General Fund Receipts Last Month Were Off
 Commissioners of Finance, J. E. Cackett, and of Finance, Orin F. Taylor, announced July state general fund revenue collections were 232 last July. They added that road fund revenue collections totaled $6,062,301, compared with $6,068,266 last July. Collections for one month only are not indicative of a trend, they said. Their report continued: The individual income tax accounts for the comparative decline in the general fund. The major part of the decline resulted from earlier depositing of employer withholdings for the second calendar quarter in 1957. Also a factor was the increase in the total number of refunds despite the fact that more processed prior to June 30 this year than a year ago. Motor fuel taxes were off only slightly. But the motor vehicle usage and registration taxes were off substantially, reflecting the depressed new car market. The increase in motor vehicle operator's income receipts is attributable largely to earlier processing and depositing in the changed licensing procedure this year.

Happy Again Urged To Call Legislature

A state representative Saturday urged Gov. A. B. Chandler to ask Kentucky's jobless pay benefits by using money in the state's general revenue or bonding fund. In so doing, Rep. Pat Tanner (D-Owensboro) told Chandler, each Kentuckian would share the cost equally and thus lighten the tax-paying burden of recession-plagued employers. If they favor amending present law limiting jobless pay to 26 weeks in the way he proposes, Chandler has said he will call a special legislative session to enact the legislation. Chandler said in an interview that he knew Tanner's suggestion was made in good faith, "but it is highly doubtful that we would go that way. The money already appropriated is badly needed for the purpose it was allocated for. And the state legislature has exhausted their regular benefits."

'Experts' Believe Food Costs May Decline In Next 12 Months

The economic experts in Washington are now saying that the cost of food may go down in the next twelve months. This is an important prediction, because food makes up thirty percent of the "cost of living," as measured by the Consumer Price Index.

The reason for the optimism about decreased consumer cost in the vital field of food is the large number of cattle and hogs headed for the market in the next year. It is estimated that the number of cattle and hogs going to market in the next year or two will be greater than that of any year in recent times.

These markets, of course, operate on a supply and demand basis, to a large extent, and larger marketings usually reflect lower prices.

However, it is one thing for the livestock producer to get lower prices and another for the consumer to realize the savings. In the past, too many middlemen and processors have eaten up whatever savings were made at the cattle market.

Nevertheless, and although it is not unanimous, a majority of economists in Washington are of the opinion that consumer prices a year from now may not be any higher than they are today because of lower food costs.

They have gone on record as saying this even in face of the steel price rise, and some are on record as saying that average prices might come down a bit in the year ahead.

You Can Help Our College By Renting That Vacant Room

Dr. Alron Doran, President of Morehead State College, said this week before he left for a meeting of executives of higher education at the University of Connecticut.

The size of our fall enrollment will depend to a great extent on the number of Morehead students who reserve rooms for the fall semester.

The President called on the people of Morehead to provide as many sleeping rooms for men as possible.

His plea set out that many home owners do not need the money, but you will be doing the money a great favor, and helping a young man get an education.

The college will soon let a contract with the men's dormitory to house 400 but it won't be available before this time next year.

Doran said the MSC housing shortage is the worst in the history of the school. He has predicted a Morehead enrollment of 2,000 within four or five years.

The summer school registrations exceeded 1,400. This was possible only because a great many students pooled cars and commuted.

It was All Just A Rumor The report was all over the county last week that the body of John Henry Alfrey, who disappeared last Labor Day on Clark Mountain, had been found.

Rumor was that Alfrey, a release, was found buried in a shallow grave near a geological survey site. County and State Police checked and found the reports false.

Meanwhile Alfrey's disappearance remains a mystery with the generally accepted explanation that he died, possibly of a heart attack, while working on the road by machines stripping the nearby area of clay deposits.

Not Many Dog Licenses Are Sold Evidence that few Rowan Counties go to the expense of licensing their dogs, as required by law, comes today in a statistical report by Commissioner of Agriculture Ben Butler.

Only $16 was returned to the county to reimburse sheep owners. Most canines in Bourbon must have tags because that county was awarded $3,778 while an Owen County farmer received $615 in indemnity for a single dog raid that killed 41 head of sheep.

Figures Are Boring To Most People Appearing in this issue is a factual news story about the financial plight of the Rowan County Board of Education.

