Abstract

A Democrat from Mississippi, John E. Rankin served in the U.S. House of Representatives from 1921 to 1953. An advocate for rural electrification, he co-authored the bill creating the Tennessee Valley Authority. He chaired the World War Veterans' Legislation Committee from 1931 to 1946 and the Veterans' Affairs Committee from 1949 to 1952. He also served briefly on the House of Un-American Activities Committee.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Born in 1882 in Itawamba County, Mississippi, John Elliott Rankin was the son of Thomas Braxton Rankin, a public school teacher, and Venola Modeste Rutledge Rankin. He attended Province Normal School in Nettleton, Mississippi followed by Verona High School. Afterwards, Rankin entered the University of Mississippi where he received his law degree in 1910. Admitted to the bar, he practiced in West Point, Mississippi, before moving later that year to Tupelo and starting a law firm with Ward Allen.

From circa 1911 to 1916, Rankin served as Lee County's prosecuting attorney before running two unsuccessful campaigns in 1916 and 1918 for the Democratic nomination as a U.S. Representative against the incumbent Zeke Candler. During World War I, Rankin spent less than a month in a U.S. Army officers' training school before the conflict ended. In 1919, he married Annie Laurie Burrous. To improve his chances for election in the 1920 congressional race, he started a weekly newspaper in Tupelo entitled The New Era.

Rankin succeeded in winning a seat in the U.S. House and served in that body from 1921 to 1953. During his tenure, he served on the Census Committee (1921-1947), the Territories Committee (1921-1939), and the Pensions Committee (1921-1924). He left Pensions for an appointment on the World War Veterans Legislation Committee in 1924, becoming its chair in December 1931 until his appointment to the new Veterans Affairs Committee in 1945. With seniority accruing from his service on predecessor committees (Pension and World War Veterans Legislation), he became chair of Veterans Affairs in 1949 which he retained until his retirement. Rankin also served on the Rivers and Harbors Committee (1939-1946) and the Election of President and Vice President Committee (1942-1946).

A national advocate for rural electrification, Rankin co-authored the legislation creating the Tennessee Valley Authority in 1933, and he supported other New Deal programs that assisted agricultural and rural areas. In addition, the Mississippian was an early proponent for developing the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway which only became a reality in the late twentieth-century. Rankin also sponsored the G.I. Bill of Rights in 1944, granting various government benefits to veterans of World War II.

In 1945, Rankin introduced an amendment to create a permanent Committee on Un-American Activities (HUAC), replacing the temporary special investigating committee (known informally as the Dies Committee) which had been active since 1938. A staunch anti-communist, Rankin served on this committee from 1945 until Democratic Party leadership removed him in 1949 on the pretext of his leadership of the Veterans' Affairs Committee. In reality, his public support of the States' Rights candidates in 1948 played a key role for this dismissal.

Rankin's rampant racism against African Americans, Jews, and Japanese Americans are evident in his public slurs on the floor of the House as well as his legislative activities. A few months before the attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941, Rankin accused Jewish bankers of promoting America's entrance into the conflict in order to increase profits from the defense industry. New York Democrat Michael Edelstein collapsed from a heart attack immediately after rising to decry these allegations. National press vilified the Mississippian. During the war, Rankin supported the removal of Japanese Americans on the West Coast into internment camps. Rankin's membership on HUAC provided a venue for pronouncements and investigations of the alleged communist links of Jews and civil rights proponents. As chair of the Veterans' Affairs Committee and sponsor of the G.I. Bill, Rankin's required a decentralized administration of the benefits that allowed southern states to discriminate against African American veterans, preventing them from accessing the loans and training which would permit them to obtain greater socio-economic status.

In 1947, Rankin ran last in a special election to fill the vacancy in the U.S. Senate left by the death of Theodore G. Bilbo. State newspapers dismissed his candidacy due to his advanced age and the unwelcome national notoriety his excessive and inflammatory race-baiting and anti-Semitism brought to the state of Mississippi. The 1950 census led to state redistricting and the loss of one congressional seat during the 1952 election. Rankin lost to fellow Democratic incumbent, Thomas G. Abernethy. He returned to law practice in Tupelo and died on 26 November 1960. A bridge that spans the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway as well as a lock on that system are named in his memory.

