To the Alumni:

We are all interested in the future of Ursinus College. For this future recently I have acquired some heavy responsibilities. A good place from which to view the future is the past. Therefore, I shall review some of the highlights of Dr. McClure's accomplishments during the twenty-two years of his administration.

The size of the Faculty and student body nearly doubled. The Summer School and Evening School were established, the Evening School having a present enrollment of 333 students. Faculty salaries were increased by 100%. A retirement plan was adopted for the Faculty which with Social Security provides a retirement income of approximately one-half of salary at retirement. There was established a group insurance plan without cost to the Faculty. The value of the endowment funds was increased by approximately 1500%. The College erected or acquired fourteen additional buildings including Paisley Hall, Beardwood Hall, Stauffer Hall, Duryea Hall, Clamer Hall, Firecroft, Fetterolf House, and 646, 724, 942, 944 Main Street.

The Evaluation Report by the Middle States Association of Colleges in February of 1957 reported that "the policy of admissions, the courses of study, the use of the library, the encouragement of religious, cultural, social and athletic programs, the resources of plant and endowment—all are consistent with the aims of the College. To an unusual degree, the Directors of the College, its administrative officers, faculty, staff and students accept the principles of the College and strive individually and collectively to attain them. Friendliness, loyalty, dedication and competence, together with marked unity of purpose—the traditional values sought by the small, church-related college—are everywhere apparent."

These are achievements of which all of us are proud. As the new president I am pledged to support and advance Dr. McClure's program. This I can best do with the support of the alumni and friends of Ursinus College.

RECIPIENTS OF RECOGNITION ON FOUNDERS' DAY

Dr. D. L. Helfferich Inaugurated President of Ursinus College

Dr. Donald Lawrence Helfferich of Collegeville, Pa., was inaugurated President of Ursinus College on Sunday, November 2, at impressive ceremonies held in Bomberger Hall on the Ursinus campus in Collegeville. Becoming the eighth President in the eighty-nine year history of the College, Dr. Helfferich was officially installed into office by his predecessor, Dr. Norman E. McClure, who acted in behalf of the Board of Directors and the President of the Board since 1910, Dr. Harry E. Paisley of Philadelphia. Dr. Helfferich's inauguration thus was the climax of Ursinus' annual celebration of Founders' Day.

Presiding at the ceremonies was Dr. William D. Reimert of Allentown. Dr. Reimert, who is associated with the Allentown Call-Chronicle newspapers and who holds an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Ursinus, spoke for the Board of Directors as its First Vice President.

Dr. McClure made the address of induction, and Dr. Helfferich made his inaugural address upon assuming his office.

Representing the United Church of Christ, with which Ursinus has affiliations, was the Reverend Sheldon A. Mackey of Glenside, Pa., who is Secretary of the Church. Dr. Mackey extended greetings from the churches to Ursinus. Representing colleges outside Ursinus was Dr. Theodore A. Distler of Washington, D. C., Executive Director of the Association of American Colleges. In an address Dr. Distler brought greetings from the colleges to Ursinus.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon the Reverend Mr. Mackey and upon Charles H. Noss, industrialist of York, Pa. Dr. Noss has been a member of the Board of Directors of Ursinus since 1944.

Upon completion of the ceremonies in Bomberger Hall, a reception for alumni and friends of Ursinus was held in Memorial Library.

The President's Inaugural Address

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Ursinus College is a very small segment of our country's educational organization. However, it is in focus today. Into this day we are crowding three events, not the least of which is a commencement convocation for five students who have completed their required courses for the baccalaureate degree. We are assembled also to do honor to the founders of Ursinus College. And we are using these two important events to inaugurate a new president.

Certainly this is an appropriate occasion and the proper forum to talk, even to boast a little, about Ursinus College. It might be treason to do otherwise.

Almost everybody in the United States with the power of communicating with in the past year has become vocal on the subject of education. There is almost enough heat in the sum total of the comments from which to develop thrust to place a college the size of Ursinus into orbit.

It is perhaps worthy to note that some of the suggestions come from persons who until recently have displayed neither responsibility nor interest in education. However, there is an unquestioned faith in education now that is as national as the Star Spangled Banner or the comic strips.

The United States Congress, after neglecting education for a period, suddenly sees the need for crash programs. The legislators appear to want weapons. This desire may actually hinder the real work of education. If the programs are created out of a state of shock, education may become a commodity to be bought with large federal appropriations. In such a situation our faculty members might be listed as one of the audio-visual aids.

Our educational system is vast, complex, strong and basically good, proof of which is the living standards and culture of the United States, but the system is also sensitive. It can be seriously damaged by well-meaning but uninformed

Ursinus College Opens with 839

Ursinus College started classes on Wednesday, October 1, with a total of 839 students. After a rather full and hectic year of visiting schools, attending "College Night" programs, and interviewing nearly 1100 prospective students on campus, the Admissions Officers (Professors Dolman, Jones, and Rice) report that 276 freshmen are on hand to help the College begin its 89th academic year.

From an analysis of the freshmen class, Geoffrey Dolman, Director of Admissions, reports that the class has presented excellent entrance credentials and that, on paper, it is the strongest academic class to enter the College in recent years. Carefully selected from nearly 1200 applicants, the 276 freshmen have an average verbal score of 513 and a mathematical score of 526 on the College Boards, both scores comfortably above the 50th percentile. Geographically, they represent Pennsylvania (195), New Jersey (61), New York (11), New England (4), other states (3), and foreign countries (2).

An interesting and significant fact about the freshman class is that 63% were in the first quintile of their high school senior class and that 84% were in the first and second quintiles. Also significant is the fact that there are thirty two high school valedictorians and salutatorians in the freshman class.

Although lack of room prevented the accommodation of more transfer students, such students came to us from The Citadel, Franklin & Marshall, William & Mary, Purdue, University of Connecticut, Juniata, Rutgers, Mitchell College, Georgetown, Penn State, University of Pennsylvania, Amherst, Wilson, Drexel, and Cedar Crest. In a few cases these students entered Ursinus as freshmen.

The Director of Admissions wishes to thank the many graduates and friends of the College who have aided so generously in writing recommendations or in bringing prospective students to the campus. In the last year, we have had 3000 visitors on campus, one-third of whom were interviewed. It is most necessary, therefore, to telephone or write for an appointment early. The need in 1958-9 will be for well qualified men because of the men-women ratio and dormitory spaces. It is expected that no applications for women can be accepted after about April 1.

We hope that the fortunes of the men's athletic program will improve this year. One half of the football squad consists of freshmen and the future looks bright. Women's sports promise teams competing for varsity honors.

1958-9 is going to be a good year at Ursinus College and more than a dozen of your sons and daughters in the freshman class will make it so—do you have any more at home?

The Evening School

The Evening School opened on September 29 with a record enrollment of 333 students, 92 more than last year. Of these 264 are men and 69 are women. The number of veterans enrolled is 145. The courses being conducted number 31. Of these, General Chemistry is being offered for the first time.

