common? They all describe various aspects of the contact sport Rugby.

Until February 5, 1991, Rugby was virtually unknown on this campus.

However, that all has changed and now there is a living, breathing, huffing and puffing, somewhat winded group of men who call themselves the Cal State San Bernardino Rugby Club.

After two weeks of practice, the "Wolfpack" played their first game at home on February 23 against the Anteaters of U.C. Irvine. Although their efforts were valiant, inexperience took its toll and the Wolfpack was handed a 14-4 loss.

Highlights of the game were the first-ever score for San Bernardino by Club Vice-President Pete Watson, and nullification of a score by the swift-footed Rich Sjoroos.

On its second outing March 2, also here at CSUSB, the Wolfpack suffered another defeat at the hands of the University of San Diego's Toreros, 18-6.

San Bernardino rugger to score for the club, and there was much rejoicing when a place kick, for points, was finally made by Bill Baumann.

Rich Sjoroos once again had not one, but three scores nullified by the referee.

On March 9, the Wolfpack travelled to Cal Poly Pomona to battle Occidental College and lost a heartbreaker 4-0.

Confident with its play in Pomona, CSUSB Rugby then journeyed to San Diego for a rematch with USD. Confidence changed to overconfidence and the Wolfpack was handed a humiliating 44-4 loss. Highlights were the solitary score by Martin Hepp, and the Wolfpack's ability to hold the Toreros to a single score in the second half.

Team captains Martin Hepp, Roger Light, and Greg Whitney are happy with the club's performance in all four games and stressed that as players' knowledge of the game increased and actual playing experience grew, victories would be sure to follow.

The team is constantly looking for highly motivated sportsmen (and women) to join in the tradition-filled, bone-crunching, fun-loving institution known as Rugby.

Practices are Mondays and Thursdays at 1 p.m. and Wednesdays at 8 a.m. on the Upper Athletic Fields. No experience is required.

Women's Softball

The women's team swept two doubleheaders last week from the University Of LaVerne (6-3 and 13-1) and Claremont College (11-1 and 5-2 in 10 innings) to improve their overall record to 15-16. The Coyotes are trying to earn their first ever Division III West Region playoff berth.

Senior pitcher Marnie LaFleur earned three of the four victories last week to improve her record to 7-8.

Junior shortstop Laura Beeman went 7-for-15 in the four games while senior outfielder Sandy Sturlaugson went 7-for-12 in the doubleheaders.

Men's Tennis

The men's tennis team defeated Loma Linda University April 2 with a 9-0 victory. The following day, Wednesday, they defeated Occidental 7-1, but dropped the match Thursday to Point Loma Nazarene 7-2.

Doubles partners Alaric Jura and Yancy Dodson improved to .500 with three victories last week bringing their current record to 7-7. In No. 1 singles action Dodson was undefeated, improving his solo record to 12-7.

Women's Tennis

Number one singles player Karen Brummitt raised her record to 11-6 with a victory over the University of La Verne. Brummitt and doubles partner Katie Hibbard combined to take their No. 1 doubles match and improved their doubles record to 8-3. The team owns an overall record of 9-8.

Golf

The Coyotes finished seventh in the Anteater Golf Invitational at Big Canyon Country Club April 1 in Newport Beach but finished first among the Division III entrants.

Scott Fisher placed first for the team in a 17th place tie at 160 (12 shots behind the top score) while Greg Wilson was tied for 29th (163) in the 74-player field.

Close To Milestones

* Softball ace Marnie LaFleur needs one victory to reach her 50th career win.

* Baseball head coach Chuck Deagle is two victories away from his 200th career coaching win.

* Junior first baseman David Rex needs five home runs to eclipse the school's single season home run record. Rich Hanlin (1989) currently holds the club record with 15 homers.

Plummer earns All-American status

By Audrey Vogel
Chronicle Staff Writer

Junior Jennifer Plummer represented California State University, San Bernardino at the National College Division III Swimming and Diving Championships at Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia on March 14-17.

Plummer, a native of Concord, Ca., placed 13th overall with a time of 2:14.01 in the 200-meter backstroke and is only the second swimmer in CSUSB history to earn All-American status in the annual National Swimming Championships.

Jennifer qualified for the championships at CSU, Bakersfield with her all-time best of 2:13.55 for the 200-meter backstroke. She only needed a 2:16.01 to qualify for the National Championships.

Jennifer sees herself going onto the nationals for Division II next year. This summer Jennifer will endure a very rigorous training program, working out Monday through Saturday twice per day.

Jennifer says, "Hopefully I will come back in shape enough to make it in more than just one event."

The CSUSB swim team will be moving up to Division II for the 1991-92 season, and even the the competition level will be increased considerably, Head Coach John Christie says that the team's goals are to reach nationals and work down from there.

Jennifer Plummer

Christie sees Plummer as very competitive and says she has a good work ethic, along with a strong desire to win.

"She's a tough competitor when she gets in the water, and she knows how to train," said Christie.