Publication Information

University of Mississippi Libraries 2005

Access Restrictions

At the request of the donor, the collection remained closed until the death of Annie Laurie Rankin Sanders. Consequently, the archives did not begin processing the collection until 2017. The collection is now open to the public.

However, the collection is stored at an off-site facility and researchers must contact the Archives & Special Collections at least two business days in advance of an intended visit to arrange the transfer of requested boxes, identifying both Series # and Box #.

Due to privacy and confidentiality concerns, folders will remain closed in Series 6: Case Files and Series 7: Military Academy for seventy-five years after the latest date provided in each file's description. Thus, folders whose contents date from 1948 and earlier open in 2023; those from 1949 open in 2024; 1950 in 2025; and 1952 in 2027. With proof of identity, individuals may access their own files prior to that release date. In addition, researchers may access the files of those individuals that are proved deceased. See the Restriction Policy for Modern Political Archives for additional information.

Additions

No further additions are expected to this collection.

Source of Collection

John E. Rankin's widow and his daughter, Annie Laurie Rankin Sanders, donated his congressional papers to the University of Mississippi in 1961. In 2016, Rankin's grandson Clay Sanders and his wife Beth Sanders added some photographs and memorabilia to the collection.

Processing Information

Political Papers Archivist Leigh McWhite sorted the documents into series. Between 2017 and 2021, McWhite processed the collection with the assistance of the following student workers: Allen Coon, Faith Deering, Samantha Henderson, Emily Hospodor, Jacob Lindsey, Makala McNeil, Olivia Morgan, Austin Nicholson, Travis Patterson, and Gabriella Wells. McWhite encoded the finding aid in 2021.

COLLECTION INVENTORY

Series 1: Subject Files Scope and Content

The series is organized alphabetically by subject (with occasional subcategories) and then chronologically by year. The titles and arrangement are entirely the result of archival decisions and do not reflect the original organization by Congressman Rankin's office staff. The term "Power," however, does imitate the original subject file label used by the office and refers to electrical power -- not political power.

Documents filed by individual members of Congress in the "Congress - [member's name]" category are typically general in nature. Most correspondence with colleagues will appear in subject files that reflect the matter under discussion. The exception is the fairly large folders related to Senator James K. Vardaman from Mississippi who served as Rankin's mentor and will include correspondence that pre-dates Rankin's rise to Congress and post-dates Vardaman's retirement from that body.

Series 2: State and Local Files Scope and Content

Most of the locales appearing on the container list lie within U.S. Representative John E. Rankin's congressional district. However, due to his strong interest on veteran's issues and electrical power, outlying Mississippi communities and counties consulted with him on those subjects and are represented in this series although counties and communities within his district will possess more substantial files. Rankin represented Mississippi's First Congressional District which at the time of his election comprised of the following counties in the northeastern portion of the state: Alcorn, Itawamba, Lee, Lowndes, Monroe, Noxubee, Oktibbeha, Prentiss, and Tishomingo. After March 1933, redistricting included Clay County in the mix.

Locales (both communities and counties) as well as colleges, universities, and state parks are filed alphabetically by name. Common subcategories for communities and counties, include the following: agriculture, banking, business & labor, Civilian Conservation Corps Camps (during New Deal), defense industries (during World War II), disaster relief (for tornadoes and hurricanes – relief for drought would appear under Agriculture), education, food stamps & food (such as local food commodity businesses or rationing during World War II), health care (including malaria control projects), highways & roads (and bridges), housing, law enforcement & fire protection, military (including Civil War subject matter), post office, power (documents related to electrical power, although material on gas lines is occasionally present), radio, religion, telephones & telegraphs, television, and veterans (information on veterans hospitals is a third-level category under veterans). Additional subcategories may also be found for those places with military outposts during the Second World War.

Researchers particularly interested in the Works Progress Administration (WPA) are warned that while general discussions of the WPA and will be found in the general community and county files, WPA and other public works projects are scattered throughout other subcategories as well. There are also several "Mississippi – Works Progress Administration" folders which will often include information on individual community's projects. Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) Camp subcategory folders will primarily contain information on that specific camp. The projects conducted by the CCC will usually be filed under the appropriate subcategory for a community or state. Although one of the common community subcategories is "Business & Labor," documents about unemployment during the Great Depression will more often reside within general community folders or in other subcategory files that include material about specific WPA, PWA, or CCC projects.

