New Student Senate Now In Office

Reid, Heaton, Watkins Return, 7 More Elected

BY RICARDO VALESQUEZ

Three incumbents were returned to office and seven other candidates were elected for the first time in last week's student government elections. A turn-out of about 300 students turned in the greatest number of votes cast in the last two years of StuGo balloting, but that figure still represents little more than five per cent of current enrollment at Parkland.

Returned to office were Public Relations Senator Bobbie Reid, Student Services Senator Tanny Heaton and Secretary Karen Watkins. Reid who is entering his second term was a landslide victor over Ralph Yarbrough, an Urbana policeman enrolled in the Law Enforcement program.

Ms. Heaton, who has been successful in the Individual Events area of the debate team, won rather easily in her race with Dennis Cockrum. Karen Watkins, who returns as secretary after taking over last Spring when Connie Jo Huddleston resigned, had more trouble beating Kathy Brown, a loser by just eight votes.

Of the three Day Senators selected from a field of six, Terri Lane captured the most votes and was the third leading vote-getter over all. Only Reid and Berny Bryson, who ran unopposed for Evening Senator, tallied more votes than Ms. Lane. She is a nursing student and was the first person from that curriculum to run for a student government post.

Two Prospectus columnists, David Wiechman and Garry Miller, were the other two Day Senators chosen. Wiechman was appointed to the position last year when a hassle over Prospectus' handling of pre-election publicity nullified the Spring elections, but up until now has never been elected by the student body as a whole.

Finally, Sheila Saunders was a winner by the narrowest margin of all, two votes, for Athletics Senator, over Mark Lehman. Martin Rund was a distant third.

The new senators were sworn in by StuGo Vice President Tom McMullen immediately after the votes were tabulated by the college computer. The Senate now faces a legislative agenda that includes such proposals as the creation of a Day Please turn to Page 3

New Nursing Methods Seminar Set for Oct. 9

Roger H. Garrison, Director of Special Programs, Westbrook College and noted author in the field of community college instruction, will be visiting with the Parkland College faculty on campus Thursday and Friday, Oct. 3 and 4. A series of workshops and seminars have been planned. Topics to be discussed on Thursday include: "How Do You Teach Ideas?", "How Do You Provide Time For Self-renewal?", "Teaching Better Methods of Self-renewal", "Course Pacing", and "Individualized Instruction." On Friday, Professor Garrison will meet with the Communications Divisions staff.

Professor Garrison is founder-director of the annual national conference on The Nature and Problems of Two-Year College Teaching and the founder-director of the annual National Seminar for Master Teachers.

Bookstore Defended

BY MONICA LUCAS

The Parkland Bookstore, recently under attack for charging too much money for books, has been defended by the bookstore's manager, Ms. Leah Wightman, and Don Moran, an assistant business manager for the college.

Both contend that the bookstore is not a profit-making enterprise, and that it operates on a break-even basis. The bookstore is self-supporting, paying the salaries of two full-time and several part-time employees, but beyond that there is not that much money being made. What profits there are above overhead, are contributed to a fund from which financial aids are handed out.

Ms. Wightman says that the books sell at the publisher's list price, and that there is no mark-up on the part of the college. As far as the alternative plans for either renting the books or buying them back from students, she felt the former was impractical, and that the latter was under consideration.

Moran repeated Ms. Wightman's claim that the bookstore is a "break even operation" and also suggested that a check of the campus bookstores would show that their prices and Parkland's are comparable.

Folletts, one of the stores that Mr. Moran was talking about, gives a 4% discount on their books to U-I students. For instance, Aviation Weather sold for $4.95 at the bookstore, sells for $4.79 at Folletts. Similarly, Playreader's Repertory sells for $7.63 at Folletts as compared to $7.95 here. Folletts also sells used books, however.

Mr. Moran talked about this possibility and said that it was currently being considered. If the plan were to come into effect, the bookstore would buy the books back at the end of the quarter, or when the student was finished with it. The used book would of course cost less than a new one would. Ideally, books would be available to students at lower prices with no loss of revenue to the bookstore.

These facts may or may not convince people that the bookstore is not a rip-off as has been charged. They do, however, present the view of the bookstore staff and management in the recent controversy. It is obvious, however, that the bookstore can't charge less than they already do for new books at any rate without operating at a deficit.

New Students' Rights Legislation In Effect

A federal law concerning students' rights, and the privacy of their records and files, goes into effect today.

Basically, the law requires that students be informed of any entries made in his or her records, and places some restrictions on who the files can be revealed to without the written consent of the student.

Public Law 93-380 also requires that all colleges adopt the necessary policies in accordance with the new legislation. At Parkland, in compliance with the rules set forth, the following guidelines have been instituted:

1. When a member of the faculty or staff of Parkland College handles records or files directly related to a student, he or she is required to inform the student of this fact so that the student has an opportunity to examine the contents of such records and files within a reasonable period of time.
2. Without the written consent of the student, Parkland College will not permit the release of personally identifiable records or files to any one except the following: other school officials, to include teachers within the educational agency who have a legitimate educational interest; officials of other schools where a student's files are necessary for review prior to admission; authorized representatives of the Comptroller General of the US, and certain authorized State educational authorities under restricted conditions; in connection with a student's application for financial aid.