This year, to facilitate scheduling and to make the roster more flexible, additional sections in Accounting and English Composition were arranged on different evenings. These distributed the overflow that was experienced in these subjects for the last two years. However, an additional section of Economic Principles was found to be necessary at the last minute to care for the heavy enrollment in that subject and to keep from overcrowding the sections.

Additions to the Evening School Instructional Staff this Fall include the following:

Mr. Joseph Gray Jackson, of William Steell Jackson and Sons, patent attorneys, Philadelphia, to instruct in Business Law. He took his undergraduate degree in engineering at Lehigh University, and his law degree at the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. William J. Kenealy, Director of Industrial Relations of the Charles Lachman Division of Mohasco Industries at Phoenixville, Pa., to instruct in Economic Principles. He took his undergraduate degree in Business Administration at George Washington University, and his Master of Science in Industrial Relations at Columbia University.

Mr. Clarence Norman Myers, to teach English Composition. He took his undergraduate degree in the classics at the University of Pennsylvania and his Master's degree in English at the same institution. He is at present teaching English at the Haverford Township High School and has until this year been on the Evening School Staff at the Drexel Institute of Technology.

Dr. Roger P. Staiger, of the Ursinus Department of Chemistry, to teach General Chemistry.

Dr. George G. Storey, of the Ursinus Department of English, to instruct in English Composition and Literature.

Mr. John F. Trainor, to instruct in Industrial Management and Personnel Management. He earned degrees of Bachelor of Science and Master of Science in Education at Temple University, and is at present personnel manager with the Budd Company.

As a result of the large enrollment and the addition of Chemistry to the Evening School Program nearly all the available classroom space in Pfahler Hall is in use every night the Evening School is open.

New Preceptress at 944

Mrs. Walter Prizer, a resident of Norristown, Pa., has been appointed preceptress of the woman's dormitory at 944 Main St. During the illness of Miss Morris, Mrs. Prizer acted as substitute preceptress at Glenwood Hall. She was also housemother at the Ellis School during the 1957-58 academic year and is the aunt of Conrad Hoover '58.

The Library

Dr. Donald L. Helfferich of Ursinus College has announced the appointment of Dr. Calvin D. Yost, Jr., as Head Librarian of the College. Dr. Yost, who is Professor of English, assumed his new duties on September 1. Mrs. Roger P. Staiger will continue in her position as Circulation Assistant of the Library, a post she has held during the last several years.

Dr. Helfferich also announced the addition to the staff of the library of Miss Ethel Kay Kerper, a graduate of Ursinus in 1957, and of the School of Library Science of Drexel Institute of Technology in 1958. Miss Kerper will serve as Cataloguer.

THE MESSIAH

Under the direction of Dr. William F. Philip, four guest artists and two hundred Ursinus students will join in presenting the twenty-first annual performance of Handel's Messiah in Bomberger Chapel on Thursday night, December 11. Members of the Philadelphia Orchestra and college students will accompany the chorus. Tickets are priced at $2.00. Because of the limited space in the chapel, all orders should be mailed to the Music Department immediately.

The Faculty, Cornered

By DR. ALLAN L. RICE
Professor of German and Swedish

Well, here's old Snoopy Rice at it again with the lowdown on the higher-ups. The hunting season is just about upon us and this time luck has been with me. I have a whole new flock of wild fowl at my mercy whom I will now proceed to pluck for your delectation, going always on the assumption that all you actually want to know about them is the part that is really wild and foul.

Let us descend first upon the hallowed precincts of the Library. No "last but not least" about this, though. No, sir, the program's going to be different. This time it's "least but not last".

The shorter your memory the better you should recall this diminutive item known as Miss Kay Kerper '57, M.S. in Library Science (Drexel '58) and now the most recent cog in the new machinery at our library. Cataloguing is her dish and we're proud to have this little dish back among us as one of us. Little but oh, my! That's Kay.

There's still another story about the English department. George C. Storey, Dr. Storey at that (Harvard '49), has swooped into our midst and now stands on the block before you as I unpeel him, the newest professor of English on the Ursinus faculty. He's touted as a specialist in Victorian literature, so I'm afraid there's no hope here either for anything wild or foul, except maybe ol' Oscar. Storey is a linguist, too, we understand, and very fluent in English. He has taught at Geneva and Butler colleges and it says here he was in the Navy and was discharged as a lieutenant. We wish him better luck here as Victorian-in-chief.

He brings with him a musically talented wife, Irene, but that's another Storey. And there are three wild oats (at last!) named Susan, Jon Eric and James Christopher, ranging from 1 to 12, though not in that order. And that's the whole Storey.

George C. Storey

This Storey story is all very fetching, but time's a-wasting. The next victim on my list is one who has been a zucker for Political Science from 'way back. Assistant Professor Donald Zucker (Rutgers '52) who comes from Elizabeth by way of Florence though married to Constance (and nary a word will you get out of me about that! My lips are sealed.), wrote his thesis on the adoption of the 22nd Amendment, and you get twenty-one guesses which one that was. Well, he knew the right answer, so Penn State awarded him a Ph.D. earlier this year for it.

Zucker is a keen cookie, whose Phi Beta Kappa key, Pi Gamma Mu key and Phi Alpha Theta key lend a sparkle, not to say a deafening jangle to the Ursinus campus scene. Incidentally, all

The Cornered Faculty Turns

On Wednesday, September 24th, a week before the start of classes, Dr. Rice arrived at his Bomberger classroom promptly at 8 A.M. There sat three youth with that somewhat sheepish and uncertain air characteristic of new students. Dr. Rice had been building up a head of steam all summer. This year he would really teach! So although the class seemed somewhat small, he sailed in determined to teach all that could be crowded into fifty minutes and neglecting in his enthusiasm the collection of the class admission cards.

The students sat with a somewhat puzzled yet attentive look. The professor covered the first quarter of the term's work and rested with a sense of having done rather well.

As the three filed out at 8:50, one of them informed Dr. Rice that they were from Harvard, were dissatisfied with conditions there, were visiting Ursinus this week before the opening of college with the thought of transferring, and were just then waiting for the adjacent Registrar's office to open.

Dr. Rice returned home steamless. The Registrar later informed, however, that one of the three young men, who had been valedictorian, glee club soloist, senior class president, and football captain at Pennbrush High School (one of those jointures recently developed by partheogenesis from the vacuity at Harrisburg) had come into his office that morning visibly moved. "If this was a sample of Ursinus teaching" said he, "Ursinus is the place for me. Although Harvard offered me eighteen hundred and a yellow convertible if I made good, I have decided to come here and have phoned my father to wire the full tuition."

Note: The elements of truth in the above account are that Dr. Rice did report for duty a week early, a student did transfer from an ivy league college in the opening week, Dr. Rice is an excellent teacher. Last month his new Swedish Grammar was published, which was hailed by the Saturday Review of Linguistics as "for English speaking people, the most effective presentation of the genius of Sweden since Ingrid Bergman."

Tracking the Alder Flycatcher

The songs of such unlikely bird visitors as the Western Kingbird and the California Quail are being heard up and down Main Street in Collegeville these days—and not because Ursinus has started an aviary. These and over 100 other species of North American birds were tape recorded by Dr. Robert C. Stein, assistant professor of biology, on a research excursion this past summer.