Most communities within the district will have at a bare minimum a "Post Office" file. During the time period Rankin served in Congress, the post office might be the only physical presence of the federal government in that location. Even a small community lacking an actual post office would still receive postal delivery. In addition, post office employment was often a matter of federal job patronage requiring the endorsement of members of Congress (when their party held the White House). The archives chose to retain documents related to these post office employment decisions within the State and Local series since correspondence from local constituents often provide detailed information about aspirants' party connections and local participation in election campaigns... thus providing a wealth of information at the community level.

Documents referring to more than one community or county or the state as a whole appear in a wide array of general Mississippi files broken down into subcategories. Many of the same subcategories used in the community files will appear under the Mississippi folders, but they also include different topics such as Choctaw Tribe, DeSoto Expedition Celebration, Forestry, Mineral Deposits, or Supreme Court. Creeks, rivers, and lakes will be found under "Mississippi - Body of Water - [specific name]." Although there are several folders on the Tombigbee River, documents related to the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway are generally found in those extensive files within Series 1: Subject Files.

Researchers are encouraged to check the general community files as well as the pertinent Mississippi files of this series for additional information (even if a relevant community-subcategory file exists on their specific subject) as documents that discussed more than one topic or more than one community might be filed under the larger category.

Researchers interested in local history should consider reviewing the files on specific newspapers in Series 4: Public Relations which usually contain correspondence on local issues with newspaper editors. As Tupelo was Representative Rankin's hometown, Series 12: Personal Files will contain pertinent information on Tupelo and Lee County, particularly within the Correspondence, Organization Memberships, Rankin Property, Dixie Realty Company, and Newspaper The New Era files.

Series 3: Politics Scope and Content

The nineteen boxes in this Politics series consist of two subseries. Subseries 1 is comprised of campaign files organized chronologically and include his earlier races for public office prior to his election to Congress in 1920. The topics include political prospects, financial contributions, registered voter lists, campaign expenses, endorsements, speaking engagements, election returns, and congratulations. Researchers should also consult Series 4: Public Relations for documents related to speeches and speaking engagements.

Subseries 2: General Politics contains documents with a broader subject matter that includes local, state, and national campaigns; contests for speakership of the House in the Mississippi legislature; as well as the Democratic Party at both the state and national level.

Series 4: Public Relations Scope and Content

The Public Relations series consists of fifteen boxes.

Contents are arranged largely by the following categories: biographical sketches about Rankin; circular letters sent out to large numbers of constituents; Mississippi press files by individual newspapers (including Memphis, Tennessee); photograph agencies; correspondence with press (newspapers, journals, radio, and television) based outside Mississippi; radio debates featuring Rankin; newspaper columns, articles, manuscripts, and book manuscripts written by Rankin; clippings and correspondence about general feature stories on Rankin that appeared in newspapers or magazines; press releases by Rankin's office; speeches; and information on newspaper and journal subscriptions.

Carbon copies of Rankin's letters to three newspaper editors in particular contain substantive information regarding his views on politics and legislation: Sam Tapscott of the Booneville Independent, Birney Imes of the Columbus Commercial-Dispatch, and George McLean of the Tupelo Daily Journal (whose communications also document community development efforts within Rankin's hometown).

As owner and editor of the short-run Tupelo newspaper The New Era from 1919 to 1921 (see File Series 12: Personal for the newspaper's files) which helped to propel his career into politics, Rankin was sensitive to the power of the local and national press. He wrote his own press releases and frequently sought to have his speeches and manuscripts printed in popular magazines and trade journals.

The last seven boxes in the series hold oversized scrapbooks which consist primarily of clippings with scattered ephemera such as event programs and some correspondence. Several of the scrapbooks possess an index for the clippings.

Researchers should note that similar items, particularly speeches and press releases, may be located within Series 1: Subject Files; Series 2: State/Local; and Series 3: Politics. In addition, the archives discarded most of correspondence by constituents and others asking for copies of Rankin's speeches (along with other routine requests for government publications received by the congressional office).