3. The practice of posting test or course grades at or near faculty offices or classrooms for the students information will not be permitted unless prior consent in writing has been received. This practice extends to the listing of said grades by SSN, name or any other means which would permit id-

Debate Tryouts

Students interested in competing on the Parkland College Individual Events Team this year should contact coach Dave Jones and attend a meeting in Jones' office, C224, Tuesday, Oct. 1, at 11 a.m.

Jones has announced that the IE team's first competition will be at the end of October.

Further information may be obtained by calling Jones at 351-2346 or stopping by his office.

Start Gym Construction, Plan Use By Fall '75

BY ROGER KOWALSKI

The extremely large hole at the south end of the campus is not a freak of nature. It is the beginning of Parkland's new physical education building. The much needed building has been freed from the red tape and financing problems and is now under construction.

This is Phase III of Parkland's "master plan" which bears some explaining.

Phase I began in 1972 when the contractors were just starting to work on the new campus. This phase included the construction and completion of the Life Science, Business, Math and Communications buildings. All that was standing were the four separate buildings that constitute the skeleton or core of Parkland.

Phase II was the connection of the four buildings of the first phase. Also included in Phase II was the construction of the automobile workshop, classroom and repair farm connected to the Math building.

Phase II also consisted of the main lobby, snack area, information center and student activity offices. All of these, plus the upstairs library, connect everything together making the campus entirely under one roof, accessible from the bottom floor.

Phase III is the present, and the future. The PE building will provide a place for some sort of mass gathering, something that is very difficult to do in the present student center. The estimated completion of Phase III is November, 1975, at the outset of the basketball season and should prove to be a boost in the morale of all sports.

The structure will seat 1,800 spectators and is to be 39,000 square feet in size. The cost of the building will be $2,103,543. It will provide facilities for cheerleading classes, and some theatrical work, along with housing of the track and basketball teams. The new building

Nursing Sponsors Leukemia Workshop

The Parkland College Nursing Program, along with the American Cancer Society, will be sponsoring two Leukemia Workshops to be held on Thursday, Oct. 17 from 8 to 12 and 1 to 5 p.m.

These workshops will be directed by Dr. John Schmale, a member of the Parkland College Nursing Advisory Committee. Along with Dr. Schmale, two of Parkland's Nursing faculty will be participating in the workshops. They are Sue Weldtekamp, a first year instructor, and Maureen Ihrig, a member of Parkland's Continuing Education Faculty.

Also participating will be Dr. Gregg Helegesen, a psychologist from Carle Clinic, Maize Nussbaum, a member of God's Clomms (which is a membership of people with blood diseases or tumors which are being treated), Jan Shepardson, a registered nurse and a member of Parkland's Continuing Education faculty and Dr. Howard Neucks, who will speak on the services of the American Cancer Society.

Everyone is invited to attend either session.

As if the food sold in the vending machines wasn't bad enough, the Canteen Vending Co. the people that bring you those tasty little morsels have now taken the college center under siege, this time live and in odorous color.

Working under the guise of the "snack bar," Canteen, with the support of the college has seen fit to give us a first hand look at how the soybean burgers you have enjoyed so much out of their machines, are cooked. The result is that for a dollar or so you can buy what may or may not be a hamburger, and fries that are guaranteed to stick to the roof of your mouth, if not to your ribs. All while you stand, sometimes for lengthy periods of time, in anxious anticipation of the mouth-watering delight.

The snack bar is definitely a rip-off, which wouldn't be so bad if the food was decent.

It may be argued that those who find the snack bar food less than appetizing can go to one of the many other fast-food joints that have sprung up in the wake of the construction of this building. Our rebuttal to this question is in two parts.

The first is that many students may not have enough time to go somewhere else to eat between the onset of their munchies, and the beginning of their next class. The second and probably more valid argument is, if the college sees fit to have some sort of solid food available on campus, then why in the hell does it have to be inedible?

We're sure that the person who pushed for the creation of the snack bar, had in mind that the food being served by real live people would, psychologically at least, be more satisfying than having the service done by a machine, but it appears that someone neglected to tell the canteen people that. It is reported by some observers in that they have been treated kinder by the machines than by some of the people working the counter. And it is every bit as hard to get your change out of them.

We are in favor of finding a caterer or perhaps some lonely mother somewhere who could do a better job preparing the food, never mind the prices and the service. First things first.

bookstore alternatives

There have been many promises made by the candidates for student government who are going to do something about bookstore prices, which all agree are outrageous. We hope that at some future date, the senators will be able to bring some sort of change.

In the meantime, the student body, with a measure of help from the faculty, can use some gentle persuasion of its own, in the form of a boycott of all materials sold in the bookstore, especially books.

The problem is that the managers of the store, which is owned and operated by the college, contend that little or no profit is made off the books. If this is indeed so, then the likelihood of a cutback in prices is slim.