The recordings were made as a sideline to a two-month trip Professor Stein made through the Northwestern states and British Columbia under the sponsorship of the American Philosophical Society and with the cooperation of Cor-

Professor Stein hypothesizes that birds which are very similar to one another in appearance, such as the two types of Traill's Flycatcher, the Acadian, Least and Yellow-bellied Flycatchers, recognize individuals of their own species or type on the basis of song, preventing interbreeding and the subsequent breakdown of species. He feels that by exploring his hypothesis with the Traill's Flycatcher (called the Alder Flycatcher until an official change recently), he is developing methods which can be applied in studying other species with which the same problem occurs.

To find out whether individuals of each of the two types of Traill's Flycatcher are able to distinguish the songs of birds of their own type from those of the opposite type or of the Acadian, Least or Yellow-bellied flycatchers, Bob used a play-back technique. During the breeding season, when the birds were on their feeding and breeding territories, he took a small, portable recorder equipped for playback and hooked up to a small loudspeaker; set up the loud speaker and a dummy bird in the territory of each male bird he found; and played the recorded songs of each of the types and species.

At this season, a male bird may be expected to react aggressively toward any bird it considers to be a rival or territorial invader of its own species. Dr. Stein found that some degree of hostile behavior was elicited in cases when he played the song of the bird's own type, but that the birds did not react at all to the songs of the other type and species. The hostile responses ranged from tail pumping and vocalizing the "pit" note to actual attack on the dummy or loud speaker, and chirrs or subdued song.

Professor Stein also found differences in the materials used by the two song types to build their nests, and in the sites chosen for the nests. These differences held true more for the populations in the Eastern United States than for those in British Columbia.

When the Ursinus biologist set out for British Columbia this summer with his field assistant, he was faced with a needle-in-haystack kind of search to find the area where the two song-types come into contact. One type has a more southerly range than the other, and no one had quite determined where they overlap in the West. They began working their way north from the Washington border, and one night stopped by chance nell University. His main purpose was to explore further the private life of Traill's Flycatcher, Empidonax traillii (Audubon), a study which he has been working on for six years and which gave rise to his M.S. and doctoral theses at Cornell. The latter was published during the summer by the New York State Museum and Science Service.

Dr. Stein is interested in Traill's Flycatcher because the species, as now defined, contains two groups of birds which differ from one another in their song patterns, behavior, and some morphological characteristics. By studying the birds in the main parts of North America where the two song-types come into contact, he is attempting to determine whether the differences are significant enough to warrant describing them as two separate species. He expects to draw his final conclusions on this after next summer when he will return to British Columbia to complete his work there with the help of a grant from the National Science Foundation.

Bird study location in the community of Lac La Hache in the Cariboo Parklands. In the morning, to their pleased surprise, they found the songs of the two types they were seeking. During the two months following, the blue station wagon with its mysterious looking parabolic reflector, which the professor calls his "flying saucer," strapped on top became a familiar sight to residents of the area.

Having professional bird watchers in their midst was nothing novel to the citizens of Lac La Hache. Professor Stein and his helper soon found that the tiny village and its surrounding resort area were summer headquarters also for a number of other scientists including several graduate students from the University of British Columbia. By knowing the species that each of the others was working with, they all were able to swap information and facilitate one another's research.

Visiting likely habitats along the way and in the Cariboo Parklands, the ornithologist was able to put on tape the voices of 11 species which had never previously been recorded, and some 22 which had not been recorded since the days of cumbersome sound-film recording in the 1930's. Major stops were made at the Lower Souris Refuge in North Dakota; Pullman, Washington; and Fidalgo Island in the Puget Sound area. On the return trip, in addition to a short trip through Banff and Jasper Parks, Professor Stein and his assistant stopped at Louisiana Lakes in Alberta to record some shore birds, and at Delta Waterfowl Research Station at the southern end of Lake Manitoba. Altogether, he used up 48 reels, or almost three miles of magnetic tape—enough to play for about nine continuous hours. The edited reels will be added to the collection of the Library of Natural Sounds in the Laboratory of Ornithology at Cornell, which supplied the equipment and tape, and where Bob is also a Research Associate.

Already, Professor Stein is beginning to look beyond the summer of 1959. With the work on Trill's Flycatcher completed, he wants to apply his hypothesis to the Hammond's and Dusky Flycatchers, two other species in the genus Empidonax which offer a similar challenge. After that, other species in the genus will be studied, leading, he hopes, to a monograph on the entire group. But Bob figures that this will take another 25 to 30 years.

those are just his honorary bangles. He has spent a lot of time in Italy, in the army and out. In 1952-53 he spent away at the University of Florence on a Fulbright, studying contemporary Italian politics. (We respectfully omit the obvious next remark out of deference to the party of your choice at this delicate season.)

He contributed considerably to the jangle in Italy, too, astride his trusty Lambretta scooter. Despite the fact that little Christina, now 5, (there's also a subsequent Andrew, now 4) was born over there, he and his wife raised considerable dust on European roads with this two-wheeled juggernaut, their noisiest escapade being a precipitate descent of the northern or steeper (13%) slope of the Gross-Glockner (Austria's Pike's Peak) with no brakes. Our friend didn't find out about his brakelessness however until he and the Mrs. were half-way down and reeling off the hairpin turns like a bat out of Rocco's. As they swooshed into a relatively level (10% grade) stretch he quietly told his wife, with typical sang froid, that she'd better get her feet dragging pretty pronto if she knew what was good for them. She did and they finally sizzled to a hot-foot stop all in one piece. (I think he said "piece", or was it "heap"?) There are times when the bigger one's wife's feet the better. Anyhow—the Zuckers are thus probably the only people west of the Perkiomen to have practically fallen off the Alps and landed on both feet. Certainly no one in Ursinus faculty history has handed his wife a more magnificent hot-foot.

So much for Don ("Brake Shoes") Zucker. I wish I could report that he still buzzed about the campus on his Lambretta, professorial coat-tails flying and soles smoking, but he went and sold it, worse luck. Collegeville hills not steep enough, more than likely.

Not content with the amount of unsavory fogs and tear-gas Rog Staiger has been belching forth on the third floor of Pfahler (one guess why the President's office is on the second floor!) the department of Chemistry has fortified itself by the addition of Donald ("Paroxymonosulfuric") Fortnum, who, in turn, has recently fortified himself by the addition of a Mrs. Fortnum, nee Emily Waters. He has one, nay two graduate degrees, culminating in a Ph.D. from Brown. Now you neigh, please! I'm tired.

He's not the wild, foul type either, though he is a Wisconsiner if you can make something out of that. You might try calling him a Wisconsinian and see what kind of monkeyshines you get out of that, but Wisconsinian, though most appropriate, probably oversteps the bounds of propriety. It was my intention to spend a rollicking evening or two curled up with a bag of peanuts and the racier passages of the Fortnum thesis, but either the peanuts or the paroxymonosulfuric acid seems to have unsettled my inner workings, so if you'll just clear me a path to the rail, I'm a bit on the queasy side.