It is a story with computations, tax rate ratios, formulas, etc. but we doubt if many readers will understand that this situation is fast becoming crucial.

Newspaper editors have long realized that most readers dislike statistics. They have also discovered that most citizens, when faced with difficult problems in local government or the schools, shrug and say "well it will work itself out somehow."

What Wonderful Weather This Is Beautiful days, cool nights that make for perfect sleep. That is the kind of weather we're having.

Says Russians Are Not As Pictured The second-largest increase, the department said, was in the number of families and children receiving aid to dependent children.

The average monthly benefit payments to which they may now become entitled under the new social security law. Average monthly payments may range all the way from $30 to $81.40 monthly dependent children's average monthly benefit payments.

Further information regarding the social security law may be obtained from the local social security office at 411 19th Street, Ashland, Kentucky. The office is open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., Monday through Friday.

Information may also be obtained from the office of the Field Representative of the Ashland office, when he comes to Morehead at the City Building at 10:00 a. m. (CST), Tuesday.

Not Many Dog Licenses Are Sold Evidence that few Rowan Counties go to the expense of licensing their dogs, as required by law, comes today in a statistical report by Commissioner of Agriculture Ben Butler.

Only $16 was returned to the county to reimburse sheep owners. Most canines in Bourbon must have tags because that county was awarded $3,778 while an Owen County farmer received $615 in indemnity for a single dog raid that killed 41 head of sheep.

Figures Are Boring To Most People Appearing in this issue is a factual news story about the financial plight of the Rowan County Board of Education.

It is a story with computations, tax rate ratios, formulas, etc. but we doubt if many readers will understand that this situation is fast becoming crucial.

Newspaper editors have long realized that most readers dislike statistics. They have also discovered that most citizens, when faced with difficult problems in local government or the schools, shrug and say "well it will work itself out somehow."

Outer Space Is Interesting

Now that we are moving into the space age, it is going to ask ourselves how much we know about outer space. Some of us have only a vague idea about the universe—indeed the editor poses as no expert.

Beginning at the beginning, the earth is one of nine planets which revolve (in an elliptical orbit) around the sun. We can see five of the other planets with the naked eye—Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. Uranus, Neptune and Pluto can be seen through a telescope.

Several of these nine planets have a moon (or moons) circling them. We call our sun and everything revolving around it (planets, satellites (moons), comets, meteors, stars, etc.) our solar system.

The sun and billions of other stars, and suns, form our galaxy. The universe contains an undetermined but great number of galaxies. Thus, one can see how infinitesimal our solar system is—even though the sun is 93 million miles away.

There are probably millions of suns. But as yet we have not been able to verify the theory that other planets revolve around other suns; we cannot see that far. The next nearest sun, after our sun, is Alpha Centauri.

Stars twinkle and planets do not; stars are globes of intensely heated gas, not solids. The sun, then, is our nearest star—and while it is but one of millions of stars, it is the only million earths worth of life in it—this is large.

Thus, when the Air Force talks about shooting a rocket toward the moon, we are only at the first hesitant step in exploring outer space. The day of exploration and discovery is not ended; it is just beginning.

Meet Trouble With Faith, Courage

One of the tricks of life is to learn how to master the troubles which confront us, day by day and week by week.

Thus, when the Air Force talks about shooting a rocket toward the moon, we are only at the first hesitant step in exploring outer space. The day of exploration and discovery is not ended; it is just beginning.

Valuable Message In A Bottle

A native farm boy in the Azores recently found a bottle on the beach. He took out the stopper and read a note inside.

The note had been written and placed in the bottle thousands of miles away. It had been dropped into the sea near the entrance to New York harbor—as a publicity stunt by the sponsor of a radio program. A reward was promised to the finder if the note was returned.

The native boy was shrewd enough to mail in the note and collect his reward—$1,000. That is one of the many bottle incidents which have been occurring all over the world's ocean for hundreds of years.

It will be remembered that messages in bottles have been tossed overboard by sailors for centuries, and that some eye-opening messages have been dropped in the ocean in bottles, and recovered.

Perhaps the greatest user of bottles, for message transportation, is the United States Hydrographic office in Washington. The Coast Guard drops these bottles into the ocean and the messages tell the finder to report where they were discovered—to help determine ocean currents and the effect of the winds.

The messages in these bottles are printed in eight languages, but usually, especially with individually sent messages, the words are in but one language—often a foreign language to the receiver.