However, there have been a number of other ideas that, until this point, have gotten pooh-poohed by the bookstore staff.

One is the proposal that the books be rented quarter-by-quarter at perhaps one-third the price of the book. By simple mathematics, the price the bookstore would originally have charged for the book would be made up by the end of three semesters. If the book is still usable, an even greater profit could be achieved the next year. It is the bookstore's contention however, that if people don't have to buy the books, they would commit violent and perverted acts upon them, making them undesirable for a second lease. Paranoia strikes deep when money is involved.

It seems however, that vandalism could easily be discouraged by making the offender pay the entire cost of the book if it was in good shape when he or she got it, but wasn't when he/she returned it.

The second proposal is one that has received at least tacit approval but as yet no positive action. Here, the books would be bought back by the bookstore when the original purchasers were finished with them. The new books would be sold at cost or even less and the ensuing sales would be at a reduced rate according to depreciation of the book. These subsequent sales would be pure profit for the bookstore if that is their major concern, and should cut back students' costs considerably.

Ironically, the veteran's bookstore has been buying used books, and selling them back for quite a while, but there is so little response, that the students who do use the vet's store, or have at least tried, have had a difficult time finding the books they need for their classes.

While the boycott is in progress we urge every student

To The Editor:

In lieu of the Board of Trustees of Parkland College adopting the new budget for the 1974-75 school year, I feel that it is the appropriate time to introduce a sore spot in the Ceramics department.

Upon entering ceramics class last week I was overcome with a violent fit of coughing and smarting eyes. Upon further investigation and interview I discovered that the room is not properly ventilated. The fumes and dust occur not only as a result of sulfur dioxide (a toxic compound) fumes that are emitted upon firing of the kilns but also from many other sources throughout the ceramics lab.

An air floating method is used for the mixture of clay which results in an extreme density of particles that are shifted about the rooms. Valuable fumes from glazes are evident when works are being fired for completion. Also, when I first attended class I became excited at the possibility of being able to learn to use new equipment, particularly the spray boxes. To my dismay I have been informed that they are inoperable due to an inadequate vent system. (To any who were told that a gravity principle would be used and no fans would be necessary in the boxes had better talk to old Newton, last time I heard gravitational forces move downward, in this case—all fumes come into the room!!)

I realize that such inadequacies in structural aspects of the school cannot be easily nor economically corrected but this problem also existed last year. I can only hope that some direction is indicated to correct these inadequacies before an even more serious problem may develop. It is going to be particularly hard, by the way, to throw a pot in a coat, muffler and gloves because the outside door has to be left open to ventilate the room.

To the Editor:

It has come to our attention that all food prices on this campus will be raised next month—from 10¢ to 20¢ and from 15¢ to 20¢. Why are the prices going up? What is being done with this money? The money is said to go to scholarships for students—how many scholarships are given out? Who are they given to? We are writing this—asking these questions—on behalf of many, many students who have expressed their concern to us and the other senators. Several of us feel that maybe student activity fees should start going directly to the students. We would appreciate any feedback and suggestions. Contact a student government member.

The Short Circuit

By David Wiechman

A recent special report by CBS on the state of the economy concluded as did my economist teacher, that the only thing that economists know is that no one knows anything about how the national economy will operate. Since ignorance is the tie that binds all good economists, I as a budding economist (complete with training bra) felt that I might as well do my fair share of mudding up the waters.

It would seem the economy which is in a recession, (a growth recession if nothing else) finds itself plunging toward a possible depression. But as of now, America still remains on fairly stable grounds. Although inflation will probably be running at between 9-11% this year, the U. S. still has the lowest inflation rate of the western world outside of West Germany.

employment remains high and nobody, is really suffering.

First, one must turn to the causes of our problems. The primary factor is that for the last 40 years we have had too much prosperity. As our standard of living increased we began to demand more and more goods. But we run head long into the economic reality that our resources are limited.

Then the Vietnam war with its gun and butter destroyed all illusion of a balanced federal budget. The unbalanced budget and the huge credit release of 1972 opened up the cage and released the tiger of uncontrollable demand.

In the past, economists turned to a recession to crush inflation. But now the businesses are drawing on their huge inventories and

The Kaleidoscope

By Gary Miller

Many young Americans left this nation during the period of the Vietnam war to avoid risking their lives in service to this country. These people may now re-enter entry into the United States by a conditional amnesty program (clemency) initiated by President Ford. As strange as it may seem, many Americans and draft evaders will not accept any conditional amnesty program, they will only accept unconditional amnesty.

One of the main objections to the conditional amnesty is that it would be an implication of guilt. Most draft evaders do not consider themselves criminals. They feel since they are not criminals they should not have to re-earn entry into the United States, that is a form of punishment. Is it a crime not to want to die?

Also, many feel they have already suffered by being forced to live in exile. Some feel that draft evaders should be given a hero's welcome back home. After all, they defied the society to stand up for their personal morals and beliefs, true qualities of a hero.

