Broadcasting Comes to Parkland

by Tricia Wagoner

Ed Kelly, instructor at Parkland and announcer for WCIA, a local television station, will be teaching a new course now being offered for the winter quarter. Originally from New Jersey, with an M.A. in speech from Kent State University, Mr. Kelly taught three years at the University of Illinois before coming to Parkland College.

The new course, Speech 210, is offered so that the student may learn the fundamentals and proper usage of television equipment, broadcasting, mass communication and the roles of radio and television announcers.

The student will put into practice all that he learns. He will be taught how to control his speech problems and timing, two very important factors in television and radio announcing.

There is no text for the course--"you can't learn announcing from a book"--Ed Kelly. Therefore attendance is critical. You can't catch up by reading about what you missed.

Future plans for the course are to expand into a two-year program involving both the communications and electronics divisions of instruction.

The estimated cost to set up and maintain television equipment and a studio is a quarter of a million dollars.

The program should give the graduates of it the background to take the FCC or first class license test in Chicago. This is one of the first steps in getting a job in a television or radio station. A graduate of the program would have a knowledge of the fundamentals of running a television station and have the ability to put this knowledge to use.

Small stations are in need of qualified employees who can work successfully both in front of and behind the cameras.

The outlook is to begin the program on the new campus in the fall of 1972.

The far off goals of this program would be to set up a full, publicly heard radio station operated by qualified Parkland students. This would mean entertainment, information, sponsored commercials, local, national and world news. The station would be completely operated on Parkland's campus.

Students interested in the course, Speech 210, may obtain more information from their advisors or counselors, or talk with Ed Kelly at the Taylor Avenue Annex.

National Award to Parkland Instructor

Richard Blazier, a Parkland biology instructor, has been granted a singular national award.

Bausch and Lomb Incorporated and the National Association of Biology Teachers (NABT) have chosen Blazier to receive the first annual award for making the most significant contribution to community college biological education during the past year.

Blazier authored a paper entitled "Proposals for General Biology in the Community College," which was published in the April, 1971, issue of "The American Biology Teacher."

Blazier, 26, has been a member of the Parkland faculty since 1968. He received a $1,000 cash award, and was presented a certificate at the National Convention of NABT on Thursday, October 14, in the Williford Room of the Conrad Hilton Hotel, Chicago.

Study Area or Playground

by Gene McPeck

PROBLEM: As a student last year and this year at Parkland I have personally noticed the absence of adequate study facilities, especially during the cold weather periods. After research into this problem, I have come to the conclusion that it is a problem which the student body should mandate to the student government for action.

BACKGROUND: Parkland now has an area in its Student Center known as the Formal Lounge which supposedly serves as an all-purpose facility. As with all college facilities it may be reserved for movies, meetings, and other student activities. When it is not so engaged, the lounge is left to be used by the students as a general lounge which has been called by the students the "quiet lounge" since Parkland's existence. From personal observation and general student opinion, the name "Quiet Lounge" is a misnomer. During the open times this lounge functions more as a playground used for flying paper airplanes, holding neck-a-thons, and daily bouts of horseplay and grab-...

There are areas in Parkland College restricted for socializing but none for study, with the exception of the LRC which serves, as it should, as a library. I have yet to see a college or university student union-center which did not have a portion set aside as a quiet area for study. I believe therefore that we are failing in the academic purposes of our college by not providing this necessary study area in our student center.

PROPOSAL: Reorganizing formal lounge guidelines to provide an adequate study area in the Student Center. This could be accomplished by the following steps: A) Post permanent signs and publicly announce the quiet hours; B) Having quiet hours from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. five days a week, except when movies are shown or the Formal Lounge is reserved for organized student activities; C) Making it the responsibility of the student government member on duty to assure quiet hour observance, although this is the responsibility of each and every student using this facility.

Parkland's Pig Sty

by Roger Vallance

At 10 p.m. each night the doors at the Student Center are locked and Marv, the janitor, and his crew of helpers try to reconstruct what was once something that resembled a Student Center.

Chairs slit, ashtrays overturned, bathrooms in shambles, coke and coffee cups strewn all around, peanut shells and popcorn all over, and a general slime on the floor consisting of coffee, pop, spaghetti sauce, and melted candy bars. One doubts if Hiroshima looked worse after the bomb.

Mature young adults is an often misused and overworked phrase. Therefore it won't be used in this article, basically because it obviously doesn't apply. Words like Pigs, Slobs, Children, and Cruds would probably be more applicable.