Though well stocked with William Phillipess, the faculty has been getting dangerously low on D. Bakers, especially in the Greek department where Donald B., the sole remaining representative of the species was manfully trying to keep things going. To fill this serious shortage, the Administration has in the nick of time secured the services of one David Baker as assistant professor of Greek and the philosophy of religion. Students in that flourishing department can now choose between Dr. D. Baker and Dr. D. Baker which greatly eases the situation. It reminds one of the time not long ago when the Horn of Plenty provided us with three Marilyn J. Millers at one and the same time among the student body, two of them Marilyn Joyce, at that. Two years ago, however, we were faced with a fate worse than death when a Donald Runk and a Ronald Dunk both presented themselves for admission, the same year!

Dr. Baker, the Greek one, I mean, D. Baker that is, or if you insist, David, is a man who doesn't believe in doing things by halves. Not content with a degree from Princeton Theological Seminary, he then took on an M.D. from University of Pennsylvania. We are told he had hoped to make his fortune as a missionary in China, but that field being at the moment out of season, Dr. Baker is now a missionary to Ursinus, and I hope he finds the native less inaccessible. If you suffer from a floating kidney or a split infinitive or a downright fall from grace, here's the man to help you. If he would now just stir his stumps a bit and fit himself a little better in Impressionistic Painting and Business Law, he might get himself a reputation as a fairly well educated man.

New arrivals among the faculty are

ALUMNI ACTIVITIES

Old Timers' Day Almost Rained Out

On Friday evening, October 24, at 11:15 P.M. the Philadelphia weather forecaster happily announced a bright and beautiful weekend for Homecoming. He went on to explain, however, there was a small low pressure area centered over Harrisburg, Pa., which might bring a few showers before morning, but behind this, fair weather was moving in to the eastern seaboard. Residents of the area were assured they could expect one more enjoyable outing before the fall foliage fell.

Upon this happy note, a surprisingly large number of Ursinus graduates and friends arrived on Saturday in the soaking downpour to watch the annual Ursinus-Swarthmore football game. In spite of the soaking we received in football as well as water, the day can be classed as successful for a variety of reasons.

The Sorority luncheons held in the Collegeville area were well attended.

The Old Timers' Day Coffee Hour in the New Gymnasium was a real bright spot. Marjorie Johnston Watson '52, and her Old Timers' Day Committee held Open House for alumni, football fans, and players as well as Ursinus students from the beginning of the football half-time until nearly five o'clock. The new gym was a warm bright gathering place to meet acquaintances and enjoy the free hot coffee, chocolate and donuts. The committee, assisted by Mrs. Schellhase, housemother at 646 Main St., representing the Ursinus Women's Club, had college souvenirs available for the guests to purchase. Many congratulatory comments were made about this committee and its service.

In the evening, Glenn Eshbach, Chairman of the Ursinus Loyalty Fund Committee, presided at the annual Kick-Off dinner for the 1959 Loyalty Fund Drive. As usual the college dining steward and his staff produced an incomparable steak dinner for all in attendance, and the banquet was completed by three outstanding talks by three Class Loyalty Fund Chairmen. Paul S. Craigie of the Class of 1938, who flew in from Louisville, Ky., represented the most successful chairman of the year and presented the lead-off speech. "Tucker" Beddow '36, and George Kratz '43, upon completion of their talks challenged each other's record for the coming year. Their other to an all out contest to surpass the viewpoints and ideas were enjoyed and well received by their fellow chairmen and vice-chairmen.

It is obvious it takes more than a downpour to dampen the Ursinus spirit.

Ursinus Woman's Club Plans Holiday Luncheon

The Board of Directors of the Ursinus Woman's Club met Saturday, October 4, at a luncheon at the Kopper Kettle, Collegeville, Pa., to plan activities for the coming year. Miss Edwardine Tyson '24, the president, announced the holiday luncheon to be held at Gimbels in Philadelphia, Saturday, December 6. Hilda Stanley Rockett '32, and Helen Isenberg Ballantyne '24 will arrange for the party. The price of the Christmas luncheon will be $2.25 per person. Reservations should be made by writing to Mrs. J. H. Brownback, Trappe, Collegeville, Pa.

After luncheon, the group met at Super House with Anna Knauer Helfferich '20 to continue the discussion of plans. The card party at Ursinus last spring was such a success, socially and financially, that it will become an annual affair. The plates with a choice of four Ursinus scenes will be on sale throughout the year. A letter will be sent out later to remind members of the holiday luncheon.

Ursinus Forum, 1958-59

C. Northcote Parkinson, author of the famous "law" in regard to bureaucracy, opened the 1958-59 Forum season in Bomberger on October 7. A large audience responded enthusiastically to his witty explanation of formulae that determine the relation between the amount of work to be done and the number of men employed to do it.

Dr. Parkinson, who is Raffles Professor of History at the University of Malaya, has just completed a summer of teaching at the Harvard Summer School. His latest book, "The Evolution of Political Thought" has just been published in this country, following its publication in England some months ago.

Face Lifting On Campus

Those of you who failed to get back to your College for Old Timers' Day have not seen the new face on Freeland, Derr, and Stine Halls. Some 300 gallons of paint were used this last summer to refinish the exteriors from the East Wing to the Dog House. A very pleasant gray wall with white trimmed windows accented by green shutters lends both dignity and beauty to the old buildings.

Unseen from the campus, but more important structurally, is the rewiring that has been completed for Freeland, Derr, and Stine. Remember the octopuses you used (or the oil lamps for the old Old Timers)? Outlets in each room are now what they are supposed to be—convenience outlets.

Stine Hall's bathrooms have been completely tiled, and this completes the tiling of all bathrooms in the old dormitory group.

Fircroft and Maples have been men's dormitories for the past two years, and now South Hall (Trinity Cottage) has been added to the list. The bathrooms in Maples were also tiled during this past summer.

Curtis Hall has been completely furnished with new beds. You slept on a cot, perhaps with a 30" wide mattress (?) which was 72" long. Americans are growing taller you know. We have some special beds, so if you know of any 6'7", or taller, basketball players, don't hesitate to recommend Ursinus College to them. It is planned to continue replacing beds in the other men's dormitories with Brodbeck in line for refurbishing next summer.

Why is all this being done for the men's dorms? If you haven't been back on campus to see the new women's dormitories, pay us a visit, and we'll be glad to escort you on a wonderful tour.

A Challenge for Alumni Giving

PAUL S. CRAIGIE '38

Presented at the L. F. Kick-Off Dinner

I look on this meeting here tonight as a Sales Meeting—a meeting at which we, who sell Ursinus to its alumni can exchange techniques and can renew our enthusiasm for the product to be sold.

In my business life, I fortunately have never been associated with a company that did not sell quality products. And, I've often wondered how it must feel to be in the position of having to sell an inferior product—a product in which you didn't believe, or which you knew was poorly constructed or made of inferior ingredients.

A salesman, to be successful, must believe in his product if he is to develop the enthusiasm, the confidence and the conviction necessary to convince others to buy.