For most draft evaders and many other Americans the Vietnam war was a complete waste of money, lives, and dignity. The war was fought for the interest of a few people, and the South Vietnamese people, being poor and uneducated, would have been better off under a communist government. For these reasons many Americans left this country. But many other Americans, some with these same beliefs, risked their lives serving our nation in South Vietnam.

The way any civilization or society functions and prospers is by a standard set of rules which is expected to be obeyed by all the members of the society. If certain members of the society do not obey the rules that have been set by that society, they are punished. If they do not like the society in which they are living they can leave, or try to change it. If they choose the latter, they must suffer the results if they do not succeed. As members of this society we all must do certain things we do not like, such as: pay taxes, and obey all the laws.

I feel if our country calls upon us for military service it is our duty to our country, like paying taxes, to go and serve. The draft dodgers may have been morally right to leave our nation if they felt the war was unjust, and they had every right in the world to do so. But if they wanted to stay Americans, it was their duty as Americans to serve their country or pay their debt for not obeying the law. So, unconditional amnesty is out of the question, and President Ford's plan is the only fair way to cope with this problem.

essay women in advertising

BY SUE DONLEY

"Clad in a flowered bikini, skinny, tanned a golden brown, she sways seductively around her new 1975 sport coupe."

This scene is likely to be seen on all your TV sets, or on billboards now that the new line of cars has arrived.

Women have long been exploited as the means to higher sales and profits for over 50% of America's manufacturers. Advertising agencies have utilized the "virtues of womanhood" to sell products ranging from men's shaving cream to pet food.

To a newcomer to American society, it must appear that women of today, whether they call themselves liberated or not, are either sexy, stupid, a jack - of - all - trades, or a combination of any number of assets beneficial to society, men in particular.

A woman can be seen battling the problems of choosing a face soap to prevent wrinkles (ever notice the model looks about 10 years younger than what she claims to be in the beginning?), the proper detergent for the wash or coffee for her husband. If every woman is as busy as the commercials portray her to be, she must exist without sleep. Don't the men in society today know how to do anything?

At mid-century it was decided that women were yearning for evidence that they were still basically feminine; and men were yearning for evidence that they were still indisputably and virulently masculine. While sex is soft-pedaled at times, it is used as a simple eye stopper in most cases. Its use is not only insulting to a woman's intelligence, but to her face and body as well.

Someone noticed a few years ago that a "pretty face" wasn't the only face that sold products. Now the trend is running to homely women. This may be fine for some but to me that is again treading on dangerous ground, namely that of saying that you can be a beautiful woman if this product is used.

The most dramatic effect of the use of women in ads is that other women are actually believing what is being fed to them through the various media. Could it be that the feminine intelligence is not really being degraded?

In the words of that famous cigarette commercial "You've come a long way, baby." I think it's time that women took a good look at what is selling the products on TV rather than running to the store to buy the product.

will be equipped with a portable stage, for use by the drama department, and by certain convocation events.

The new building will be a two-leveled structure containing six office rooms, two coaching rooms, one conference classroom and another lab classroom along with the main attraction, a gymnasium, a locker shower and an exercise room.

Jim Glasa, director of structural planning, states that although this new PE building, in its completion, will not be connected with the other structures (Phase I and Phase II), Parkland's expansion in the future will connect them.

Phases IV and V, which may or may not receive adequate financing, include plans for a planetarium, a cafeteria, another wing for the social science department, which now shares space with Communications, a "Little Theatre" and an administration building.

In addition, the City of Champaign has planned Pick - Dodds Park, which will if completed, connect the school with Mattis Avnue, via a curved tree lined path through what is now a cornfield. Lack of funds is also holding up this venture.

Parkland still has a lot of growing to do, and is really only perhaps 2/3 complete. However, barring labor disputes and inclement weather, the crater that looms in the north parking lot will be $2 million of gymnasium by this time next year.

who has completed or dropped a course, to sell their used book to the vets and to buy any other books they may need from them, whenever possible. We further ask, just as an act of support for the boycott, that students also refrain from buying incidentals such as pens, paper, and notebooks from the bookstore until the winter quarter begins and the full impact of the boycott can be felt.

Finally, and perhaps most important, we urge instructors to continue using the textbooks they presently do, and not to order new ones until we get some satisfaction. We realize that many books, especially in the sciences, are dated soon after they are printed, but it is essential to the boycott that textbooks be available through other sources besides the bookstore. This would not be possible in the case of books never before used in a course.

If you are really as upset about bookstore prices as you pretend to be, then a boycott is the most effective means we have to sway the college to a fair resolution of the problem, while negotiations are going on. Unless it's an emergency don't even buy a Bic pen from the joint. And for sure don't buy books!

Hollenbach Passes Illini To Victory

BY WILLIE BROWNLEE

A crowd of 40,594 packed into Memorial Stadium Saturday afternoon to watch Bob Blackman's troops come from behind in the final minute of play to avoid being upset by Washington State 21-19.