In an age where students are constantly crying about rights and opportunities to express themselves in decisions that affect them, there seems to be a contradiction between words and actions. How can the Parkland College Administration or anybody for that matter, believe or trust students to do a responsible job when they can't even throw a cup in the trash or flush their own toilets.

I realize that the same old song will ring out: "It's only a small minority that makes the mess." It's a well known fact, especially in a student environment where social contact is a motivating factor, that people will most times stop irresponsible acts if they are frowned upon by their peers.

It's the responsibility of each and every Parkland Student to maintain order in the Student Center. It's your gathering place and YOU have elected a Student Government to provide the executive end of any policies that need be instituted.

Perhaps it would be a good project for S.W.A.M.P. to clean their own linen, I.E. Student Center, before they try to clean others.

EDITORS NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles by Susan Betzold, Student Government Senator, Student Services, to keep the student body informed of activities and events relating to her position.

This year Student Services has many activities planned. We hope to do many things so that we can hit the interests of all of the students. November 17 we had a Coffee Hour with free donuts for the students in the Student Center. We plan to have many of these during the year.

Saturday, November 20 there will be free bowling and pool at Old Orchard Lanes from 7-9 p.m. This is for all Parkland Students and you must have your ID. We would like to have all of the students who plan to go sign the sheet outside the Student Government Office so we will have some idea of how many are coming.

Student Services along with IOC is fixing Thanksgiving baskets for the needy families from a list of names we get from the Family Service Office. We would like your help in this by bringing in food to the Student Activities Office. We would like to have goods such as: vegetables, instant potatoes, canned fruit, etc., brought in a week in advance. The perishables such as: bread, meat, eggs, etc., should be brought in three days in advance. We hope that all students will help in this project.

This year we are also having busses to the four away games at Danville, Mattoon, Kankakee, and Springfield. There will be a sign up sheet and we hope that there will be a lot of student interest.

Student Services is for you. We would like your support by attending our activities and if you have any suggestions about something you would like to see

DEAR EDITOR:

SUBJECT: Turning Formal Lounge into "Study Hall"

It has come to my attention that there have been complaints about excessive noise in the Formal Lounge by certain students. There also has been a proposal to turn said lounge into a Study Hall per say. This is a college, not a reform school and as such it is a flagrant violation of students rights to relax in relative comfort and serenity in the Formal Lounge. I spend a great deal of time in the Formal Lounge outside of class. I have received no complaints about too much noise from other students and I have heard no objections voiced about the atmosphere in said lounge. If there are complaints they should be directed toward people making the alleged disturbance. There is no need to subject students to unfair measures, in order to appease the alleged objections of a few over the majority of others. Other comments and feedback would be appreciated by other concerned students about the proposal to turn the Formal Lounge into an "armed guard" study hall.

"A Dream come true"

by Mary Jane Harshbarger & Roger Vallance

The Dream Museum began four years ago as the realization of the dream of U of I student Arthur Barrett who envisioned a place where people of the arts could exhibit their works and not be hassled by the commercial and financial hang-ups associated with a normal art gallery. In the beginning they exhibited U of I art projects and conducted classes in Photography and Childrens' Art.

In the Spring of 1970, under the direction of Rob Fisher (then an instructor at the U of I in sculpture and design) and his wife True, the Dream Museum was completely renovated. The walls were plastered, furniture was designed and added, a men's rest room was added, and an exhibit system was set up. A grand opening was held featuring a multimedia extravaganza including over fifty musicians. Estimated attendance was well over 500 and the shows lasted well through the night.

Since the Grand Opening the Dream Museum has offered a multitude of the different aspects of art. Buckminster Fuller, the famed architect and designer-inventor of the Geodetic Dome which is revolutionary in its field, gave a 2 1/2 hr. talk on "Design in Futuristic Study". Robert Newell sang a cycle of folk songs on the evolution of man using candlelight and multi-colored slides. A puppet theatre was featured once and Parkland College art students presented an edible art sculpture exhibit climaxing with the exhibitors and those in attendance eating the displays.

More recently a musical group called the Hound Dog Moses gave a concert. The group of individuals have declined the commercial aspect of music in order to find their own level. They featured a solid, down-to-earth sound. They achieved some rather unusual percussion affects by having everyone in the band play a different percussion instrument. They then added a three female voice choral accompaniment for unusually unique sound.