Many stories have been told about bottles, dropped in rivers far inland, which eventually come up in the oceans, or in other countries. One, it is reported, a $12,000 estate was placed in a bottle and dropped into the Thames River. It turned up years later in the Pacific Ocean. One might say, then, that it is wise never to underestimate the contents of a bottle.

More Cattle In United States

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson reported recently that there was a 16 per cent increase in the number of cattle on feed as of July 1st. This figure represents the increase as of this date compared with July, 1957.

In the thirteen major feeding states the number of cattle on feed totalled 4,209,000 head, compared with a figure of 3,678,000 in July of 1957. Every cornbelt state surveyed showed increases above the figures a year earlier, except Indiana, which experienced a drop of 8 per cent.

Iowa, the leading cattle-raising state, registered a gain of 14 per cent. In other states extensive gains, and the 16 per cent increase in cattle on feed. Secretary Benson warned farmers against over-expanding hog production. The Secretary believes that an over-expansion may adversely affect present favorable hog prices.

Benson's warning was partly prompted by a recent survey which showed that farmers planned a 14 per cent increase in fall pig production. While we do not know too much about the beef market, perhaps the increase in the number of cattle on feed will lead to some relief in beef prices.

The world is in such a mess now that there are actually a few of the current crop of college graduates who entertain some doubts as to their ability to straighten it out if they were placed in charge of it.

The person who said: "There's no fool like an old fool," had never seen a young fool scratching off and snorting around in a high-powered car.

Five 'S's' Of Travel Safety Enumerated

The five "S's" of traffic safety are speed, slumber, spite, stupidity, and spirits, according to W. E. Stuckey, Ohio State University. Exceeding the speed limit is one of the main causes of traffic accidents and fatalities. Traffic signs are posted by the State Highway Department for your safety. On slippery, wet, or foggy days, even the allowed speed limit is too fast, Stuckey says.

The driver can feel slumber coming on. It is much wiser to sleep a while as soon as you feel drowsy than to try to stay awake until you reach your destination (if you do).

There is no place on the road for spite. Sometimes the driver jumps into his car after a family feud and speeds away, mad at the world and unaware of what he's doing. Or he may "have it in" for his fellow drivers and refuse to follow the accepted rules of highway courtesy.

Stupidity is characteristic of the driver who does not know, or bother to learn, the rules of the road. Spirits (from a bottle), the fifth "S" of traffic safety, are involved in a large percentage of all traffic accidents. Intoxicated drivers often feel that their reactions are as quick as usual. Consequently, they take chances endangering their lives and those of innocent bystanders.

Stuckey suggests that you keep these traffic tips in mind and make use of a sixth "S," sense—common sense.

35 Cadet State Police Troopers Attending School

The 25th State Police Training School has convened at Frankfort with 35 cadet troopers enrolled.

Subjects which fledgling state policemen study in the 12-week course range from first aid and fingerprinting to traffic control and public relations.

The 35 cadets are the first of a 105-man increase in the State Police service which will be completed by June, 1960. The division was increased by 105 men during the past two years.

Following training in Frankfort, the men will be promoted to the patrol duty of the Commonwealth's highways.

Speaker Says Access To Records Requisite

Two disturbing tendencies in America today are the lack of concern of high school youngsters about freedom of the press and the denial of access to public records by government officials.

Mr. Hall addressed a group of junior and senior high school educators attending a workshop at the State University of Iowa on classroom use of newspapers in secondary schools. His topic was "The Newsman's Responsibility in the Modern World."

Mr. Hall urged use educators to help the press fight the tendencies described.

Newspapers and educators must cooperate in the process of educating and enlightening the people of a free democracy, he said.

When public officials deny requests for access to public records they are telling the public that it has no right to know about its own business, Mr. Hall said. Such high-handedness is borrowed from the dictators and it seems to be growing rather than diminishing in America.

Sound objective education is the brightest hope we have in the troubled world of today. Newspapers can aid the educational process by pursuing their basic functions of information, enlightenment, and education, Mr. Hall said.

When education leads to democracy, Mr. Hall said, it is the best possible safeguard against aggressive war. No popular government could get away with launching a war and affronting the deepest instinct in human nature—the instinct for peace, he said.