The Illini, after a hectic first half, came in the second half playing inspired football. The Illini started the game by losing two fumbles in their first three series of play, had to depend on the throwing arm of quarterback Jeff Hollenbach to pull them out of the fire with only 34 seconds remaining in the game.

The game winning play came after Washington State's quarterback Chuck Peck and fullback Andrew "A Train" Jones put on an 80 yard drive in 12 ground plays to go ahead 19-14 with 3 minutes remaining after State's quarterback Peck went in from the 1st.

Chubby Phillips received the ensuing kickoff and returned it 45 yards to the 43 yard line of WSU. At that point, Kopatz and Hollenbach sharing the duties of QB, Hollenbach's efforts were stymied by two penalties, two near fatal fumbles, a 6 yard loss and three straight incompletions.

Hollenbach, showing great poise, was able to fire the strike when he needed it, a 22 yard touchdown pass to Junior Jeff Chrstal just one play after a short touchdown reception by tight end Joe Smalzer was nullified for holding. But Hollenbach determined not to give up the game, passed to Chrystal to keep the Illini unbeaten in their first three outings. The Illini also managed to live up to its national rankings but it wasn't as easy as the oddsmakers had predicted. The Illini were ranked 12th by the Football News, 16th by the AP poll and 19th by the UPI, going in the game.

Washington State jumped out on top with a 22 yard field goal by Danilo after U of I's Steve Greene fumbled inside his own 15 yard line.

Illinois sought to take charge late in the first quarter when Tracy Campbell led a blistering drive preceded by a 17 yard punt return to midfield by All-American candidate Mike Gow. Campbell breaking from the five, squirting down to the two, lost the ball and WSU safety Mike Carter picked it up in the end zone.

Thus inspired by great all around defense, the Cougars mixed their plays on offense with quick passes to tight end Carl Barschig for 23 yards and split end Dennis Pearson for 16. "A Train" Jones also had consecutive 8 yard runs before Peck took it in from the one.

At that point QB Jim Kopatz entered the game only to have the misfortune of fumbling away the center snap on the fourth play. Illinois failed to generate anything resembling a score through the first half of play.

The Illini did come out in the third period of play with a touchdown march of 79 yards beginning with a near fumble of the opening kickoff plus a 13 yard loss on a wide pitch to Phillips and the disappointing injury to Steve Greene who will be out for the year due to knee surgery. Kopatz did complete an important pass to Smalzer for 9 yards and then the junior from Springfield Lanphier ran six more yards on a fourth down play to the Washington State 18 yard line. State, showing a good defense couldn't stop the Illini in seven plays with the score coming on a quarterback option with Kopatz pitching to Fuzzy Johnson at the one going for the score. Beaver kicked the extra point and the Illini trailed only 13-7.

The next Illini drive showed promise but died when Kopatz's pitch to Phillips went errant on the 40 yard line and Beavers' attempt at a field goal was short.

The Illini began the fourth period capitalizing on the wind with Tracy Campbell firing a halfback option pass to a diving Jeff Chrystal on the Washington State's 30 yard line. Phillips and Schultz led the running attack from there but failed to pick up the necessary yardage for a first down. Coach Bob Blackman chose to pass up a field goal attempt on fourth and four, and Kopatz made a desperation attempt and dove into the end zone for the score. Beavers' kick was good and the Illini held a brief 14-13 lead. Washington State came back to score later in the fourth and final period to set the stage for Hollenbach's and Chrystal's late heroics.

Boilermakers Upset Fighting Irish 31-20

Number 2 ranked Notre Dame was upset by a fired up Purdue Boilermakers in South Bend, 31-20. Purdue capitalized on two pass interceptions and a fumble, converting each into a touchdown.

The Boilermakers were a 28-point underdog going into the game but this seems to be the year of upsets for national ranked teams. It was Purdue's first win of the season in three games and the first loss for the Irish in 13 games.

Ron Goodman fumbled and Purdue's Rick Oliver fell on it on the Irish 32 yard line. Purdue Quarterback Mike Terrizzi connected with Ron Burton for 27 yards and a first down inside the Irish 5 yard line. Terrizzi finally scored on a quarterback roll out going in from the 2.

Purdue scored its second TD on a 52 yard touchdown by fullback Pete Gross. Tom Clemmets found himself in a hole early in the first period and tried to hit his number one receiver Pete Demerley but Bob Mannelle stepped in front and rambled 21 yards for the score. Placekicker Steve Schmidt kicked a record breaking field goal 47 yards to give Purdue a 24-0 first period lead.

Wayne Bullock scored the first of his two touchdowns in the second quarter from 1 yard out climaxing an 80 yard drive that took 12 plays.

Notre Dame moved within 10 points of Purdue after Purdue's punter Mark Vitali dropped the snap from center and gave the Irish possession on the Purdue 26. Five plays later Bullock went over from the 1 and after three quarters of play Purdue led 24-14.

Mike Northington scored from six yards out on a pitch out to give the Boilermakers a 31-14 lead.