Three weeks ago a special Halloween stage show was presented. It featured the Howard Korn Mime Troupe, many of whose members studied mime theatre in New York. Two weeks ago Betsy Sullivan and a troupe of U of I dancers presented a ballet performance.

Rob and True Fisher run this unusual place. Rob, in addition to his duties at the Dream Museum, now free-lances in fields of Art which interest him. He is presently experimenting with light sculpture and has also been commissioned to do some work for Century 21, the new multi-purpose apartment building being built on campus. Rob and True have guided the Dream Museum into an oasis of the many medias of art. It is virtually the department store of art with practically every aspect of art either beening discussed, experimented with, exhibited, or performed.

Every Saturday between the hours of one and five the Dream Museum is opened to buyers, sellers, or just lookers. Rob and True encourage anyone interested to come and see the quality work that is being done in this area. Don't be afraid to bring your works. These people are the best possible source of critique sales, and exchange of ideas. Critique by peers if often rougher but, in the long run, more constructive and honest. These friendly and sincere people have created an atmosphere of ease which envelopes you from the time you walk in the door 'til you walk out.

Special events now planned for the future are on Nov. 20 with Steve Melshenken presenting folk music. (Steve wrote the Folk Opera "The Ship") and on Dec.

10 a mime troupe called the "Hard Core Mimers" will present a special stage show.

If you are interested in more information about the Dream Museum or wish to help out, (help is always welcomed) please free to call Rob or True at 356-3827 or Tom Swigert at 365-3145 or drop in any Saturday afternoon and rap.

"Play Misty For Me"

by Paul Idleman

Having grown tired of X-rated movies, I decided to give my mammary glands for plot and see a R-rated movie. My choice, a good one as it turned out, was Clint Eastwood's "Play Misty For Me" in which Eastwood both acts and directs.

The story centers on D. J. Garver, a No. 1 for KRML radio played by Eastwood and Evelyn Draper, played by Jessica Walters, as a psychotic masher in love with the voice on the radio. They meet by way of a phone request on Garver's show for, obviously, "Misty". Because of Garver's love for an X-love, Toby, he restricts Evelyn to a one nighter and a "don't call me, I'll call you", but Evelyn insists on smothering him with love and groceries to the point of nausea. The D. J. lays it on the line after all hints fail and Evelyn, with feelings hurt, slashes her wrists in his bathroom, forcing Garver to miss a full night alone with Toby, a rarity because of an overabundance of roommates. Slashing her wrists wasn't permanent enough so Evelyn decides to slash Dave's apartment and his witty housekeeper. This little display of temper puts her away for a while leaving Dave and Toby a clear shot at some beautiful love scenes.

Everything seems back to normal when Garver receives another request for "Misty" and this is where the action begins. A close cut for Dave's sleep, a dead policeman, a haircut for Toby, and a lot of close cuts for Dave prove that sometimes it pays to belt a woman.

Clint Eastwood's acting will probably never win him an Oscar as well his directing, but this movie is impressive for its naturalness. The dialogue between Dave and Toby gets a little dry but you soon forget as the tastefully executed blood and sex make up for it.

Jessica Walters is an excellent psychotic killer, forcing you to fearfully look at your date and never in the eyes.

As I said before, X-rated movies are boring. R-rated movies still give you (if you want) nudity, or naturalness, if you prefer, but tastefully, or if you prefer, natural. And most important, an R-rated movie is the last step on the rating ladder to give a plot in the movie that isn't absurd to the audience. So if you're ready to make the switch, may I suggest "Play Misty For Me" and get hooked on good movies again.

"Play Misty For Me" is now showing at the Virginia theater in downtown Champaign.

by Kevin Hopkins

Are you concerned about the air you breathe, the water you drink, and the land that you live on? If so, Parkland has an organization that is involved in combating these problems. This organization is S.W.A.M.P. (Students Working Against Man's Pollution). Last year the organization helped with the "Save Allerton Park" petition drive, sponsored an environmental teach-in with Rene Dubos, and helped with the glass, paper, and can drives during Earth Week in April.

This year the organization is divided up into three committees:

LEGISLATION-Keep informed on current state and national literature and bills, promote letter writing.

COMMUNICATIONS-Keep informed of current environmental literature, put out newsletter, work with Prospectus and Sprinkler, and work with other groups.

LOCAL ACTION-Organize and coordinate local environmental activities, investigate local pollution and help with campus paper recycling.