Oates Gives Position On Force Accounts

Commissioner Ward J. Oates said Friday the Department of Highways will advise for bids Apprais interprets the law regarding all uncompleted force-account road projects that cost more than $12,000.

A new law places that limit on does itself without first seeking competitive bids from private contractors.

Oates commented after Atty. Gen. Jo M. Ferguson expressed the opinion that work on a Dewey Lake road prior to passage of the 1938 force-account law was done illegally.

Ferguson also said he intends to bring civil action to recover monies illegally spent on such projects, as soon as the Court of Appeals interprets the law regarding a Knott County road case.

His written opinion was addressed to Floyd County Court Clerk Duran Moore, who two weeks ago questioned the Dewey Lake road. It is less than three miles of grade and drain improvement along the water inside Jennie Wiley State Park. Moore claimed the work was to enhance the value of nearby property owned by State Sen. Jerry F. Howell of Price.

Howell denied the accusation. Oates stopped construction on the project and called for a complete review of the state's force account road work.

Five days later, Oates said he had found nothing wrong with the Dewey Lake road and ordered work resumed.

Meanwhile, a report submitted to Oates by George H. Haley, Director of Rural Highways, showed 38 force account projects are now active.

Oates said Friday his deputy commissioner Charles Byerly, is preparing official orders for these projects.

Conservation Is Delayed By Damp Weather

By John D. Alexander

The wet summer has "forced" farmers in Rowan County to postpone the installation of conservation practices, but since the weather has opened up farmers are turning their attention to the conservation work they had postponed.

Several farmers are now preparing land for fall seeding of pasture. Lowell Murray, Smile community, is preparing several acres for early seeding. He also has constructed two sod waterways and 1,200 feet of open ditch drainage. Technical assistance on these practices was furnished by the Soil Conservation Service.

Jack Cecil drained a wet field on his farm on the Upper Licking River by constructing 1,600 feet of open ditch drainage and sod waterway.

The S.C.S. has recently assisted the following farmers in the construction of farm ponds: Eliza Clark, Chester Warren, Lindsay Caudill, Phillip Mabry and Willis Carter. These ponds will be fenced to exclude stock, and stock water tanks will be installed.

Bill Passes To Increase SS Benefits

Senate Okels Measure Scaling Down Payments To Suit Eisenhower

The Senate has passed the Social Security liberalization bill after a long and heated public assistance program in an effort to avert a veto by President Eisenhower. Passage was by a roll call vote of 78-0.

The bill is now in the House which passed it July 22. The House senators said they understood the House would accept it without any furthering committee meeting.

Its chief feature is a 7 per cent increase in Social Security insurance benefits.

Payroll taxes would be raised by a bigger amount than necessary for the immediate new insurance benefits. The tax boost is designed in part to insure the long-range soundness of the Social Security system.

The bill as it passed the house also increased federal grants to the states for the four public assistance programs by 200 million dollars. These programs are for the needy, the aged, blind, and disabled and dependent children.

This led the administration to send word to the capitol that the measure would be vetoed. Eisenhower has been urging that the federal government cut back, and not increase, its share of the assistance programs.

The Senate chopped this increase down to 197 million. Sen. George A. Smathers (D-Fla.), who sponsored the two floor amendments to reduce the public assistance cost, said he was sure that his adoption would prevent a veto.

Amendments Beat Back

The Senate beat back a series of amendments to liberalize the insurance features of the system.

It defeated 50-32 a proposal to reduce the increase in benefits 10 per cent instead of 7. It also rejected amendments to make the increase 8 per cent, to increase the maximum death benefit to $81 instead of $255, and to make it possible for men and women to retire with full benefits at age 62.

The bill as it passed the Senate would raise monthly checks to about 12 million Social Security insurance beneficiaries now on the rolls by an average of about $4.75.

The insurance program covers retirement, survivors and disability benefits. The increases would start in checks received next February.

Rates To Be Boosted

The 75 million persons now contributing in taxes to the system would have their rates boosted Jan. 1, 1959. The maximum increase would be $2.50 a year each for an employee and his employer.

The monthly range of benefits, now $30 to $196.50 for an individual, would go up from $23 to $118. After several years the maximum individual benefit would be increased to $127.

Survivors' family benefits would be increased from a maximum of $290 to an eventual top of $284.

The increased insurance benefits would amount to 700 million dollars next year. But the payroll taxes would be raised next year by $1,100,000,000.