Fortunately, we have in Ursinus a quality product composed of the finest materials, a fine faculty, and a carefully screened student body, attractively packaged, as all of you on campus today must have noted, a product of which we can be proud, and which can be enthusiastically sold.

But, perhaps, some of your prospects say "Why can't a college run its finances on a businesslike basis and make ends meet without continually having to ask the alumni for donations?"

I'll tell you why! If colleges were to charge what the product costs, they would soon become schools only attended by the children of the wealthy.

When you and I were here, we were on a hidden scholarship whether we knew it or not. The contribution of some big philanthropist, the contribution of some alumnus, and the sacrifice made by faculty members in the form of accepting a wage which does not nearly approach their worth, gave us a better education than we paid for.

Now, a businessman, faced with the problem of rising costs would probably raise the price of his product and then strive for bigger volume to cut the cost per unit. This, however, cannot work with colleges, for if their price were raised to cover the cost, many deserving students would never go to college.

Of course, we could cheapen the product—add more students with the same faculty. But, obviously, Ursinus would not take that route.

You see, we have a real dilemma, for while costs are rising, the number of big philanthropists is rapidly decreasing due to our steep income taxes. To whom then can the college turn in an attempt to compensate for this loss?

The most logical source of help is the alumnus—we who have been the recipients of the good things which Ursinus sells—personal development, increased knowledge and skills, the privilege of knowing intelligent and dedicated men. In my day—the McClures—the Barnards—the Sibbalds—the Brownbacks, who for all of us then here, provided an ideal, a way of living, which would have been worth the price of admission even if they had not in addition broadened our horizons. I'm sure that the Ursinus of today has men like these I named, to stand in the same position to the undergraduates now in college. . . .

Chancellor Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago once said, "Alumni are interested in all the things that do not matter." Since then, times have changed and the Alumni today are considered more respectfully. This is clearly borne out by Dr. Hu Shih, the scholar, who when he was Chinese Ambassador to the United States, said, "America's greatest contribution to education was its revolutionary concept of the alumnus; its concept of the former student as an understanding, responsible partner and champion."

Today, you, the partner and champion of American higher education, have an opportunity for service unparalleled in our history. You recognize better than anyone, the essential truth in the statement to which millions, finally now subscribe; that upon higher education depends, in large part, our society's physical and intellectual survival. You recognize, better than anyone else, that the race can attain even loftier goals ahead, by strengthening our system of higher education in all its parts. As an alumnus — first by understanding and then by exercising your leadership—you hold within your own grasp the means of doing so.

"Now there are some nasty rumors going around that we are recruiting."

Rarely, has one group in our society—indeed every member of the group—had the opportunity and ability for such service. This opportunity is open to all our Alumni.

It has been said that opportunity only knocks once, but as long as there are dedicated people like you—it will continue to knock—year in and year out, offering to your classmates this real opportunity for service.

Fall Play "Joan of Lorraine"

The fall play, "Joan of Lorraine" was presented by the Ursinus College Curtain Club on the weekend of November 21. The play is a modern version of the story of Joan of Arc, as interpreted and written by Maxwell Anderson.

Dr. Storey, the new faculty member in the English department has replaced Mr. Lloyd Jones as the faculty advisor for the Curtain Club. Commendation goes to Mr. Jones for his excellent assistance to the club over the past years. The student director was Katrinka Schnabel and the student producer Jack Elander.

The play itself is a moral one. It points out that one has to compromise to live with evil. Modern costumes in modern time set the scene. Both acts take place on the rehearsal stage where a cast is rehearsing the stage play "Joan of Arc". Thus, it is a play within a play. When "Joan of Lorraine" appeared on Broadway, Ingrid Bergman played the lead.

Annual Alumni Schoolmen's Week Luncheon

Ursinus graduates serving in educational positions in Philadelphia and the suburban area met at a luncheon on Friday, October 10, as a feature of the annual University of Pennsylvania Schoolmen's Week. They used this opportunity to honor Dr. Donald L. Helfferich, recently elected president of the college.

Malcolm M. Derk, Principal of Cheltenham Township School and former president of the Alumni Association, presided. Approximately 40 alumni and friends were in attendance to hear Dr. Helfferich.

Other alumni speakers included Paul I. Guest, Philadelphia attorney and present president of the Alumni Association

Five Years of Alumni Sponsorship Completed

$125,514 Collected for Ursinus in This Period

1958 Loyalty Fund Report

The Ursinus Alumni have completed the fifth year of conducting the alumni annual giving campaign for the college. In these five years, our graduates have made $125,514 available for the college. The annual breakdown is as follows:

Year	No. of Contributors	Amount
1954	1107	$20,598.00
1955	1580	29,221.00
1956	1610	25,504.00
1957	1603	22,819.00
1958	1712	27,372.00

The Century Club has grown for the fifth straight year. This group consists of the graduates who have contributed $100 or more in the current campaign. The increase was from 47 in the 1957 campaign to 52 this year. The average contribution has also increased from $14.24 to $15.50.

This year a change in procedure was made in the calculating of the percentage of the class contributions. The percentage is now based upon the number in the class whose addresses are known. This, then, is a measure of the effectiveness of the campaign which seems to be a fairer method of reporting the statistics, since lost alumni are only a detriment to a class's efforts.

The Alumni Loyalty Fund Committee wants to thank publicly all of the class Loyalty Fund chairmen and vice-chairmen for their help during this past year, and acknowledge once again appreciation for the contribution each alumnus has made to this project and Ursinus.

Paul S. Craigie, Class Chairman of the Year

The Class of 1938 receives the bouquets for the best achievement in the 1958 Loyalty Fund Campaign. Celebrating their 20th reunion, the Class of '38 has established standards in many fields that will be difficult to match. These are illustrated by the class response to their spectacular weekend reunion in June. The '38ers have created a class spirit and college loyalty that gives the Class of 1911 something to look out for.

Paul Craigie, the Class Loyalty Fund Chairman, has the following accomplishments to his credit. He has brought in a 75% participation record for his class of 91 graduates; an increase of 23 contributors, which is the largest increase of any class. As a result of this participation, the annual giving of the class rose from $888 in 1957 to $2552 in 1958 or an increase of 187%.

As a token of appreciation for Paul Craigie's efforts, Glenn Eshbach '39, Chairman of the Loyalty Fund Committee, presented him with one of the College Captain's chairs, at the Loyalty Fund Kick-Off dinner on the evening of Old Timers' Day. Congratulations to Paul Craigie of the Class of 1938!

Workshop in Economic Education

During the last two weeks in August 1958, thirty professors from Philadelphia area college met daily at Temple University, under the direction of the Joint Council on Economic Education, and sponsored by the American Iron and Steel Institute. Ursinus representatives, Dr. William Parsons and Dr. Richard Fletcher attended these sessions. Asst. Professor Ray Rafetto, although unable to attend the workshop because of illness, continues to serve as the third member of the Ursinus team.

Objectives of the workshop included clarification of procedures and understandings in formal courses in Economics and the inclusion of more economic concepts in existing college courses in Education, Psychology, Philosophy, Sociology, History and Political Science.