This year SWAMP will be very busy starting off with a paper recycling drive, which is in final planning stages right now. Also we hope to have the Mayors of Champaign and Urbana come and discuss what pollution laws we have here and what is being done to get more.

S.W.A.M.P. needs and wants your ideas, help and support if you are interested, please sign a membership card and return to Mr. Richard Blazier, Science Building, Parkland College, Champaign, Ill. 61820.

Counseling....A Full Service

by Roger Vallance

To counsel, as defined in the dictionary has a variety of meanings. "A mutual exchanging of ideas, opinions, discussion and deliberation is one definition. Some other are: 1) "to advise; 2) to devise a plan; 3) to make a resolution;" 4) to HELP. The archaic notation means wisdom or shrewd judgement.

To counsel, as defined by the counselors at Parkland College, embodies all of the meanings. The counselors are not here just to tell you how many credits you need to transfer into the Nasal Pathology department at Skunk Run University, they are here to help you in any way they can.

The dictionary's first definition is probably as good as any. The counselors want to know you. A mutual exchange of ideas and opinions is one of the best ways to solve problems, or at least clear the muddle of confusion or uncertainty. An early twentieth century philosopher by the name of Miquel de Unanumo once wrote: "Isolation is the worst possible counselor." How true! How many people suffer their worst misery by bottling-up what was probably a minor worry by not talking it out?

Parkland's counseling staff consists of ten highly trained, intelligent, sensitive, and very contemporary individuals. These are highly dedicated people who chose counseling as their profession because they are interested in people. They WANT to talk to you, they WANT to help you if they can, and they will treat meetings with you with almost the same professional confidence afforded a patient by his doctor or a client by his lawyer. Drop in and talk to your counselor some time just to visit. You may be surprised to find that they are real people not just transfer-credit robots ticking off requirements.

Mr. Jim Nelson, as Ass't. Dean For Counseling, heads and rambles the counseling staff. Members of the counseling staff last year are: Mrs. Judy Riggs, Mrs. Virlyn Leitner, Mr. Homer Foster, Mr. Jim Lyles, and Mr. Eddie Palmer. New additions to the staff this year are Mr. Dale Neaville, Dr. Brad Hastings, Mr. Bill Moore, and Mr. Dennis Felty.

Keep a look-out for Bill Wason's column, Meet Your Counselors. Each issue he'll have an in-depth interview with one of the counseling staff to provide you with an insight into these often forgotten people.

Meet Your Counselors

Meet Dr. Brad Hastings. He and his wife, Jonell, and their three children now make their residence in Champaign.

Originally from Indiana, Dr. Hastings received his Baccalaureate and Masters degrees from Ball State University. He continued his education at the U of I receiving his Doctorate in Psychological Counseling.

Dr. Hastings, upon graduation accepted a position as Ass't. Director of Teacher Education Services. He found after a while that this job didn't fill his needs and finally decided to join the Parkland staff.

I asked Dr. Hasting how he likes Parkland and it's students so far. He found it pleases but had a few suggestions to achieve more rapport between students and counselors. Dr. Hastings felt that a reorganization of the cafeteria area might help. With a more orderly and quieter cafeteria area the counselors and students could get together on a more common ground rather than the formalizing office. A lot of good counseling has been done over a cup of coffee.

Although he received his Doctorate in psychological counseling, Dr. Hastings explores the whole gammet of counseling and thoroughly enjoys all of it. Anything from marriage counseling to transfer counseling fall under his experience.

Dr. Hastings hopes to bring a closer and more fullfilling association with the students. This is his goal and his door is open to your suggestions and ideas. Drop in and see him sometime.

Wrestlers - Strongest Ever

With four returning lettermen and two high-school State standouts, Coach Don Grothe's wrestling team looks to be the best yet in Parkland's short sports history.

Returning lettermen this year are Charles Smith, Ford Mautz, Mike Corkran, and Chester Lewis. Lewis represented Parkland at the National Junior College meet in Worthington Minnesota last year by placing third in the region IV meet.

Two high school standouts grace the Parkland squad this year. John Johnson a freshman from Decatur-MacArthur High School comes to Parkland with the impressive credentials of a 25-3 Senior year record. This Heavyweight's performance is enhanced by the fact that out of 25 wins, 22 of them were by pins. From Rantoul High School Parkland is blessed with Wayne Angel, a 118 wt wrestler who placed 6th in the State meet last year.

Parkland's team with an 8-4 dual meet record last year and a squad rich with experience and talent promises to provide us with Championship performance.