Notre Dame's quarterback Tom Clemmets connected late in the fourth period with Pete Demmerly on a 27 yard pass, with a two point conversion failing. Demmerly's touchdown came with less than 5 minutes to play. Purdue ran out the clock to end the longest current winning streak of Notre Dame at 13 games.

Jock Talk

By Glenn Bonaker

As the baseball season draws to a close, divisional races in both the American League East, and the National League East are still up for grabs.

The American League East finds the Baltimore Orioles and the New York Yankees battling it out. Both teams are shuttling in and out of first place, neither taking a solid hold.

A title for the Yankees would be a first in 10 years.

Earlier this year it appeared the Boston Red Sox had the best chance in the East. The Red Sox held a commanding 7 1/2 game lead shortly before the All-Star Game in Pittsburgh. The loss of All-Star Catcher Carlton Fisk was virtually the deciding factor in the down fall of Boston. Fisk has been lost for the entire year.

Baltimore and New York got hot, and the rest is history. Boston is now 6 games out.

Baltimore seems to have the edge in pitching, and the Yankees are red hot with the bats. Interesting things may still develop. With the Orioles!!!

Charlie O'Finley's Oakland A's lead the Texas Rangers and should have little trouble winning their division and the American League Championship, over New York or Baltimore.

Looking closer to home, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Pittsburgh Pirates are also in one of the tightest pennant races in history. St. Louis struggled to hold on to their slim 1/2 game lead over Pittsburgh by winning the third game of a three game series 13-12. The Pirates won the first two 7-3 and 1-0. The Cards and Pirates will meet this week in Pittsburgh to determine the league championship. The Cards must first win all 3 games against Chicago, and at least 1 in the three games in Pittsburgh to take the title.

The Los Angeles Dodgers finally have captured the National League West over Cincinnati. The Dodgers have been brides maids to the Red to long.

In the past baseball fans of the Dodgers knew when fall had begun. All they had to do was pick up the paper and look at the baseball standings. If the Dodgers were not in first they knew their summer was over and they could watch the Reds in the play-offs and get ready to watch the Rams. This year things have changed with the Dodgers along with the seasons. Los Angeles seems to have the best chance at capturing their first World Series since the days of Sandy Kofax and Don Drysdale.

The Dodgers with a strong bench and great pitching staff, seem to be the team to bet on in October. LA should have little trouble with St. Louis or Pittsburgh in the play-offs and will beat their American League foe.

Oakland will not capture their third consecutive world championship. I predict the Dodgers will take the series in 5 games against Oakland. If by chance the A's fall to make it to the world Series against the Dodgers that will make it only a little easier for LA to sweep the series in four games. "HAPPINESS IS NOT ONLY THE RAMS BUT THE DODGERS AS WELL."

Good Vibes To tell the truth

Sale

Affidavit

Good Vibes' "To tell the truth" sale just might dispel some of the confusion bothering hi-fi shoppers these days. Also, it will give you a chance to get a more than fair price on some fine stereo components.

THE TRUTH ABOUT BARGAINS

One approach to finding a bargain is to choose the biggest discount from list price. This is valid if you can't hear the difference between components. However, if you can, you'll soon realize that the old saying, "You get what you pay for," doesn't always ring true. For example, you may like the sound of a less expensive speaker more than that of a costlier one. This is particularly true of "private label" or inferior merchandise with inflated list prices. So, before you decide on a bargain check with your ears as well as your bank account.

THE TRUTH ABOUT SPEAKER DEMONSTRATIONS

1. Equalized volume levels are essential. Have the salesman equalize the speakers to your satisfaction. Also, the tone controls should be set "flat."
2. Adjacent placement is helpful. Long wires allow speakers to be moved around.
3. Different kinds of music are revealing. Best of all, bring your own.

THE TRUTH ABOUT TAPE DECK DEMONSTRATIONS

Have the salesman make a recording and play it back simultaneously with the record. At Good Vibes you can hear the only A-B tape deck comparison in town.

THE TRUTH ABOUT SERVICE DEPARTMENTS

Talent is the key factor. It takes an efficient technician to fix a component correctly the first time. Our low recall rate allows us to guarantee our out-of-warranty work. Most of our repairs take less than one week, rather than the several weeks it takes a chain store to send your equipment to Chicago.

WHAT IS A QUALITY TRANSACTION?

A quality transaction necessitates a great deal of honesty and customer service before, during, and after the sale. We don't indulge in deceptive advertising or selling techniques; we know that sooner or later the truth will be apparent. We competitively promote quality name brand components in all price ranges. Our market strength and large inventories exceed claims of "national buying power." We are ten full time professionals who are young and independent. Service is our way of doing business. Therefore, we feel that we are more sympathetic and responsive to your needs than any other store in town.

A Column By And For Women

BY "J"

The problems encountered by women who live alone are astronomical. If the woman is married (a mistake in the first place), then these problems are compounded.

Since I am a married woman who spends the majority of her time alone, I will expound on the problems of being married and single at the same time.

The first problem to be encountered is just plain loneliness. When a woman who is used to having her man around is forced to start spending the majority of her time in solitude, she can become extremely lonely. One of the main reasons for this is the societal attitude towards married women.