Speakers from Washington, D.C., New York and elsewhere, presented papers on Automation, the New Leisure, Economic Research, Human and Natural Resources, and Comparative Economies, which were followed by group discussions. Mr. Harleston R. Wood, a member of the Ursinus College Board of Directors, spoke on Problems of Industrial Pricing at an evening session. Programs of different schools and different subject groups were presented, dissected, and analyzed. Field trips to the Sun Oil Refinery, Marcus Hook, Pa., the Fairless Steel plant at Fairless Hills, Pa., and the Brandywine Valley Conservation Area, proved stimulating and revealed a very practical aspect of the economic potential of modern America. Industry and Labor joined in a critical evaluation of current economic trends.

One of the most pleasant aspects of the conference was the opportunity to meet professors and economic experts in a very informal fashion, with a greater resultant understanding of common problems, practical and theoretical. Results of the workshop, other than the opportunity to renew old friendships and make new ones, were rather generalized. It was agreed that the teaching of economic concepts can hardly be limited to formal courses in Economics and should, in fact, be more widely taught and understood than at present. Also, colleges might give some thought to increasing the teacher preparation requirements in Economics, and the effectiveness of teaching economic concepts, both in formal courses and in related fields.

The teams representing each college are to be continued during the academic year 1958-59 and receive any additional suggestions that may be proposed, with a view to sharing these new ideas with the other teams of the workshop.

SPORTS

Varsity Football

Sixteen veterans, two transfer students, and ten freshmen reported September 9, for three a day sessions in preparation for the 1958 football season. Due to ineligibility and graduation, there were no tackles available among the veterans, but hope remained that good tackle material would be present among the new candidates.

The backfield presents another problem. Of the five returning veterans, two are quarterbacks and two are fullbacks, along with one halfback. The ends, guards, and center positions are well fortified, with four returning veterans at end and guard, and three at center.

Scrimmages with Drexel and P.M.C. will give the Bears a good idea of their progress through the pre-season sessions.

This year the Bears will be running from a winged T offense. Early indications are that the squad is well pleased with the new formation and the offense should be considerably enhanced.

The freshmen are as follows: Jim Minnich, Bill Briggs, Michael King, Gary Leach, George Martin, Fred Beals, Robert Allen, Harvey Freeland, Wm. Dilks, and Peter White.

No captains were elected at the conclusion of the 1957 season. Captains will be elected for each game.

Two New Assistant Football Coaches

Mr. Everett M. Bailey, Director of Athletics at Ursinus announced the appointment of two new assistant football coaches, Mr. Paul S. Zdanowicz and Mr. John Klock.

Mr. Zdanowicz who resides in Penn Square Village with his wife and two children, replaces Harry Spangler who served the college well from 1948 through 1957.

Ursinus Appoints A New Wrestling Coach

Mr. Everett M. Bailey, Director of Athletics at Ursinus, announced the appointment of Rev. Richard T. Schellhase as wrestling coach.

Mr. Klock, a native of Frackville, is currently living in Audubon, Pa., with his wife and two children. He is teaching at East Norriton High School in the mathematics department. He also coached baseball and football at that school.

Mr. Klock is currently engaged in graduate work at Temple, working for a degree in public school administration.

pointment of Rev. Richard T. Schellhase as wrestling coach.

Rev. Schellhase was graduated from Mercersburg Academy and Ursinus College and was a varsity performer in football, wrestling and track.

Rev. Schellhase is assistant professor of religion at Ursinus. He succeeds Mr. Kuhrt Wieneke as wrestling coach.

Alumnae Continue Winning Ways

The Ursinus Alumnae hockey team stretched their victory skein to thirteen straight by starting their 1958 season with successive wins over the Red Owlettes (3-1), Delco (11-0), the Royals (3-2) and Norristown (9-0).

The team is captained this season by Vonnie Gros ('57) and Phyl Stadler ('56), both members of the 1958 United States Touring Team to South Africa. Vonnie received many favorable comments from the South African Selection Committees for her outstanding play, while Phyl scored a total of eight goals to become one of the team's high scorers.

Despite the loss of Ruth Aucott ('56) All American center halfback and Marge Garinger ('57), the Alumnae have produced a strong rushing offense and a staunch defense. Playing on the line with Phyl are Adele Boyd ('52), Reb Mason ('55), Erma Keyes ('47), Marge Lummis ('54) and Faith Helmle Stanley ('56). The backfield is composed of Marge Watson ('52), Jen Shillingford ('54), Connie Polley ('49), Winnie Leute ('49), Sue Hodgson ('58), Pat Woodbury ('58) and Vonnie.

Under Miss Snell's able tutelage and Teddy Knopf's efficient management the Alumnae look forward to another successful year.

Varsity Has Strong Potential

The Ursinus varsity, ably led by Alice Irwin, opened their season against Swarthmore College with a decisive 3-0 win. With only five returning letter girls Coach Eleanor Snell has a difficult task. However, able and talented upper classmen and freshmen have filled the gaps.

news about OURSELVES

Note To All Contributors

Because of increasing interest in this section of the Alumni Journal, its size has grown steadily. Of this we are very proud. The increase has, however, caused the editor to establish some rules for content that is believed all will consider reasonable.

The news information published here is now being transferred to a biographical file card, so that the accomplishments and activities of an alumnus may be referred to readily. This is another important reason why information of alumni activities should be reported to the office. To keep only pertinent and valuable information on file and to reduce printers expenses, we ask you to submit news about alumni only. The office has received information pertaining to the activities and accomplishments of the children of alumni. Although this is appreciated, we have been obliged to omit this information because of space and expense limitations. In many cases we should like to thank the people who submit information, but the news has been submitted as a news clipping in an envelope with no return address. If news clippings are submitted it would be most helpful if the name of the paper and the date of appearance could be included in the margin with the name of the sender.

The Editor's policy has for some time been to omit engagement announcements, because of the complications encountered with broken engagements. We are very proud however, about the permanency record of the alumni marriages.

In summary, thank you all for your participation in making this section of your Journal as important as it has become. Please continue to send us news, but we do ask that it be strictly about you or your classmates.

The Editor.

attacks or hastily conceived reforms. Progressive education is an example of a hasty reform.

Progressive education as it developed in the extreme cases sheltered students from competition and intellectual struggle. It lulled them with the easy rather than challenged them with the hard. It was a form of social education that emphasized mass equality and aimed at something known as "life adjustment." It held back good students so that poor students would not feel unequal. One of its theories appeared to be that if everybody did not pass, those who didn't would lose their mental health—get neurotic—go beserk—and set fire to their grade teachers. We had several generations of students of whom many had difficulty in writing, spelling, multiplying, and dividing—and worst of all, they could not think. Fortunately this situation is changing.

Most of the colleges and universities during this period continued to demand sound preparation for admission and so saved a remnant of resolute students for the classical disciplines. The liberal arts colleges have a zeal and a special competency for education in all the disciplines including so-called life adjustment.

Ursinus College owes its origin to the vision of a number of men, members of the German Reformed Church who sought to establish an institution first that would have a Christian influence, second that would provide a liberal education, and third that would be independent of control by either Church or State.

