

UvA-DARE (Digital Academic Repository)

Improving drug regimens and implementation strategies for malaria prevention in pregnant women in western Kenya

Ouma Okuma, P.

Publication date
2012

Link to publication

Citation for published version (APA):

Ouma Okuma, P. (2012). Improving drug regimens and implementation strategies for malaria prevention in pregnant women in western Kenya. [Thesis, fully internal, Universiteit van Amsterdam].

General rights

It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations

If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: <https://uba.uva.nl/en/contact>, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.

Acknowledgements

This work has been accomplished with great contributions from selfless people and organizations from around the world. Most of the work described in this thesis changed policy and ultimately led to improving the health status of the Kenyan people and other nationalities, particularly those who live in malaria endemic countries of Africa. To them I sincerely owe a lot of gratitude.

In Kenya (KEMRI/CDC) Research Station: Dr. John Vulule and Dr. Kayla Laserson for allowing me to work in this prestigious institution for so long that it has become like my second home and for the infrastructural and intellectual support. Dr. Simon Kariuki for mentorship over the years and Dr. Meghna Desai for ensuring this PhD project moved forward.

At the University of Amsterdam: Prof (dr.) Piet Kager for mentorship, supervision of the entire PhD work, prof-reading the final document and following up on all procedures leading to graduation. It takes heart to mentor an overseas student for five years.

In Atlanta: Laurence Slutsker and Kim Lindblade for supporting my PhD studentship at the formative stages. Dr. Slutsker has mentored and consistently reviewed our manuscripts throughout this PhD study and to Dr. Mary Jean Hamel, for intellectual and emotional support.

Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine: Prof. Feiko ter Kuile for being part of the studies described in this thesis, for allowing me to use his facilities at the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine.

Supervision: Dr. Annemieke van Eijk, my primary supervisor, for securing my enrolment at the University of Amsterdam, for mentorship and for the resilience to oversee the conduct of high quality research leading to the publication of high quality papers with important public health implications.

Ministry of Health Kenya (DVBD)/Danish Bilharziasis Laboratory (DBL): Prof JH Ouma (former head, Division of vector-borne diseases in Kenya) and Dr. Jens Aagaard-Hansen, my former director at the Kenyan-Danish Health Research Project (KEDAHR) for the award of a prestigious scholarship during his tenure as KEDAHR director that ultimately paved way for continued studies including this PhD thesis.

University of Copenhagen: Prof. Ib Bygbjerg for offering me a place in his faculty to study International Health.

*To my family-*Resper, Rebecca, Leon and Cindy for patience and support during the entire period of the studies presented in this thesis. We have been in this together and it hasn't always been easy.

Where we all start: The late Alex Ochieng (my teacher in primary school), the late John Orwa (my cousin) and the late Aflina Wagumba (my mother) and John Rukenya (my Parasitology/entomology lecturer). As someone once said, "life is tragic to those who feel and comic to those who think"; everything else is vanity, vanity, vanity!