Society thinks nothing of a lonely single woman frequently bars or other such . . . places. They rationalize that she is seeking some friendly male companionship or some other such nonsense (where else is she going to meet the man of her dreams who will take her out of these vulgar places and put her into nice secure surroundings?)

However, when a married woman is seen frequenting such places she is (a) cheating on her husband (b) a slut; (c) has no gratitude for her husband who is only gone because he wants to provide her with a nice home; (d) a terrible mother (if she has kids), and the list can go on and on. Fortunately, I can't think of all the things that go on in perverted minds. What these people don't stop to think about is that married women get just as lonely as single women and need male companionship just as much as their free counterparts.

The myth that all a woman needs to keep her happy is a home, a husband, and lots of kids is pure crap. For one thing, there is not enough work in a house to keep even the slowest woman busy all day, beyond the fact that housework is just about the most boring and thankless job on earth. Secondly, having a husband does not automatically insure happiness. What happiness can be derived from a husband who is a drunk, who can never hold a job long enough to get a paycheck, who cheats on her but won't give her the same freedom, who beats her to obtain some perverted pleasure (probably making him feel more powerful knowing that he can overpower his woman) or who is never home when she needs him?

No too awful much that I know of. As for kids . . . There is much fun to be derived from having a houseful of screaming, yelling kids who are never satisfied with anything that is given to them. NOW HOW THE HELL IS A WOMAN SUPPOSED TO BE HAPPY WITH ALL THAT?

Another problem encountered by the single married woman is that of the sexual nature. It is a well known fact that women have very strong sexual urges. The problem arises when, after a length period of time of having intercourse on a fairly regular basis, the woman is forced to go for extended periods of time without any outlet for her desires. Believe me, there aren't too many places for a married woman to go to alleviate this problem. About the only alternative she has is to get involved in a lengthy affair with some willing man, which in itself creates problems. Life would be so much simpler if a woman could visit houses of ill-repute established by men, just as men visit houses of ill-repute established by women.

Still another problem centers around just what a woman can do to fill up all of the lonely hours that she must endure. Luckily, I am in school, so that helps take care of a large part of my "free time". However, for the woman who has no such activity to fall back on, what is there to do? She can't spend all of her time shopping for several obvious reasons, one of which is financial. She could go to the movies; but what fun is there in going alone, especially when practically all of the movies now showing are those that tend to have a risqué nature (bringing up the problem mentioned in the preceding paragraph) anyway, and even if they don't, the audiences do.

Now, back to the woman who has children. She has to have some kind of a release from her houseful of "sweet" kids. Here I must say that Parkland is trying to do its part in helping out. We have classes for all women, scheduled at just about any time a woman could want to come.

Ah yes, then there is the woman who has a job. About the only thing I can say for her is: Congratulations. If she has a good job that she enjoys, then she has it made.

One big problem that I have encountered is having to get used to having my husband home again after he has been gone for three weeks (during which time I have gotten myself involved in so many things that I don't have time to be with him). This may not seem like it would be any kind of a problem at all, but believe me, it is.

My advice for those of you who have or are having these problems is to do whatever you have to do in order to avoid them, and forget about what is "right" and "wrong", according to society. Of course, no one, not even me, expects you to do anything that goes against your morals. The only point I am trying to make is, that if you are being stopped from doing something on your own because you are afraid of what the neighbors will think, or what your friends or family will think, go ahead and do it. You might enjoy yourself, and after all, you are the most important person.

SHORT CIRCUIT

Businesses are raising their prices much higher and faster than would be necessary merely to meet their rising costs. All they are doing is raising their profits. This passes from company to company in a vicious cycle.

A bigger villain is the labor unions. Inflation is 10% so they demand 20% or more in pay raises. If inflation is a problem, the best way to solve the problem is not to keep demanding higher pay raises for the rest of our lives but rather to suffer a little and stop the inflation dead. After all these years of increasing standard of living we can easily survive not having our SOL increasing or even a decline.

Despite the fact that labor unions are threatening to bring down the economy, the government can't stop them because the unions own too many Democratic Congressmen. What the labor bosses should realize is that if they keep demanding raises they are going to price themselves right out of the market. If wages are too high, the businesses will just let them go or go bankrupt.

Another factor, but less important than many people think is the high priced Arab oil. This is a problem since we can't run without it and we have no way of controlling its' prices. . . But it's not the root of the problem since it is only a small part of the general money flow. America, more than any country can control its economic destiny since it has in its border most anything it needs.

This simple outline does not begin to take into account the flow of money, bank credit, balance of payments or other such details of our modern economy.

After a simple explanation comes the even simpler plan to save the world.

The first thing needed would be for the government to re-establish the Cost of Living Council which would monitor wages and prices. If someone got out of line they would ask the American people, by way of the media, to boycott the company in question.

If unions are the culprits, then the government should allow the companies to break up the strike with strike-breakers. And people on strike should not be allowed to collect unemployment benefits.