Ursinus was the Latin title of a medieval German scholar and Christian whose life exemplified these three principles. He was born in Breslau, Germany, in 1534 and was baptized Zachariah Baer. He went to the University of Heidelberg in 1561 and became head of the College of Wisdom, which was the theological department of that university. While there he became the principal author of the Heidelberg Catechism. The religious and moral principles of Ursinus College have always been in essential harmony with those of this man whose distinguished name the College bears.

By origin, history, traditions and continuing sentiment Ursinus College is bound to a denomination that has always insisted upon an educated and cultural ministry and an educational mission. We are grateful for a relationship that has brought to the College through the years wise counsel, generous contributions and a steady flow of good students. Ursinus is proud to report that it is related to the Evangelical and Reformed Church. It is our privilege to present the Christian point of view sympathetically in our curriculum and in our daily life, and to promote the interest of the Church in the field of higher education.

The second emphasis of the tradition is on liberal education. Ursinus is a college of the liberal arts. Liberal education is not precise; it is not like a right angle triangle or a four-minute egg. It requires each student, whatever his field of specialization, to study those subjects that are the core of our cultural heritage, the subjects dealing with his own nature, the subjects dealing with all human behavior as revealed in modern scientific studies and in historical and literary sources, the subjects dealing with the physical and biological world, the subjects dealing with his own society and the place of that society in the larger world, the historical view of man's social, intellectual and artistic achievements, and the subjects that emphasize competencies in the languages and the grasp of mathematics.

Liberal education as we conceive it will instill in each student intellectual curiosity, will develop a capacity to think critically and to weigh dispassionately. The students will become tolerant, temperate, and charitable, but in unequal degree. The end product of a liberal education defies definite description. Its utility never has the same size and shape for every student. No two of the five graduates here today received the same impression from their four years at Ursinus, and each will interpret his education with varying emphases.

Man moves most of his life in very practical spheres. This has been his history. It is his destiny to continue so to do. The very manner in which he earns a living and pays his taxes gives liberal education its purpose. All education is useful and none more so than that which makes a man happy and wise.

Obviously a liberal education will make a man a better professional man. John Stuart Mill once said, "Men are men before they are lawyers or physicians; and if you make them capable and sensible men, they will make themselves capable and sensible lawyers or physicians, bankers or manufacturers." (Those last two categories are my personal contribution to the quotation.)

The third emphasis of Ursinus College is on "Independence." The College operates under the direction of a self-perpetuating board of directors rather than under a state appointed board. It stands with similar institutions as one of the comparatively few organizations left in the United States which is not under the control of an ecclesiastical hierarchy, a pressure group, a government agency or a labor union.

We all know that the democratic theory as specifically expressed in our Declaration of Independence and as practiced in most of our early history holds that the individual has unique dignity and worth, certainly above the State in most considerations. Free competitive business enterprise has its basis in the same philosophy. And, if we rightly understand the meaning of the Christian message, much of God's creative activity is wrought through the individual.

For more than one hundred years the independent colleges provided all of the higher education for all of the students. This is no longer possible. A dual system for higher education has become essential. Today the majority of all college students are being educated in institutions which are supported by taxation. It is important that both types of institutions be strengthened in all particulars. Financially this is a herculean task for the private institutions. To accommodate the future flood of students the budgets of state colleges and universities can and will be expanded by millions of dollars through taxation, while the budgets of the independent colleges will be limited to their tuition fees, income from endowments, and contributions from alumni and friends who are convinced of the importance of independent higher education. That early American virtue known as thrift also plays an important part in independent college operations. (Thrift is fast becoming an early American antique.)

Mr. Frank Abrams, former president of Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, has said, "The independent liberal arts college especially must be preserved in its full vigor. Liberal education is essential to the kind of free society in which business moves ahead and prospers. It is perhaps the most effective means of wiping out the mass ignorance and intolerance in which ideologies hostile to the free enterprise system breed. Maintaining the private liberal arts college as a genuinely independent institution, I believe, is indispensable to our way of life."

Mr. Abrams has for several years headed a committee of industrialists who have been promoting and supporting the independent colleges by encouraging gifts from industry and individuals toward the support of these colleges. The Ford Foundation's fabulous gift of over one-half billion dollars and the financial assistance industry has given to liberal education in the past five years have been a significant sign of the public's sincere belief in the tangible utility of the liberal arts. Continuing support of this nature to colleges like Ursinus is important if the strong dual system in higher education is to be preserved.

The Rockefeller Report on Education emphasized the continuing tension between the needs of the organization and the integrity of the person, between the effectiveness of the group and the creativity of the individual. This may well be one of the most fateful struggles in our future. "Present day United States society," the Report points out, "has intensified the old tug-of-war between excellence and equality. The idea of excellence must be cultivated while we recognize the moral value of equality." Education in the academic environment of intellectual freedom is no dead-leveler.

Several decades before the Rockefeller Report on Education called for the pursuit of excellence in education, a great teacher, Felix Schelling, from this platform said, "Education makes for inequality—the inequality of talent, of genius. For inequality, not mediocrity, individual superiority, not standardization, is the measure of progress in the world."

Actually standardization is losing its importance. It should be apparent that if one can dial that unbiological creature, the automaton, and have the facts gush from its digestive system on any subject, the acquiring of facts is a waste of time. The place to be sure-footed will be with the policies to be taken from the facts. Management no longer needs to pick its succession in its own image. Last year's model of executive personality will depreciate as fast as last year's model of the Buick. The candidate will be asked, "What can you do that a 'univac' cannot do?" The corporation executive, the engineer, the statesman is today confronted with so many questions which require intellectual subtlety, political insight and human flexibility that he desperately needs mental equipment of the sort that the old-time tycoon could do without and frequently did.

Technologies become antiquated overnight. It is hazardous to acquire a narrow vocational skill. By the time we have brought up one generation of specialists in the field of propeller-driven aircraft the need for that specialty is replaced by the more pressing need for specialists in jet propulsion. We must prepare for the future by developing men and women with enough intellectual and technical competence to play versatile roles. Such individuals will be drawn increasingly from the ranks of those whose education and experience have included both the depth and the breadth and particularly the effort inherent in a liberal education.

From the original purposes of insisting upon independence, of providing liberal education and of maintaining the Christian influence Ursinus College has not departed in 89 years, and there is no present plan to deviate from them. These principles were adopted by the first board of directors. The extraordinary consistency of purposes is in large measure due to the character of all succeeding board members down to the present and to the remarkable record of the board's presiding officers. From 1873 to this day our Board of Directors has had only two presidents: The Honorable Henry W. Kratz, who served from 1873 to 1910, and Dr. Harry E. Paisley, who has been president of the Board since 1910. Only two Board presidents in 85 years! Moreover, the College has been headed by only two presidents in the past 46 years. This must be a world record in higher education and remarkable in light of the national average of only four and one-half years of service for all college presidents. We are normal in that students remain only four years, and some, unfortunately, must be persuaded to leave sooner.

We are called to stand in an honorable line of great and good men.