Series 5: Employment and School Recommendations
Scope and Content

The thirty-two boxes in this series contain correspondence related to individuals seeking Representative Rankin's endorsement and assistance in obtaining employment, usually with the federal government but occasionally with state or private businesses as well. Documents may focus on high ranking posts in the president's cabinet to summer jobs for students at national parks.

Rankin was in office during the Great Depression and World War II and this series permits researchers to explore the unemployment crisis, the New Deal, and war mobilization of the homefront at the local and individual level. Persons requesting aid often described in great detail their impoverished circumstances and difficulties in locating positions, and communications from government agencies offer insight into implementation of job programs at local and state levels.

The series is organized alphabetically by the name of the federal government department or agency in which a job is sought and then further divided chronologically by year. The files concerned with federal employment are followed by those folders referencing jobs in private businesses and files concerned with college and university recommendations. Material related to military academy appointments appear separately in Series 7.

Some tips for researchers:

Many defense plant jobs are filed under private business.

Due to overlap among Civilian Conservation Corps, Soil Conservation Service, Forest Service, National Park Service, and State Parks, researchers interested in any one of these should consult the other categories, too. Papers were filed based upon prominence of subject referenced, but often concern these other agencies.

Emergency Conservation Work is filed under Civilian

Conservation Corps.

Overlap exists between the Resettlement Administration and the Farm Security Administration (the FSA succeeded the RA in 1937). Some related documents may end up in Agriculture folders if the agency was not clearly marked.

Requests for jobs in Rankin's office or committee are filed under Congress.

Panama Canal Zone employment is filed as its own subject, separate from U.S. Territories and Foreign Countries.

Agricultural census enumerator positions appear under Agriculture Department, not Census Bureau.

U.S. Maritime Commission and the Merchant Marines files may contain overlap.

Military files should contain only material about civilian employment under the military (such as jobs at local bases). To locate files about commissions, enlistment, and the draft consult the military folders in the Case Files series.

Most postmaster and postal route employees will be found in the Post Office folders of individual communities within the State/Local series. The Post Office material remaining in this series will concern mainly state or national positions, those communities outside Mississippi (such as Memphis or Red Bay, Alabama), or railroad postal employees.

Series 6: Case Files

Scope and Content

Constituents and other individuals often seek the assistance of congressional members in negotiating a benefit, ruling, or reimbursement for personal gain (and occasionally from state governments and private businesses, too). Examples will include individuals seeking aid entering a veteran's hospital, a family seeking visas for relative who reside abroad, or farmers wanting loans from the Farmers Home Administration.

Files are arranged alphabetically by the name of the government agency involved in a specific issue and further subdivided chronologically by year. "Business (Private)" folders appear in this alphabetical organization under "B." "Estates (Private)" concern the disposal of property and claims related to the deceased.

Representative Rankin held office during the Great Depression, New Deal, and World War II. As a result, the contents of this series may offer insight on how these historical eras transpired at the local and state levels. For instance, the Military folders document efforts to enlist, requests on health and location for family serving abroad, assistance obtaining furloughs, or a service discharge when the war ended, burial or funeral arrangements, copies of military service records, awards of citations and medals, survivor's benefits, and requests for special training, transfers or promotions. They will also include information about civilians who perform work for the military. Information on those retired from the military service will most often appear under Veterans.

Issues commonly resolved at the state level are intermixed, although there are clear files for "Old Age Assistance (Mississippi)" and "Welfare (Mississippi)." Other examples of state files include "Confederate Pensions," "County Clerks," and "Court Trials."

"Unknown" folders contain documents for which curators were unable to identify a clear issue or concern.

Access Restrictions

Case Files often contain data such as Social Security numbers, military service records, and detailed medical and financial information. Due to privacy and confidentiality concerns, the Modern Political Archives keep case files closed to the public for seventy-five years. Therefore, folders that are not available due to the time restrictions will be removed before the box is made available to researchers. For example, a researcher desiring access to folders dated 1947 will have to wait until the year 2024 to access its contents.