The government should balance its budget by cutting out useless social programs and welfare. Washington should not try to intervene into the economy other than using its powers of persuasion.

The people in general, should tighten their belts. Refuse to buy overpriced goods and buy inexpensive goods.

As for the Arabs, I'm tempted to say invade, but in reality all we can do is to buy less from them and produce more energy here at home.

In conclusion, if everyone plays it cool and does his part, this recession can have a happy ending. But next time, let's not have any big booms like we did during the 60's and the 70's. Slow and easy is best.

STUDENT RIGHTS

entification of the student.

Though not ideal, the guidelines give the students rights they have been denied before. For example, during the course of an educational career, a student is given a series of IQ tests, but it has long been a policy that he or she is not allowed to see the results of those tests.

Materials, sometimes damaging on the job market, could be dispensed to prospective employers without the student's knowledge or consent.

Not only will this practice no longer be permitted, but in the case of unfavorable entries, the student will be informed both of the instructor's comment and the identity of same.

It remains to be seen what a reasonable period of time is in informing the student that his records are being handled. Also unclear in the guidelines is whose judgement will be used in determining who has a legitimate reason for seeing the files.

Parkland Yearbook Under Revision

Parkland has cancelled its annual yearbook, and is now searching for some alternative publication. Last year, the Publications Board met and decided to drop the name, "Conveniamus". The went further to recommend that the "new" publication be a pictorial approach, being both chronological in design and divided into sections to fit the modular campus design. Moreover, it was suggested that this publication be distributed free of charge to the students, with the cost being picked up by the college funds or student activities fees. If there is a charge, the college would be expected to purchase the issues they might use for public relations or otherwise.

Last week, the Publications Board met on Tuesday and further discussed the possible alternative yearbook. It was suggested that this "new" yearbook take the form of a tabloid or magazine and be distributed once a quarter. It would be a candid pictorial of the past quarter's events. I put up the suggestion that the Prospectus has the facilities for producing some kind of quarterly supplement in the form of a pictorial. With the help of some other people, it would be very feasible to record the events of each quarter in an advertising-free publication.

Anyway, the ideas and concepts are still floating up in the air, nothing is really definite. If there is anybody out in that vast wasteland that does have some idea or concept and is willing to share it, then he/she should contact: Ed Cade in C-131, or just drop by the Prospectus office (if you know where that is) head towards Student Activities. If there is sufficient student interest in this type of publication then there is no reason why it should not become a reality, if the students don't really care to see this kind of thing, then obviously it will not occur.

Fast Freddy Won By Kurtz

Kurtz was the unchallenged champion among the largest number of entrants in the short history of the contest as he correctly selected the winners in eight of the week's 10 college games.

Tom Sloan, Gary Scheets, and instructors Dan Anderson and Chuck Newman shared the runnerup slot. Each picked seven winners.

As could be expected, no one was able to foresee Miami of Ohio's 7-7 tie of one-time Big Ten power Purdue, but Oklahoma State's stunning and seemingly easy upset of highly regarded Arkansas, 26-7, also confused everyone.

Only Dave Petry and Bob Cylkowski chose the Cowboys over the Razorbacks, who surprised the experts last week by upsetting top-ranked Southern California.

Few entrants had sufficient confidence in the University of Illinois to pick the Illini over Stanford, 41-7. Scores of the other games were as follows:

Illinois State 37, Western Illinois 20; Arizona 35, Indiana 20; Kansas State 17, Wichita State 8; Pittsburgh 27, Georgia Tech 17; Michigan 31,

WHO: ANYONE: Beginners, students, non-students.
WHAT: Parkland Bridge Club
WHERE: Parkland's Game Room - park in lot A-1. Circle-drive entrance open.
WHEN: Sunday evenings, weekly, 7-10 p.m.

PROSPECTUS

The Prospectus is a student publication, and does not necessarily represent in whole or part the views of Parkland College administration, faculty, or students.

Published weekly during the school year, except for weeks shortened by holidays and final examination periods. Production is by the Farmer City Journal. Display and classified rates available upon request. For information call 351-2266 or 351-2346.

Sirloin TIPS

When you're buying steak, the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) grade stamp can help tell you what you're getting.

USDA PRIME: The elite in beef. Consistently tender and juicy.

USDA CHOICE: High quality, less fat, lower price. More produced than any other grade... and Mr. Steak is the country's largest buyer of Choice portion-controlled beef. Loin and rib portions that Mr. Steak uses are especially tender.

USDA GOOD: Thrifty. Acceptable quality, little fat. Lacks juiciness but relatively tender when properly prepared.

USDA STANDARD: Mild in flavor and lacks juiciness.

USDA COMMERCIAL: Commercial. Requires slow cooking with moist heat. Not as tender as higher grades.

USDA UTILITY: Economical but lacks natural tenderness and juiciness. Needs long slow cooking with moist heat.

Mr. Steak earns straight A's in steak quality... by buying only prime and choice meat, aging it without chemicals, cooking it superbly and serving it graciously. Try us today... and go to the head of the class!