The present 2 1/2 per cent rate each for employer and employee would go up to 2 3/4 per cent. In addition, the wage base would be raised from $4,200 to $4,800. The self-employed rate would increase from 3% to 3 1/2 per cent.

Future tax increases would be advanced so that they would occur every three years instead of every five at under present law.

Top Rate Starts in 1969

Under the bill, the eventual top tax rate would be 4 1/2 per cent each for employer and employee starting in 1969. Under present law, it would be 4 1/2 per cent each in 1975.

There are about 5,600,000 persons on the public assistance rolls under the four programs—old age assistance, aid to dependent child, aid to the blind, and aid to the needy disabled. The needy aged get an average of $61.33 a month.

She's Mad At Police, Spends 10 Days In Jail

A prim high school teacher stepped out of the county jail at Kingwood, W. Va. Sunday and said she'd be willing to spend another 10 days behind bars to protect radar timing of auto drivers.

It's a small town operation said Mrs. Thelma Kinnick, who teaches commercial subjects at a smaller town Terra Alta, W. Va.

Mrs. Taylor, mother of three children who stayed with her grandparents when she could not afford to live in her home in the town of 100 people in jail, bumped into the law earlier this month.

She was convicted Aug. 4 of a fine of 10 days in jail. The young woman chose the longer a matter of principle, she told a reporter who interviewed her at a court room cell usually reserved for juveniles, where kids scribbled overcasted the walls.

Armed with a typewriter paper and books, she studied for her master's degree in economics, due in pursuing at West Virginia University.

What got her riled up, says Mrs. Taylor, were a combination of radar and the arresting officer's remark. She said he told her she wouldn't have been nabbed by the mechanical gadget if she had been going one mile an hour less. Capt. usually allow 15 miles per hour leeway.

"I got hundreds of comments backing me up," she said on her release Sunday. "Some were in telephone calls and some mail, some as far as St. Louis, West Palm Beach, Fla., and Detroit."

"They said they were glad someone has the courage to take the initiative against these traps."

She said there was only one dissenting comment. "Someone wrote a postcard and said people like me should be in jail for life and not just for 10 days, then the highways would be safe for law-abiding citizens."

"Mrs. Taylor has no plans to wage a campaign against radar, but she figures if enough people begin their backlogs like she has public pressure will do the job."

Her husband, a disabled veteran, is in 7. They have two boys, ages 6 and 9, and a girl, 7.

One Of Kentucky's Colorful Statesmen, August Stanley, Is Buried On Frankfort Hill

A. O. Stanley, a statesman who left his touch on this country, was buried Saturday on a scenic hill overlooking the state Capitol where he served as governor in 1915-19.

Kentucky's highest ranking Democrats—both past and present—served as honorary pallbearers. Six white-helmeted National Guardsmen provided an honor guard.

Mrs. Stanley, her two sons, Augustus Jr., of Arlington, Va., and William of Bethesda, Md., attended the services together with other members of the family and many friends.

Simple services were conducted in a flower-filled chapel at the Rogers Funeral Home. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Sam Blackard, rector of the Episcopal Church at Frankfort.

Dr. Dwight Stevenson, a professor at the College of The Bible in Lexington, eulogized Stanley: "In ways that we do not remember he has left his touch on this Commonwealth and this country as governor, senator and congressman."

Dr. Stevenson noted that the Democrat's life spanned half of this country's years. Stanley was 91 when he died in Washington last Tuesday.

"He gave a good account of his time and his life in some of the highest offices of this country," Dr. Stevenson said. "We are in his debt."

The Rev. Blackard read the 21st Psalm, the fourth and fifth chapters of the Book of Ecclesiastes and the 15th chapter, 20th verse of St. Paul's Letter to the Corinthians.

Following the services, the body was escorted to historic Frankfort Cemetery.

Stanley's grave is on the south edge of the old cemetery. It overlooks the Kentucky River, the state Capitol and much of Frankfort itself.

His body arrived Friday and lay in state in the Rotunda of the Capitol until the funeral.

An honor guard kept a vigil over the flag-draped casket.

Honorary pallbearers included Gov. A. B. Chandler; Lt. Gov. Harry Lee Waters; former governor Lawrence Wetherby; Earle Clements and Keen Johnson; former U. S. Sen. Robert Humphreys; and Wilson Wyatt, a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.