Series 7: Military Academies Scope and Content

Members of Congress nominate candidates for appointment to the four United States military service academies. In this series are documents related to constituents requesting nominations to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, and the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, New York (the U.S. Air Force Academy did not exist during Rankin's tenure in office). Also included in the files are documents related to the Coast Guard Academy although it does not require congressional nomination. Documents are arranged chronologically by year.

Access Restrictions

Due to privacy and confidentiality concerns, files will remain closed for seventy-five years after the date on each folder. For example, a researcher desiring access to folders dated 1947 will have to wait until the year 2024 to access its contents. After providing proof of identification, individuals may request a search for documents related to their personal military appointment in the closed files.

Series 8: Routine Requests
Scope and Content

Congressional offices handle a number of rather routine requests from constituents. These include inquiries for the following: basic information on government programs, agencies or policies; biographical information about the member of Congress; autographs and photographs; favorite recipes; campaign buttons and bumper stickers; U.S. flags flown over the Capitol; copies of speeches made by Rankin; copies of government publications; and assistance with hotel reservations in Washington D.C. and tourist passes to various government buildings including the White House. The archives chose to retain none of the documents related to these mundane activities.

However, two types of routine requests by constituents were retained as potentially useful evidence for environmental historians: (1) requests for free fish from government hatcheries to stock private ponds and (2) requests for free seeds, bulbs, and plants from government agencies such as the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Botanic Garden. "Fish" files are arranged chronologically by year, followed by "Plants" folders by year.

Series 12: Personal Scope and Content

The contents of the eighteen boxes in this series date from 1913 to 1952. The series features correspondence with family, friends, and general letters from supporters. Among the letters are those from strangers inquiring about Rankin family genealogy as well as reminiscences of friends and former acquaintances. Of particular note are a series of letters over the years with his current and former Tupelo law partner Ward Allen which document Allen's military service in World War I. Additional folders contain birthday and holiday cards, clippings, material related to his daughter Annie Laurie Rankin's poetry, medical records, church membership, and a subject file on Ringneck Pheasants.

“Organization Membership” folders include material related to Rankin's or his family's participation in various organizations and clubs in Tupelo and Washington, DC including: Masons, Order of the Eastern Star, Young Men's Business Club of Tupelo, Nettleton Fox Hunting and Fishing Association, Tupelo Country Club, Tupelo Chamber of Commerce, U.S. Soldiers Home Golf and Tennis Club, Mississippi State Bar, American Legion, Community Development Foundation, Holton-Arms Alumnae Association, Congressional Club, Daughters of the American Revolution, Anti-Tuberculosis Campaign Committee, National Geographic Society, American Red Cross, and the Army Navy Country Club of Arlington, Virginia.

The series also documents Rankin's financial affairs with files on “Bank Accounts” and “Finances.” In addition, the series includes specific files on his law practice, his real estate property investments, his partnership in the Dixie Realty Company (1919-1921), and the Tupelo newspaper The New Era (1919-1921) which he owned and edited. The extensive nature of these files not only showcase the congressman's entrepreneurial drive, they also benefit researchers interested in the local history of Tupelo, Mississippi as well as scholars exploring housing issues during this time period. Rankin owned commercial property and buildings in Tupelo that he leased to various businesses, rental houses in Tupelo, and agricultural property in the Lee County that he rented to tenant farmers. He even developed a subdivision in Tupelo. These files also include the correspondence of local lawyer Claude F. Clayton (and future Rankin campaign opponent and later federal judge), who served as Rankin's business agent arranging rentals, collecting rent, and organizing upkeep of the properties from 1932 to 1933. J.E. Young took over these tasks in 1934.

Series 13: Invitations and Schedules
Scope and Content

This series contains documents regarding John Rankin's schedule as well as invitations received by him to events. Some of these documents may be related to election campaign activities, and many similar materials will also be found in Series 3: Politics. Most invitations actually appear in the relevant topical folders of Series 1: Subject Files, Series 2: State/Local, and Series 4: Public Relations (such as invitations to American Legion functions in the "Veterans" folders of Series 1). Because of this diversification across the collection, the contents of Series 13 should not be considered as an accurate reflection of Rankin's schedule and appearances.