The Rev. Dr. John H. A. Bomberger, the first president of Ursinus College, shared the vicissitudes of all eighteenth and nineteenth century college administrators—poverty and lack of broad public interest. His faith, his personal sacrifices and his indomitable spirit kept Ursinus alive and growing.

The Rev. Dr. Henry T. Spangler, the third president, during the eleven years of his administration modernized the curriculum and brought to the College a group of exceptionally able young teachers, some of whom attained great distinction as scholars and scientists.

The vision and patient planning of Dr. George Leslie Omwake, the sixth president, is evident in many of the buildings on the campus. Even more important, he built a strong faculty and he greatly extended the influence of Ursinus.

There has also been a remarkable stability in the faculty. Most of the scholars, teachers, and scientists at Ursinus served for many years. Their willingness to return to their important duties year after year with the knowledge that there is nothing dramatic about their labors adds luster to their reputations and to the reputation of the College. We are happy that teachers are being restored in the minds of contemporary America to a respected place in society. We hope that some day that place may prove as profitable as it is valuable.

Time forbids our speaking of the thousands of students—alumni and friends who toiled and sacrificed for the good of Ursinus. Many of them were genuine leaders of thought. They were loyal to a great tradition. Many continue to strengthen this tradition in pulpits, classrooms, hospitals, public offices, business offices, and Christian homes throughout the world, building Ursinus into the life of the nation.

One cannot help wondering at this particular time in history whether the power of our nation may not reside more in the principles Ursinus College has fostered and taught than in any other. The world's growing capabilities for mass destruction have in many ways diminished the significance of numbers, material resources and industrial power. In this strange new age into which we are moving with some misgivings, may not cultivation of spiritual and intellectual power be inevitable?

I believe that talented individuals have had much to do with shaping history, and that the richest resources of a nation are its uncommon minds. In fact, this is becoming such a world as the undisciplined man just cannot handle.

I do not pretend to know what course the world of the future will take. I wish I had the power to foretell its form. Better still, I wish we could all live to enjoy it. I am speculating that it will be based upon a new respect for the man who will understand the realm of the spirit. I am convinced that there is an evolutionary process within man that is not biological. In fact, it transcends the whole measurable process of change.

There is no difficulty in seeing my course for the future. I have seen enough of the past to recognize the path. Ursinus College of the future must be built on the old foundations. The pervading influence must be Christian. The objectives must be to continue to produce men and women who are intellectually superior, men and women who will strive for excellence in their homes and in the business and social circles in which they move. To these purposes I will devote my energies.

not confined to the above. There were two recorded confinements during the summer, resulting in (a) Christopher Hudnut (English), now almost four months old, and (b) Marian Stein, two months, who proves the Bio department practices what it preaches. We are distinctly disappointed in both these newcomers, for neither of them has a degree nor as yet shows any sign of scholarly achievement.

Marian's Pa, though, Dr. Robert Stein of Bio to you, is back from a most successful romp in British Columbia under the joint sponsorship of the American Philosophical Society and the Ornithology Laboratory of Cornell University, which as you know is for the birds. He was apparently doing some very subtle research on the philosophy of the alder flycatcher, and if you are the least interested you can with a simple wrist motion turn to his own fascinating story on flycatchers, flyswatters and fly-up-the-creeks elsewhere in this very issue. (Adv't.)

Moreover, he has a Science Foundation grant to continue these prying tactics again next summer in British Columbia, in order to maintain the magnificent and scholarly coat of sunburn he came back with this year. Only next year the whole happy little family will go along and should return at least three times as successful, with three full coats of Canadian tan.

Dr. Stein, in recognition of his achievement (little Marian is doing just fine) has been appointed Research Associate of the Cornell Laboratory of Ornithology, and we're proud of him.

Among our old standbys, Prof. Harry Symons has proved economics can be made to work by getting himself elected a director of the Elverson National Bank. We hope it's true that he now carries around a pocketful of souvenir twenties to advertise the bank.

Not only that, but, possibly because of glorious service to the Grand Old Party, Harry was appointed by Gov. Leader to the board of trustees of West Chester State Teachers College.

Dr. Evan ('Hafnium') Snyder was seen messing around the Patrick Air Force Base in Florida last summer with the Operations Analysis Unit of the University of Pennsylvania, and says while there he also went over to a place called Cape Canaveral or something, and keeps telling wild tales about some big Things he saw there. Been reading science fiction, no doubt. But if a bear with black, gold and red ears is found when that next lunar probe goes around behind you know what, you can smile a smug smile and think nice things about our Evan.

Dr. Helen Garrett, of Romance Languages, did her usual stint of research in France this summer, at the Bibliothèque Nationale, this time on 19th Century literature, and is back on the job looking fresh as any 20th century daisy.

Here's one item you may have missed. Ursinus has a new president. They call him Dr. Donald L. Helfferich and we want to be among the first to congratulate both him and the college, to which we are sure he is going to be most helpful.

And we heartily welcome back to the faculty our esteemed President Emeritus Dr. Norman McClure, who has served the college long and well, but who, far from retiring, is back on the podium this year with his favorite courses. There is therefore no danger that our students may not continue to be able to order a pizza pie in well modulated Anglo-Saxon.

Prof. Wilcox, of Romance Languages, has been tooling around in a little blue Renault, and has the distinction of having been stopped by a policeman hardly a mile from the wharf to explain away the odd-looking French license it still bore. So provincial, these Philadelphia police.

Dr. George Hartzell, German Dept., drives a very appropriate Volkswagen, though in view of his bilingual abilities there are those who suggest he needs a Pobeda for a second car. I should have either a Saab or a Volvo, I suppose, and things will be complete when Mr. Roberts rolls up in a Fiat. The only question is, what make chariot should Donald Baker drive.

I could tell you more, of course, now that vacations are over, about the Bones being in California and the Philips in Maine, but in the main you're much more interested, I know, in knowing who is in hot water. If I could just catch the Bones in hot water, now, they'd really be in the soup, wouldn't they?

Two Spanish Majors Receive Honors

Two Ursinus senior Spanish majors, Ruth Ann Spencer and Cherrie Soper have returned to the campus this fall, proud owners of a Diploma de Estudios Hispánicos earned at the University of Madrid during the 1957-58 school year.

Cherrie and Ruth Ann are two of the three American undergraduates who earned the diploma last year.

The course leading to the diploma is set up by the university for foreigners, not only for Americans but for those from many countries of Europe and Africa as well. Six courses are taken: history, geography, history of literature, history of art, grammar, and study of poetry. Students may take fewer than the six courses and many do.

In 1957-58 186 signed up for all six and 80 of that number took all final exams. Only 30 of the 80 were granted the diploma and only 3 of the 30 were undergraduates in American colleges.

Most of the teachers in this program are quite young and enthusiastic. Classes were held with a regularity quite unlike that of the traditional laizzes-faire system of the Spanish university where a student prepares for exams as he sees fit.

Included in the program was one trip of 11 days through Castille to Santiago de Compostella in Galicia and return.

Cherrie and Ruth Ann also did a lot of independent traveling.

Among those studying abroad in 1958-59 are Philip House, Paris; Barbara Holzmann, Heidelberg.
